HICKMAN NOTES.

Anyone wishing to turn in notes for the Fulton Daily Leader will call Miss Lyte Reid, Cumberland Phone No. 69.

Since the sewers have been opened in the West Hickman levee, most all of the seep and accumulation of rain water has been drained out, and West Hickman will soon be dry again. The river is still falling very fast.

The little three year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Rutter, is quite ill of pneumonia.

Miss Sarah Kemp is convalescing after an illness of pneumonia.

Willie Amberg and Gus Alexander have gone to Jacksonville, Fla.

Miss Mollie Bourne, of Union City, was here Saturday. Miss Bourne will have charge of Smith & Amberg's millinery department again this spring.

Elvis Stahr was in Fulton a few days the latter part of last week.

Little Hugh Logan Prather, son of Dr. and Mrs. H. E. Prather, who was operated on in Chicago a few days ago, by Dr. Murphy, one of the best physicians in the United States, is reported getting along very nicely and the operation was a success.

Some little ice in the river yet.

Amos Metheny has returned from a trip to St. Louis.

Mrs. L. A. Stone is on the sick list. Hickman will have another "movie" show the first of March, which will be installed by J. O. West, proprietor of the LaCade hotel.

One of the prettiest affairs of the winter was the farewell party given Friday evening by Miss Bonnie Carpenter to Miss Bettie DeBow, who leaves in a few days to make her future home in Nashville. The affair was suggestive of St. Valentine Day, the Valentine effect being well and effectively carried throughout, the tables being numbered with hearts, the initial D., appearing on each heart, and the score cards being hearts. Miss Carpenter was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Carl Schmidt. Progressive "500" and Rook were played, there being six tables. During the games fruit punch, marshmallow salad and salted almonds were served at different intervals, being followed by a delicious salad course and coffee, cream and black cake, the cream being frozen in form of cupids in red and green with gilded wings and gilded bow and arrow, each plate being garnished with red carnations for the ladies and white carnations for the gentlemen. All extension of lines or poles that the city may see fit to have made in connection with the installation of extra street lights shall be done at the expense of the grantee, and the regular established rate for street lights shall apply to said extra lights installed.

The grantee shall within three (3) months after the sale of this franchise establish and maintain twenty-four (24) hours alternating current service.

The said grantee shall file his written acceptance of the terms and conditions of this ordinance with the city clerk of said city within thirty (30) days after the passage and approval of this ordinance.

MURDERED FOR $110; CULPRIT CONFESSES

C. O. Shelby Threatened With Mob Violence at Hickman.—John Ritchie the Victim.

Shelby Confesses and Implicates Confederate, Jesse Buntun, Who Is Arrested at Mayfield—Money in Victim's Pocket Divided.

Hickman, Ky., Feb. 16.—John Ritchie, employe of the Mengel Box Company, was found brutally murdered this morning two blocks above the business section on the bank of the Mississippi river. His head was beaten horribly with an iron rod with a heavy bolt on one end. The murder was committed on the N. C. & St. L. railroad track on a bluff, and an attempt was made to throw the body over the bluff into the river, but it lodged on the edge of the bank. An attempt was made to throw the iron rod into the river but it lodged in the mud near the body. Blood and hair were found on the end of the rod.

There was much blood on the railroad where the difficulty occurred, and everything shows there was a big struggle. It is thought by officers that the crime was committed after midnight last night. The body was discovered about 8 o'clock this morning by Oscar Salmon, who came down the river in a small boat.

This afternoon, C. O. Shelby, who runs a boarding house here was arrested and admitted killing Ritchie and first claimed self-defense, but later declared the motive was robbery.

Shelby was on the scene where the murder was committed when arrested standing with the crowd looking down the bluff at the dead body of Ritchie, no one having suspected him. This morning when money was made up to secure bloodhounds to put on the trail Shelby contributed 50 cents. Shelby made no resistance and at once admitted he committed the murder.

