FULTON BOYS GAVE UP LIVES

(Ernest and Herbert Lamb)
Tragely stalked into the peaceful homestead of G. J. Lamb of this city in the fall of '18, and in its wake left two empty places around the table, and narrowly escaped leaving a third.

When the war broke out, Ernest A. Lamb, 24, Herbert Lamb, 26, and R. J. Lamb, brothers, signed up to fight for their country. Ernest and Herbert saw overseas duty, while R. J. remained at his duties in the States.

On the 5th day of October, 1918, Ernest was fatally wounded on the battlefields of France, dying in a base hospital on the 19th of that same month. The following month Herbert was killed instantly on the battlefields. Ernest was with the 35th Division and Herbert was with the 81st Division at the time they met their deaths.

On the 11th day of November, the day the Armistice was signed, R. J. Lamb, the last of the three brothers, lay at death's door in a base hospital at Camp Bordon, Ga., where six doctors had given up all hopes for his recovery.

On Easter Sunday of 1922 the bodies of both boys were brought back to Fulton for burial at Mt. Moriah Church, six miles east of Fulton.

(Virgil DeMyer)
In attempting to jump from his boat to a rescue boat in a storm, Virgil DeMyer, son of M. F. DeMyer, was drowned off an English coast two months before the Armistice was signed. His ship "The Otrento" ran on a rock in a storm and sank. Several men were crushed to death between the two boats.

(Cletus E. Muzzall)
In East Fulton Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Muzzall, an aged couple, recall the month of August, 1918, when their son, Cletus, was killed in the Battlefields. The body was brought back and buried at Mt. Moriah near Fulton on New Year's Day, 1921. The details of his death were never actually known to his parents or anyone else.

(Lewis Nanney)
Lewis Nanney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Nanney of Cape Hill, near Fulton, was killed on the battlefields of France, and in the Spring of 1921 his body was brought back to the United States Mrs. Jeff Nanney of Chapel Hill, tery.

(Lawrence Fry)
Armistice Day always finds a large American Flag waving proudly in front of the W. M. Fry home on Third Street, where mother, father, brother and sister do homage to the memory of their beloved son and brother who was killed in action in the Battlefields of France.

Lawrence Nolen Fry was killed in action by shell fire on the night of Nov. 4, 1918, in the Meuse-Argonne, just a few short days before the Allies and Germans signed the peace treaty. He was with Co. A, 335th Inf., 89th Division and one of the regimental runners.

Morris Chowning sailed with Lawrence Fry and was also a regimental runner in the same company. He was with him in the camp in the States and on the front and was very close to him at the time he met death. He never spoke of the war to his comrades

REV. ROBINSON VISITS CAMP CITE AFTER WAR

Rev. C. Robinson, who was stationed at Camp Jackson, S.
Carolina, during the World War, visited this camp in 1931, or the place where it stood during that time. He found no trace or even recognition of the places where the various buildings had been while this camp was stationed there. The place had grown up in scrub oaks and small pines, and all the buildings, hospitals, etc., had long since been torn away.

"CEASE FIRING!"

This order which echoed around the world on November 11, 1918, brought joy to countless millions. It brought to a close a great war, into which America was marching her young manhood by the hundreds of thousands.

Of those thousands who answered the call, many never returned from over there. It is to those brave souls that we pay most reverent tribute.

We carry on that they might not have died in vain—that in some manner we may contribute to the ideal of liberty—the altar upon which they gave their all.

that he did not express the belief that he would not return. Before he was killed he asked Morris to bring his personal belongings back to his parents if anything happened to him. This was one of the hardest and saddest tasks ever performed by Morris in his life.

A small group of women some- what at sea as to just what an American Legion Auxiliary for Fulton would mean, but willing and eager to learn, met at the home of Mrs. P. H. Weeks in the early part of 1924. They had as their guest, Mrs. Wm. Lynch of Dawson, Rehabilitation Chairman at Outwood Hospital near Dawson, Federal Hospital for ex-service men. The National Auxiliary was then only in its infancy, and Fulton had not organized. Before the conclusion of that meeting, at which Mrs. Weeks acted as temporary chairman, the local American Legion Auxiliary Unit came into being with ten charter members pledging their support and membership.

This group of loyal women selected Mrs. Jesse Nichols to be their first President, Mrs. W. H. McGee their first Secretary, and Mrs. Clyde Williams first Treasurer.

