The Tri-Weekly Kentucky New Era.

VOLUME II. HOPKINSVILLE, CHRISTIAN COUNTY, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1886. NUMBER 14

Premiums to Subscribers.

It is an established custom for newspapers in larger cities to offer all manner of inducements to subscribers, many of which simply humbug the people while they yield rich harvests to the publishers. On the other hand there are legitimate methods of swelling a subscription list, one of which we have concluded to adopt.

While our paper, in this the most prosperous year it has ever known, and now enjoying the largest circulation ever before attained by a local paper in Southern Kentucky—already finds its way, in either the WEEKLY or TRI-WEEKLY form, into almost every household in Christian and into many in adjoining counties and throughout the State, there is still room on the list for more. And the more we get the more we want, the better paper we can publish and the more valuable to advertisers our space becomes. We are therefore determined to not only "keep up with" but to keep a little ahead of "the procession" and "push" the KENTUCKY NEW ERA until it shall become a familiar and welcome "Family Newspaper" throughout the length and breadth of Kentucky.

With the aforesaid end in view, we have determined to give away to our subscribers ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000) in standard, valuable articles which will be useful and desirable in any household. Every new subscriber to either the WEEKLY or TRI-WEEKLY for one year, who pays cash in advance, and every subscriber now on the list who will pay all arrearages and for one year in advance will get a ticket in our grand Gift-Distribution, which will be publicly conducted in this city on April 15 '87. The list of premiums will be published, as it is made up. There will be no postponement of the drawing or scaling of the prizes and every ticket holder will have exactly the same chance to win. Remember the terms; for $1:50 or $2:50 you can get the WEEKLY or TRI-WEEKLY KENTUCKY NEW ERA—a large well-printed, newsy, clean family paper—for one year, and you may get a premium worth a hundred dollars or more.

This is an opportunity of a life time and everybody—poor men especially—should embrace it. Call at the office or send money in any safe way to

The Verdict Unanimous.

W. D. Sult, Druggist, Bippus, Ind., testifies: "I can recommend Electric Bitters as the very best remedy. Every bottle sold has given relief in every case. One man took six bottles, and was cured of Rheumatism of ten years' standing." Abraham Hare, druggist, Bellville, Ohio, affirms: "The best selling medicine I have ever handled in my 20 years' experience, is Electric Bitters." Thousands of others have added their testimony, so that the verdict is unanimous that Electric Bitters do cure all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys or Blood. Only a half dollar a bottle at Harry B. Garner's Drug Store.

The Atlanta Jug Trade.

ATLANTA, Oct. 24.—The jug trade to Atlanta has assumed large proportions, and it estimated by the express officers that it will reach daily receipts of $200. The first week of total prohibition found most people with supplies of liquor. As each day has passed since it has witnessed a steady increase in the jug receipts, thus indicating the exhaustion of the supply. Atlanta is surrounded by a cordon of wet towns from thirty to forty miles distant. The liquor dealers of these towns have flooded the city with stamped envelopes with their addresses printed thereon, and a blank order for the different kinds of liquor inclosed. The parties thus addressed have nothing to do but inclose a one dollar bill and mail the letter. Thus, on the arrival of every train anxious individuals may be seen waiting for it. They go to the baggage-car, and find the jug with the right tag attached and hurry off to a quiet corner with it. Express agent Hulbert when asked if Prohibitionists patronized the jug line replied: "Prohibitionists don't like to be lugging a jug around, and when they can't get a basket to put their jug in they pay a coon to carry it home for them. A few of them have the jugs packed in boxes, baskets and nail kegs. These are fellows who take a nip behind the door."

The druggists are having a hard time of it. A prominent druggist said: "My business is absolutely painful to me. I am called on every hour in the day by some man who whispers to me and begs for liquor. He insists that I have it, and that I can sell him a little of it if I will. The druggists are having a lively fight." No drug store can keep liquor for sale under any circumstances. They are not permitted to fill doctor's prescriptions. They do keep alcohol, however, which they are permited under the law to sell for mechanical, manufacturing, medicinal, or art purposes. The topers have found this out, and are making a dead rush for alcohol.

A prominent retail druggist said: "You would be amused to see the tricks they take to get it. A man will come in the store with plumber's tools in his hand and, holding up his spirit lamp, will asked to have it filled with alcohol. In a few minutes another boy, comes in with the same lamp. A boy fourteen years old, came into my store to-day with a toy engine. He took out the little boiler and had me fill it with ten cents worth of alcohol. In half an hour he came back and wanted it filled again. I inquired into it, and found that he was drinking it himself, and of course sold him no more. Another man came in so drunk he could hardly stand, and wanted some alcohol to make varnish with. Alcohol is the only thing that will desolve shellac, and he said he wanted to make some shellac varnish. Another man proposed to buy some alcohol to [mix with camphor to put on his boy's sore foot. I proposed to mix the camphor for him. but he said, 'Just give me the alcohol straight and I will mix it.' All day long they come in with one excuse and another. We, of course, try to sell it; but where they make a demand under the law, we are obliged to let them have it."

Dr. Talliaferro reports a case where his patient was saved from death by champaigne, which he was compelled to get from a private citizen, the law forbidding him to buy it.

THE NEWS.

The Czar has consented to occupy Bulgaria.

A Rochester firm offers to give away with each bottle of an inebriate's cure a patent bustle.

A Georgia hermit has his house in the branches of a spreading oak. It is small, but quite snug.

A Boston man is exhibiting his extreme culture by daily eating live frogs in a museum in that city.

A Boston tailor of twenty-two years' experience has never found a customer with both legs exactly the same length. The average difference is one-sixteenth of an inch.

John Fletcher, a farmer near Bloomington, has a church on his farm. He has hired a preacher to deliver a sermon each Sunday in this church during the coming year.

The Mackay-Bennett coast postal telegraph line extending from New Westminster, B. C., to San Francisco, a distance of 1,200 miles, is being pushed through with a will.

Mrs. Parsons, the wife of the condemned anarchist, being determined to be heard at Orange, N. J., burst a hall door down and delivered her harrangue on anarchism to a large audience.

A potato and carrot firmly grown together, so that it is impossible to tell where the potato begins and the carrot ends, is one of the vegetable freaks exhibited by a St. Joseph county (Ind) farmer.

W. S. Heath, of Warrenton, Ga., recently picked up in the woods, near that place, a hair brush which he had left there during the war of the rebellion. He has had a chance to get bald since then.

A female witness in a Rock Island court testified that she was 14 years old and had been married five years. She said she could neither read nor write, could not tell the day of the month, or the time by the clock.

Glendower Evans Brown, of Campobello, N. B., has not only a fine name, but a fine lot of living ancestors. His father's father and mother and grandfather and grandmother are alive, and so are his mother's father and mother and grandmother and her father and mother.

Henry Dumble, of Kingston, Can., is 68 years old, and for years has been perfectly bald; but last spring hair began to grow on his head, and now he has a fine crop of elegant black hair, and his whiskers, which have been gray for twenty years, are turning black too.

Willard Freemire, of Vermotville, Mich., located a bee tree, but was refused permission by the owner of the land to cut down the tree. He was finally given leave to cut off the limb, sixty feet from the ground and eighteen inches in circumference, containing the honey. The feet he performed by firing seventy-five balls from a rifle through the limb.

Mrs. Daniel Hurley, of Bangor, Me., a few mornings ago found her cow lying in the stall with her feet tied together. The cow was untied and two heavy padlocks put on the stable doors. A night or two afterwards she was poisoned and died. The same night Truckman Hewes' cow was poisoned and in the morning was found lying dead, with her feet tied together. Cow owners in Bangor are getting excited.

A St. Louis man who was going through a dirty alley one rainy night felt something warm on his leg. He thought it was a rat, and pounded it with his umbrella until his leg was sore. Then he carefully covered the suppose rat with one hand, and, reaching up his trousers leg with the other, pulled out his gold watch, which had slipped through a hole in his watch pocket, and which was considerably the worse for the pounding that it had ever received.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of Consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pills; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pills and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds.

All Serene in the Third.

