THE FULTON BULLDOGS OPEN SEASON TONIGHT IN FAIR GROUND PARK

Mrs. Norris Critically Injured In Auto Wreck

Mrs. T. E. Norris, age 48, of Fulton, who lives on Fourth-st., was seriously injured Tuesday when she was in an automobile accident. She, with her daughter, Mrs. Cecil Baker and her sister, Mrs. W. H. Stout, both of Centralia, Ill., were enroute to Fulton where Mrs. Baker was to spend a week's vacation. The wreck happened in West Frankfort, Ill., Tuesday morning at ten o'clock.

Mrs. Baker, the driver of their car, was trailing a truck on the highway and stopped when the truck driver indicated by a hand signal that he was to make a left turn from the pavement. When the truck pulled to the left another car coming from the opposite direction and traveling fast, curved around the truck and the two cars crashed in a head-on collision.

The three women were thrown from the car to the pavement, receiving many cuts and bruises. They were rushed to the West Frankfort hospital where they received first aid. Mrs. Stout sustained cuts on the face and body as did Mrs. Baker. Mrs. Norris was the only one receiving serious internal injuries. The message reached Fulton about one o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

T. E. Norris, having spent the day in the hospital with his wife, returned to Fulton early Wednesday morning, and reported her condition critical. He, with daughter, Betty Norris, and Mr. and Mrs. Landon Roberson, left Wednesday morning at 5:30 for West Frankfort to attend her bedside. Her condition is reported slightly improved.

BOBBY MATTHEWS MEETS WITH SCOUTS TUESDAY

The fall Scouting program is now getting down for an active season. Tuesday night Troop 32, with many Scouts from the other two troops present, met at the Scout Cabin on Vine-st. Bobby Matthews, local middleweight boxer, was present. He made an interesting talk and answered questions for the boys. Bobby promised to bring his sparring partner to the Cabin some time this fall and give an exhibition on the technique of boxing. He also said that he would endeavor to arrange with the promoter at Paducah to admit the Scouts of Fulton to his next fight there.

After the regular meeting broke up many of the boys remained for a few rounds of boxing. Much interest is being manifested in boxing, wrestling and other sports, and it is planned to carry out a fine program along this line. A wrestling mat and some boxing gloves will be arranged for soon.

Other features will be carried out this fall by the various troops with lively competition, and prizes offered for the winners. So, all you Boy Scouts plan to attend regularly and enjoy the fun. Every Scout strive to bring a boy friend along to become a member.

EKLS SEEK NEW MEMBERS IN DRIVE

Much interest is being taken in the membership drive by the Elks Club here, and many new members have already signed on the dotted line, officers of the lodge state. During September special inducement is being offered to obtain new members, and next Monday night will be the last opportunity to join under the present plan.

The usual $25 initiation fee has been set aside during this membership drive, with the only requirement being the payment of yearly dues. Anyone joining now will have to pay only $6, which puts them in good standing until next April. Dues are paid semi-annually, in April and October. In the belief that the high cost of the initiation fee has kept many from joining this has been abandoned during the membership drive which should net many new members. Following the drive a banquet will be held.

SCHOOL BOARD GETS ATTENDANCE OFFICER

Wallace M. Morelock has been employed by the school board of the Fulton city schools as attendance officer. This step was taken in conformity with the state school code, which requires every school receiving an appropriation from the state to have an attendance officer, to keep check on children of school age and see that they attend.

Mr. Morelock has been making a survey of the city this week, checking up on the homes where children between the ages of 7 and 15 are not enrolled in school. It is compulsory that all children between these ages who have not finished high school must attend school, and the co-operation of parents is asked.

DISCONTINUE SHIPMENT OF CATTLE TO KENTUCKY

The original program provided that 200,000 be shipped in.

FROM PINE LOGS TO FUEL OIL

Among the many improvements and conveniences for the pleasure of the passengers aboard the S. S. President is the fact that this big liner burns oil for fuel. In the olden days fuel was an important factor and wood piles were found along the Mississippi every few miles. In those days the wood-burning steamers had tall chimneys to throw the wood sparks overboard, for it was not an uncommon sight to see a steamer going down the river leaving a trail of wood sparks behind.

Then came the coal, which was quickly adopted as the best fuel for steamboats, and before long the wood piles on the river banks disappeared. But now we have come to the third or fuel oil stage in steamboating and the new S. S. President has the latest type of oil burners which supply the heat for the big boilers which turn supply the steam for the big 1000 horse power engines to turn over the big paddle wheels.

When the big boat comes to Hickman, Ky., Thursday night, Sept. 27th for an excursion under the auspices of the Elks Lodge No. 1294, just notice how smoothly the big ship glides along and note the absence of smoke and cinders.

NEARLY 200 SCHOOL CHILDREN NEED FOOD

It is estimated by school authorities that approximately 125 white children and 50 colored children, who attend school, are in need of the midday lunches which were served free last year. The school board and the P.T.A. find themselves unable to carry out the lunch program this year for lack of funds.

The KERA, however, will furnish merchants supply orders for the food necessary to serve lunch, but will not provide help to prepare and serve these free lunches. It is said that about six women will be required for this work, if it is carried on. Prospects are not very hopeful at this time for a continuation of the free lunch service this year, unless some means is devised to raise money to employ necessary help.

Hornbeak Brings Fighting Squad

By Ole Dave

Tonight is the night of nights for the Fulton High School Bulldogs as they open the new 1934 football season on the Fair Ground park at 7:45 p. m., meeting the Hornbeak eleven. Coach Powell announces his prospective lineup as follows: Curtis Hancock will hold down the center berth; right and left guards will be Parish Campbell and Roy Hamby. Tackle will be named in Freeman Dallas, and Newton or Burnett. The end positions will be cared for by James Carver and Byars. The backfield will be made up of those fiery lads, James Nanney at right half; Scott at left half; Cook at fullback, and Roy Edwards at quarterback.

Fulton has a light but very aggressive team this year and with the addition of new material and consistent coaching the lads should go far along the road to the championship this year.

Give the boys your whole hearted support this year. It is only natural that they will show more fight with good attendance.

TOM CURSEY CROWNED BILLIARD CHAMPION

Fulton sport fans had a real treat given them Monday night at Buck's Pool Parlor when Tom Cursey and Chas. Murphy tangled in the match for the crown as champion billiard player of Fulton. Cursey turned away every opponent he faced in the entire tournament which started Sept. 3. Defeating some of Fulton's best pool sharks, he continued his masterful play until he came out victorious Monday night by the score of 100 to 69.

For five innings the score was 3-0 Cursey, but Murphy hit a streak of 11 straight in force ahead 11-3, picking up 4 more in the 8th and not satisfy Cursey so he jumped on a run of 8 to add to his 5 bringing the score 16 to 13. Again in the 10th Murphy ran 7 but Cursey came along in the same inning, scored 5 to trail 23-19. No scoring was done until the 12th when Cursey passed Murphy with a 12 run, to lead 31-23. Then Murphy retreated with a 10 to pass 33-31, only to be passed by Cursey 36-33. From this point on until the 26th round the score was never more than five points different. But in the 27th with score tied 59-59 Cursey hit his longest streak and jumped to 74-59.

