JENNY AND MR. WREN

JENNY and Mr. Wren were busy with enjoying the sweet of the evening when they decided to go for a walk into the woods to feed, especially when every bird, insect, or animal with wings was out to find what breakfast they could. Jenny’s eyes lit up with excitement, and Mr. Wren started to act like a little child. With a skip in his step, he led Jenny into the woods, and she followed behind with her eyes watching the smallest creature. They would stop every few steps to listen to the sounds of nature and see the beauty before them.

With a burst of concentration, Jenny quickly collected several branches for a mother’s basket, and Mr. Wren added his share of twigs. As they continued on their journey, Mr. Wren was filled with wonder, and his eyes sparkled with excitement.

Mr. Wren was so busy enjoying the beauty of nature, he didn’t notice the sun setting behind the trees. Jenny, on the other hand, was completely absorbed in the moment, marveling at the world around them. When they finally decided to return home, they were exhausted but content. Jenny slipped the twigs into Mr. Wren’s basket, and they walked the long way home together, their hands clasped tightly, as they shared stories and laughter.

From the kind of seeds they collected to the joy of finding the perfect twig, Jenny and Mr. Wren knew they would always cherish these moments together. The beauty of nature and the simplicity of life brought them closer, and they couldn’t wait to return to it again tomorrow.

Mr. Augusten is right in his attempt to bring about a state-wide vote on the future of the railroads. The government has made many attempts to regulate railroads, but none have been successful. When a railroad is owned by the government, it is not as liable to the same regulatory powers. The government should not own railroads.

There are many who believe that the railroads should be owned by the government. They feel that this would help to keep the railroads in better condition and would prevent the railroads from being used for political purposes.

Mr. Augusten is also right in his attempt to bring about a state-wide vote on the future of the railroads. This would give the people a chance to express their opinions on the matter and would help to prevent the railroads from being used for political purposes.

The railroads are vitally connected with the agriculture of the state. They are the main means of transportation for farm products and are therefore important to the farmers.

LOWER

ELECTRIC RATES

Now even the most modest home may enjoy the advantages of modern cookery—through the magic of electricity.

For not only is this remarkably low 2-cent range step available to you, but you may also have a beautiful electric range installed in your home by making only a small cash initial payment—balance on easy monthly terms.

MODERN IN EVERY RESPECT

An electric range contains features that cannot be duplicated by any other method of cooking. It is a truly modern cooking machine that applies pure electric heat directly to the cooking operation. You can taste the difference. In this respect, it is as different from all devices that use flaming fuel as night is from day. It gives the housewife the utmost in service, convenience, appearance, and economy. Measured by these requirements, today's electric ranges outclass every form of cooking the world has ever known. We extend to every home-maker a most cordial welcome to visit our showrooms and to learn the many advantages of modern electric cookery at the new low electric rates.

The Kentucky Utilities Company has reduced its rates from time to time in the past. This is another step in our usual policy of offering electric service to the public at lowest possible cost. Our aim will be always to continue this policy.

MALARIAS

Malaria is to be feared not only because it is a serious disease, but also because it is easily transmitted. It is in many areas a serious disease, and in some it is quite prevalent. For example, in the southern states, it is especially among those engaged in agriculture.

For control of malaria, a great deal of emphasis must be placed on the prevention of its spread. This means that every effort should be made to keep the patient away from the source of infection. It is also important to keep the patient free from exposure to mosquitoes. This can be done by using screens, netting, and other devices to keep mosquitoes out of the room. CHAPTER III—Continued

Hugh made up his mind to ask Janie to dinner that very night. He couldn't help noticing how she had changed. Her cheeks were flushed, her eyes bright, her smile infectious. It was as if she had just come from a movie or a dance, her energy and spirit overflowing. He couldn't resist the temptation to ask her, to see if she was interested.

"Janie," he said softly, "do you want to come to dinner with me tonight?"

She looked at him, her eyes wide with surprise. "Are you sure?"

"Of course," he replied, his heart pounding. "I've been thinking about you all day."

Janie hesitated, then nodded. "Okay," she said, her voice barely above a whisper. "I'll come."

Hugh felt a surge of excitement. He had been planning this for weeks, ever since he first met her. He had to make sure she was interested. He smiled at her, then turned to leave. "I'll see you tonight," he called over his shoulder.

Janie watched him go, her heart racing. She had never been asked to dinner before, not in her whole life. She didn't even know what to wear. But she knew she had to go. She had to see where this was leading. She smiled back at him, then turned to leave herself.

"But you didn't say you had a date last night," Janie complained as she followed him down the street.

Hugh laughed. "I didn't want to give you too many expectations," he said. "I just wanted to see how you were doing." He reached for her hand, and she let him pull her along. "Besides, we have to keep things interesting, don't we?"

Janie nodded, her heart beating fast. She couldn't believe this was happening. She had never been so happy. She smiled up at him, then allowed herself to be led away.