BOLWING GREN, Oct, 24.—Your correspondent from this place incorrectly represents the Democracy of this district. It is untrue that if the distinguished members of the party come here to speak they will only present a family feud, but, on the contrary, they will be given a respectful hearing by the Warren county Democracy. There is some dissatisfaction, but there are but two candidates for Congress in this district, Godfrey Hunter, Republican candidate, and John S. Rhea, Democratic candidate. Your correspondent did not have authority to say "that the Democrats want the outsiders to keep hands off and let the matter in this district settle itself," unless it was from those who preferred the election of the Republican candidate. It is not true that "no Halsell men are influenced by the action of the committee," and we are not prepared to say that defeat is "inevitable." We believe that dissatisfaction is diminishing, and we hope by the election day the public will rally to the support of John S. Rhea. We want and expect all the help we can get.

A Woman Shot Dead by a Drunkard.

A special from Gadsden, Ala., says last night a young man named Euclid Able, in company, went to the house of Mrs. Alice Cannon on a visit. Able was drinking, and behaved so badly that he was ejected from the house by his companion at Mrs. Cannon's request. This infuriated Able, and he gained entrance into the house by bursting open a door. He then went into the parlor, where Mrs. Cannon was sitting, and, drawing a revolver, sent a bullet crashing through her brain, killing her instantly. The murderer then made his escape. Able belongs to one of the best families in Gadsden, and his victim was a highly respected lady.

WHISKY RESOLUTIONS.

The Platform of the National Protective Association.

The liquor dealers assembled in convention at Chicago adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That we recognize to its fullest extent the duties and responsibilities resting upon us as citizens, and pledge ourselves to the faithful performance of every duty.

Resolved, That we most earnestly favor temperance and most strongly condemn intemperance, and appeal to every member of the trade to make proof of this declaration by his daily life and the daily conduct of his business.

Resolved, That it is our duty, as it is of all good citizens, to obey the laws of our country, and we condemn every violation of law, regardless of the damage inflicted upon any individual or upon our general business interest.

Resolved, That we are in favor of both public and private morality, good order and popular education, and that we feel the duty resting on us as individuals and as a trade to work with the great body of our people in the advancement of their interests.

Resolved, That we are unalterably opposed to Prohibition, general or local, as an invasion of the rights of the citizen, and therefore, wrong in principle and impracticable in policy. Instead of attempting to destroy a business that employs immense capital and supports a vast number of honest workingmen, the efforts our enemies should be directed to eliminating the evils existing and resulting from the abuse of liquors. In this work all would unite and only those be found in opposition who have no interests to protect, no character to maintain, no ambition to gratify, no conscience to appease. The very work of reformation is greatly retarded by the efforts through prohibitory laws to destroy a great industry and to degrade the men therein employed.

Resolved, That in our abhorrence of all titled rulers we should not install the statute book as a tyrant, nor establish a tyranny in the law. We hold that law should protect the innocent and the honest and punish the guilty and the dishonest.

Resolved, That the general prosperity of our country is promoted directly by industries giving employment to labor and capital, converting raw material into articles of universal use, thus benefiting the farmer, the railroad and the capitalist.

Resolved, That we are in favor of absolute non-interference in politics as an organization, except in such places and times as action is necessary to protect ourselves and our business against such legislation as seeks to destroy our trade and not to remedy the evils therein existing.

Resolved, That we indorse the license system, and favor the enforcement of laws by the State imposing a reasonable license that will not result in monopoly, but that will give to reputable citizens the right to sell wine, malt and spirituous liquors; we recognize and admit the evils that result from the abuse of all kinds of liquors, and condemn in the strongest terms every place, by whatever name known, that encourages or permits this abuse; we likewise condemn the indiscriminate issue of licenses, and the establishment or toleration of disreputable characters, who expose their depravity under the guise of intoxication; our interests as well as our duty as citizens, demand that we enter a solemn protest against all such places, and pledge ourselves as a trade to co-operate with the officers of the law and with all good citizens to prevent the issue of licenses to all disreputable places.

A Reliable Article.

For enterprise, push, and a desire to get such goods as will give the trade satisfaction, G. E. Gaither, the druggist, leads all competition. For this reason he has secured Dr. Bosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup, because it is the best medicine on the market for Coughs, Colds, Croup and Primary Consumption. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Only One Mile Above Sheol.

CHARLESTON, S. C., Oct. 23—The damage by the earthquake shock at Summerville, yesterday afternoon, is much greater than at first stated. About seventy-five chimneys will have to come down. A number of geysers have been discovered, where an oily water spouts up continuously. The water has an odor similar to kerosene oil, and is accompanied by fine sand of different colors. The people of the town are thoroughly worked up again, and great uneasiness is felt by all.

H. B. Garner wishes to make an assertion, which he can back with a positive guarantee. It's all about Acker's Blood Elixir. He claims for it superior merits over all other remedies of its kind, and guarantees for it a positive and sure cure for Rheumatism, Syphilis, and all blood disorders. It frees the skin from spots and disease, and leaves the complexion clear. Ask him about it.

Fires.

OWENSBORO, KY., Oct. 25.—The large Welsh distillery, one mile above this city, was destroyed by fire at 2 o'clock this morning. It was owned by Senator R. S. Triplett and Mr. S. V. Warden. The warehouse was saved. The distillery was valued at $30,000, and the fire was the work of an incendiary.

Elephants for the Circus.

The best elephants for circus purposes are those from Ceylon. They have little or no tusks, and are much more docile and intelligent than the highland elephant of India or even Africa. The Indian highland or "tusker" elephant is very intractable, and, after he arrives at a certain age, is apt to be treacherous and ugly. "After they arrive at the age of 25," said Professor Newman, "look out for them. Albert, who was one of the finest we ever had, killed a man in one of his fits of rage, and had to be slain himself. I regard the elephant as the most intelligent animal there is. They are remarkably easy to handle, have great intelligence, and possess affections and, I sometimes believe, sensibilities. Even the dullest will astonish us sometimes. I will labor with one of them for weeks, till I am nearly discouraged, trying to teach him a trick; suddenly, when you least expect it, he will turn in and do it exactly as you desired."—Chicago News.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1886.

For Congress,
HON. POLK LAFFOON,
OF HOPKINS COUNTY.
ELECTION NOVEMBER 2, 1886.

Vermont Republicans have re-elected Senator Edmunds.

A trifle tiresome—The sentimental gubernatorial race in Tennessee.

The widow of A. T. Stewart is dead. A large number of charitable institutions will now receive liberal endowments.

Recent reports show that there are not less than 80,000 paupers in London, and that 35,000 of these are without shelter.

They are trying to stamp Controller Durham as a crank in Washington because he attends strickly to all the detail business of his office.

The Louisville papers announce that the Exposition failed immediately after it closed. In the opinion of a good many people it failed a number of weeks before it closed.

It seems to be leaking out in naval circles that some of the high officials have manf using their ships as mere merchant-men to bring home liberal supplies of costly foreign goods to decorate their homes.

The issue of standard silver dollars from the mints during the week ended October 23, was $1,008,821. The issue during the corresponding period of last year was $915 358. The shipment of fractional silver coin since Oct. 1st. amounts to $742,120.

Gladstone is said to be almost reduced to poverty. Like many other great men who have fought for a good cause, the efforts to benefit others have deprived him of the reward of labors in his own behalf. No grander spectacle can be presented than "the old man eloquent" dying in poverty as a martyr to unselfishness and liberty.

The political troubles in some of the Kentucky Congressional districts are mild affairs compared with the political troubles in Russia. The Czar is tormented on all sides by plots and conpiracies. It is said that, on seeing an Adjutant walk rapidly toward him recently, the Czar seized a revolver and shot the Adjutant dead. Other accounts say the Adjutant made an attempt to kill the Czar and the latter fired in self-defense.

In another column will be seen a dispatch, signed by a number of prominent Bowling Green gentlemen, pledging themselves to support Rhea in order to bring about a Democratic victory next Tuesday. These gentlemen were warm supporters of Halsell, but now that he is defeated, they wisely throw their strength and influence into the fight for Rhea. Much of the talk about disaffection up there is all bosh. John Rhea is hard to beat, and we predict his election.

The miserable attempt made upon the life of Bob Taylor, particulars of which are given in another column, are revolting in the extreme. He went into a Republican community to discuss fairly the principles of his party and was met by such a torrent of abuse and insult as to shame the name of civilization. Whenever people can not hear an honest argument without dealing out insult and injury, then the right to hear and judge should be denied them. The honest people of Tennessee will see to it that Bob gets an additional 10,000 votes for this base and cowardly attack upon him.