In the 28th both men ran 4 for a total of 78-63 favoring Cursey. Neither scored in the 29th but Murphy opened the 30th with a 4, only to have Cursey tab a 12 to lead 90-69. Murphy failed in the 31st, Cursey taking the last inning with a run of 10 to win, 100 to 69.

Probing the Morro Castle Disaster—Textile Strike Media- tion Fails and Rioting Is Resumed—Profits in War Munitions.

NEARLY always in the case of a marine disaster persons come forward with accusations of negligence and misbehavior on the part of the officers and crew of the vessel concerned. This is true now of the Morro Castle, the Ward liner which burned eight miles off the New Jersey coast with a loss of 135 lives.

The Morro Castle, large, swift, and luxurious in its appointments, was returning from a seven-day

George W. Rogers

The chief of the secret police in Havana declares the burning of Morro Castle was an act of sabotage by members of a secret international maritime association that takes orders from the Communists of Moscow.

The immediate result of this breakdown in negotiations was the re-ignition of violence and disorder, especially in Rhode Island. Thousands of strikers and their sympathizers clashed with National Guard detachments in Pawtucket, Woonsocket, and Saylesville and outnumbered some. Tear gas, nausea gas and flammables were used to check the riots. Many persons were wounded, some fatally. Governor Green made concessions to the Saylesville strikers.

They did not seem to be anything very sensational or scandalous in the facts elicited from the Du Ponts, but previous witnesses had told a lot about the deals of airplane companies and other corporations with foreign nations in which it was alleged they had been aided by United States diplomats and army and navy officials. There was a lot about graft on the part of South American government officials. One of the stories to be brought in the name of King George of England, and this resulted in official protests by British diplomats both in Washington and in London.

Just what Senator Nye and his committee expect to do with the information they are gathering is not certain. There are suggestions of government ownership or at least government control of all war munition manufacture and selling. Plenty of evidence was brought out to prove that the makers of these wares sell to both sides

RECONSTRUCTION Finance Corporation announced a new $100,000,000 corn loan program. States included in the new loan plan are Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Ohio, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota, and Wisconsin.

One of Park Row's familiar legs is of a column written on the Evening World which was dismissed. The writer, who later there began a string of protesting letters to the editor of the greater city and surrounding suburbs—several thousand in all—wrote that the paper's "editorial writers portended soandso's feeble was the highspot of the paper and that the editor would not read further without a warning." The writer, who was not, in alarm, the managing editor sent the columnist but found him so intimidated another offer from a rival rag. Finally he signed up for six months at double his old salary. An address and a circularizing agency for $200 a month and postage, had turned out the fan for

I came upon an early bot vendor today in West 34th Street. These silent street corner sales hovering over their little jet of coal, are my favorite metro characters. They suggest those wintry nights of good reading to the hush of all merchants in the east of cities. So grateful for the seasonal sale, I suspect some of my vacant gazings to be poets or to be minded to have truck with this. Anyway I never pass one without blessing him.

I just read in a story by H. Nair Kahler: "Mrs. Weatherskerchiefed wet eyes." So I'm and towelize my C. D. Gibson and call it a day.

Mr. Hull has been discreetly vague in enunciating his policies and definite ideas on given business generalities and definite ideas that measures which he is using. It is assumed that many quarters that he will employ something of the same policy used in his pronouncements in the world economic conference in Montevideo last fall. In these pronouncements Mr. Hull suggested that tariff protection ought to be extended to commodities the importation of which is less than 5 per cent of domestic consumption. He also suggested that there was no sound excuse for maintaining a high rate of protection for industries which, as he said, had such protection "for a considerable period of time" and had not been able under that protection to develop their production to the point where the output amounted to less than 15 per cent of demand.

But the elevation of Robinson would leave in the hands of something of a battal of the "there, there, that's the thing" type of politicians at the helm of the government. They are giving some thought. The leader in the senate or the house must be something of an eminence, without detracting from Robinson's ability. It is known that he has acquiesced in the new deal proposals having in his own mind that that is the best policy for the nation that could be drafted and when he is elevated to the supreme court there will be a group among some of the senators who desire the honor of leadership and desire for political purposes to demonstrate their fealty to the new deal.

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the papers. Did I ever tell you about the time I sailed into the beautiful Pacific Ocean?

Well, pull up some pineapple crates there nates and I will tell you. There had been quite an argument in the Rogers family as to the shape of the world. The Stanford Sventer, as he is kinder called, the brains of the organization, he id the world was round. I contended that it was flat, the same as everything else now. Not being a horse connected in the argument in any way, the younger one took no interest at all. So we made a bet, and we says well we will sail into the setting sun, and we will keep sailing into the setting sun. And if we land back into Santa Monica the boy is right. But if we go "Flat" before we get around, then I am right.

He was still in a military camp R.O.T.C. up at Monterey Cal. and didn't get out for another week. Well the rest of us could wait. We had our tickets and were just walking up and down the platform, so the Mamma, the other tohunk, and myself got the idea that we better get out now, or the studio would be liable to have some retakes.

They then had shown the picture, and I figured it was better to escape before they did. There is nothing that can make a picture worse than retakes. Its generally had enough the first time, and its better to let it go at that. Sometimes we retake scenes to what we call "Clear up a Situation". But its never known to the audience that we did it. Its just as confusing to them as it would have been in the first take. Then if its for the "Acting", there is no use to retake it for that. You cant learn to act in that short a time. About the only thing you can do with a picture after you finished it is to run it, and then take out every third reel. That will do more to satisfy an audience than anything I know of. The third and sixth reels are the ones they generally get muddled up over. But you get them out and you generally get a pretty clean fast running picture.

You see we take scenes where we go in one door and come out on the other side with another suit on. Or maby with our hat in our hand where it was on our heads. Well we know that, but we do that to see if they are paying attention. Now if they dont notice that, and we dont get letters, why we know that they were asleep, or that they didnt go to the picture at all. But if we get letters, why that tickles us to death. We know that they are right with us. That they have seen the picture, and that they are awake, and following the story every minute. It shows that we got their interest.

An audience loves to pick out things, and I tell you it keeps us all worrying to get em little new things and ideas to pick out. Now take scenes where a horse has quite a lot to do. We may use five or six different horses in that picture, one to jump the fence, another that will open the gate, another that will make a wild run down hill. Another just for the close ups. But that dont do a bit of good, an audience wont pay a bit of attention to it, and wont write us a single letter about it, till somebody conceived the idea of having one of the horses white and the other black. Then they picked out a little thing like that right away. But that one was big and one was lit the never seem to interest em. They just keep right through that. So I just keeps a director worried pretty near nuts to think up something so the like that, that they will keep their minds on. I tell you this thing of trying to keep the world amused is a tough job.

And now that they are cleaning everything up so, its making it worse still. Now they wont pay any attention to em at all, no matter how many mistakes we put in. I hope the whole thing clears up before I get back. In fact thats why I sorter had to duck out was to let this morality wave kinder blow over.