The officers, followed by hundreds of people, brought him to the police headquarters, where they questioned him. Shelby was undaunted and nerve unshaken, stating that he killed Ritchie, but in self-defense. When told he would probably hang he didn't care. Later, when it was found that Ritchie had been robbed and his pockets turned wrong side out, officers accused Shelby of killing Ritchie for his money.

When Ritchie paid his board last night he had $110. Ritchie feared he had consumption and had been saving his money to go west.

Mob Violence Feared.

Mob violence was feared when it was learned Ritchie had been robbed, and enraged crowds of men thronged the streets, every corner and in front of the jail all day, and the officers feared violence.

After carrying Shelby to jail the police continued to question him, and finally Shelby weakened and gave the whole story.

He confessed to having a confederate, Jesse Buntun, of Dukedom, Tenn., who came in yesterday afternoon. They had planned two weeks ago to kill Ritchie. Buntun hadn't been here for months, but he and Shelby had planned by mail and telephone to kill Ritchie last night, continued Shelby in his confession.

They took Ritchie up the railroad last night at 8 o'clock and two blocks above the business section murdered him, Shelby said. Ritchie's hands were bruised and skinned, showing he had tried to ward off blows. His slicker coat was taken off and searched. His coat was taken off and searched and both thrown over the bluff and when the body was pitched over it fell on the face among the rocks, crushing the nose. The trouser pockets were still turned out and $1.50 dropped on the ground.

Shelby's confederate, Buntun, left town on an early train this morning and it is reported here was arrested in Mayfield this afternoon.

The officers, fearing mob violence tonight and afraid to leave Shelby in jail here over night, took Shelby from the jail here this afternoon at 5 o'clock and drove through in a survey to Fulton to take a train for Paducah for safe keeping. Shelby's nerve weakened this afternoon and he wanted the sheriff to remain near him, calling him back time after time to tell him something more, seemingly to keep him near.

Shelby said he got $55 and Ritchie's watch, and told Buntun got $55 in gold. He told officers that his share was hidden under a plank in an outhouse at a boarding house, where the officers found the money.

Ritchie's home was in Jackson, Tenn., where his parents live. He was 27 years old.

Shelby is 19 years old and his confederate, Buntun, 18.

Ritchie's head was so mangled that the undertaker had to bandage his head to hold the skull together. Ritchie had to hold the skull together.

Sheriff Johnson and J. R. Milner and a Weakley county Deputy Sheriff, J. F. Ethridge, went to the home of Buntun last night and placed him under arrest, bringing him to this city at an early hour this morning en route to Hickman. Buntun denies having any connection with the crime.

MRS. CHARLOTTE M'CALL DEAD.

Mrs. Charlotte McCall expired Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. K. Hall, on Eddings street. Death was due to the infirmities incident to extreme age, the deceased being in her eightieth year. The funeral took place this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the Hall residence, Rev. J. A. Jensen, pastor of the First Christian church, officiating. The interment was at Fairview.

The deceased leaves a son and daughter, Mr. Sam McCall and Mrs. W. K. Hall, and the following three brothers and one sister: C. A. Fall, of Paris, Texas; Phillip S. Fall, of Alexandria, Louisiana; Mayor J. F. Fall, of this city; Mrs. Bettie Boyd, of New York City.

Mrs. McCall was born and reared at Clarksville, Tenn., but had lived in this city for more than 35 years prior to her death. Many years ago her husband, Mr. A. W. McCall, preceded her across the dark river.

When a young woman the deceased accepted Christ and united with the Christian church, remaining a loyal and true member through life. Her life was a benediction, and the world was made richer in goodness by her having lived.