Esquire B. E. Randolph is a candidate for member of the Board of Equalization from this Congressional district. He is opposed by four other gentlemen. One of these, C. N. Buchanan, of Hancock, claims to be a Republican but his political record was so beautifully ventilated in our last issue as to strip him of every claim upon the support of the Republicans. He never cast a Republican vote in his life, and is not as much entitled to the Republican vote as Mr. Randolph, a straight out Democrat. Esq. Randolph has seen service on the Board. His experience is valuable to this people. It would be unwise now to send to Frankfort a fresh man, who would have to undergo all the preliminary training before he would become a really efficient member. The people of this county should vote for Randolph independent of party lines. He has a flattering following all over the district, and, if we read the signs aright, he will be re-elected.

About $1,668,465 changed hands in purses and wagers through the Grand Trotting Circuit this year.

Bonner has not yet decided as to starting Maud S. in the event of a meeting by the New York Driving Club this fall.

The fastest mile ever made by a two-year-old over a half mile track, was by Mamie Wood at Ravenna, Ohio. Time, 2:33½.

The Sultan has ordered his war minister to spend $7,500 000 on war ships The Grand Vizier strongly opposes the outlay in view of the state of Turkish finances.

M. Barthold and a company of distinguished French visitors are in New York to be present at the unveiling of Liberty's statute in the harbor of New York to day.

The church people are watching the progress of Col. Bob Ingersoll's illness with a great deal of interest. They expect this modern blasphemer to retract the coarse utterances of his life as death approaches, should his mind remain clear.

The Astor family is said to be the richest in this country. Their property is handed down from father to son, and great caution is taken to always keep it in the family. Their wealth is estimated at $300,000,000, mostly invested in real estate.

Simon Cameron says that unless the Republicans can find some man who can carry New York in 1888 that the party will be bursted into smithereens never again to be organized. The Gen. did not have Blaine in his mind when he spoke, and of course some other horse is to be trotted in as the winning nag. The Republican party with Blaine on or off is certain of defeat, for the people of this country are for Cleveland.

The female dummies in the shop windows in Washington, which stand out a weary existence displaying late style hosiery and underwear, are becoming a moral issue in the city of magnificent distances. A leading minister stigmatizes them as the instigators of vice and sensuality. Advertising agencies are no longer desirable that do not excite the curiosity if not the passions. Pictures of the vulgarist type are scattered through the country to call the attention of the public to a hair restorer or tooth wash. Certainly the Washington preacher was not crying out without a cause.

The Secretary of War has informed the Treasury Department in regard to the action of the commanding officer of the division of the Pacific in issuing permits to land liquors in different parts of Alaska that hereafter no permits will be issued by the War Department for the introduction of liquors into Alaska for use for medicinal, mechanical or scientific purposes. The Collector of Customs at Sitka, Alaska, has been notified accordingly. He is instructed, however, to permit the entry of wines for sacramental uses upon the presentation of proof that it is intended for no other purposes.

In his Liederkranz Hall speech Senator Beck said truly that a vote for Mr. Caruth was a vote for John G. Carlisle for Speaker of the Fiftieth Congress, and a vote for Mr. Wilson was a vote for Thomas B. Reed for Speaker of that Congress. There are Democrats in the Third Congressional District who will have an opportunity to choose between Mr. Carlisle and Mr. Reed, and it is to be hoped that they will vote for the man who will vote for Mr. Carlisle. One vote may decide who shall be Speaker.—Louisville Times.

This is another good reason way every Democrat in the State should vote for the respective party Congressional nominees.

The Universalists Convention at Akron, Ohio, was victimized on the last day of its session in a very funny way. Some waggish student at Butchel college had sent printed cards to about 100 of the delegates, inviting them to take a 4 o'clock dinner at the residence of Dr. Cone, President of the college. At the appointed hour the divines turned up, swarming all over the house of the President, much to the dismay of the good doctor and his wife. Some took the joke good-naturedly, but others let out on the offending joke in a manner that had not regard for the Universalist creed. An investigation was started among the students by the President to-day to discover the perpetrator.

SHILOH'S CATARRH REMEDY—a positive cure for Catarrh, Diphtheria, and Canker Mouth. For sale by J. R. Armistead.

In Virginia and the East, and especially among Canadian Episcopalians, an effort is being made to establish a denominational union. The movement originating from so learned a source is significant, and especially as coming from the Church it is attracting considerable attention. As men advance in intelligence and culture the tendency is for individual creeds, interpretations and beliefs to separate. No College of Bishops or association of ministers is a unit on all theological questions. In fact, few of the secondary religious doctrines are held in common by all the ministers of any single denomination. The religious world can never hope to agree on a complete code of beliefs, but the movement for a union is based on the idea that there are certain broad, cardinal principles of christianity, held in common by all christians, which afford a basis profound enough for all the denominations to operate upon. The idea, we confess, seems chimerical at the present day, but its realization is certainly reserved for the near future. The plain doctrines of the Scriptures, as for instance "the fatherhood of God," "the sonship of man," "the brotherhood with Christ," "the redemption and atonement," are broad enough and grand enough for the sublimest christian sentiments, for the profoundest convictions and the most earnest labors in the cause. The union is only a question of time.

The experience of years furnishes the most convincing evidence that thousands of lives are annually saved by the use of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It speedily cures all affections of the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs.

The Congressional election is at hand. We give below the vote in the different districts at the last election. These may serve as a guide in figuring out the results next Tuesday.

FIRST DISTRICT.

W J Stone, Dem	10,563
Henry H Huston, Rep	7,161
Oscar Turner, Ind. Dem	7,440
Stone's plurality	3,063

SECOND DISTRICT.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

Albert S Willis, Dem	12,152
A E Wilson, Rep	8,373
Willis' majority	3,779

SIXTH DISTRICT.

John G Carlisle, Dem	15,261
John J Landrum, Rep	9,321
Jos Hermes, Ind., received in Kenton county	327
Carlisle's plurality	5,932

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

W C P Breckinridge, Dem	16,239
Lindsay, Rep	1,173
Breckinridge's majority	15,065

EIGHTH DISTRICT.

J B McCreary, Dem	14 924
J M Sebastian, Rep	12,778
McCreary's majority	2,146

NINTH DISTRICT.

W H Wadsworth, Rep	16 189
Frank Powers, Dem	16,087
Wadsworth's majority	102

TENTH DISTRICT

W P Paulbee, Dem	14 266
A J Auxier, Rep	12,308
Taulbee's majority	1,958

ELEVENTH DISTRICT.

Frank L Woodford, Dem	10,748
Jones, Rep	9,932
Woolford's majority	816

In the Third district the above figures do not represent the party vote. Golladay was a Democratic turn coat and did not receive the Republican vote. When the party lines are drawn the district is very close.

Democrats, remember that it is your duty to vote for Polk Laffoon for Congress on next Tuesday. This election will be looked upon as a test of the administration. Let nothing keep you from the polls. The party needs your vote, and now as a Democrat you should stand by your colors.

It is useless to attempt the cure of any disorder, if the blood is allowed to remain impure. Neuralgia and rheumatism are traceable to a disordered condition of the blood, and in numberless cases have been cured by taking a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Sale of Morphine and Laudanum.

"It may surprise some people to know," said a leading druggist to me to-day, "that it is the practice of respectable druggists to sell morphine and laudanum to people whom they know to be confirmed opium-eaters. One reason is that it would be impossible to keep them from obtaining these drugs some way or other. Another is that even if we were able to shut off their supply, it would simply kill them. So every druggist has a few customers who he knows are killing themselves with opium, and with the very opium which he is selling them.

But these poor creatures are very sensitive about their vice, and never confess it. They always make some shallow excuse for buying so much opium, and even after they become satisfied that we know what they are doing, they never concede it in any way. It is a singular phenomenon that just as all insane people have a proclivity to lewdness, so all opium-eaters are liars and thieves. We have to wait on them, and we treat them kindly, as afflicted people, but we keep a close watch on them, and never let them get out of sight, for if we do we are sure to miss some small article when they have gone. I can't say that opium-eaters are becoming more numerous in Chicago, but the reason may be that so many are now resorting to hypodermic injections."—Chicago Journal.

