Community Participation In Fire Prevention Week Urged

Community participation is urged in the annual observance of Fire Prevention Week, October 8 through October 14. The week, which has been designated by Governor Earle C. Clements, is to be marked by observances of many kinds throughout the state.

The prevention of fires as a cause of death in Kentucky is of vital concern to the state and county health departments, according to Dr. Bruce Underwood, State Health Commissioner. During the year 1948, he pointed out, a total of 233 Kentuckians lost their lives as a result of fires. Many of these might have been saved if proper preventive measures had been taken. By participating in the state-wide observance of Fire Prevention Week, it is hoped that a more effective year-round fire prevention program may be worked out and that people will become more alert to fire hazards existing in their own community.

In many communities Citizens Health Committees are working with the Fire Chiefs in planning and carrying out week's program. One of the highlights of the week's observance in Kentucky will be the broadcast of a fire safety program, emphasizing the need for frequent fire drills in the schools. The broadcast, which is planned for 9 a. m. CST on Tuesday, October 10, will feature a statewide fire drill in which it is expected that more than 601,000 pupils and teachers will take part. Plan to listen. Remember, fire prevention is an important function of public health.

Another small crowd is on hand for first Monday Trade Day. Monday was the regular first Monday court and trade day, but like others for the past several months, the crowd was small and trading was light. Usually the first Monday in October is well attended, but many farmers were busy tending to hay and other crops and this kept many at home. Only a small amount of stock was offered for sale or trade. It was noted, however, that cotton, fox, and possum hound buying and selling was the leading trade talk of the day. One dealer reported bringing eight to town, leaving five at home.

Special Section In Green This Week

This week the Marshall Courier is pleased to bring to its readers a complete Green section devoted to keeping Marshall County Green this winter with Cover Crops. Through the cooperation of the Soil and Agricultural agencies, the advertisers and others we have tried to make a complete and informative section printed in Green ink in keeping with the thought of growing green cover crops to protect Marshall County soil. We of the Courier want to thank those who have helped make this section possible.

Observations

(Old Kodger's Column)

QUITE A BIT OF BIBBING was forthcoming about last week's joke about the Negro truck driver and with the picture of Governor Clements looking right at the paragraph. No connection was made. It was just one of those things that happen in newspaper make-up. WHETHER WE LIKE THE Whole or any part of Gov. Clements' administration or not, we must admit that he and Commissioner Henry Ward have done a lot for our county. We have not been ignored in road building as we have the new blacktop road running West, a rebuilding of the Benton-Brewers section, rebuilding and widening of 68, the finishing of the Briansburg cut-off on 58, together with other projects in the making.

GOVERNOR CLEMENTS HAS ...been one of the most enthusiastic Governors Kentucky has ever had for better roads and improved state parks, and according to figures he presented at the meeting held at Gilbertsville last week, the investments are paying off. Out-of-state visitors who now are attracted to Kentucky are paying a large percentage of the money required for such purposes. And, we are just beginning to attract visitors from everywhere.

Looking At Life By Wray Woodson Cross

A recent news story from Bradford, England, tells of a magician catching a .303 caliber bullet, traveling at full speed, in his teeth.

Frank Harris, a Bradford policeman and amateur magician, said the trick he performed had been done before with a .22 caliber bullet, but never with the larger .303.

The bullet was fired from a standard rifle by a British army officer at a distance of 25 yards. The stunt was witnessed by 1,000 members of the International Brotherhood of Magicians.

The bullet was retrieved from between the teeth of Policeman Harris.

The story neglected to say so, but we presume that Mr. Harris was not wearing store bought teeth.

Anyway, it's a more exciting stunt than pulling rabbits from a hat.

Soil Conservation Notes By Herbert Anson

Pat Brown, Hardin, built two terraces last week to stop an erosion problem in a seed plot of Ky. 31 Fescue. Deep gullies were washing out between the rows where they ran straight down the slopes to a natural draw. Sod in the draw is holding the soil there and preventing a gully.

