A Spurious Deed of Trust Given

FRAUD SCHEME NETTING

St. Louis, Feb. 11. A "spurious deed of trust" given in St. Louis banks by a notorious fraudster has recently been discovered. The deed, which was forged and signed by Jerome L. Winter, 31 years old, a street car conductor who has been questioned since Monday, is the latest in a series of similar forgery cases in the city.

Officials of a St. Louis bank detected Winter's name on the deed, which was intended to be a mortgage on a valuable tract of land in Virginia. Winter was held while an investigation was made of the purported looking deed and a number of corre- sponding notes and letters. The bank suspected the man of having stolen the deed and letters.

Winter denied knowledge of the deed and a letter writing himself. In his con- sciousness, Winter told police. The letter contained details of the fraud, which revealed the deed to have been a forgery. Winter insisted that he had no knowledge of the deed, and never association with Winter. Several officials of the bank who discovered the deed have been put in charge of the investigation.

In a few days, the bank detected Winter's name on another deed, which was supposed to be a mortgage on a valuable tract of land in Missouri. Winter's name was also found on other bank accounts and letters, indicating his knowledge of the fraud. The bank is now in possession of the deed and will make further inquiries between $15,000 and $50,000.