Medical Practice in Russia.

The practice of medicine in Russia is exceedingly onerous and unremunerative. A physician who fails to respond to the summons of a patient is punished by a fine of from 5 to 100 roubles. If the case was a dangerous one, and the physician knew it, he may be imprisoned in the jail for three months. The legal fee for an ordinary visit is from 7 1-2 to 15 cents; for an accouchement, 75 cents. These laws are strictly enforced. An elderly German physician, an invalid, was called, on a stormy winter night, to attend a case seven miles distant. He objected to go unless he was reasonably remunerated, naming his fee. The messenger left to ascertain whether this amount would be paid, but did not return. The physician was subsequently arrested, tried, and condemned to eight days' imprisonment. Besides, he had to pay his lawyer $250 in advance.—Science.

Working Up the Cactus Plant.

A company has been formed in Mexico to work up the cactus plant. The oil is to be used for lubricating purposes, the fiber for cordage, the leaf for paper and the fruit for eating purposes. The fruit is so juicy that it often takes the place of water for both man and beast, and some years ago, when the drouth came over San Luis Potosi, thousands of cattle were saved by eating the fruit.—Exchange.

What It Means.

The Springfield Union reminds the ladies that the feminine exclamation, "Dear me suz!" is derived from the Latan phrase, Deus me sustinet! or God help me!

H. B. Garner wishes to state that he has at last found an article he can sell on its merits. It is with pleasure he guarantees to the public Acker's English Remedy as a sure and never-failing cure for Asthma, Coughs, Whooping Cough, Croup, and all Lung Troubles. It is the standard remedy for Consumption. He has never found its equal.

Extensive fires have devastated the forests near Great Barrington, N. H. Over a thousand acres have been burned over and many hundred cords of wood destroyed.

ARE YOU MADE miserable by Indigestion, Constipation, Dizziness, Loss of Appetite, Yellow Skin? Shiloh's Vitalizer is a positive cure. For sale by J. R. Armistead.

The Davis malt house at Wilkins, N. Y., was burned Saturday night. Loss, $100,000.

SHILOH'S CURE will immediately relieve Croup, Whooping Cough and Bronchitis. J. R. Armistead sells it.

Day and Night

During an acute attack of Bronchitis, a ceaseless tickling in the throat, and an exhausting, hacking cough, afflict the sufferer. Sleep is banished, and great prostration follows. This disease is also attended with Hoarseness, and sometimes Loss of Voice. It is liable to become chronic, involve the lungs, and terminate fatally. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral affords speedy relief and cure in cases of Bronchitis. It controls the disposition to cough, and induces refreshing sleep.

I have been a practising physician for twenty-four years, and, for the past twelve, have suffered from annual attacks of Bronchitis. After exhausting all the usual remedies

Without Relief,

I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It effected a speedy cure.—G. Stoveall, M. D., Carrollton, Miss.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is decidedly the best remedy, within my knowledge, for chronic Bronchitis, and all lung diseases. —M. A. Rust, M. D., South Paris, Me.

I was attacked, last winter, with a severe Cold, which grew worse and settled on my Lungs. By night sweats I was reduced almost to a skeleton. My Cough was incessant, and I frequently spit blood. My physician told me to give up business, or I would not live a month. After taking various remedies without relief, I was finally two bottles of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. I am now in perfect health, and able to resume business, after having been pronounced incurable with Consumption.—S. P. Henderson, Saulsburgh, Penn.

Cured By Using

For years I was in a decline. I had weak lungs, and suffered from Bronchitis and Catarrh. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral restored me to health, and I have been for a long time comparatively vigorous. In case of a sudden cold I always resort to the Pectoral, and find speedy relief.—Edward E. Curtis, Rutland, Vt.

Two years ago I suffered from a severe Bronchitis. The physician attending me became fearful that the disease would terminate in Pneumonia. After trying various medicines, without benefit, he prescribed Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, which relieved me at once. I continued to take this medicine, and was cured. —Ernest Colton, Logansport, Ind. ††

THE TRI-WEEKLY NEW ERA.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1886.

CHURNING SONG.

To and fro, to and fro, slowly swings the churn;
To and fro, to and fro, crimson roses burn;
Drowsy scarlet poppies sway
Where the morning breezes play;
To and fro, to and fro, waves the nodding fern;
Over the clover, far away,
Lulled bees and perfumes stray,
Mingled with the catbird's lay;
To and fro, to and fro,
In the sunny glow.

Rocks the cradle to and fro, (while the churn I swing);
In the maple, rocking slow, children of a king;
Monarchs of this castle fair,
Horsehair builded, hung in air;
Golden robins, to and fro, flash on vivid wing;
From the nests the young birds call,
Oak leaf shadows, soft and small,
Like the moment's footsteps fall;
To and fro, to and fro,
Swift they come and go.
—Lillian M. Thompson.

ACCUSED OF ROBBERY.

The locomotive whistled, bells rang, the train rushed into the station, doors opened, passengers alighted and went their various ways and Monsieur Czato alone remained. He stood at the window of his carriage, looking at the passengers, but paying no attention to the guards who offered him their services; his cravat hung untied, his coat and vest were unbuttoned and his mouth was open as though he had been unable to close it since a cry of astonishment had escaped him. Gradually Monsieur Czato recovered himself sufficiently to call the station master, who, when he arrived, did not regard with a favorable eye the stout, dusty figure at the window.

"Be good enough to get out, sir, said he, authoritatively. "The train goes no further."

"No, I shall not," said the traveler, "until you bear witness to—"

"What?" cried the station master, impatiently.

"That I have been robbed."

"Impossible," cried the other.

"Alas! only too possible," said M. Czato, placing his hand at his back. "It is no longer there."

"What is no longer there?"

"The leather case," said M. Czato with a sigh. "It has disappeared with 10,000 florins it contained."

"Where? When?"

"Ah, if only knew. The money did not belong to me; I was taking it to my employer and I owe it to my reputation, on which up to the present time there has been no stain, to refuse to leave this carriage until the robbery of which I am the victim has been officially recorded. I beg that you shall summon a commissary of police and two witnesses."

"Very well, sir, if you insist upon it," said the station master, whose interest was increasing, "I shall be pleased to act as witness and my assistant, whom you see standing there, will be the second, and luckily enough here comes the commissary. Tell him the facts in your case, sir."

Czato, in his excitement, leaned so far out of the carriage window that a somersault to the ground seemed a not remote possibility.

"Your name, sir?" was the commissary's first question, when he understood what was required of him.

"I am called Bernard Czato and I am steward upon the estate of his honor, Monsieur Dionys Saragiqui. Yesterday evening—"

Your age?" interrupted the police officer.

"I was 56 last St. George's day. Yester evening—"

"Religion?" cried the officer.

"Roman Catholic," said Czato, with a sigh, thinking it very hard that he was not allowed to tell his own story, his own way.

"Married or single?"

"Last year we had our silver wedding. As I was saying, yesterday evening—"

"Have you any children?"

"Heaven has not bestowed her gifts upon us."

"What has been stolen from you?"

"Yesterday evening," said Czato, his voice trembling, "as we were at dinner (and a fine dinner it was, with no scarcity of the best wine, for we were celebrating with some friends my wife's birthday), I received a telegram from his lordship telling me he needed 10,000 florins immediately. I read the telegram, and passing it to my wife said: 'I shall take the money myself to his lordship, for I have some business matters to communicate to him.'"

"'Very well,' said my wife; 'but take good care of yourself and do not lose the money.'

"'Do not fear, my love,' I answered. 'We will put the money in my leather case, and I will fasten it on my back.'

"'Do not bind it too tight then,' said my wife, 'for you have eaten too much and drank too much good wine, and the pressure might do you harm.'

"We arose from the table and I went into my office with the cashier, who was one of our party. We went into the strong-room, into which even the cashier only enters when he has need of a large sum. We took ten bank-notes of 1,000 florins each and put them one by one into the case. Then I undressed, tied the leather case upon my back, and dressed again. I shook hands with the cashier, kissed my wife, and drove to the railway station with two servants, who sang songs on the road to frighten robbers away. At the station I engaged a private compartment, so as to escape the risk of falling into bad company. One of my servants carried my valise, and they both assisted me into the railway carriage, wishing me a good journey as the train moved away."

