Cpl. Grover C. Wright, Jr., Route 1, Fulton, and Cpl. James W. Gordon, of Fulton, are members of the 696th Field Artillery Battalion, whose big guns recently fired the first shells into the Po Valley of Italy for Lieut. General Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army.

The battalion was activated in 1941 at Fort Bragg, N. C. It has played a leading role in actions before Cassino, on the beachhead around Anzio, in the Liri Valley, in the drive on Rome, and in offensives across the Arno River and through the Gothic Line. The 696th has received commendations from every American army corps of the Fifth Army, the New Zealand division and French and Polish corps then attached to Fifth Army and the Eighth Army for services in support of each of these organizations. A TIMELY INVESTIGATION

A timely and thorough investigation into the problems and needs of the aviation industry has been conducted by a subcommittee of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. In gathering information, the members of the subcommittee traveled nearly 12,000 airline miles through the United States and Alaska. Its findings and recommendations constitute a foundation upon which to formulate sound regulatory measures, and such legislation as the maximum development of American civil aviation may require.

The committee's report says: "The ability to travel at great speeds, through the atmosphere, often in the stratosphere, far above the impediments of the earth's surface, will bring far-reaching changes in our conception of geography, in our economies, in our relationship of commerce, and in our relationship, both domestic and international."

"So far as your committee has been able to discover, the United States is the only great nation where progress in aeronautics has resulted not so much from the stimulus of war planning, but rather from the advantage of peace time civil competition. Our country's policy of competitive development in military and civil aeronautics was correct. The accomplishments of America's aeronautical industry merit the nation's admiration and its continued support."

The report expressed high praise for the performance of the airlines of the United States, and strongly urged the immediate expansion of meteorological aids, airports and control towers. It also recommended adoption of unified regulation of contract carriers by air, as well as the simplification of the rules governing private flying. Thanks to the work of the Committee, reliable knowledge about American aviation is accumulating where it can do the most good—in responsible legislative quarters.

FARMING ISN'T FUN

If a farmer wishes to buy materials to enlarge his barn, construct a silo, or for any one of a hundred measures to step up production, he must go through all the rigamarole of getting priorities, permits, and the okay of various "authorities," from the county agent to the ration board. The same is true of machinery parts, tractor fuel, even wire for fences. He is treated as if he were operating a non-essential toy instead of a highly scientific factory, on a man-killing schedule, to turn out the most essential product in the nation—food.

This is one of the reasons why millions of good Americans are praying for the day when they will be released from the domination of bureaucratic rulemakers in Washington.

SAFETY FIRST

With radio installed in practically everything that walks, flies, or floats, the question is asked, Why not on trains? Only technical experts can answer that question fully.

The Association of American Railroads, which is familiar with every detail of railroad research, points out that: "Since the early days of radio communication, railroads have carried on numerous experiments in the use of this newer medium of communication, as it might be applied to railroad operations. These experiments have been carried out on numerous railroads in cooperation with various inventors and manufacturers.

"There are technical difficulties in radio transmission and reception on railroads, due to the close clearances of bridges, tunnels and structures which preclude the possibility of long or high antennae, and due to the special noise conditions, shock, impact, and vibration encountered in railroad train service. As radio communication itself has improved in quality, and become more dependable and better adapted for railroad use, the number and variety of the experiments with radio communication... have greatly increased.

"The operating results obtained by the use of radios in tanks and other mobile military equipment may go a long way toward making possible the application of the radio as a communication medium in some fields of railroad operation.

"The design of all equipment used in railroad operation must be such that it will function under the most severe conditions. This design requirements must be met by the radio manufacturers, as it has been met by others in the railroad supply industry, before radio can become an essential factor in the railroad scheme of communication."

The railroads are not hunting gadgets. They seek ever-greater safety of operation.