INSURANCE SUIT TRANSFERRED

Paducah, Ky., Feb. 16.—The suit of C. T. Bondurant, administrator of the estate of W. L. Mosby, deceased, against the New York Life Insurance Company, J. T. Walsh, A. Walsh, and Lawrence P. Coyne for $10,000, the amount of a policy held in the insurance company on the life of Mosby, was transferred from the Hickman Circuit Court to the United States court here. The administrator claims the policy is in possession of J. T. and A. Walsh, who pose as claimants, and that an alleged assignment to them is invalid. Coyne is agent for the company at Hickman. The case will be called at the April session of the United States court.

ASSAULTED AND SHOT BY THUGS.

Will Craddock, a young white man, who gave his residence as England, Arkansas, while walking in the vicinity of the freight depot with a view to riding a freight train south, was assaulted, shot and robbed by two unknown thugs about 10 o'clock Sunday night. Craddock said he resisted the highwaymen and refused to hand over his money which was only about $6, until forced to do so after one of the robbers had pointed a pistol in his face and fired. The ball shattered the jaw bone, and the wound may result fatally. Craddock in company with another hobo returned to the city, and locating Dr. J. B. Paschall, had his wound dressed. The wounded man was badly frightened, according to Dr. Paschall, and declared he was going to leave the city before morning, and it is supposed that he succeeded in leaving as he could not be located today.

FRIENDSHIP FOR USE ONLY.

By Dr. W. T. Bolling.

Recent happenings have impressed the fact that the most of what we call friendships are for use only, and when a "dear friend" cannot be used he is dismissed without ceremony as something no longer worth any thing. True, is it that men who follow this line of action are mighty lowdown mean men, but if all of the lowdown mean men were taken out of the world there would be a decided reduction of population and the worst feature is that this reduction would affect all all classes pretty much alike. The politician is, as a rule, out for the stuff, and sticks close to any friend so long as that friend can be used to aid him in getting to the stuff he so much desires, but when that friend can no longer be used then he is cast out as useless, and some former enemy is taken in his place, but for use only. We who have been here very long have frequently seen this done, and have wondered how any one could be so selfish, and utterly lost to every finer feeling of true friendship, as to do such a thing.

I have in mind such a case, coming up in the last days of Gov. Patterson's administration in Tennessee, which utterly shattered my faith in any real unselfish friendship among politicians, the most of such friendships, at least, being for use only. By the way, my observations leads me to be sorry for any young man who enters professional politics; for he is apt to develop a selfishness which eats away all of the best and highest qualities of true manhood, and is apt to develop him into a mere human sponge, seeking to absorb for his own selfish ends solely, to end up an old political derelict floating the sea of political life despised by every real navigator, who, like he has been, gives value for use only.

Sometimes we come across such a one in garb of a preacher, and then we get about the meanest, selfish sponger in the whole lot, capable of using his ability and professed sanctity to win the confidence of his fellow men, for use only, and when friends are no longer to be used for his selfish purposes, he casts them away as he would a squeezed lemon rind. Just what the devil is going to finally do with such a specimen, I cannot imagine, unless he takes him into silent partnership. Happily, all are not so untrue, and there are true friendships welded more closely in the fire of trial and time of dire need.

Real friendship is ever more open and active when called upon to sacrifice, indeed, love and sacrifice are inseparable companions, and whoever is without one is without both, and a professed friend in prosperity who will not draw nearer in adversity is a counterfeit, with ties of friendship apparently only for use.

Human nature has ever been naturally, about the same, and I presume will so continue to the end of time. Many centuries ago David said: "If an enemy had done this, but it was mine own familiar friend, in whom my soul trusted," and there is no telling how many have since had David's experience of having professed friends who hold on to us for use only, and who jump us when something seemingly better for them opens up. It will not do to trust the best of friends too far, for the weakness of humanity is very great, even when it does not approach designed criminality, and in most men there is a limit to their ability to resist temptation, and hence the saying of the pessimist: "Every man has his price."