Well anyhow its good to get away from it all for awhile. Maby they will get onto something else by the time I get back. We are a people that dont stay with one thing very long. We stayed with the Republicans longer than we ever did with anybody else, but that taught us a lesson, and we will see that that dont happen again. So here we go steaming into the beautiful Pacific Ocean.

No Patents for Burbank
Luther Burbank, who crossed a canteloupe with a watermelon and produced the luscious honeydew melon, could have obtained a patent for this popular fruit had there been a patent law in effect at the time. Or this law would have given him a monopoly for his creation of the loganberry.

ISAIAH COUNSELS RULERS

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 31:1-9; 37:35, 37.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in thee.—Isaiah 26:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A King's Prayer and God's Answer.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God Directs Nations.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God the Ruler of Nations.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Recognizing God in National Affairs.

I. Isaiah's Message to Ahaz.

1. Prophecy concerning Immanuel (Isa. 7). The occasion of this prophecy was the alliance that was formed between Israel and Assyria. Their threatened invasion of Judah greatly alarmed Ahaz. Isaiah assured him that God's purpose concerning the nation would not fail. As an object lesson, he was instructed to take with him his son, whose name meant "The remnant shall return." He compared the confederate kings to two smoking firebrands which would soon be extinguished. He urged upon Ahaz the exercise of faith in God, offering to confirm his faith by working any miracle desired.

2. A promise of Divine protection (Isa. 31). Ahaz foolishly called for the help of Assyria against Israel and Syria. Isaiah rebuked him for this, showing him that his help was in God.

II. Judah invaded by the Assyrians (Isa. 36).

1. Rabshakeh meets a deputation from Judah (vv. 1-21). He represented Sennacherib, the king of Assyria, whose mission was to induce Judah to surrender. His plan was to minimize Egypt's anticipated assistance. His method to accomplish this was:

a. Intimidation (vv. 4-9). He tried to bully them into submission. He taunted them with their weakness, and told them that Egypt was a broken reed.

b. Misrepresentation (v. 10). He asserted that it was useless for them to put their trust in God, even declaring that the Lord had sent him to destroy Egypt.

c. He endeavored to create a panic among the people (vv. 13-21). Fearing such a panic, the deputation of the Jews urged Rabshakeh not to speak in the Jews' language.

d. He promised them plenty in another land (vv. 16, 17). He urged them to make an agreement with him, and upon his return from Egypt he would take them to a land of plenty similar to their own land. Knowing that the cruel Assyrians could not be trusted, the people were loyal to Hezekiah.

2. The deputation's report to Hezekiah (v. 22). They rent their garments in fear and dismay, for the crisis long before predicted by Isaiah had now come upon them.

III. Hezekiah's Behavior (Isa. 37).

1. He resorted to the house of the Lord (v. 1). This action was prompted by faith, for God had promised that whoever in time of distress resorted to his house would be heard by him (2 Chron. 7:15, 16).

2. He sent unto Isaiah (v. 23). The natural and logical thing for the king to do under such circumstances was to send for God's prophet. Isaiah went back words of encouragement to Hezekiah, assuring him that God would bring deliverance.

3. Hezekiah's prayer (vv. 14-20). He spread the letter of Sennacherib before the Lord and prayed. His prayer was direct and simple.

a. He recognized God's throne, making it the ground of his plea.

b. He recognized the peril which threatened the people (vv. 17-19). He asked for deliverance (v. 20). He desired that deliverance would come in such a way as to vindicate and honor the Lord, showing to the surrounding nations that he was the only Lord God.

4. Isaiah's message to Hezekiah (vv. 21-25).

a. That Sennacherib's sin was blasphemy against the Holy One of Israel (vv. 21-23).

b. That Sennacherib had forgotten that he was an instrument in God's hands (vv. 24-25).

c. That judgment upon Sennacherib was imminent (vv. 23-25). Deliverance would soon come, and that through the energy of the Lord of Hosts.

IV. The Destruction of the Assyrian Army (vv. 36-38).

The angel of the Lord went forth and slew in the camp of the Assyrians 185,000 men. Therefore Sennacherib was turned back by the way he came. He did not enter Jerusalem, and after his defeat he went back to Nineveh to live, and there while worshipping in the house of his god, he was assassinated.

Christ in the Evening
We always need Christ with us, but when evening draws on we need his presence in a special way. It is growing dark, and in the shadows we need his protection. Night makes for us a sense of loneliness, and we need his companionship.

Meditation
Only as we spiritualize our meditation, making it a hungering and thirsting after righteousness, will our lives be hid with Christ in God. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

Belief in Potency of Curse Once Universal

Ancient Egyptians are acquiring an undeserved reputation for efficiency in curses, remarks Science Service. The curse of a pharaoh's tomb is today spoken of with awe as something superior and extra-sinister in malevolent power. But the Egyptians were no more given to concocting curses than any other people, and there is no reason for singling them out, according to Dr. George S. Duncan, professor of Egyptology at the American university.

Dr. Duncan has made a survey of curses in Egypt, Babylonia and Israel, and he reported the results recently before the American Oriental society, meeting in Philadelphia.

There are 195 curse verses in the Bible, mostly in the Old Testament. Doctor Duncan has counted them. Again and again Bible characters went up to a mountain top, to be near the source of power, and from that high place called down wrath of heaven on evildoers. Gerizim and Ebal, two peaks, came to be associated with such rites. Gerizim was a mountain for blessing and Ebal for curses.

Curses were common in Babylonia, reported Doctor Duncan. It was customary to put curses on landmarks and boundary lines, so that anyone who interfered with them would be punished. There were no fences, but the people believed that one who broke the property laws would be visited by sickness or other misfortune as a result of the curse. The curse was depended on to work whether the law actually caught the offender or not.

Origin of the dependence on curses Doctor Duncan attributes to old, old belief in good and evil spirits in the world. Prehistoric man, far back in the Stone age, was ridden by superstitions, as he began to put two and two together, and saw more than coincidences when evil followed some particular situation. In time he began to try to control the powers himself. There were always enough misfortunes, small or large, happening to any man to prove that he was "cursed"—if he was glib enough to believe that.

Prehistoric man was glib, too. So were the ancient Egyptians and Babylonians. So were the people of the Middle Ages. In medieval England, said Doctor Duncan, the clergy went into the fields and invoked blessings on those who regarded the landmarks and curses on those who moved or otherwise transgressed the boundaries. Centuries later, Shakespeare wrote 107 passages dealing with the five topics of curses, and had one put on his own tomb.

And has modern man outgrown his faith in curses as a means to getting what he wants? Far from it. In Pennsylvania a boy shoots a woman because for seven years, he says, she hexed him and cast evil spells.

Asiatics to Lead Growth

In the next ten years, it is predicted, the number of Asiatics will increase by 150,000,000, while American "half-breeds," described as the mixed population of South and Central America, will gain only 40,000,000. On the other hand pure-bred Europeans will increase by only 20,000,000.