TIDBITSTHE YEAR AUNT JENNY DIED

Ever since man became reasonably civilized, he has used some permanent method of telling time. The ancient Egyptians worked out astronomy pretty accurately, especially well when you remember they did not have any telescope. Many ancient nations had what seems to us a clumsy way of telling time. The Olympians of ancient Greece are quite confusing, about as confusing as it would be for us to measure time here by naming the President and even he year of his term. The Romans had a still clumsier method, that of naming the two ruling consuls of the year. Not until dates began to be counted as before or after Christ did we have a method that offers the minimum of confusion. Anyone who has tried to check back on even mediaeval dates will find this system pretty confusing, particularly when he gets to the time when the Gregorian Calendar was adopted, when some adjustments of days had to be made.

And that reminds me of the way things used to be dated at Fidelity and elsewhere. To say 1885 or 1891 smacked of something cold and learned-sounding. How much better and more personal it was to say that something happened the "year Aunt Jenny died," or the "year of the big flood," or the "year the locusts were so bad." Locally and for a brief time that was great, almost as great as to say in the consulship of Aulus and Publius. Of course, people at the time would remember, but poor scholars ages away, if it became necessary to probe into that year, would have a hard time determining just when any event took place.

Often this indefinite though personal way of telling time had a series of checks, however. The year Aunt Jenny died might have been the one when Bud was born, and Bud is now thirty-five. A little arithmetic would straighten out out this tangle and produce a date accurate enough for any historian. Almost every neighborhood had and has a local statistician who remembers everything: births, deaths, marriages, killing frosts, deep snows, epidemic. If it were necessary for me to establish my birth date at old Fidelity in the late nineteenth century, I am sure that I could find two dozen people still living who could give the exact date. Forty or fifty others would not recall that it was October 14, 1888, but they would remember that I was so many months or years older or younger than certain members of their family or that I was born just before or just after some lusus naturae appeared, such as an early frost or a big rain or maybe an earthquake, though I doubt whether my birth was attended by any unusual phenomenon.

In a little village far from Fidelity where I taught when I was still not old enough to vote there lived a man who in more favored times would have been valuable as a statistician. He had only the most meager education, probably only enough to spell out the items in the county paper and to read haltingly in the Bible. But he had a phenomenal memory for dates, whether they were important or not. On your birthday, even though you may have been a newcomer in the neighborhood, you were likely to be greeted by this quaint old bachelor with best wishes for many more happy returns of the day. How he found out everything and then remembered was his secret, but his startling memory made many of us wonder what could be done with our minds, either for good or for ill, if we could imitate Mr. Morris.

All of this, of course, ties back into the remotest past, when records were unknown, but when some people held in their minds the significant facts and the literary treasures of the race. Some people I have known could quote accurately thousands of verses of Scripture, even though they had had less than an eighth-grade education. With all of our modern sophistication, we are reminded of ten of times when ignorant people knew much more than we now do.

WARTIME JUSTICEBy FRANCIS BIDDLE
Attorney General of the United States

It is difficult for Federal officials in Washington to keep in touch with people throughout the country, particularly during a war. Therefore, I am glad that these brief remarks are to be published in some of the rural papers, so that their readers can get an idea of the principles which I believe should guide the Attorney General and the members of the Department of Justice.

The Attorney General, besides advising the President and the heads of Federal departments and bureaus, acts as Uncle Sam's lawyer. He defends the United States in suits brought against her and collects claims on behalf of the United States—taxes, amounts due on contracts, penalties, etc. Last year, for instance, we collected over $8,000,000, not counting taxes.

The Department of Justice also prosecutes under the criminal laws of the United States. Congress makes these laws; and the Attorney General, through the United States Attorneys in the 150 districts throughout the country, enforces them.

It is essential particularly in a democracy, that the will of the people, expressed in legislation, should be carried out. This enforcement must be prompt to remain effective, and must be neutral and just to be respected. For enforcement of law, in the ultimate sense, is based on the cooperation of the public. Particularly is this true of the enforcement during the war of special laws, such as priorities and OPA regulations made necessary by the special war emergency when individual rights have to be subordinated temporarily to the common good.

And enforcement must be fair. The first ten amendments to the Constitution, known as the Bill of Rights, protect the individual from the tyranny of injustice—protect his rights to worship freely, to criticize his government freely (even in a war); to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures; to be indicted and tried speedily if he is accused of crime by an impartial jury, to be confronted by witnesses appearing against him.