I have never believed, and do not now believe this, but my years of mingling with men, religious and irreligious, have convinced me that most men have a limit to their reliability, under constant selfish pressure creating a desire to hold for use only. Men are controlled most largely by self-interest, and when this interest becomes involved, the saint and the sinner are apt to look out for number one, and hence the game of political wire pulling, of public grafting and private evasion of the law, with all valuing things for use only, and very selfish use at that, the processes differing according to the personal character of men, and yet the great majority drive to the same end, to have for use only, to get much for little, and, if possible, to get something for nothing. This was humanity centuries ago, and this is humanity today.

Real Religion Scarce.

Real religion, as taught by Christ, by lip and life, would change all of this; but the unfortunate fact is that real religion, after the pattern of Christ, is a very scarce article—so scarce, indeed, that it is the rare exception, and by no means the rule—and the religious and non-religious seem to be running a close race for holding things for use only in advancing personal profit at the expense of public good.

If any man doubts this, let him inquire of the average preacher how much he gets out of the rich men of his church for the support of the ministry and the advancement of the general work of the church, looking to the evangelization of the great world lying in sin and needing the quickening influence of the gospel of Christ.

If he will do this, I am sure that he will agree with me that the smallness of the work of the church, in ratio to what it should be, is the result of the prevailing disease of selfishness, causing men to hold God's values for personal use only, rather than holding them in trust for the Great Master and Owner. And a close study of the "Parable of the Talents," would be helpful to all concerned if they are honest and desire information.

I find myself sometimes considering whether my chief motive in preaching is for the glory of God and the saving of men, or for use only, and I am afraid that there is more of selfish desire for salary and life's comforts than there should be at times; and I feel "sorry" mean as one who proposed to represent Him who "had not where to lay His head," and then I buckle down to unselfish labor and feel better for it.

This article is not intended as a condemnation of any one, but simply to call attention to a dangerous element in our human nature—in all of us, and dangerous to all alike—and to arouse us to use what we can for the general good and not for selfish use only; and to invest what we have so that at the Master's coming we may return to Him His own with usury; and I would especially call attention to the ruinous influence of the spirit of for use only in the home, where most of life's happiness and misery begins and ends. If the husband or wife enter into and pursue married life "for use only, then is marriage a failure and home a wreck.

A woman whose chief idea is to use the husband for mere provision of food and raiment may make a good housekeeper and even a good mother, but she can never make a good wife, and the man who has a wife for the selfish purpose of enabling him to have some one to use as a helper to create and increase his value—along material lines, is a mournful failure as a husband, and only a success as a selfish taskmaster, clouding a good woman's life, and holding her under the humiliating realization that she is valued by him for use only; and under these conditions married life is a tragedy and home a wreck.

For use only! Dear me, how much of it there is in this sin-blighted world—in the home, in the state, and even in the church—when there should be none. But in its stead there should be mutual helpfulness and friendly kindness unto all.

The Tone of a PIANO

There is perhaps no article purchased for the home that is as hard to select intelligently as a piano, for the reason that there are comparatively few who are in a position to know what constitutes a first class piano. As a usual thing, but one instrument is purchased in a lifetime, consequently it is not like buying furniture or other articles of common use, the knowledge of which becomes almost instinctive.

In a piano not only the eye should be pleased, but the vital part, TONE, must be taken into consideration, and the knowledge of what constitutes good tone is a life study. The difficulty of producing the right quality of tone, developing each individual note, building the piano so it will retain for years the same quality, with the lack of knowledge on the part of the purchaser, opens wide the field to many of placing on the market a piano at a greatly reduced price, in which no thought, time or money has been expended on the very life of the instrument—the tone.

Why It Pays to Pay More for Omega

All the proposed substitutes for OMEGA sell for a little less because they have to, or not sell at all. But this lower first cost does not mean they are that much cheaper, for they produce so many more baking failures that the loss from this amounts to more than the difference in the price. The best, therefore, costs you no more. All progressive grocers sell Omega.

THE FORGOTTEN PARTY

By J. J. MCARTNEY.