"At last you are off," said the officer, who had been mentally writhing under the tortures of Monsieur Czato's details.

"So I said to myself at the time," said the traveler, calmly. "I lay down on the cushion and fell asleep, and only woke up as we entered the station here. I felt for my leather case and it was no longer on my back. I had been robbed."

"When did you go to sleep?" asked the station master.

"As soon as the train started, I believe."

"What makes you think so?"

"I heard the name of no station called."

"Did you awaken during the journey?"

"I don't remember having done so."

"No one touched or came near you?"

"No one; but now I think of it, I recall a sensation as though a strong draught had blown upon me."

"Where did the draught come from?"

"From the window, probably."

"Why didn't you close the window if you do not like draughts?"

"I remember, and my servants can testify, that I did close both windows and lowered the curtains as the train started. Upon arriving here, both curtains and windows were still closed."

"How then could the draught have been caused?"

"By the robber when he opened the door."

Then poor Monsieur Czato, with the aid of the two witnesses, turned over every article of his valise, lifted up the carriage cushions, undressed and redressed himself, lay on his stomach looking under the seats, but all in vain; nothing was found.

"Do you suspect any one?" asked the officer at last.

"Suspect! Merciful heavens, I have no idea. The windows were closed and I was alone."

"Ha!" cried the officer, striking his forehead triumphantly. "I can put my finger on the robber."

"You can? Who is he?"

"The conductor."

"Impossible," cried the station master.

"Nothing is impossible when money is stolen," cried the officer. "Let the fellow be brought here."

It was quickly done, for he was still on the platform and he became as pale as death when the officer said to him as he put his hand on his shoulder: "Where are the 1,000 florins you have stolen?"

"I know nothing about them," the conductor answered, tremblingly; his teeth chattered; his knees shook. "I am innocent."

"So all thieves say," replied the officer. "You will have to come with me. The judge will take care of your case."

"But," remonstrated the station master, "this man's conduct has always been exemplary."

"Exemplary conduct counts for nothing in a case of stolen money," said the officer. "March on, my friend."

"But first these witnesses must sign their testimony that I have been robbed, or I shall not leave the carriage," said Monsieur Czato.

Light came to the officer's brain; not releasing his hold of the conductor, he grasped Monsieur Czato who, owing to its weight and the unexpectedness of the invitation to alight, almost fell out on the platform, but the officer's grasp did not relax.

"And you also must come with me," said he.

"I am willing; but release me," gasped M. Czato, somewhat astonished at the turn things were taking.

"Robbers should not be released."

"Robbers, no! but I am not a robber."

"You may tell that to the judge."

"But I assure you that I have been robbed,"

"Did the money belong to you?" asked the officer, smiling confidentially.

"No; I have already told you it belonged to—"

"With money belonging to others in the case there are no honest men. Come, my friends, time presses; let us be off."

Mathias Heveder was a judge with modern ideas. In all branches of his judicial career he was governed by fixed principles; he believed in utilizing the experience of foreign countries and would occasionally remark:

"The Frenchmen say when facing a mysterious crime. 'Look for the woman!' I go further; I say, 'Find the woman!' and I will find her," said he, referring to the Czato case, "for every crime has a woman into it, and as yet, I have never failed to find her."

He began by placing Czato and the conductor in solitary confinement of the strictest kind. It was in vain that Czato begged him, with tears in his eyes, at least to notify his employer who was waiting the 10,000 florins and who would certainly misinterpret his steward's silence.

"A woman is mixed up in the affair," said M. Heveder to himself; "that is certain, without doubt, in connection with the guilty man, whichever he may be. It appears from the statement of Bernard Czato that he is a married man. I have telegraphed orders to have his wife arrested and brought here, and I shall have her at hand to-morrow. Since the conductor is not married, perhaps he has a mistress. If we can discover her we shall have the two women, one of whom is necessary to the solution of the problem."

He studied the dispatches received from all the stations of the line, but only two of them especially attracted his attention. From one he learned that a switchman, as the train rushed by, had seen a woman's hand thrust out of the window of a second-class carriage and had seen some dark object fall from it, he had even searched for the object, but had found nothing in the long grass. The second telegram was of a still more serious nature. Another switchman had noticed the conductor, as the train was flying along at full speed, talking with a woman who was leaning out of a third-class carriage; the witness had even remarked that some object passed from one to the other, but was not sure whether the woman handed something to the conductor, or the conductor something to the woman.

"The case is clear," cried M. Heveder, victoriously. "Czato is guilty or the conductor is guilty. If the conductor, his accomplice is the unknown woman with whom he was seen talking, and at the moment the switchman's eyes were upon him he handed her the leather case. We must find the woman. If on the other hand Czato is the culprit, he gave the money either to his wife or some other woman and then cleverly played the role of an injured man to divert suspicion from himself. In this case his accomplice is the woman who was observed to throw something from the window; the something was the leather case—empty."

M. Heveder sent for the conductor and said to him abruptly, "Where does your mistress live?"

The man, taken by surprise and frightened, colored, but answered, giving the name and address. Her name was Lotti, and she was a maid-servant, employed by Mr. Adolf Rosenstock, in the street of the Three Drums at Pesth. M. Heveder was vigorous and prompt. Miss Lotti was arrested and brought before him at the earliest possible moment. The officer in whose charge she came had searched her room and found in a drawer 7 florins, 25 kreutzers which he had confiscated.

"Very well," said the magistrate, and as the officer retired he turned to the trembling Lotti, and looking at her steadily, asked:

"Where is the rest?"

"I kiss your hand," said Lotti, crying; "what rest?"

"The 9,992 florins, 75 kreutzers," said the judge.

"Your honor, I do not understand," she said, sobbing.

"Then you refuse to confess! Very well, I will refresh your memory. Where did you come from this morning?"

"From my native village. I went to see my father."

"And what was your conversation with the conductor about?"

"My God!" cried Miss Lotti, burying her face in her hands.

"I know all," continued the judge.

"I am not to blame," cried Lotti; "he has promised to marry me."

"And where did you hide the money?"

"What money?"

"The stolen money," cried the judge, impatiently speaking louder.

"Has he stolen, the monster? He who told me he was saving, and that we could get married as soon as he had 100 florins?"

"I care nothing about all that. Do not try to deceive me, it is useless," said Heveder, furiously. "Where are the 10,000 florins?"

"I am innocent; I know nothing," sobbed poor Lotti. "I only talked with the conductor."

"And what did you give him?"

"A kiss, sir, that is all."

"Indeed? We shall see if to-morrow it will still be a kiss, and until then, you will remain in prison."

The wretched girl was led away sobbing and Czato's wife, who, unknown to her husband, had in the meantime arrived, was brought before the judge. She was a large woman with large features, large feet and hands and strong lungs. Among a hundred other questions she asked the judge without giving him any opportunity to answer one had his most earnest desire been to do so, she wanted to know why she had been brought there, how he dared to treat an honest woman so and what he meant by it? Perhaps he fancied he was in Russia.

"I beg you to be seated," said the judge at last, "and to prepare yourself, for I have terrible news to break to you. Your husband is not true to you!"

"What!" cried the wife, "he deceives me?"

"Yes, indeed," said the judge, "and he has done so for a long time past."

"It is impossible. Last year we had our silver wedding. Oh, it is impossible—false—it can't be."

"But it is, madam. Your husband left yesterday with his mistress, taking with him the 10,000 florins which he should have carried to his employer."

"The 10,000 florins! But he never took them!"

"What!" thundered the judge.

"He left them in the strong room. He drank a little more that evening than was necessary to quench his thirst and he forgot the leather case. The next day the cashier discovered the oversight and telegraphed Dionys Saragiqui."

"Very possible. You have only to ask his lordship if you don't believe it. Perhaps that would have been a wise thing to do in the first place," said Madam Czato.

The belief flashed upon M. Heveder that he had unjustly accused two women and two men, but he took the precaution to telegraph to Dionys Saragiqui, who confirmed Madam Czato's statement. Then the victims of a robbery that had never taken place were restored to liberty.

"However," said the judge, looking out of the window as he saw them walking away, "my system is excellent. Find the woman. She is the key that unlocks secrets. I did find her and the mysterious robbery of the Agrad line was immediately cleared up."—Adapted from the Hungarian by W. M. Taber in New York Mercury.