Stock Exchange Deals Center at "Money Desk"

On the floor of the stock exchange is an institution called the "money desk." About noon each day members of the exchange begin to gather around this desk, John T. Flynn writes, in Collier's Weekly. A few of them represent large New York banks with money to lend. The others are looking for credit. Around that time the banks know how much they have to lend and the brokers are beginning to know what accommodations they will need. Over that money desk flow countless millions of dollars. It is by this mechanism that the New York banks have their pipe lines running into the exchange, with their agents there to manage the spigots.

Of course, brokers' loans are also made by banks directly outside the exchange, but this is the chief method.

FREE for a Short, Simple Letter about CAMAY

$1,000

EVERY YEAR OF YOUR LIFE!

AND 553 GENEROUS CASH PRIZES

IN every section of the country, good-looking women use Camay. It's the finest beauty soap made, they say. It's so delicate on the skin, so mild, and so generous of lather.

But we want 2,000,000 more women to use Camay. And that is why we planned this amazing Prize Contest!

$1,000 a Year—Think What It Would Mean!

Just imagine! $1,000 a year every year of your life! $1,000 a year with which to buy the things you've always wanted! 553 other marvelous cash prizes!

Drum come true, if you win. Smart clothes—a vacation—a new car—a cruise around the world!

Here Is What You Do

Try Camay. After you've cleansed your face and hands with it several times, you'll know why it is the favorite beauty soap of so many thousands of women. Notice how quickly Camay lathers—how refreshed it leaves your skin.

Then, on a plain piece of paper, write your reasons for liking Camay. Mail it to us at once, together with 3 green and yellow Camay wrappers, or 3 copies of the wrapper drawn by yourself.

Remember—you don't have to be an expert writer to enter this contest. Any woman who really likes Camay may be a winner. 553 prizes—all to be paid to women like yourself. So just tell us, as simply, as briefly as you would tell some woman friend "Why Camay is the Best Beauty Soap for My Skin."

NEWS SPOTLIGHT

AT FULTON HIGH SCHOOL

Freshman News— Kathleen Wintec
This year's freshman class is quite large. There are 45 girls and 31 boys, making a total of 76. There were ten new students enrolled. Nearly all the Freshman boys are out for football. Of course, we are not expecting much from them this year but practice makes perfect, and we hope to have a few stars on the team next year. Nearly everyone has settled down to the regular routine which will last through the winter. Woe is us! There are a few pupils who are a bit rowdy but that will wear off. Let's hope so, any way!

Sophomore News, Virginia Whayne
When a certain Sophomore boy hears about the attendance officer I wonder if he will resign school. He's usually at school about two days a week, if that many.

Here's a secret, but we'll let you in on it. The Sophomores elected Ann Whitnell cheer leader hoping she'd yell off a few pounds (with apologies to Ann).

Have you noticed Sophomore Joe Beadles who is coming out for the backfield. You ought to see him perform some time. While on the subject of football, we have another boy following in the footsteps of his big brother—T. L. He is Wilby Lee Wrather.

Do you know the Sophs have a second Bing? At least a certain girl thinks so. He can also whistle.

Junior News— Leon Daws
The Juniors held a class meeting Tuesday morning and voted in favor of selling candy and cold drinks at the football and basketball games this year in order to raise money for the Junior-Senior banquet next spring. The cheer leaders have been practicing on their yells. The first pep meeting will be held Friday morning. C. H. Warren, the class president, is a great worker in football practice. It was said that C. H. lost three pounds the first day of practice.

JOAN CRAWFORD AND

CLARK GABLE IN "CHAINED"

AT ORPHEUM SUNDAY

Joan Crawford and Clark Gable are together again, this time in one of the most powerful dramatic vehicles of the year. The picture, directed by Clarence Brown, is entitled

"Chained," opens Sunday for a three day run at Warner's Orpheum. A special Metro-Goldwyn Mayer production, it is lavishly mounted and painstakingly produced. The swift-moving story, following the new trend was especially written for the screen by Edgar Selwyn and adapted by John Lee Mahin.

The supporting cast is exceptional with Otto Kruger, Stuart Erwin, Una O'Connor and Marjorie Gateson prominently cast. But chief honors go to the co-stars, who make living characters out of their separate roles and weave a deep-hued tapestry of the poignant romance of Diane and Mike.

The locale of the film, ever-shifting, covers half the Western hemisphere, moving from New York to shipboard, to Buenos Aires, to a South American ranch, back to New York and thus north to a Lake Placid resort. It is the kind of fare critics have been crying for; swift, credible, well mounted, well acted and above

HOME-CANNED TOMATOES AND VITAMIN C

Have you, lately, in the course of much conversation about vitamins, heard some discouraging words about your home-canned tomatoes or tomato juice? If so, don't let it worry you, and don't let it keep you from putting up all the tomatoes or tomato juice you can use, says the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, according to a report from Miss Anna Culton, Home Demonstration Agent. Tomatoes and tomato juice, home-canned or factory canned, are among the most economical foods you can put on your pantry shelves, especially valuable in winter.

Tomatoes are valuable for many reasons, but the reason with which we are concerned at the moment is vitamin C. Most foods lose more or less of their vitamin C when they are cooked or canned, for this vitamin is usually destroyed by heat, especially heat in the presence of air. Not so tomatoes, however—or rather, not so much so. The acidity of tomato prevents for the most part the loss of vitamin C which occurs in the non-acid foods when cooked. It is true, however, that the method of cooking has something to do with the vitamin values you get from tomatoes or any other food. According to the Bureau of Home Economics, short cooking keeps down the loss.

Directions for canning tomatoes and tomato juice, according to the Bureau of Home Economics recommendations, follow:

TOMATOES

Select firm, ripe tomatoes, free from spots and decay. Put into trays or shallow layers in wire baskets and dip in boiling water for about a minute, according to ripeness. Remove and plunge quickly into cold water for an instant. Drain and core and peel promptly.

For a hot-pack, cut the tomatoes in quarters, heat just to boiling, and pack hot. Process 5 minutes in boiling water. For a cold-pack, after draining, coring, and peeling, as above, pack the whole tomatoes into jars or cans as closely as possible. Fill the can with thick tomato sauce or with the juice of other tomatoes, season with one teaspoon of salt per quart. Process quart and pint glass jars for 45 minutes in boiling water. Process No. 2 and No. 3 plain tin or sanitary or R enameled cans for 35 minutes.

TOMATO JUICE

Select firm, ripe tomatoes, deep red if you can get them, and fresh from the vines. Wash them well and cut them into pieces. Leave the skins on, but cut out the cores and all green, or moldy, or decayed parts. The green parts make the juice bitter, and even a few bad spots may injure the flavor of the whole batch of juice or may cause it to spoil. Handle the tomatoes in small lots and work fast. Don't try to make more than one or two gallons of juice at a time. If it is to stand, it loses flavor and vitamin value. After the tomatoes are cut up, simmer them just enough to soften them. Don't let them boil. Then immediately press the hot tomatoes through a fine sieve, to take out the seeds and skins. Measure the juice, and for each quart add 1-2 to 1 teaspoon of salt. (Or leave the salt out if the juice is for a baby or an invalid on a salt-free diet).

