DR. JACOB BEARD,

The Wonderful Magnetist in our City—

Performs Remarkable Cures—The

Testimonials of Prominent Citizens—A Chapter of Interesting Reading.

Dr. Jacob Beard has been wonderfully successful in treating all kinds of diseases in even their most malignant forms. Some of the cures he has effected in our city will be of interest to our readers.

Mr. J. J. Austin says: I had suffered for years with my kidneys. I heard of Dr. Beard when he was in the city last winter and went to him. After treating me one time I felt myself almost entirely relieved. I know his methods are genuine and effective.

Mr. R. P. Stevens said to a reporter yesterday, that he had suffered with kidney troubles and that he was entirely cured after two visits from Dr. Beard. He had tried every remedy under the sun and Dr. Beard was the only one that afforded him relief.

Policeman Chris. Biggerstaff says he was suffering from rheumatic pains in his lower limbs and that Dr. Beard relieved him in two minutes. Mr. Witty also says that the Doctor relieved him of a severe pain in the back in a very short time.

Dr. Beard when in our city last winter visited Mrs. George O. Thompson regularly, and his magnetic treatment has been extraordinarily beneficial to her. Mrs. Thompson says: I have suffered much with severe neuralgia and Dr. Beard entirely cured me and I have not had a return since. Also his magnetic treatment has relieved me of rheumatism and deafness. I have gained in weight since he began his treatment, and my general health is much improved. The treatment I received at his hands also cured me completely of indigestion and I can now eat anything.

Mr. John Moynon says: I was suffering terribly with rheumatism. I had to use crutches to get about. My condition was so bad that it pained me even to laugh. Dr. Beard treated me one time and in ten minutes I could walk without crutches or pain. I consider this a remarkable cure.

By its magical attractive powers, B. B. B. unites the blood of all impurities, unlocks the liver, arouses all secretions, restores nature to its normal condition, unclouds the troubled brain, clears and beautifies the complexion, cheers the disconsolate, strengthens the feeble, calms the disturbed nerves, and induces quiet and peaceful slumbers. It has been in use over twenty-five years as a potent preservative in the blood, and is a far-fetched, foreign-found or dream-discovered subterranean wonder, but is a scientific and happy combination of recognized vegetable blood-purifiers, effected after many years of constant use and experiment in the treatment of thousands of some of the most appalling cases of blood-poisoning known in the state, resulting in complete and unparalleled cures of pronounced incurable cases.

"SHAKY."

The Zig-Zag Method Employed by Mercenary

Men.

It is a notable fact that the people of Atlanta and elsewhere are beginning to be thoroughly convinced that worthless compounds become "shaky" at all new innovations, while an honest preparation never fears opposition. We do not propose to "twice out" others, as the field of operation is large, and we accord to one and all the same privileges we enjoy. We are not so far lost to business principles as to denounce any other remedy as a fraud, or imitation, or as containing a vegetable poison, the effects of which are horrible to contemplate. The alarm need not be sounded, for there is ample room for all declining anti-potash, pine-top, slop-water compounds.

If one bottle of B. B. B. is more valuable in effects than half a dozen of any other preparation, we won't get mad about it. If ten bottles of B. B. B. cures a case of blood-poison which others could not cure at all, it only proves that B. B. B. is far the best medicine.

20,000 BOTTLES

Of B. B. B. have been sold to parties living in the city of the corporation of Atlanta since it was started two years ago!

Why this wonderful sale of a new remedy in so short a time with so little advertising?

It must be confessed that it is because B. B. B. has proven itself to possess merit in the cure of blood, skin and kidney diseases. Hundreds of honest citizens attest the fact of our claim.

Atlanta and many other points B. B. B. is "on top," and will stay there. Many persons desire to know how the B. B. B. acts on the system. By entering the circulation, it modifies the vitiated blood globules, increases the red corpuscles, antagonizes all poisons, vitalizes and regenerates the flagging forces, furnishes the pabulum for rich, new blood, eliminates all poison through the secretions, and increases the appetite, while, by its wonderful action upon the pores of the skin, the kidneys, liver and glandular system, all effete and impure matter is speedily conducted from the body, leaving the blood pure, fresh and healthy.