All Tuesday morning young Plunkett was tormented by some vague idea in the back of his brain of something left undone. Struggle as he might, he could not get it into concrete form. Yet trying to forget it only irritated him the more.

In the midst of his luncheon a lightning flash cleared his head and with a sickening chill he knew what he hadn't done. He had forgotten to go to the dinner party which Cella Bell had given the evening before.

He had not the ghost of an excuse, because he had not been dead at the time, which would have been the only valid excuse in the eyes of a hostess. He had simply absented himself from the affair because of an inexplicable lapse of memory. For an instant he wished that he dared telephone the explanation that he had been knocked down and rendered unconscious by an automobile and had just come to. Manifestly it was totally impossible to call up Cella and airily say: "Excuse me for thinking so little of your invitation that it slipped my mind!"

The fact was that he thought a lot of Cella's invitation. Indeed, he was beginning to realize that he was going to think a lot of Cella. He had scarcely begun to do so as yet, because their acquaintance had hardly advanced beyond the formal stages, but he realized that his captivity was inevitable and he was more than resigned to the prospect. This made the scrape in which he now found himself all the more tragic.

He had heard of men who had forgotten dinner parties and had been restored to human society and toleration only after weary years of contrition. This tedious process did not appeal to him. He was afraid that in the meantime some one else would run away with Cella. He racked his brain for a more speedy solution of the difficulty.

Cella was no weak, gentle, doormat variety of girl. He could imagine just how her wonder at his nonappearance had grown to surprise, then to wrath, and how her wrath was growing hour by hour.

It was without doubt a most difficult situation.

The average man would have tried to placate the injured hostess by a bushel of roses or ten pounds of candy, a contrite note or a desperate call in person. Young Plunkett showed his really superior intellect by the fact that he did not do any of these things. For a few days he did absolutely nothing. This required self-restraint, for every hour that Cella hated him was a blight. But when the next Monday evening came around he attired himself carefully in the prescribed society raiment and sallied forth.

On his way he ran into Smith. "Hello," said Smith, "are we going out among them tonight?"

"Yes," said young Plunkett, cheerfully. "I am going to a dinner party at Cella Bell's."

"Oh," said Smith, "is she entertaining again? I went to a dinner at her home last Monday night—"

"Did you?" murmured young Plunkett, interestedly, and passed on.

With a firm step he mounted the steps to the home of Cella and the vigorous peal of the bell sounded—not like the summons of one in terror. Admitted to the reception hall, he waited in all his immaculate splendor. After a while Cella came in. She advanced with the outraged dignity of an offended stage princess and when she said "Good evening" in a questioning tone young Plunkett felt like an unwelcome book agent. Yet he clung grimly to the purpose with which he had started out.

"Am I the first one?" he asked, cheerily.

Miss Bell was puzzled enough to relax her frown a bit. "First one for what? I don't understand!" she said.

Young Plunkett's face was a picture of ingenuous amazement. "Why, aren't you giving a dinner party this evening?" he demanded.

Miss Bell sat down limply. "I am not!" she informed him. "I gave one last Monday night, however—and I don't believe you have seen fit to explain why you were not present."

"Last Monday night!" cried young Plunkett. "Why, you've made an awful mistake of some sort. When you invited me you said distinctly 'a week from next Monday night!' Do you think for an instant I could have misunderstood an invitation from you? Why, I've counted on this evening for days—and now you tell me that you had the party a week ago! I don't understand, really!"

For a moment Cella stared at him. If ever there was a disappointed and reproachful individual on earth it was young Plunkett at that instant.

Cella wavered—then she fell.

"I never did such a thing before in my life!" she cried. "And here I've been blaming you! Oh, I'm so sorry, Mr. Plunkett! Now, you simply have got to stay and dine with us informally tonight. How I ever came to make such a slip of the tongue I can't imagine! You'll stay!"

"Why, thank you," said young Plunkett with noble forgiveness. "Now, you mustn't worry about this another instant. It's all right, I assure you."