And enforcement must be impartial. A democracy cannot be safeguarded by undemocratic means. No group is above or beyond the laws. They apply to all alike—to all the people—rich or poor, employer or employee, farmer or factory worker, Catholic, Protestant or Jew. No policy can long endure if it benefits one group at the expense of the general public. Each group has its right to protection under the law, but that right, like the rights of all in a democracy, is qualified and relative. It must always be superseded by the Constitutional "right" of the people of the United States—"the general welfare."

SAFETYGRAMS

Did you know that when two cars (yours and someone else's) approach an intersection at about the same time, the car on your right has the right-of-way, and that you should let him cross first.

Even though you have the right-of-way and another motorist drives heedlessly ahead of you—let him go through—what difference does it make?

Stubbornly "arguing" over the right-of-way or thoughtlessly disregarding it at railroad crossings and intersections has sent broken bodies to hospitals and mangled corpses to the morgue.

Let caution and courtesy be the bases of your driving habits. By observing them, you may arrive at your destination a few minutes later, but not healthier.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"I wish you had been there to explain it. I didn't have the facts I needed to convince her, Judge."

"I know, Bob. I'll drop in on my way home this afternoon and get it straightened out. Mary's reasonable when she hears the real truth on something she's concerned about."

"What should I have told her, Judge?"

"Simply this, Bob. It's not fair to penalize the many for the actions of the few. Authorities who have made an exhaustive study of the subject report that only about 5% of those who drink abuse the privilege occasionally. 95% drink sensibly.

"Taking the privilege away from the 95% isn't the answer. It's not that simple. The real answer is education and better control. The responsible members of the distilling industry are working constantly toward that end. They don't want anybody to abuse the use of their product any more than we do."

"That's certainly a sensible solution, Judge. And it will work, if everybody cooperates. We found out definitely that prohibition wasn't the answer, didn't we?"

Thanksgiving

Most thankful indeed will be the mothers and fathers of the sons who will be able to join them in the intimacy of the family circle on Thanksgiving Day this year. But there will be many homes in which service flags hang, where vacant chairs will be mute evidence of the fact that sacrifices must continue—sacrifices that are making it possible for us to give thanks now that our cities have not been bombed, that our people have suffered no starvation, that our children are safe. Yes, there is much of which we can give thanks, this year, and especially to those who have given their lives that we may continue free.

Feeling Lots Better She Praises Retonga

Distress From Nervous Indigestion Promptly Relieved And She Can Eat Anything She Wants. Says Well Known Resident. Discusses Her Case.

Happy and grateful for the prompt relief Retonga gave her, Mrs. Lizzie Brannon, well known resident of 723 Jefferson St., At-case Mrs. Brannon declares.

"For about three years nervous indigestion and sluggish elimination kept me feeling miserable practically every day that came. Lots of food I did not dare touch. My appetite fell away to almost nothing and I had spells of indigestion and headaches that lasted for days at a time. I was practically a slave to laxatives. At night my legs cramped so badly that sometimes I would almost scream from the pain, and I could seldom sleep more than an hour or two at a time.

"The relief Retonga gave me beats anything I ever experienced. I can even eat raw onions now, and I sleep soundly all night long. That terrible constipation is relieved too. I feel like a different person, and a day seldom passes but what I tell some friends about this grand medicine."

Retonga is intended to relieve distress due to Vitamin B-1 deficiency, constipation, insufficient flow of digestive juices in the stomach, and loss of appetite. Accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at DeMyer Drug Store. adv.

.. his editorials are pertinent commentaries on the world today .. viewed at eye-level

Russell Briney

Chief Editorial Writer of The Courier-Journal, has been a close student of politics and government throughout his varied journalistic career, covering the past quarter century. Eminently readable, his editorials reflect a keenly analytical mind. In appearance Briney could easily pass for one of the more sedate lads on any campus, affecting bow ties and a center part in his hair . . . rarely graced by a hat. His humor is dryly academic . . . used chiefly to harpoon his colleagues. Son, and grandson of revered Louisville churchmen, Russell Briney is cast in the mold of the best traditions of Kentucky. He is the corner-stone of all America's institutions . . . and the world's tomorrows!