To pack in glass jars, heat the juice quickly to boiling. Don't let it cook for an instant longer than you can help. Then pour the hot juice into the hot sterilized jars, fill them up right to the top, and seal at once. No processing is necessary for tomato juice in glass jars. Set the hot jars aside to cool, out of drafts.

Store tomato juice in a dark cool place, for light has a bad effect on color and flavor of tomato juice.

JUDGING TEAM PLACES 14TH AT KY. STATE FAIR

The Fulton County 4-H Club Judging team composed of Mill Shaw, Harold Threlkeld and J. C. Lawson, accompanied by H. P. Kirkman, competed with 27 other club teams in judging fat stock.

Because of the large amount of other work being done in the county the team did not have an opportunity to practice as much as they would have liked to. But they are to be complimented on the showing that they made for themselves as representatives of the 4-H club and Fulton county.

Each year the I. C. Railroad transportation to the Fair to the judging teams and county agents, of counties along their lines, which we appreciate very much, because of the opportunity it gives the boys to see some of the finest livestock and poultry exhibits of the state, and also, meet and associate with other boys, who are interested in and doing work of the same type that they are.

CORN-HOG CONTRACTS READY TO BE SIGNED

The Corn-Hog Control Committee in Fulton County want to announce that the contracts will be ready for the final signatures of the farmers the last of this week. After the allotment was received for the county the committee was undecided as to what action to take but after talking to representatives of the State Control Committee they were unable to get the allotment changed. So the members of the committee decided that since most of the farmers that had signed contracts had already reduced their corn acreage and the number of hogs that they were raising and unless the contracts were completed, this time and work would be wasted and contract signers would not receive the money promised them for making these reductions in production.

The county received an allotment from the State Allotment Board at Louisville for 29,265 hogs and 33,571 acres of corn. This was 5574 hogs less than the number of hogs listed for market on the contracts and 2350 acres of corn less than shown on the contracts. The county committee wants the people of Fulton county to have this information so if the number of hogs you are allowed to raise is not exactly what you thought it would be you will understand the reason for the reduction.

Cards are being sent to all corn-hog contract signers but do not wait for your card before coming to sign your contract as the contracts must be in Washington before the last day of this month.

Each farmer can know the number of hogs he will be permitted to raise for market and the number of acres of corn he is allowed and the amount of money he will receive before signing the contract.

Landlords and producers must both sign the contract this time where the operation is a partnership. Sign-up days will be held at Cayce, Friday, Sept. 21st; Fulton, Saturday, Sept. 22nd; Hickman, Monday, Sept. 24th.

VISUAL DEFECTS AND EYE STRAIN

Blessed is the person with good eyes. Our eyes are responsible for many of the joys of life and should be given the best care possible. Unfortunately many have visual defects and eye strain, conditions that if not properly treated or corrected renders the individual much less efficient for either work or play and robs him of many of life's pleasures.

Some are born with visual defects and eye strain, in others the condition is acquired. These conditions are increasing in all civilized races, due in great part to over taxing the eyes by excessive reading or work with improper illumination, and not treating or correcting minor visual defects.

Many unpleasant and aggravating symptoms are due to visual defects and eye strain. Headaches, nervousness, irritability, styes, squint or cross eye, backward children and imperfect vision are a few of the symptoms.

Fortunately most cases of visual defects and eye strain can be corrected by judicious treatment or the proper fitting of glasses. To accomplish these beneficial results the eyes should first be examined by a doctor who has been trained in this special work, as he is the only one competent to find the cause of these conditions. After he has located the cause his advice should be heeded and proper treatment instituted.

Fitting glasses for the relief of visual defects and eye strain is of far greater importance than generally recognized. The cause of many cases of eye strain, especially in the young, cannot be located without using medicines in the eyes, and none other than a doctor should do this. This feature of glass fitting is so very important, that in many states laws have been enacted forbidding the use of medicines in the eyes except by medical men. When buying glasses get the best lens possible. Cheap or poor lens should never be considered.

A WEEK OF PLEASURE

By Ole Dave
A week of pleasure! And a big week of it at that!

On Sept. 6th, my wife and I caught the midnight train for Chicago to spend a week of fun. And what fun it was. We arrived in Chicago on Sept. 6 at 9:15 a. m. We were met by a friend of my better-half, Mrs. Johnny Noble of Gary, Ind. From Chicago we journeyed straight to Gary where we met the rest of the family, Mr. and Mrs. Nobles, Irene Nobles a school pal of my wife. Arrived there just in time for a big dinner which was ready for us. And were we hungry after a night's ride on the train.

While in Gary we were taken to all the places of importance, especially those of interest to a newspaper man. We went to Miller Beach one of the most beautiful beaches along the Lake Michigan shore. This beach is located on the southeastern shore directly east of Gary. On Friday night we took in the city going to all points, as well as to theatres, cabarets, etc.

Saturday I left early for Chicago to see the sights, and learn some of the ways of the northern people. First I went directly to the office of the Illinois Central Railroad, where I met Mr. C. E. Kane, editor of the Illinois Central Magazine, who played so important a part in the celebration of the Railroad Exposition in Fulton this past July Fourth. His office is located on the 8th floor of the Illinois Central Station. After talking a while with him, he carried me to the most advantageous points where I could get excellent views of the city.

Next we went to the office of Mr. E. M. Claypool, Assistant in Public Relations of the Railroad. After a long chat with Mr. Claypool and arrangements were made for dinner on the following Tuesday night, I was taken to the office of Mr. George W. Crowson, Assistant to the Senior Vice President of the Railroad.

My visit with these men was one of the most enjoyable of my trip. They displayed such cordiality and hospitality that they made me feel perfectly at home—and not like a stranger in a large and strange city teeming with life. And I must say here that I have never been in a place where I felt more completely at home than I did with these men.

Leaving there at noon I went to the Comiskey baseball park to see the Chicago White Sox and the New York Yankees tangle in a ball game with the Yanks winning 7 to 2. Being a newspaper man I was fortunate enough to talk with Ruth, Gehrig and company for a few moments in the dugout of the New York club. Enjoyed the game from the spot. No, Ruth did not hit a home run but his mate Gehrig did, as did Lazarri and Selkirk.

From the ball park I took the elevated train to the Loop, and from there to the Fair grounds, where I received my press pass, which admitted me to the gate, to the shows, villages and the Fair as long as I was there. Everything was free once I had my pass. But I had to have my picture taken, and it was in turn posted on my pass. I could not obtain a pass for my wife at this time because she was not along and had to wait for hers until she came. In. Later I met her and her friends and we really took in the town. We went to the theaters, night clubs and many points of interest. What a "well-hung" time we all had!

BUSINESS MEN SIGN TO SHIP BY RAIL

The following agreement, signed by 136 business firms of Centralia, Ill., including 53 grocery stores, recently appeared as an advertisement in the Centralia Evening Sentinel and was reproduced in the September issue of the Illinois Central Magazine:

"To the employees of the railroads and other interested in the prospect of Centralia: In consideration of the increase in employment by the railroads of Centralia, whereby the payrolls have been greatly enhanced and to show our appreciation of this benefit to our community, we hereby agree to order all of our incoming merchandise shipped by rail and to ship outgoing merchandise by rail."