The work being new and members lacking the understanding and enthusiasm which the ten intervening years have brought to this group of women, the organization forced to disband in 1925, after which time it remained inactive until 1928.

A few of the charter members, not being satisfied with the failure of the first organization, and feeling that Fulton should have an Auxiliary, got together and reorganized, this time with thirteen

LEGION ARMISTICE BANQUET TO BE HELD TONIGHT. SPECIAL SERVICE SUNDAY MORNING

To the memory of the twenty-nine brave sons of Fulton who made the supreme sacrifice in the world war, loyal citizens again bow in humble gratitude. To the families of these brave sons they extend renewed sympathies. . . and glory with them in honor justly awarded.

Tonight at 7 o'clock approximately 100 Legionnaires and their wives will attend the annual Armistice Day banquet to be given by the Legion and Auxiliary at the Legion Log Cabin. No special program has been arranged, and it was decided to make it a very informal affair, or get-together meeting and banquet, however, a very palatable menu has been arranged. There will be no parade this year preceding the banquet, as has been their custom, due to the fact that Armistice Day comes on Sunday.

At 11 o'clock on November 11, Armistice Day, the sixteenth anniversary of peace, upon a war-tired world will be commemorated with a special service at the First Presbyterian Church of this city. Hon. Jere Cooper, of Dyersburg, Congressman from the 9th District of Ohio County, Tenn., and an ex-service man, will deliver the address. The Legion and Auxiliary will meet at the Log Cabin and go from there in a body to the Church. This tribute on Armistice Day is to the dead. . . and the living, of which latter there are seventy-two ex-service men of Fulton who are Legionnaires. It serves to stir memory and remind nations of their obligations to those who answered the call to arms and threw themselves into the walls of defense in a cause that was deemed just.

Now is a good time to renew your subscription.

SIXTEEN YEARS

The steel helmet, rusted—the rifle is outmoded. Sixteen years have passed, and the world war goes gliding down into history. The mothers, fathers, the wives and children of American soldiers who gave their lives in that great struggle cannot forget—and we as fellow citizens can do no less than pause to pay tribute to that American manhood which gave so freely—even unto death.

MINISTER AND WIFE BOTH SAW SERVICE

Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Robinson both saw service in the World War. The signing of the Armistice found Mrs. Robinson, only woman member of the local American Legion Post, nurse on night duty in charge of the Receiving Ward B-3 of the Base Hospital at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. Carolina.

The Severity of the Influenza Epidemic had passed and Mrs. Robinson's ward was back to about its normal capacity of twenty-odd beds, which had held ninety-eight beds and cots only a few weeks before.

Mrs. Robinson says that much talking and planning was done, the patients slept little and the corps boys worked less. It was a great time, approaching a new era, feeling sort of a "born-again" feeling. One night did not exhaust this hilarity, and it continued for several.

ral. It was difficult to work, and those who were not in the service will never know the exhilaration which was felt for many days.

Rev. Robinson, who was not a soldier, but was in the service of the Y. M. C. A. at Camp Jackson also, as social worker, found that it required twice as much entertainment after the armistice was signed as before. There was real restlessness, homesickness and impatience while the soldiers waited for their discharges.

Rev. Robinson received his discharge in May, 1919, after sixteen and one-half months of service all spent at Camp Jackson. He and Mrs. Robinson both say they are glad they enlisted, and that it has also been a real pleasure to be associated with the ex-service men since the war.

HOW THE LOCAL POST DERIVED ITS NAME

James Marshall Alexander, son of J. M. and Mary Mott Alexander, was born in Fulton County, Kentucky, February 19th, 1867. He was educated in the county schools, finishing his High School work in Paducah. He then went to New York where he later received his M. D. degree from Bellevue. He returned there at intervals during his medical practice for post-graduate work.

During the world war he volunteered for service and was stationed at Fort Leavenworth until January, 1919, when he returned to his home town to continue his work.

His life was one of unselfish service—service given to his fellowmen with little thought of recompense, humanity's call was his call.

After a two week's illness he fell asleep on May 12, 1924, at his old home and was buried at the Alexander family burying ground near Jordan, Kentucky.

Dr. Alexander was the first local ex-service man to pass away after the American Legion was formed here, therefore, the local post, which at that time went by the name of Fulton Post No. 72 American Legion, was named Marshall Alexander Post No. 72.
