FRAUD UNEARTHED

In Classification of Cuban Leaf Tobacco.

This time customs grader is found.

FRAUD UNEARTHED

The purchase of tobacco in general has been increasingly difficult, but the fraud becomes more acute in the classification of Cuban leaf tobacco.

The recent purchase of tobacco at the Florida ports has been the subject of much attention, not only in the tobacco industry, but also in government, where the department is at a loss to understand the cause of the confusion.

"Tobacco is a very difficult product to classify," said an official of the department, "and as the New York firm has Havana and Tampa, and the labor conditions there are sufficiently large to lead to frequent confusion, we have no criticism to make, but if it were not for the fraud, which has been detected, the department has for years favored a uniform rate of duty, which would have no doubt been to the advantage of the government and the tobacco trade.

The fraud, which has been discovered, involves the transportation of a large quantity of Cuban leaf tobacco, which has been classified as Havana leaf tobacco, and has been shipped to the New York firm, where it has been sold as Havana leaf tobacco, and the government has been defrauded of hundreds of thousands of dollars in revenue.

The case now under investigation will be referred to the United States Tobacco Department, and the department will be able to make a decision in a few days as to the end of the investigation.

"There seems no doubt that those who have been engaged in the tobacco trade have been guilty of fraud, and that the department will be able to prove their guilt," said an official of the department.

"The case is a very important one, and the department will do everything in its power to bring about a decision in a few days."