The agreement was worked up by the Retail Merchants' Committee of the Centralia Chamber of Commerce.

COOLER WEATHER BRINGS INCREASE IN GROCERY SALES

Although sales of groceries and meats slumped slightly during the summer months, the advent of cooler weather has evidently whetted the appetites of everyone and has caused a sharp increase in business of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company, according to figures released at the general offices in Cincinnati, Ohio.

For the ninth four-week period, which ended September 8, sales of the Kroger company reached $16,892,057, an increase of $1,732,716 over the same four-week period of 1932, or 11 per cent.

The increase is attributed to the seasonal upturn in the consumption

CHAPTER VIII

Celia waited impatiently in the shadow of the lilac bushes beside the gate at the end of the garden. Tom had said that he would come in half an hour. It seemed an eternity since she had crept quietly into the dark. If Tom shouldn't come . . .

She was frightened, desperate. The devil of doubt and his fifteen brothers marched in a fiendish procession through her mind.

Hugh was in love with Janie. Something had happened this afternoon. Janie had fallen downstairs. She wore, at supper, a bandage and a blissful smile. Celia hadn't needed to be told in words. Janie's face was enough and Hugh's expression as he pushed in her chair at the table. Janie had taken Hugh away from her. How had it happened? How could he prefer brown little Janie? Celia's nails bit sharp crescents into the palm of her hand.

She had to get away. She couldn't stay on in Mulberry Square with Father a cripple and Mother economizing and people talking and Hugh in love with Janie. Tom must take her away, California! She had never traveled. Only stupid trips with Great-aunt Rose. It might be pleasant. Tom had always loved her. Would he take her? He must.

She grew very fond of Tom as she waited for him in the shadow of the lilacs. He was, in his way, quite as good-looking as Hugh. Every one predicted a brilliant future for Tom. Senator McAllister, Governor McAllister. The Governor's Lady. She would advance Tom's career, be a perfect hostess, entertain distinguished people . . . "He owes it all to his wife. Lovely little thing."

There were voices in the garden. Hugh and Janie walked towards her under the arbor. Celia drew back further into the shadow of the lilacs. "I'm going with you," Janie said as they passed very close to Celia. "Do you feel like driving that far?" "I'm going with you everywhere . . . always." Janie's voice was singing.

Celia felt very lonely, crouching there in the shelter of the bushes. It hurt her to see them walk together through the gate. Hugh's arm was around Janie; her head, with its white bandage, rested against his shoulder. Janie was secure. It was Celia who was frightened, desperate. How had it happened? Plain little Janie, Pretty Celia. Everything in the world was most decidedly wrong.

She heard the engine of the car they called "Horatius." She felt lonelier than ever . . . If you are pretty you can take what you want from life . . . That theory hadn't worked out very well. What was the matter with the world?

"Celia . . ."

Tom had kept his promise. Relief surged into her heart.

"Tom!" She gave him both of her hands.

"What's the idea of having me meet you here?" He looked at her searchingly in the glow flickering in from the corner light. "I feel like Rachel's gentleman friend."

"Something has happened." The silver harp strings quivered.

"Are you consulting me professionally?" he asked in the teasing voice which Celia could never quite understand. "You're trembling, dear. The teasing vanished. There was a tenderness in his voice. "Your hands are cold."

"I'm miserable," she said brokenly. "Tell me about it."

Celia drew a long quivering breath. "Hugh is in love with Janie." She lifted her face, dampened with dew, wan and wistful. She thought that she must look very appealing.

"I know that," Tom said quietly. "So I must go away." Celia's hands crept up to her heart. "Janie is my dear little sister. Her happiness means everything in the world to me."

"Celia, Celia!"

She drew away from him. Her head lifted proudly.

"No one understands," she said in the patient voice of a martyr. "There is no one who understands."

"I understand, my dear." There was only tenderness in Tom's pleasant voice. He drew her close to him. "Of course, I understand."

His gentleness disarmed her.

"I am unhappy," she sobbed, knowing that with him she could not pretend. "Take me away with you. Please take me away from it all."

"Would you go with me, Celia?"

"Yes." Her eyes were wide and imploring. "You must take me. I can't stay here."

He was silent for a moment.

"Would you marry me, Celia?" he asked gravely.

"Tonight?"

"Tonight."

There was, just then, no thought of the future in her mind. She wanted only to get away, to climb out of this predicament with some credit to herself.

"Yes," she said. "Yes, Tom, I'll marry you . . . now . . . tonight."

She raised her lips. He kissed them gently.

"The Scotch in me tells me to let you work it out alone," he said presently. "Why not?"

Fear returned, a sinking sensation. "You wouldn't Tom?"

"I couldn't," he amended. "The Irish in me has always loved you too much."

"Then you will take me with you?"

She waited breathlessly for his answer.

"It seems like taking an unfair advantage."

She swayed towards him. Her hair brushed his cheek. She felt him trembling. She knew that she had won.

"Yes," he said. "I'll take you with me. I'm feeling all Irish tonight."

II

"Janie!"

Janie, roused from a pleasant dream, opened her eyes with a start. She fancied that some one had called her. Dreaming, of course. She glanced at the illumined dial of the clock. Quarter of three! She turned over, yawned, burrowed her head in the pillow.

"Janie!"

This time she sat up and listened. It wasn't a dream. Hugh was calling her. He was rapping at the door.

"Janie!"

"Yes?" she answered.

"Come to the telephone, dear."

Hugh was calling her "dear" in that tender intimate way. She forgot to wonder why some one should be telephoning for her at quarter of three in the morning. Hugh was calling her "dear"!

She sat on the edge of the bed, drowsy, ecstatic, totally unconscious of the chill in the air.

"She's long distance. Hurry, dear."

She tucked her toes into tiny slippers, fastened the cord of her quilted kimono and opened the door. Hugh went downstairs with her. She didn't wonder much about the telephone call. He loved her. That was the only matter of any importance in all the world.

"Hello," she called drowsily into the transmitter. Celia's voice answered from somewhere very far away.

Celia's news, somehow, did not seem tremendously exciting. Janie talked for a few minutes. She placed the receiver on the hook. She glanced up at Hugh.

"Celia is married," she said.

"Married!" Hugh echoed the word and yawned again.

"She and Tom were just married," Janie explained. "Somewhere down in Maryland."

"They're leaving tomorrow for California," Janie added. "Celia said she left a note for me."

"Where would Hugh actually smile."

"Under the bowl of lilacs of the valley on the moon."

"Appropriate," Hugh's smile broadened into a grin. "Celia would," he repeated.

The note was short.

"Janie-darling,

"Now that I know how matters are, there is nothing left for me to do except go away. Your happiness means more to me than anything else in the world. Tom seems to need me. I shall go with him. Don't let any thought of me sadden your happy hours."

"Celia."

"It sounds sad, doesn't it?" Janie nestled closer to Hugh and brushed her cheek against the shoulder of his dressing gown.

"Artistically sad," Hugh said drily.