Age of the Maya Civilization.

Dr. Le Plongeon and wife, who have spent years studying the ruins of Central America, believe the Maya civilization dates back 11,000 or 12,000 years, and that it is the parent of the oldest civilizations of Asia and Africa, and in the symbols which the doctor finds he sees clear evidence that the sacred mysteries of the Egyptians, Hindoos, Persians, and afterward the Greeks, originated in the temples of Maya, and that the rites of Freemasonry, to which various origins have been assigned, likewise began here. He finds the ancient Heratic alphabet of the Mayas identical with the Egyptian, and that the vernacular of the aborigines of Yucatan and other countries farther south has many affinities with the very ancient Akkadian, once spoken by the inhabitants of the countries along the Euphrates, near the mouth, while certain words long used in the mysteries brought from Egypt and Chaldea to Greece and Rome have no ascertained meaning in any language except the Maya, where Dr. Le Plongeon has found them.—Chicago Herald.

VARIOUS FORMS OF VERTIGO.

Symptoms Which Sometimes Scare Persons Badly—Not Often Dangerous.

Vertigo is from a Latin word that means to turn.

It denotes an ailment characterized by a sudden feeling of dizziness, and at times by actual falling. Sometimes surrounding objects seem to the person attacked to whirl around, or the floor (or ground) to rise up. The fact that vertigo is often one of the earlier symptoms of apoplexy, frequently fills the person with terror, lest that deadly disease may be impending. But in the majority of cases it has no such significance, not even as indicating a tendency.

One form of vertigo, a very persistent form, is due to irritation of certain nerves within the inmost chamber of the so-called labyrinth. This was what Dean Swift suffered from so long, and to the physicians of his day, so unaccountably. One of its symptoms is temporary deafness. This distinguishes it from all other forms.

Another form connects itself mainly with the eye. Of this kind is the feeling of giddiness which some people have when, being on a train at rest, another train slowly passing deceives them into the idea that it is their own train which has begun to move. The giddiness occurs at the moment when the false and the true sensations become confused together.

In the case of the near-sighted, the internal muscles of the eye, often being unduly strained in their efforts to converge the eyes sufficiently for the sight of near objects, suddenly give way, when the eyeballs turn out and the letters run into each other. This is accompanied with a feeling of giddiness, eye ache, headache, and sometimes nausea.

A third form connects itself with some slight disorder of the stomach, and occurs most often when the stomach is empty. There is a sudden swimming in the head, objects seem to revolve, and the person totters, and perhaps falls.

A fourth form is purely of nervous origin, and is due to nervous exhaustion. It may be caused by intellectual overstrain, long-continued anxiety, physical excesses, or the immoderate use of tobocco, alcohol, or tea. Elevated positions may bring on an attack. It rarely results in actual falling, but oftener in the feeling of being about to fall.—Youths' Companion.

Cousins' Marriage in Persia.

In Persia the marriage of first cousins is the favorite union. The reason is that cousins have been acquaintances and friends from childhood, while to the rest of the world, save her brothers and sisters, the young girl is a veiled mystery; so that, unless there is a mutual disinclination or too great a disparity of age, the Persian youth looks forward to the "daughter of my uncle" as his future wife. Often the cousins are betrothed from childhood. As a rule, classes do not mingle in marriage. The sons of merchants wed merchants' daughters; the young tradesman mates with his like, and so with the members of the servant and soldier classes.—Chicago Herald.

I would specially recommend to the ladies Acker's Dyspepsia Tablets. As a laxative they have no equal. They are guaranteed to cure Chronic Constipation, Dyspepsia, and all diseases arising from a diseased stomach. With a free use of the Tablets, Sick Headache is impossible. H. B. Garner, druggist.

Confucius and His Believers.

Confucius lived 500 years before Christ, and his teachings and precepts from the Chinese Bible held worldly advancement of little account and sought to attain rather the moral than the material elevation of mankind. Even now few Chinese will admit that the European standard of morality is equal to their own. Christianity they consider to be a good enough religion in as far as, like Buddhism and other native cults, it teaches men to do good, but they can not see that in practice it has made much impression upon the nations of Europe.

Their own country has seldom waged an offensive war, while all Europe appears to them an armed encampment. England prides herself upon her religion and her big ships of war; France sends her missionaries far into the interior, and her torpedo boats cruise round the coast and sink all the unoffending junks that come in their way. This is, of course, the unfavorable side of European character as it presents itself to the ordinary Chinaman.—Nineteenth Century.

A Room Lined with Amber.

Most smokers are proud to own a real amber mouthpiece. What would they say to room, 75 by 100 feet square, lined on all sides with amber clear to the lofty ceiling? That is what some American tourists saw the other day at Tsarskoe Solo, an imperial summer palace near St. Petersburg. The precious fossil gum was cut and dovetailed so as to make beautiful figures of cupids, fruits and flowers. The whole is in the highest state of polish.—Chicago Herald.

Making Thistle-Balls.

One of the occupations of piazza-loungers at the summer resorts this season is making thistle-balls. The pretty fluffy things are much admired, as a decoration for the parlors of city homes, and, as they are not very easy to construct, the chance is that a cluster of thistle-balls tied with a satin ribbon will be a gift welcome to many a lover of odd embellishments for a room.—Chicago Times.

Composer Strauss' Methods.

Strauss is said to compose in a very unmethodical way, jotting down his ideas on any piece of paper lying near him, and not infrequently on a bank-note. His careful wife generally inspects his cuffs to see whether they do not bear traces of her husband's genius. —Chicago Times.

Damascus Growing Prosperous.

The ancient city of Damascus is in a prosperous condition. Its trade with foreign countries is rapidly increasing. The narrow thoroughfares and bazars are disappearing and giving place to wider streets.—Chicago Herald.

CURE FOR PILES.

Piles are frequently preceded by a sense of weight in the back, loins and lower part of the abdomen, causing the patient to suppose he has some affection of the kidneys or neighboring organs. At times, symptoms of indigestion are present, flatulency, uneasiness of the stomach, etc. A moisture like perspiration, producing a very disagreeable itching, after getting warm, is a common attendant. Blind, Bleeding and Itching Piles yield at once to the application of Dr. Bosanko's Pile Remedy, which acts directly upon the parts affected, absorbing the Tumors, allaying the intense itching, and affecting a permanent cure. Price 50 cents. Address The Dr. Bosanko Medicine Co., Piqua, O. For sale by G. E. Gaither.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. This preparation is also the only one that will cleanse the blood of Mercurial poison and the taint of Contagious Diseases. Impoverished blood is productive of

ANÆMIA,

A wretched condition indicated by Pallid Skin, Flaccid Muscles, Shattered Nerves, and Melancholy. Its first symptoms are Weakness, Languor, Loss of Nerve Force, and Mental Dejection. Its course, unchecked, leads inevitably to insanity or death. Women frequently suffer from it. The only medicine that, while purifying the blood, enriches it with new vitality, and invigorates the whole system, is

The Fence Tax.

The Spirit of the Farm says: Fences cost on most farms each year more than taxes, and they are becoming more and more costly as material gets scarce. The true policy is to take up interior fences so far as practicable.

GREEN—NOURSE.

Tuesday evening, at the Ninth Street Presbyterian church, Mr. Thos. Green, Jr., was married to Miss Illa T. Nourse, Rev. Nourse, the father of the bride officiating. The church was artistically decorated for the occasion. The marriage bell was a marvel of floral beauty, and under its charm of fragrance and color the youthful couple were united for life. Messrs. Henrr Wallace, Jouette Henry, John Green and Green Champlin acted as ushers. After the ceremony the bridal party was tendered a reception at the residence of the groom's father a few miles South of town. A gay and gallant company assembled around the hospitable board to do honor to the young couple and bid them good will on the journey of life. The bride is one of the most elegant young ladies of our city. She is charmingly qualified in head and heart to bless a home. The groom is an intelligent, industrious, cultivated young man. He ranks high in the social circles of our county. The NEW ERA extends congratulations and bids them "God speed" though life.

Profit of Poultry.