By its magical attractive powers, B. B. B. unites the blood of all impurities, unlocks the liver, arouses all secretions, restores nature to its normal condition, unclouds the troubled brain, clears and beautifies the complexion, cheers the disconsolate, strengthens the feeble, calms the disturbed nerves, and induces quiet and peaceful slumbers. It has been in use over twenty-five years as a potent preservative in the blood, and is a far-fetched, foreign-found or dream-discovered subterranean wonder, but is a scientific and happy combination of recognized vegetable blood-purifiers, effected after many years of constant use and experiment in the treatment of thousands of some of the most appalling cases of blood-poisoning known in the state, resulting in complete and unparalleled cures of pronounced incurable cases.

The lottery business must be very profitable in New York City, if Mr. Anthony Comstock is to be believed. He says that in 1884 a lawyer representing the Louisiana Lottery came to his office and in the presence of his stenographer offered to pay the Society for the Suppression of Vice $25,000 yearly, the first payment to be paid that day, if the Society, whose agent Mr. Comstock was, would permit the Louisiana Lottery to have an office in New York without interference.

The lottery lawyer said that his company gave $15,000 yearly to charitable institutions in New Orleans, and could well afford to pay $25,000 a year for the privilege of doing business in New York. The offer was renewed this year and again refused. The magnitude of the business may be estimated from the fact that the books signed at one of the Louisiana shops showed that the daily receipts averaged $5,176, or a yearly total of $1,889,240, mostly paid by clerks, poor mechanics, laborers and sewing girls, who hoped to draw a capital prize.

The death of Malcolm Hay, late Assistant Postmaster General, presents the pathos of politics. Hopelessly ill of consumption he labored on, with iron will,

and moved the pile of mail which he entered his crowded office. At the entreaty of friends, one day, after a spell of exhaustion, he wrote his resignation in a sort of despair, then he summoned two stout messengers and asked to be assisted to his carriage. He was carried to it, in arms, as helpless as an infant. He leaped back in his seat, clutched the arm-loop, and burst into tears, and so was driven away to his home.

The Antwerp Pressman of October 3 says that there is great complaint in that market, recently, on account of the discovery that many packages of tobacco received from New York are found not to correspond with samples, and that many packages are found to contain scraps and trash in the interior, surrounded by fair-smelling tobacco, a practice which we may identify as "meat-ing." The Pressman thinks that the only way to cut short such fraudulent practices is to demand a re-inspection on arrival for all tobacco from New York.

The ancient custom of carrying a luck-pot in one's pocket to prevent rheumatism, which has been observed by divers worthy farmers, particularly those of the colored persuasion, among the hills of Poland River, and along the banks of Little River, from time immemorial, is practiced by the eminent

Bishop McHenry, of Albany, New York. The wonderful virtues of this richly-colored but poisonous nut were not discovered by an Ohio man as might be supposed from its name. The practice originated in Ireland.

China wants more railroads over a noted American railroad builder, has sent an agent to look after contracts. If China builds railroads as vigorously as she murdered several thousand native

Christians recently, she will soon be

THE TRI-WEEKLY NEW ERA.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1885.

A FORTUNATE MISTAKE.

This is a pretty piece of business, I must say. Here I am, just on the eve of my departure, called upon to meet Jack's wife, escort her to the willows and see that she enjoys herself during the summer months. If Jack wasn't such a good hearted fellow, and my favorite nephew to boot, I wouldn't do it. But, well, there; I suppose I'll have to go down to the city, make myself known to the charming creature and do the gallant for Jack's sake. Hang it! Why did the scamp go and marry some one I did not know? I'll give him a piece of my mind when he returns from Europe for getting his bald headed uncle into such a scrape.

The partly audible meditation from the flaxen-haired chap was more forcible than choice. But then, it was only one of John Harney's peculiar streaks. If anyone had overheard him, that is, anyone wholly acquainted with him, they would not have paid excessive attention.