There was quiet in the living room. Janie knew why Celia had done it. She couldn't bear that anyone should think Hugh had preferred her. She hoped that Celia would be happy. It didn't seem fair to Tom. But Tom, she thought, could take care of himself. Celia could never deceive him with her poses. It might, after all, be a very good thing for Celia.

"What are you thinking?" Hugh asked softly.

"I don't think Tom really needs her."

Janie answered. "But the Irish in him has always loved her. He must have been Irish tonight."

"Will your father mind?" Hugh asked, stroking with a caressing finger the peak of her brows.

"Father likes Tom," Janie answered thoughtfully. "Mother will probably be upset because of old Thomas and all."

She glanced up at him, an anxious question in her eyes. "Do you mind, Hugh?"

"Poor Celia," he said gently.

The last small lingering doubt vanished forever. Janie sighed blissfully. The question was answered. There was peace in her heart.

CHAPTER IX

Father was coming home! That was the first thought which popped into Janie's head as she opened her eyes one morning late in June. She pattered over to the window and curled herself up on the seat. The sun was shining and the sky was a lovely blue. Father was coming home! Uncle Bradford was to drive into the city to meet them. Janie hugged her pink pajama knees. Father would be home for dinner at one o'clock!

"Isn't it nice it's such a beautiful day?" she said to Hugh at breakfast.

"Great!" He swung her up from the floor and kissed her brow where the chestnut hair dipped in a peak.

"You mustn't, Hugh," she protested, liking it very much.

"Why not?"

"It isn't dignified."

"It's nice." He set her down in the chair at the head of the table behind the coffee urn. "Now, Mrs. Kennedy," he said with a crinkly smile, "you can be as dignified as you like."

The brightness faded out of her face. It was grave and very anxious.

"Don't call me that," she said, her voice catching a little.

"Don't you like the name?" Hugh pretended to be offended.

"It's a lovely name."

She looked up at him with the sunshine glancing in across her hair, a brown little girl with a shining look in her wide-set hazel eyes. "Only it scares me, I'm afraid something will happen. I'm afraid it can't possibly be true."

"It is true, Janie," he said gravely. "I love you, little fellow."

Janie glanced around the familiar old dining room bright this morning with sunshine, at Kiltie curled up on the floor beside her chair, at Mrs. Quillen puffing in with a plate of muffins, at Hugh smiling down at her with a tender expression in his ruddy brown eyes. She thought that today Father and Mother were coming home. She drew a long deep breath.

"If Heaven is any nicer than this," she said in a hushed sort of voice, "I simply couldn't stand it."

The old brick house was filled all morning with a great bustling and stir. Janie scurried about in a frenzy of excitement with the small black dog at her heels. There was only one thing to mar her happiness. It didn't seem right that Celia should be so far away. On one of her frequent trips upstairs she peeped into the cream and lilac room. She couldn't make it seem possible that Celia was married to Tom McAllister, that Celia would never be just Celia again. Celia had been a trial. But she missed her. She wished that Celia were home.

People came with offerings. It was a gala day in the Square.

"It's not," said Mrs. Bangs, the elder, presenting a mound of a delicacy known as "Apple Float."

"It's lovely, Mrs. Bangs." Gay little laughing notes sprinkling themselves through the air. "Thank you very much."

"You may find it a trifle sweet."

Mrs. Bangs lingered in the hall. "I told Annie to use twice as much sugar as the recipe calls for so you wouldn't think we was stingy."

The "Apple Float" was more than a trifle sweet. Kiltie, in the privacy of the vine-screened kitchen porch, enjoyed it very much.

All morning the doorknob rang.

"Roses, Mrs. Quillen!" Janie uncovered a box of fragrant pink blooms.

"From Mrs. Leland. Did you ever see so many?"

"Every last vase in the house is full up now," worried Mrs. Quillen who was enjoying the excitement. "I would seem a shame to cut them handsome stems."

"The umbrella jar!" Janie dragged it out of the hall closet, a hideous affair of mottled green china which nicely accommodated the expensive stems of Mrs. Leland's roses.

"You do beat all, Janie," Mrs. Quillen admiringly observed. "If a brass band was needed, you'd find something that would do."

It was a gala day in the Square. All morning the offerings arrived. Miss Elliot brought custards baked in pottery cups. Old Thomas brought the first strawberries from his garden. Tony Silver brought an indigestible-looking cake laced with swirls of bright pink frosting. The "Generals" brought three geranium blooms which he had probably "borrowed" when the owner was not around.

Great-uncle Charlie brought his last bottle of sherry wine. There was an air of suppressed excitement about Great-uncle Charlie today.

"What time do you expect them?" he asked.

"About twelve," Janie answered, wondering if it could possibly be true that Father was coming home.

"Think I'll stay," the old man said, "if I won't be a bother."

"You're never a bother," Janie embraced him warmly. She couldn't help hugging people today.

Hugh came in during the morning with a man who carried a box.

"What is it?" Janie asked.

"This is my present for the Doctor."

Hugh smiled at her sparkling eyes.

"A radio."

"You think of everything, Hugh."

"You taught me, young fellow."

The radio was installed in the room which had once been the parlor. Janie surveyed it with some satisfaction.

"It does look cheerful," she said.

"It's great," Hugh agreed.

"We'll try to make up to him for everything."

"I can, if you'll help me." He held her close. "You're a very good little egg."

"Not that," she said very softly.

"Call me 'darling,' Hugh."

"Darling," he whispered with his lips against her hair.

They were lost to the rest of the world. They did not hear the front door open and close. They were totally unaware of an audience until a voice asked from the doorway:

"Can't you lavish a little of that on me?"

Celia was standing between the porch doors. Celia faintly glanced from the California sun, Celia in a smart new suit and buckled slippers and a mammoth corsage of violets.

Janie ran to meet her. They clung to each other, both talking at once. Hugh was forgotten for a moment. He lit a cigarette. He said nothing at all.

"My husband had to stop at the office," Celia, before the mirror, repaired the ravages of Janie's enthusiastic greeting. "He sent me on in a taxi."

"Your husband!" Janie echoed. "It seems so strange."

She searched Celia's face to see if she were really happy. She appeared to be. Celia looks like the cat that swallowed the canary, Janie thought. There are feathers all over her chin.

"We're going to be friends, Hugh?" Celia extended a slim gloved hand.

"Of course," Hugh took the hand she offered, bent to kiss her lightly on the cheek. "The tan is becoming," he said. "You look almost real!"

"Tom adores beaches," Celia remarked with the wily air of criticizing her husband in the most delectable tones. "He's as brown as an Indian."

"Did you know Father and Mother were coming home today?" Janie, to the detriment of the violets, was embracing Celia again.

"What a little cyclone you are!" Celia gently disentangled Janie's arms.

"Tom knew. He simply dragged me away from California. We flew part of the distance. Tom is a masterful man."

Celia looked to be happy. She greeted Tom prettily when he arrived half an hour later at the old brick house. Tom was obviously very proud of his beautiful wife. It was quite as obvious that he did not intend to let her rule him. His manner towards Celia was still half tender and half teasing. A good thing for Celia, Janie thought, and a blessed good thing for Tom.