Educated in Louisville public schools, and at the University of Virginia, he joined The Courier-Journal in 1920. Moving through a kaleidoscopic career as a newspaperman, in contact with the world of men and affairs, Briney traveled Europe, toured America and Canada with notables, sat on state and national sidelines of government, measured economic resources, witnessed legal bouts at famous trials. At twenty-seven he showed promise of rare editorial acumen . . . and was made Associate Editor of The Louisville Times. In the same year, the Brineys' son (now seventeen) was born. By 1942, when Herbert Agar went into active service in the Navy, Russell Briney was placed in command of the editorial pages of The Courier-Journal.

STRAIGHT TALK

ABOUT THE

SIXTH WAR LOAN DRIVE

AS WE MOVE closer to victory, it wouldn't be surprising if you were saying to yourself—"What's the big idea of asking for all this additional money now? Isn't the war almost over?"

No sir, it is not! Not by a long shot. Of course, for many months now you've heard mostly about the war with Germany, where our greatest effort is concentrated. That's why many people have the idea that the war's practically over.

But make no mistake about it—nothing could be farther from the truth! The Japanese war is a tremendous undertaking, and victory will come high. We'll have to fight every inch of the way.

Everything Costs More—in the Pacific War

The European war is expensive, but almost everything in the Pacific war will cost more. Take transport costs, for instance: Because of the longer distances, the same amount of freight costs 25 per cent more when shipped to the South Pacific than to Europe. And it takes twice as many cargo ships in the Pacific to support a task force of a given size because turn-around time is twice as great!

More Planes . . . Tanks . . . Ships . . . Oil

In addition, we shall need more of everything. More B-29 Superfortresses that cost $600,000 each. More P-47 Thunderbolts that cost $50,000 each. More M-4 Tanks, with bulldozer blades, that cost $67,417 each. More amphibious tanks—more aircraft carriers—more supply ships—more gasoline and oil than it took for the invasion of Europe!

Care for the Sick and Wounded

And lest anyone forget, we shall need more battalion aid stations—more clearing stations—more evacuation hospitals—more convalescent hospitals—more hospital ships.

For many, many years the sick, wounded, and otherwise disabled veterans will require medical attention and care. That's the least Uncle Sam can do in appreciation of what they've done for us.

Maintenance for Millions

Did you ever stop to think how much money it costs to maintain the 11 to 12 million men and women in our army and navy? Whether the men are actually fighting or not, they must be fed, housed, transported from one training center or battle area to another, cared for in a hundred and one different ways. That all costs money and will continue until the last man demobilized is back in civilian clothes.

In addition, millions of dollars will be required for mustering out pay, for various benefits and services voted by Congress to help the boys get started in civilian life.

These are reasons enough why patriotic Americans will want to buy heavily during the Sixth War Loan. But here are still more—

Winning the Peace—for Your Country

If we're to win the peace as well as the war, the cost of living must be kept down and the purchasing power of money preserved. A reckless inflation that would necessarily be followed by the catastrophe of deflation—with its unemployment, bankruptcies, misery and heartache—must be prevented at all cost.

Let's make no mistake—a dangerous period lies ahead. The American people have nothing to fear, however, if they show in the future the same common sense they have shown in the past, and continue to put every penny over rock-bottom expenses into the purchase of more and more War Bonds.

Winning the Peace—for Yourself

Want another important reason? Yourself! There isn't a better or safer investment in the world today than War Bonds. In helping your country, you are also helping yourself! Never in our entire history has it been so necessary to save as right now. We'll need money, individually, for education, repairs, replacements, retirement—and we'll need a lot of it.

As you can see there are many reasons, important reasons, why our Government must have the financial support of everyone, and have it for many months to come.

Let all Americans do their part—for their own sake, for their country's.