It was one thing he delighted in, to see all others, it was to pass for a bald headed advisor of youth. He took every possible occasion to call himself bald headed; when, the fact known, the slight spot upon his bump of self-esteem was barely discernable, still, it gave him a deal of importance to be looked upon as an "old man." Strange, too! His associates were all young people. He was not a favorite among old people; he called himself old and bald headed.

It was a great shock to him when he heard that Jack had gone and married an opera singer, not because of any disparity of social positions. He was a sensible person in this wise, but because he had, in his mind, drawn up a plan for Jack to follow and abide by in the future. His plans were all broken and scattered when Jack married; his plans are now all changed by Jack's sudden departure, thereby necessitating his, John's, taking charge of the lady for the summer. After some further meditation over the subject, he retired with his mind made up to go to the city, introduce himself to Jack's wife and bring her back to the willows.

It was wonderful to note John Harney's air of age given importance as he stepped forward to greet the pretty figure in traveling dress. He had seen many handsome women; they had created more or less of an impression upon his heart. Yet, as he clasped the tiny hand and looked down into the honest blue eyes upturned to his, he thought he had never met a more lovely woman in all his life; and he mentally added that Jack had shown rare choice in loving and wedding such a paragon of female loveliness. "Jack writes me of me to escort you to the willows; take sole charge of you and make your stay there as pleasant as possible," said John, beaming a most uncle-like protection from every feature of his face.

"Did he say all that?" softly asked the little woman.

"Yes, and more too, the rattle brained scamp—but there pardon me. I forgot that I was speaking to the lady of his preference."

"Preferment," fell like an echo from the red lips.

"Yes, lucky dog," responded John. The latter part, however, was said softly and aside according to stage parlance. "I shall be around with a cab at five. Trust you will be ready." He moved by impulse, and before the lady could speak he was out of the room and down the front steps.

"Jack never said anything to me about going to the willows for the season. The willows? Oh, yes, the place where Jack was brought up. I—well I will go. He is very handsome. But who is he? This self-portrait question brought a sudden stop to the charming creature's musings. If he is so well acquainted with Jack, his picture will no doubt be in the album."

She went to the album. The second face she gazed upon was the gentleman in question. She slipped the card from the page. Upon the back, written in a plain, business hand she read: "Your Bald-headed Uncle."

"Bald-headed! It must be a joke. He isn't so old as that. Jack's uncle! I'll go the willows. Perhaps it will not be such a proxy season after all. But why did he speak of me as the lady of Jack's preference, I wonder?"

When John Harney called at 5 with a cab, the lady's trunk was ready, and she stood in the parlor with her hat already adjusted, putting on her gloves.

"I beg your pardon," she said, turning her bright face toward John, "but a person generally likes to know the name of a fellow traveling companion."

Why, what have I been thinking of all this time. To be sure; you are quite right, I am your uncle," fell blandly from his lips.

"Oh, you are?"

"Yes. Are you quite ready," asked he.

"Quite ready," she replied as she followed John to the cab. The trunk was put in place, and the pair were soon whirled to the depot. The ride by rail was so pleasant, the lady, Jack's wife, was such an agreeable companion, that John Harney would have extended the journey if he could. The proxy, country depot was reached, where a plain, democratic wagon awaited them. Then the drive followed; a delightful five miles along sweet-scented clover fields and moon-lighted streams. Finally the willows is reached, a rambling farm house upon the bank of a smoothly flowing river with long, double rows of willows ranged up and down the stream.

"There, that job is over and off my hands," uttered John Harney as he lighted a cigar and fell back in his easy chair.

The days and weeks that followed were as some Arcadian dream to John Harney. But it was not all sunshine. There was a strange, perplexing doubt in his mind. Why should a married woman permit any man but her husband to accompany her on moonlight strolls? Pshaw! That amounted to nothing. Only her uncle-by-marriage. Again, what right had he, John Harney, to sit by the side of his nephew's wife and tell her of his bright dreams? What right had he to weave romance with love's magic words, and say in tones of softest rapture:

"And when the golden day is over and the roseate sunset flushes the western horizon, all the day cares will be sweetened by the presence of the little woman I love."