By using a bush and bog disc on the old fescue below the terraces Brown hopes to work in the gullies and get a seedbed. Then he is going to reseed the area on the contour with the terraces. Scott DeMyer, SCS, helped Brown with this work.

R. E. Ford, Seale, worked out a complete soil and water conservation farm plan last month with my help.

"I always sow a winter cover crop on my tobacco land," said Ford.

Ford is practicing good woodland management on seven acres of woods. Livestock do not graze and trample the young trees. A new stock barn is to be built soon by selecting and cutting only those mature trees which are ready for harvest.

Ezra Beale, Aurora, became a cooperator with the Marshall County Soil Conservation District last month. His farm plan contains thirteen soil and water saving practices or treatments.

Rev. J. K. Birdsong, Calvert City, said, "I am going to quit cultivating this small three acre field. There is no practical way to keep the water that falls on that old hill there from coming down on it and washing gullies. A diversion ditch here would take up so much of the field that there would not be enough left to fool with in row crop. So I am sowing it in Ky. 31 Fescue and ladino clover."

O. L. Faughn, four miles west of Hardin, has seeded fifteen acres of fescue.

Fescue and annual crops such as vetch, crimson clover, and the small grains are going to make a large part of Marshall County green this winter. Besides that they will save topsoil, fertilizer, and put dollars in the farmer's pockets.

Plan For The Future Of The Present

THE ALAMEDA, a two bedroom house, features simplicity in design, economy in framing and a livable floor plan. The floor slab is laid on the ground, to be covered with composition flooring or carpeting.

As is usual in a house without a basement, storage and work space is highly important, and these have been well provided for in the utility room and closets. A large walk-in closet for storage is located in the hall, a coat closet in the vestibule, three closets in the utility, linen in the hall and wardrobe closets in the bedrooms.

The dining room in this house is actually a part of the living room, but dining space is also available in the kitchen. Plans call for economy-minded exterior finish of siding and asphalt shingles. The dimensions of the Alameda are 36 feet by 24 feet. Floor area totals 1,014 square feet, while the cubage is estimated at 11,847 cubic feet.

For further information about THE ALAMEDA, write the Small House Planning Bureau, St. Cloud, Minn.

We can be of service to you on plans for a New Home. We invite you to discuss your plans with us.

Giving Yourself

Lesson for October 8, 1958

"WHEN a girl throws herself away on a man, she generally takes pretty careful aim." That may be so; but more than a few persons throw themselves clean away without taking aim at all. They amble through life, they do not search. They have no personal five-year plans, not even five-week plans. They stumble from one day to the next, they live from hand to mouth. They care for nobody and few care for them. They may be found on Skid Row, living from one handout to another, or they may be found in the Silver Spoon Club, with plenty of money but no idea how to spend it and hardly enough energy to waste it.

A Man Gives Himself

MOST people, however, do give themselves to something. Every man who amounts to something, gives himself in one way or another. There was a college student once who practiced nineteen hours a day on the piccolo. It was said, "Naturally he couldn't stay in college at that rate, so they got rid of him. But he landed, as you might expect, in one of America's finest orchestras."

If you want to succeed in music, give yourself to music. If you want to succeed in a law course, give yourself to your books. Men usually give themselves to what they think is of greatest value. Some give themselves; that is to say, they devote themselves to their own comfort and happiness.

That is cheap selfishness, of course, but there is a kind of transferred selfishness which is almost as common: giving oneself to one's family to the exclusion of everything and every one else. A good man will love his family, a good mother her children, but there is a kind of ingrown family affection and mother-love which is blind to community needs.

Down the River

HERE are bad ways of giving oneself. A prophet once said of King Ahab, he sold himself to do evil. That is still done. Some give themselves up to liquor and gambling.