A writer in the Nashville Spirit of of the Farm says: If I were to tell a practical poultry raiser that twenty-five hens and roosters in one year yielded an income of fifty-two dollars actual account, he would say I must have received low prices or failed some other way. I did both, yet there was a clear profit of thirty-six dollars, or 600 per cent., counting original stock twenty-five cents apiece. I never received more than twenty cents a dozen for eggs, nor more than twenty-three cents for chickens, and lost seventy by rats. There are now just fifty of different ages in the yard, mostly full blooded Plymouths and white Leghorns. One-half of these will bring one dollar apiece. Not having a dog around to bring cholera,, gapes, lice and death among them, there were no diseases of any kind. A free run to a bushel of fine charcoal helped, no doubt. On account of the garden the hens had to be confined, but the unpleasantness this caused in the family was soon over, for those hens yielded from four to nine eggs more every day than when they had the run of a ten-acre lot. The only pains I took was keeping account. If some of your readers can tell me that outside of poultry raising I can make 600 per cent., I will raise no more and try that but I should want figures. The fence that confined the hens was made of lath, close together, ten feet by thirty.

"St. Marc The Soldier of Fortune."

The Opera House was the scene of a first-class, genuine surprise, on Monday night last. Mr. F. C. Bangs, a tragedian unknown and unheralded, was announced in the title role of "St. Marc the Soldier of Fortune," a characteristic Italian play of adventure, love, intrigue, violence, conspiracy and revenge.

An extraordinary local excitement elsewhere prevented a full house, and those who attended the performance expected to sup at a lenten collation.

It proved to be, as we have said, a first class surprise party. Mr. Bangs captured the hearts of the audience on his first entrance, and to the close of the melo-drama was "the applause, delight and wonder of the stage." His impersonation in all respects was magnificent. A herculean, shapely person, graceful animated movement and address, a voice deep, ringing, resonant, finely modulated and sympathetic, marked his action which even in the heat of the romantic melo-drama was marked by scholarly restraint and never overstepped the bounds of finished elocution. The manly, dashing, generous St. Marc of boast Monday night is in heroic physical proportions, impassioned, graceful action, and superb dramatic elocution, fully the equal of Salvini, the last of the Italian stage. Mr. Bangs' voice is a marvel. It is thunder set to music, and runs easily through the scale, in the loudest or the softest tones, without a jarring or discordant note. The performance was undoubtedly the best ever seen on the boards in Hopkinsville. The audience was delighted and the actor was four times called by hearty applause before the curtain.

There will be no voting at Beverly next Tuesday. The precinct lacks four days of having been organized long enough. The citizens will vote at their old voting places.

The Tobacco Board of Trade will elect three inspectors next Wednesday night. There are about 30 candidates in the field, and it is impossible to tell which way the lightning will strike.

Lewis Merriwether and Lewis Trice, both colored, had a pitched battle on the street Monday. They pelted each other with rocks without serious damage. Merriwether was fined $15 and cost and Trice $5 and cost.

The steamship Soale brought from Europe to New York on the 24th inst., $2,105,000 in gold. The steamer La Bretagne brought over $1,000,000. It is estimated that within the past 90 days $12,000,000 in gold has come here from Europe. All or any part of this sum will be taken at par in the NEW ERA counting-room, for subscriptions or advertising.

Owensboro Messenger: After a lingering illness of nearly five weeks' duration Miss Mamie Pointer, daughter of Mrs. Sallie Pointer, died Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. She was an unusually bright and attractive girl, just entering her teens, and was the idol of a fond mother's loving heart. Her disease was typhoid fever, which she contracted in Russellville, though it did not develop itself until she was brought home a week after she was taken sick. She was a member of the First Baptist church, and was zealous in all work pertaining to the advancement of the church and the cause it advocates. The remains were taken to Russellville yesterday for interment.

The attention of the afflicted is called to the testimonial given by one of our oldest citizens, Mr. Jas. Courtney, well and favorably known as a reliable man and one who has suffered for years, and who has, spent a great deal of money trying to seek relief, if not a cure, which he failed to do until he visited Dr. H. M. Sherman, the noted specialist who is now at the Burbridge House in this city. Dr. H. M. Sherman is a physician of more than ordinary intelligence and ability which has been demonstrated by the manner in which he has handled old chronic cases that has called on him, and placed themselves under his treatment since his arrival in Hopkinsville. He will remain here until Monday, Nov. 1st. Those who has not as yet visited the Doctor should do so while the opportunity offers, he leaves Tuesday morning to fill other appointments in this State.

A lady has called our attention to the fact that among the unmarked soldiers' graves in the cemetery is that of the brave, gifted and eccentric Tom Woodward, as everybody called him, who held the rank of colonel in Morgan's command, and died at the residence, in this place, of his aunt, Mrs. N. E. Grey, on Virginia street, from the effects of a wound received in a raid upon the town in the Autumn of 1864. He was buried in the family lot of Mrs. Grey. Colonel Woodward was born in the North, and was a cadet for some time at West Point Military school. The restraints of the school were too rigid for his restless, roving nature, and he came to Kentucky, where he employed himself, as inclination or necessity required, in writing for the press, hunting and school teaching. He was well informed, bright, humorous, adventurous, reckless and a rare boon companion. Morgan's meteoric mode of warfare offered a resistless fascination for Tom who enjoyed "the rapture of the strife" and military gypsying with the keenest zest. He was a fine drill officer, and posted in the rules of discipline, and is said would have received promotion early in the war but for his restless temper, which was impatient of subordination. His courage was unquestionable. He flung his life away in an almost unsupported raid through the streets, as uncessary as it was desperate.

Our correspondent adds: "T'was a dismal time and a gloomy afternoon in the Autumn of '64, when his funeral was held by rector Webb, in the parlor of the Grey homestead on Virginia street. Hope was falling very low in the hearts of Confederate sympathizers and only a few faithful ones gathered there to let fall a tear over the hero who had come here from the North a stranger, who had ever received kindness from our people, and in return espoused their cause and yielded up for them his life."

A number of gentlemen leave the city to-day for Rochester, Ky., on a hunting and fishing expedition.

As the time for his departure draws near (Nov. 1st.) Dr. Sherman's patients are becoming more numerous. They come from all sections of the county and the genial doctor is kept busy from morning till night whispering into their willing ears the glad tidings of hope and relief for the many ills that flesh is heir to. He speaks of coming back in the near future with a view of locating permanently here.

Blood Food for Hens.

The albumen or white of an egg is somewhat similar to blood in composition, and the poultry man will find it very profitable to procure fresh blood from the slaughter-houses whenever it can be obtained. It can be put in a bag and cooked, or it may be mixed with two parts corn meal and one part shorts baked into cakes and crumbled for the chickens whenever it is needed. Fed to hens it increases egg production, being cheaper than meat and much more beneficial.

The True Story of McElroy's Escape.

Henderson News.

Charlie Caldwell, the hackman who drove the surry that carried McElroy, the murderer, out of town, says all the newspapers have published wrong accounts of the flight.

I hauled McElroy from the train to the jail in my hack upon his arrival in Henderson. At the jail Judge Givens swore me in as an officer and told me to do all in my power to protect McElroy from a mob, and the sooner the prisoner could be conveyed out of town the better. We drove straight out towards the cemetery, the traces of the surry coming loose two or three times and I had to stop and fix them. In this way probably we lost half-hour's time. I was told to follow the Cairo road and we passed that village at 9:15 o'clock, stopping there to water our horses we made straight for Pool town; arriving there at 11:22 o'clock we drove to the house of Mr. Dan Melton, where I hid the surry. I was afraid the mob might pass by while we were in the house, and if they saw that surry McElroy would be a dead negro. Mrs. Melton finally prepared a snack for us, and we were shown to our room which contained two beds. Mr. Hicks said he would tie McElroy before lying down, but he forgot it, I suppose. McElroy was given a dose of morphine and placed in bed (he had been shot so bad when captured as to suffer intense pain, but he bore it bravely) and was told not to move. Hicks said he had lost two night's sleep and was going to lie down awhile; taking off two shining revolvers, he placed them under his pillow. I noticed McElroy was watching Hicks closely when he removed the pistols. I sat some ten feet from McElroy with my hand on a self-cocking revolver and pretended to be reading a paper. I had lost about a week's sleep, but I wouldn't have closed my eyes in the room with that negro for a national bank, for I knew if I did I was a "gone gozling." McElroy snored very loudly for about an hour, then cautiously drawing the cover from his face he looked at Hicks, then at me. I asked him did he want any morphine or water, and he replied that he did not, but was just looking around. I told him if he moved out or raised his body from that bed I would kill him. He replied that he did not desire to escape, that Hicks and myself saved his life. He closed his eyes again and snored for about fifty minutes, then drawing the cover as before he looked at Hicks, saw he was asleep, and then raised upon his elbow and looked at me. He had a daring look in his eyes. I was glancing over the top of my newspaper at him, and when he had raised up a little, I presented my pistol and told him if he did not lie down flat on his back I'd kill him sure. I woke Mr. Hicks about 2:30 o'clock and told him to get up and watch the negro, I was tired. He did so, and at 5 o'clock we started for Sebree and arrived too soon for the train, as it was late. Here a crowd of some fifty or sixty men were talking pretty loud about lynching the negro. I pleaded with them, telling them that it was daylight and I knew them, and it would get them into trouble, etc. Finally the train arrived, and I tell you right now if them "yaps" had only had a leader, McElroy would have been a corpse in five minutes. Getting Mr. Below and his sons, the marshal and another gentleman, we formed a kind of a guard around McElroy and took him on board the train, a pair of handcuffs were fastened on his wrists and Mr. Hicks saying he feared no further trouble, the train pulled out and I started for Henderson. Hicks had McElroy locked up in the Hopkinsville jail O. K.