John Harney's heart was bursting in his bosom as he recalled the look she gave him then. He can feel her hand yet, as she laid it, warm and tremulous upon his arm and said: "I hope your fondest anticipations will be fully realized."

And this was what bothered John Harney's mind by night and by day.

"My God! I love, adore my nephew's wife, heaven help me!" had been the cry more than once that swelled from his heart upon retiring or when seated in his library. And the poems sent to the magazines from his fruitful pen were freighted with a vein of sadness commingling together in one strain.

"Leona, you tell me that you wish to return?" asked John Harney, as the two were standing under the willows.

"Yes; there is work for me to commence in the city. I have had a delightful time, thanks to your kindness."

"It's nothing to me, Leona. You have brought a deal of sunshine to the old place. And to me—"

He did not finish. How she would have displaced him, he thought, and he continued.

"Jack and Mabel will be back in two weeks—"

"Jack and who?" quickly interrupted he as he laid his hand on her arm.

"Why, Mabel, my sister—"

"And what right has he to take your sister abroad?" fell from his lips as his fingers clasped her wrist.

"I never knew that it was wrong for husband and wife to go abroad together," replied she.

The glow of the dying sunset shone upon John Harney's face, transfiguring every feature into a picture of happiness as he bent down and said:

"And you will let me come to the city soon after you?"

"Why?"

"Because I love you, dear," was his response.

And now, after the honeymoon is over, John Harney blesses his nephew, Jack, for changing his mind at the very last moment, and taking his wife to Europe. And the other—a fortunate mistake indeed.—H. S. Keller.

Correspondence.

Our Fair Association.

Editor New Era:

I have recently attended the Hopkins county fair and was gratified as well as astonished to see the interest manifested in the success of the enterprise, not only by Madisonville, but by the whole county of Hopkins. The people, farmers, mechanics, lawyers, doctors and even divines, vie with each other in their work to uphold the officers of the Association in their efforts to make each meeting a successful one. On the last day of their fair, Saturday, Oct. 17, there were on the grounds not less than 5,000 people, young and old, all happy and cheerful, and all present aiding and assisting in the success of the Association and abetting the Association by their presence and influence and money.

This association as a consequence declared last year a dividend of 15 per cent. on their capital stock, and this year will make a much larger one. There are no jealousies there. There is no talk of opposition, but on the other hand, each man and each woman regards it as their Association and glory in its success, and regard themselves as a constituent part of the county of Hopkins and therefore that in its success, they and each of them have a personal interest.

It is not difficult therefore to account for the fact that their stock pays a dividend.

The officers of the Association and the stockholders are backed by the people, and the people stand by the Association, and, whether stockholders or not, are citizens of Hopkins county, and as such, feel interested in every undertaking that looks to the growth and development of their county.

The principal feature of the Hopkins county fair seemed to be their trials of speed, their runs and trots.

I am not disposed to discuss the question as to whether more attention should be given to our programs to cereals and farm products, or to the speed trials and sufficient to say here, that all fairs in Kentucky and elsewhere are and have been from time immemorial, conducted as they are conducted now, by mixing up our admiration of the fine bull calf and comely heifer, the solemn jack and the ugly jennet, with the exciting tilt on the outside between the fast flyers, each putting forth his or her best efforts to reach the goal. Kentucky is renowned all over the world for fine whiskey, fast horses and pretty women. I know I shall be attacked and may be demolished for associating in the same sentence pretty women with fast horses, but some one has said that the next thing in beauty in creation to a pretty woman is a fast horse. Now that I was about to say, that if Kentucky is to maintain her standing and renown as a State noted for its horses, we cannot abolish speed trials, they must go on. Whether it is better to abolish the whole thing and quit raising fine horses I do not know, I do not own a horse in the world and do not know that I ever will make a mile in ten minutes, standard time. I believe, however, there is a great deal of fanaticism and old fogeyism about this whole question. I never could see how a man's religion should suffer a collapse by looking at a horse running his best any more than seeing him trot or pace or walk his best.

But enough on this general subject. What I had in view in this article (though I have digressed), was and is to excite if possible in the people of Christian, and especially among the farmers, a deeper interest in their county fair.