There have been quite selfless and tireless advocates of atheism, and communism, and fascism, and bad religions of all varieties. Men have worn themselves thin in the service of Hitler and of other tyrants. If the energy and persistence, for example, which is spent in trying to prevent the humane use of unwanted animals in medical research, were spent in intelligent support of preventive medicine, how much better the world would be!

Say Yes to Christ

THE question is not so much, "Shall I give my life?" The question is, "To what? To whom?" For three months these Bible studies consider "Growth in Christian Living." All growth starts at some point; and Christian growth starts at the point where the Christian gives himself to Christ and his cause.

Consider what "commitment to Christ" means. It is not sentimental devotion to his memory. It is not singing songs about him or to him. (Not that such songs are wrong!) It is not following a historical character, though Jesus was and is a real person. It is saying "Yes" to Jesus Christ. It is giving one's highest devotion, one's first loyalty to the Son of God.

It is devotion to the living Christ, ever-present; to the One whose reign is destined to be over all. It is devotion to Christ's cause; to his Kingdom, his control, his way of life. It means growing into his mind; it means becoming more and more like him, wanting to be like him, till at last Paul's words come true again: "For me, to live is Christ."

You Get More than You Give IT is a mistake to think that if one gives his life to Christ, then he cannot give his life to anything else. The astonishing truth is, when a person first gives himself to Christ, he finds that Christ gives back far more Christians can be, and are, devoted scholars and business men and mothers and doctors and farmers. The more truly one is committed to Christ, the better he is likely to be at his job, whatever it is.

In Purchase Good; It Pay But Keep It

The Purchase, well drained in fertility, and fertile. They are mostly in the bluffs overlooking the Mississippi. Narrow ridge tops are surrounded by steep slopes. Only the ridge tops are suitable for cropping. The side slopes must be in trees or dense cover if the land is to remain in condition for our grandchildren, and theirs, to farm it. Growing eastward to the Tennessee the depth of gravelly material gradually becomes less. At the river and along Kentucky make the ridge tops have less than two feet of soil over the gravel. The side slopes are frequently just gravel.

Between the deep soil along the bluffs of the Mississippi and the shallow, gravelly, droughty soils along the Tennessee the large areas of soil on rolling level topography. Depth to gravel varies from 3 to 10 feet. Again, and unfortunately for the row crop farmer, these soils are neither deep, well drained internally, nor particularly fertile in their natural state. That's a general observation. On every farm there may be enough level upland or good bottom land to grow tobacco and other cash crops. Here is where the corn should grow too. Keep row crops on the most level land. As the depth to gravel or sand becomes less it is common to find a heavier grayish or yellowish streaked layer developing. Generally this layer becomes more compact and more pronounced as we go from west to east. Next, as our topography becomes more level this gray "clay" layer gets closer to the surface. Large brown "buckshot" when dry and waterlogged all winter iron is present in the reduced state. Hence the gray color. The soil and many plants starve for oxygen. They cannot breathe.

Now looking over our land, examining its color, its depth, its steepness, the amount of topsoil left, perhaps we can pick out more easily those areas where row crops will thrive. But we'll see many an acre now in row crops which should be producing grass and legumes for livestock, hay, seed, crops, timber and wildlife.

How good are our soils? If corn is a measure I'd say they are fair to poor. If year-round green farming is our measure they are good to excellent. We need lime, fertilizer, especially phosphorus and nitrogen. With higher yields we'll need more potash and trace elements. Get soil tests made to find how much is needed of each.

By using our land according to its capabilities and treating it according to its needs Western Kentucky agriculture has a future. By gradually changing our farming from row crops to a greener agriculture we can build a sounder, better future for ourselves and those who must follow in keeping our country great. Surely someone else has said in this edition, but I repeat: Western Kentucky will come into its own when our fields are green all winter.

