talking about your old friends. Friends are not like hatpins. Hatpins are used, but they do not have to be used. They may be put away in a drawer and taken out again when needed. Old friends are like that. They may be put away and taken out again when needed.

"You may visit your old friends and they will turn their backs on you. If you will turn your back on them, they will not turn their backs on you."

If you will work for your old friends, they will work for you. If you will be true to your old friends, they will be true to you. But if you will be false to your old friends, they will be false to you.

So, let us be true to our old friends. Let us work for them, and let them work for us.

VERY IMPORTANT TO KEEP SILAGE EVEN

Ripping silage even in filling is also more important than tripping, says a suggestion put out by the Kentucky College of Agriculture. If silage is not kept even, pockets may develop, resulting in mold and loss of feed and possibly poisoned stock. Tripping is a way of eliminating pockets, but of more importance is keeping the silage even, or slightly higher in the center.

There is much interest in silage, and it is estimated that more will be built this year than in any year of the past. The price of corn is not to be high enough to warrant liberal use of silage.

Numerous experiments have been the experiences of most cattle farmers point to value of silage for both beef and dairy cattle. It forms the basis of the cheapest cattle rations yet developed.
