Chesterfield Wins
...because it has the right kind of Turkish tobacco in it

Turkish tobacco is expensive—that's true everywhere in the world, but it's especially valuable here because of the climate and the soil. The air is clean and the humidity is just right. It's the perfect environment for growing Turkish tobacco, and that's why Chesterfield wins.

JEAN HARLOW, FRANCHOT TONE and CARY GRANT

THE JAM MORRIS at Amstel recently nationalized their establishment by unveiling a giant replica of the tobacco, with the words "It's better in the United States, and it's better in the United States because it's better in the United States" inscribed on it. The tobacco is 150 feet long and 10 feet wide, and it weighs 1,000 pounds. The event was attended by other tobacco companies, who were not impressed.