Intensive Study Of Home Lighting Is Made By County Homemakers Clubs

Marshall County Homemakers have had for their lesson in September, Home Lighting. Miss Amelia Stanton, Home Economist with TVA, gave the training school on Home Lighting. The Homemakers were told to recognize the 4 enemies of good lighting. The enemies are glare, too little light, not enough light sources, and not enough general light. There are two kinds of glare, direct and indirect. Direct glare is caused by the bare light bulb. Indirect glare is the reflection of the light into our eyes. It may be caused by glossy ceiling, wood work, pictures, mirror or shiny table surface.

conveyors we can use the silver bowl bulbs. These are nice to use over work benches, ironing boards, and washing machines. Metal and plastic adapters can be bought to use with these silver bowl bulbs. The adapter was in town Wednesday.

Each Marshall County Homemakers is checking on the number of bare light bulbs in her home. How to get rid of bare bulbs? The bare bulb can be covered with a plastic adapter. Many of our homes have good light fixtures in the living room and dining room. But sometimes bedrooms and often, upstairs rooms will have bare bulbs hanging from the ceiling. The plastic adapter should be fitted. Colored adapters give an off-colored light that is not flattering to the eyes. Besides the plastic

Farmers Reclaiming Wasteland By Use Of Machinery, Fertilizer Use And New Crops

There are a good many acres of this Kentucky farmland that have little purpose aside from filling up a hole in the ground or being a rabbit's home place to hide.

Farmers are now putting land of this kind to work, adding to the family income. They are making the land into productive farms. For the last few years, more and more of such land is being reclaimed.

One of what has been a significant trend in west Kentucky agriculture is that farms have a few acres of land, worn out by crops, thrown idle and left to grow brush. But these same few acres are being put into productive use, and their bit to the income and welfare of the farm family is being reclaimed.

Farmer is finding that reclaiming heavy machinery test year given land is paying off.

Work of this kind is going on in just about every county in the entire west Kentucky region. New machinery adopted to do the job economically for farmers is available in most counties; its use is being encouraged by farmer cooperatives, and services now being supplied by a number of private concerns. Livingston county, for example, expects to reclaim over 1,000 acres of wasteland this fall. Most of it will be seeded to timothy and alfalfa.

Other counties also report large areas are being cleared, fertilized, and seeded to silage-building and protecting crops. Livingston county farmers have been busy at the job of reclaiming brushy land during the last few years. A great many of the acres once thought useless are now producing fine crops. Herd Fort Casey, who owns 25 acres between the river, has to clear a tract with machinery. He has it now in ladino and fescue and is picking up a few calves to use, particularly in the seed, test demonstration farm. He says the sale of the seed, test demonstration farm is helping him to help farmers find fertilizers to spark his land to soil needs with heavy machinery.

new production has reclaimed a large part of his 400-acre farm. He is now a prosperous farmer.

Farmers like Clyde Mattingly in Taylor county are clearing brushy land and putting it into productive use. He is now a prosperous farmer.

One of what has been a significant trend in west Kentucky agriculture is that farms have a few acres of land, worn out by crops, thrown idle and left to grow brush. But these same few acres are being put into productive use, and their bit to the income and welfare of the farm family is being reclaimed.

Farmer is finding that reclaiming heavy machinery test year given land is paying off.

Work of this kind is going on in just about every county in the entire west Kentucky region. New machinery adopted to do the job economically for farmers is available in most counties; its use is being encouraged by farmer cooperatives, and services now being supplied by a number of private concerns. Livingston county, for example, expects to reclaim over 1,000 acres of wasteland this fall. Most of it will be seeded to timothy and alfalfa.

Other counties also report large areas are being cleared, fertilized, and seeded to silage-building and protecting crops. Livingston county farmers have been busy at the job of reclaiming brushy land during the last few years. A great many of the acres once thought useless are now producing fine crops. Herd Fort Casey, who owns 25 acres between the river, has to clear a tract with machinery. He has it now in ladino and fescue and is picking up a few calves to use, particularly in the seed, test demonstration farm. He says the sale of the seed, test demonstration farm is helping him to help farmers find fertilizers to spark his land to soil needs with heavy machinery.