An Unqualified Endorsement from a Responsible Source.

What Mr. James M. Courtney, age 63 years, born and raised in Hopkinsville, Christian county, Ky., says of the valuable treatment given him by Dr. H. M. Sherman, now at the Burbridge House, Hopkinsville:

HOPKINSVILLE, KY., 10—25—'86.

I have been suffering with rheumatism for twenty-five years and during that time I have spent hundreds of dollars and nine months at Hot Springs, Arkansas. I went under Doctor Sherman's treatment Oct 7th, and never found any permanent relief until I commenced taking his medicines, and I am now more than happy to say that I am now free of pain, rest well at night, can walk a reasonable distance without pain, which I have never been able to do since I became afflicted.

JONAS M. COURTNEY.

Louis Cohn, editor of the Breslau Law Reporter, has been arrested on the charge of making insulting remarks with reference to Emperor William four years ago. The charge was preferred by the editor of the opposition paper, the New Law Reporter. Public opinion condemns the action of the latter.

ALMOST MURDER.

A Dastardly Attempt Made on Bob Taylor's Life.

KNOXVILLE, TENN., Oct. 25.

The canvass has not witnessed any events such as those which transpired to-day. One occurrence is an outrage, a blot upon the fair name of the State which it were well to forget. But of that, further on.

Bob was due to speak at Maryville, the county seat of Blount County, to day. This is a Republican stronghold. That party has a majority of one thousand, and the mountaineers who live within its borders, are the most bourbon in East Tennessee. It was here that Alf Taylor opened his campaign before his brother was nominated Trouble there was feared, but no such disgraceful scenes as were enacted were anticipated. The Democracy of Middle and West Tennessee, had as the world knows, treated Alf Taylor with such courtesy, kindness and consideration as no other Republican had ever received. Not an insult was offered him and his feelings were never the least outraged. No man can deny this. In return for this treatment the Republicans to-day were not content with insulting Bob Taylor, but a dastardly attempt upon the life of himself and associates was made to-day and to-night.

At ten minutes after 10 o'clock this morning Bob left the Schubert House and started for the depot of the Knoxville & Augusta. The train had not left the city when a crowd of negroes began to throw rocks at it. Such was the Republican treatment of the Democratic leader. It was nearly noon when the train rolled into Maryville.

As the cavalcade moved toward the center of the city the Republicans became more boisterous. They seemed to be angered that Bob had received such an ovation. They yelled for Alf, and exclaimed: "Damn Bob Taylor," in vociferous tones. Just before the procession reached the center of the town several negro men began to throw rocks at the cavalcade from an adjacent field. One stone struck the 8 year-old son of James Warren, who was riding behind his father, and nearly put his eye out. A number of rocks were thrown, and the confusion was increased to fever heat. Several men dashed off on horseback to catch the negroes, but they made good their escape. It was said the white Republicans had instigated the assault with the intention of breaking up the demonstration for Bob in a row. Whether this was true or not, I could not learn, but that the negroes were Republicans is certain. The Democrats felt outraged at the proceeding, bus did not break line.

At half past 5 o'clock Bob was escorted to the train which was to convey him back to Knoxville. A thousand men were gathered there. Democrats who lived in the country had remained in town to bid him good bye. Republicans were in a bad humor. Democrats from Knoxville, many of whom were accompanied by their wives and daughters, boarded the train. The Republicans of West and Middle Tennessee had viewed the success of Bob with comparative composure, but the adherents of the red rose had been angered by the unparalleled demonstration which had been made for him in their Republican stronghold. They had displayed all during the day the only ill-feeling which the canvass has witnessed. The heavily laden train rolled out of the depot shortly after nightfall amid the cheers of Democrats for Bob and the huzzas for Alf of the Republicans.

The train had not proceeded a mile before with a jerk it halted. The passengers were at a loss to understand the stop, but in a few minutes the explanation came. The engineer had perceived some dark object lying ahead of him on the track and had reversed the throttle and the brakes were quickly shut down. With a quiver the train came to a standstill. Train hands hurried forward and this is what they found. A large cross-tie had been placed across the track. Had the train been proceeding at the usual rate of speed the engineer would not have been able to halt in time, and the train would have been hurled from the track. A ditch was on either side and a terrible accident would have resulted. As it was the cow-catcher of the engine was but a few feet from the impediment when it stopped. Had the engineer been less alert or the speed been greater, lives would have been lost. There was no one in sight when the brakeman went forward. Who could have placed the obstruction there? That it was done with malicious, murderous intent was certain. No other motive could have prompted the deed. It was known all along the line and to everybody, who had been at Maryville, that the train contained only Bob Taylor and a party of friends from Knoxville. Harsh as the judgment may appear there was but one opinion and that was that some Republican who had been at Maryville, mad, misguided and reckless, had so far forgotten his humanity as to seek to wreak vengeance upon Bob Taylor and his friends. Every circumstance pointed to this agency of their diabolical attempt at murder.

In Memoriam.

Miss Gabe West, who died in this city Oct. 21st, 1886, was a young woman whose character deserves to be considered and emulated by her friends and acquaintances. It is with this view, therefore, that, at the request of a friend, I would lay this simple tribute on her grave.

The foremost natural quality of her character was energy. Her activity in her special sphere was remarkable. It is thought by some that her health, never robust, was enfeebled and her constitution perhaps permanently impaired by a native energy that impelled her to overdo her strength. And to this is attributed her early death. The engine was too strong for the machinery. For this feature she was trusted and praised by those who engaged her services, and when the Singer Machine Company recommended to its agency here that she be retained in her relation to its business, it did both the company and her a credit.

In the department of woman's work it seems to be the old story of intense nervous strain and an early collapse of the vital powers. The minds of all thoughtful people are deeply moved for those of her class, and I am free to say that she rose in my thought just in proportion as she illustrated the foregoing fact. In the vagaries of a fired brain she still talked of her work, and these fragments of thought, confused and fevered as they were, yet moved with weird and sad significance around the latest transactions of her life. The generosity of her nature is also spoken of by those who knew her best, as a feature worthy of note. She had a heart within her warmed with the blood of human sympathy and kindness. A cold-blooded woman is everywhere a traversty of her sex, and we must go farther than the subject of this memoir to find her.

Our young friend was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church, and was consistent in her work. It is said of her, "she was devoted to her church"—a church where she found a spiritual home and much true fellowship. Her conversion was genuine and her relation to God was maintained until the Pole Rider of the White Horse bade her mount and plunge into the last river. The song, "Over Jordan," which, at her request, was sung at her funeral, was an appropriate sentiment wafted on the waves from the hither shore upon which she had entered. Her testimony to her friends on this side was "I am not afraid to die." While enduring severe pain, to the question "Do you want anything?" she responded, "O, I want rest." She had heard the voice of God, "I will give thee rest." The flowers will fade on the mound, but the flower of immortality will bloom within that grave. A FRIEND.