Our Association is now in its 22d year. With the little interest manifested by the farmers and stock raisers of Christian, it is to me a wonderful thing that the Association has not died long ago. I am well aware that there is in the county among the farmers an honest diversity of opinion as to how and on what plan our fairs shall be conducted. One party wants all the premiums to be awarded on grain, tobacco, fruits and vegetables, horses, cows, sheep, and hogs, and would blot out and abolish the speed trials.

Another party while favoring premiums on farm products, and being more stirred by the turf, would devote the larger amount of the premium money in that direction, and hence when a Board of directors is elected whose views take the latter direction there is a hue and cry raised, and instead of having the hearty sympathy of all, those who do not believe in the trot stay away or throw cold water on the Directory who hold a thankless office and work without pay.

These are facts and everybody knows it. Everybody (that never has been a President or Director) thinks he could run a fair and make it a success, but as a matter of fact every Directory for the last 10 or 15 years has tried it honestly and faithfully, and failed. Every stockholder I have no doubt has been anxious, that the association should make a dividend, and if any Directory that can be named in the county can put the institution on a good financial basis, can make money to repair the amphitheatre now needing it, and do other improvements, I will guarantee that the past Directory, yes all the past Directories, will step aside and help to elect such a board.

The only way to settle all these varied and conflicting views, is for each stockholder at the annual meeting, to come and represent his stock and make the question as to how the management shall be, in the election of President and other officers, and then when the election is held, whatever the result may be, go to work and give the Directory a cordial and hearty support.

The complaints the writer has heard of the past management, have come generally from those stockholders who never attend a meeting or cast a vote, and I am compelled to say that they ought not to open their mouths in condemnation, until they come in person and represent themselves and help to amend or rectify the evils of which they complain.

I trust that these suggestions I have made will be taken up by the stockholders and will awaken a new interest in this association, and that when the annual election takes place that all the stock will be represented.

I am not a farmer and never will be. I have no pet scheme to offer. I have no Board of Directors in view for the future. I am willing to elect and stand by and support any board that the majority of the stockholders desire. I desire only the prosperity of the Association, and to this end alone I have looked into what I have written. Whenever the day comes that the stockholders are tired of the scheme and want to abandon it and sell out and quit, I am ready to acquiesce, but in order to have success we must have co-operation, sympathy, a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together. Less grumbling—more work.

Editor New Era:

The farmers are through housing tobacco and now busy firing.

We had a very heavy rain to-day.

Misses Doyle and Sue Wilkins, of your city, are spending the week in the country.

Miss Florence Carter, a bright and attractive brunette, of Fruit Hill, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. H. H. Lindsay.

A certain young gentleman, of this neighborhood is especially kind to the "widows and orphans."

Quite an interesting protracted meeting is in progress at Antioch. Mr. Perry, the pastor is assisted by Revs. Joiner and Bingham. They have large crowds every night. Several from your city attend every night.

Misses Georgia and Helen Yancey are visiting their sister Mrs. Sallie Rolston.

Miss Carrie Wiley and T. M. Dalton, of your city, spent Sunday with Miss Ada Meacham.

Miss Eva Koyalty is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alex Fritz.

Miss Mary Long, of Hopkinsville, is spending the week at Mr. Geo. Cannon's attending the meeting.

Miss Josie Pitty, who is teaching at Henderson's School House, visited her father's family last week.

Miss Alice Wilkins, of B. F. C., spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

We would advise the young gentlemen to have their horse and buggy put up when they go to see their girls, for fear some one will drive off and take a boggy. The young ladies out here are not afraid to drive anything.

Mrs. Durham was called to Kirkmanville last week by the illness of her sister-in-law, Mrs. Putty.

A New Swindle.

WINCHESTER, OHIO, October 19.—A new mode of swindling is just reported from the eastern part of this county, and is called the photograph swindle. The way it is worked upon farmers is about as follows: They agree to furnish the farmer a photograph of his house for fifty cents. An agreement is then signed by the farmer to receive the photograph at the price named, and then the said agreement turns out in good time as a promissory note for a large sum of money. It is said to have been worked successfully on several farmers in this county.