Rain May Splash 150 Tons Of Soil An If Soil Bare; Raise Particles 2 ft. In Air

Tons of soil are washed away from the banks and rivers, often until there are no channels. Our own Clark River is a good example. Farmers along the river are almost to the point of abandoning probably the best land in the county because the water gets their crops. Water carries the light, fine soil particles. These you need to keep. Sand and gravel, which you don't need, are often left. No one is rich enough to let the land wash away. Control of water and saving our soil is everybody's problem. We have facilities and agencies to help us reduce rain drop splash and slow the moving waters. The energy of the raindrops is lost when it hits the land's rain. On more level land, winter ground cover planted after crop and turned under. The next planting will add that magic humus, which reduces splash and allows the ground to hold

RAINY DAY IS WASH DAY ON BARE LAND

Every rainy day is washday on bare land. Each rain which causes excess run-off from unprotected, sloping fields adds to Marshall county soil losses. If our land is not protected by a vegetative cover, each downpour will carry away many times more plant food than is used in growing crops.

Growing cover crops on all cultivated land will in addition to providing food and saving labor, conserve soil and help increase crop yields.

Close growing vegetation protects soil surface from the beating of hard rains. Rain that falls on a thick covering of vegetative growth will reach the ground under the plants as clear water instead of becoming muddy as it does when it falls on bare ground. Clear water can soak into the ground much faster than can muddy water, thereby reducing the amount of water that will run off the field.

Thick vigorous growing cover crops cause water to move in a thin sheet down the slope more slowly than it would on bare land. That reduces its power of erosion and allows more of the water to soak in the ground.

Cover crops fill the soil with plant roots which help to bind the soil particles together. Cover crops, not pastures, will provide an abundance of green manure the following spring. Cultivation destroys the organic matter in the soil very rapidly. Few farms produce enough animal manure to maintain the organic matter of the soil without making use of some green manure.

In order for cover crops to control erosion and increase crop yields the crops must be planted thick, fertilized so heavy growth will completely cover the surface of the ground, and be turned under as green manure in the spring.

County Agent Advises On Keeping Up-To Date With Crops And Varieties

By J. Homer Miller

Wheat is still the most important cover crop. The seed is readily available and can be grown successfully under a wide range of conditions. It furnishes protection, pasture and grain. For grain production, the best seedling date is about October 12-15, and the rate of seeding is 5 pecks. Vigo is the newest and best variety, seed of which is fairly plentiful through regular channels.

Rye is a very dependable cover crop. It can be seeded over a long period of time, from early Sept. till Nov. although late seedings of any cover crop given little protection and no winter pasturage. Balbo is the only recommended variety.

Barley is excellent for pasture or grain. It is less winter-hardy than wheat or rye and requires soil of higher fertility and better drainage. Best date of seeding is during the last half of Sept. Ky. 1 is the best variety. The rate of seeding varies from 5 pecks (where grass and clover crops are wanted) to 2 bushels where grain or pasture is important.

Oats are least winter-hardy of the small grains but produce a high grain yield when they come through. September 15-25 is the best seeding date and 2 bushels the average seeding rate. Fulwin and Parkdeer are most winter-hardy.

Vetch is the most dependable winter legume used in cover crop mixtures. It is used especially for green manure but furnishes good grazing when seeded with small grain. Hairy vetch is the only variety recommended. Inoculation of seed is very important. Rate of seeding, 20 lbs. in mixture, 30 lbs. alone. Early Sept. seeding is best. Vetch seed sometimes germinates poorly, therefore, it should be sown on basis of germination tests.

Crimson Clover is used to some extent in southern Kentucky for green manure, pastures and seed production. It is less winter-hardy than vetch. Early seeding, August or early Sept., is very important. A good seeding mixture for pasture or green manure is 10 pounds of crimson clover, 20 pounds vetch, 1 bushel small grain.

TREE PLANTING AT NEW RECORD IN STATE OF KY.

Forest tree planting in Kentucky reached a new record last year, according to the College of Agriculture and Home Economics, University of Kentucky. The annual report of the College's extension division says about 1,500,000 seedling trees were set. These included both hard wood and softwood, to grow fence posts and saw timber, and for the control of soil erosion and protection of water supplies and wild life.

In four farm forestry projects, each covering one to five counties forestry programs were developed last year under the guidance of trained foresters. Since about 75 percent of the state's forests are on farms, extension work in forestry dealt primarily with the care and management of trees so that timber could be had for fuel use and for sale. Farmers were encouraged to select trees to be cut, allowing them to grow to profitable size.

TRACTORS HELP RENOVATE MUCH OF LAND; CROP SPECIALISTS STATE

Tractor-drawn machinery is aiding in patching up old and poor stands of grass and legumes by making it possible to prepare good seedbeds. It is claimed by cropmen at the Agriculture Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky.

Revising meadows and pastures killing weeds and increasing seed production, especially of bluegrass, have been greatly improved since tractors and other power machinery have come into wide use. Use of nitrate and other fertilizers has done much to encourage growing of more grass and hay.

Nitrate fertilizers and the use of DDT and 24D to control weeds and insects, have helped to increase the yield and value of seed crops.

Veterans Class Figures Show Full Value Of Winter Cover Crops For Farmers

Members of Group A Veterans Class in a recent class discussion decided on the following figures as a fair estimate of the value of a cover crop. The crop used was barley, seeded in the early fall on good ground at the rate of two bushels per acre and fertilized.

The Costs were as follows:
Seed two bu. per acre	$2.50
Fertilizer 200 lb. 6-8-6	4.50
Drilling the seed	6.50
Preparing the ground and drilling the seed
Total	$13.50
The values received from it were:
Increase in yield the following year (in bushels of corn) @ $1.50 per bu.	$15.00
Pasture received - total, 40 days 1 1-2 grain per day @ 25c per bushel	15.00
Total	$30.00
The above figures were of course estimates and will vary from year to year. The class however seem to think the figures were conservative enough and not dis-

Old Koder's Column

DO YOU CRAVE COMPLIMENTS? Like most people do? Why? For material value? cannot be cashed at any bank and as a tonic, the pain is believed only temporarily, may cause swelling in the area. Probably half of doses administered do more harm than good.

IT ISN'T NICE TO GO AROUND telling lies by passing out a lot of compliments that are not compliments, but plain make a racket out of compliments by using them to get business, to build one's self, and then betray those who have sincerely believed in them. I have been done hundreds of times. Why should anyone crave compliments all through life? I all know whether we are doing a good job, or at least doing best—shouldn't that be sufficient to satisfy?

WHALE TALES

BUT THERE HAS ALWAYS been those who like a parade and compliments, whether they or not, keeps them in a parade through life. Take them out of the parade and death would probably be the result. Compliments to many is what is in a tree—but a tree with dilute sap would also wither away. A salesman says that "a real compliment is a repeat order."

A PRINTER ONCE INQUIRED of old Koder if it was against the rules in the shop to compliment or condemn his work. "You never say anything against anything nice about my work," I wonder? The fact that I was being retained on the job should have been sufficient, but his own self satisfaction of doing his best known to him, without any added oleo spread on the toast. Somewhere in life he had become accustomed to that craving of leading the parade. Or, at least he wanted it to appear he was at least in line.

COMPLIMENTS SOMETIMES

make us feel as if there were but two persons in the world and it is divided half and half between us. We overlook the fact that if it were now equally divided, just how far back in the parade we would be, but compliments help to bring most of us up toward the front of the parade. What we do not realize is that the parade does not last forever; that the good we do as the parade passes is what counts—not a half-baked compliment made to help hurry end the parade. Compliments cannot be cashed at the Bank nor turned into other lasting things, but the knowledge that we have tried and have done our best, should satisfy anyone who is in the parade.