They all talked at once. In the excitement, the real event of the day was temporarily overshadowed. Celia, since her first birthday, had contrived, on every occasion, to hold the center of the stage.

The clock was striking twelve when Great-uncle Charlie bounced into the room.

"They're coming," he announced with his air of suppressed excitement increased a hundredfold. "My sainted Aunt Maria! I'm glad I'm not asleep!"

Stirring Days of Old Santa Fe Trail

Recalled by Memorial Honoring Pioneer

These extracts from a bulletin of the National Geographic Society vividly bring to mind the glorious days of the winning of the West. A marker is to be placed at Ingalls, Kan., as a memorial to Jedediah Smith, one of the pioneers. The bulletin says:

Sunburnt, long whiskered traders and trappers in buckskins and moccasins came into old Franklin to brag of their adventures and scatter their quick-earned profits. They made the river bottom ring with nightly wails, with rough and tumble fights.

Rich St. Louis bankers, stirred by news of big profits in the newly opened Santa Fe trade, rubbed elbows in Franklin with buck-skinned mountain men and returning freighters. And in all men's mouths were new place names—Yellowstone, Columbia, Taos, Rio Grande. America was in the making. Seattle, Denver, San Francisco—they had yet to be built and christened.

The Yosemite, the Grand Canyon, Salt Lake—the East had never even heard of them. Hardly a handful of white settlers then where millions now make their homes. Arizona, Nevada, California—their stupendous wealth of gold, silver and copper was not even suspected.

Yet, in all the history of civilization, no region was ever to see such swift and amazing transition from wilderness to populous empire of richness and power. It can never happen again; no empty place is left on earth where it could happen.

Today a speedy motor highway ties St. Louis to Kansas City. It sweeps through fading Franklin, wherein Kit Carson's youth the trail began. Over it earlier buses hum, running as far in 20 minutes as ox teams went in a day. Now men watch market reports or play golf where their forebears watched for Indians or tinkered with mink traps.

From a spot near where Kit Carson stitched horse collars and bellybands, a big highway bridge leads off to span the Missouri. Here busses and motor tourists stop for gas. Men get out to stretch their legs or buy a ginger ale. Across the Big Muddy stands Boomville, named for Daniel, whose sons whittled ramrods from Missouri Hickory and made salt from the deer licks, packed it in hollow logs, and floated it down to St. Louis.

NEPTUNE HARNESSSED

Power of the tides was demonstrated recently near Boston when the flow was used to move a 1,200-ton ponton drawbridge over the Fore river. The tides were made to do most of the work of moving the huge structure 400 feet. Scaws were placed beneath the bridge at low tide and as the tide rose the draw was lifted from the supports and floated to its new place assisted by tugboats.

Eruptions on Scalp Itched and Burned

Healed by Cuticura

"My sister's skin became itchy and, before long, sore eruptions began to appear on her face and scalp. They were red and soon began to weep. We thought she would have to have her hair cut and be bald. Her scalp itched and burned, causing her to irritate it by scratching."

"She began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. The first week the eruptions became fewer and in two weeks she was healed and no sign of her trouble can be seen." (Signed) Mrs. Emma Younska, 706 Monterey St., McKeesport, Pa., April 12, 1934.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

A LOVING MATE BUT POOR HOUSEKEEPER

"IT'S TIME for my dust bath," said Mourner the Dove to Peter Rabbit, as the latter sat thinking over what Mourner had just told him about cutting gravel as an aid to digestion. "There is a dusty spot over in the Long Lane where I take a dust bath every day," continued Mourner.

"If you don't mind," said Peter, "I'll go with you."

Mourner said he didn't mind, so Peter followed him over to the dusty place in the Long Lane. There Mourner was joined by Mrs. Mourner, who was dressed very much like him save that she did not have as beautiful a neck. While they thoroughly dusted themselves they chatted with Peter.

"I see you on the ground so much that I've often wondered if you build your nest on the ground," said Peter.

"No," replied Mourner, "Mrs. Dove builds in a tree, but usually not far above the ground. Now, if you'll excuse us we must get back home. Mrs. Dove has two eggs to sit on, and while

"Now, if you will excuse us, we must be getting back home."

she is sitting, I like to be close at hand to keep her company and make love to her."

The Doves shook the loose dust from their feathers and flew away. Peter watched to see where they went, but lost sight of them behind some trees, so decided to run up to the Old Orchard. There he found Jenny and Mr. Wren as busy as ever feeding their growing family of theirs. Jenny wouldn't stop an instant to gossip. Peter was so brim full of what he had found out about Mr. and Mrs. Dove that he just had to tell some one. He heard Kitty the Catbird among the bushes along the Old Stone Wall, so hurried over to look for him. As soon as he found him, Peter began to tell what he had learned about Mourner the Dove.

"That's no news, Peter," interrupted Kitty. "I know all about Mourner and his wife. They are very nice people, though I must say that Mrs. Dove is one of the poorest housekeepers I know of. I take it you never have seen her nest."

Peter shook his head. "No," said he, "I haven't. What is it like?" Kitty the Catbird laughed. "It's about the poorest apology for a nest I know of," said he. "It is made of little sticks and might be of them. How they hold together is more than I can understand. I guess it is a good thing that Mrs. Dove doesn't lay more than two eggs, and it's a wonder to me that those two stay in the nest. Listen! There's Mourner's voice now. For one happy he certainly does have the mournfullest sounding voice. To hear him you'd think he was sorrowful instead of happy. It always makes me feel sad to hear him."

"That's true," replied Peter, "but I like to hear him just the same. Hello! Who's that?"

Mother's Cook Book

NOW IS THE TIME

Now is the time when each fruit comes into the market to have at hand a few of the delectable recipes which have waited for them. While the fresh berries are plentiful prepare them for the winter when jellies, jams and preserves of all kinds are so much enjoyed.

Spiced Rhubarb.

Put into the preserving kettle six cups of rhubarb peeled and cut into small pieces, one cup of seeded raisins, one cup of apple vinegar, four cups of sugar, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and one-half teaspoonful of clove. Bring slowly to the boiling point and let simmer until of the consistency of marmalade. Put into glasses and seal with paraffin. If the vinegar is very strong dilute it with water.

English Gooseberry Pie.

Line the side only of a deep pie dish with rich paste. Fill with one quart of ripe gooseberries which have been stemmed and cleaned, pour boiling water over the berries and drain and cool. Add one and one-half table-spoonfuls of butter and one-third cupful of currant jelly. Moisten the edge of the pie with cold water and spread a top crust with a few perforations in the center. Flute the rim and bake forty minutes. Serve turned upside down on a platter. Serve with hard sauce.

Baked Peaches.

Select large ripe peaches for baking. Peel, cut into halves and remove stones from the peaches. In the cavity place a seeded raisin, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of butter and a sprinkle of mace. Bake slowly in a moderate oven until the peaches are soft. Serve on rounds of sponge cake with sweetened cream.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I read in the newspaper that a well-known shoemaker was arrested for bigamy. He has two wives. The verdict is that he must give one some money, and live with the other. Which wife do you think he'll live with, his first or second wife?

Yours truly,

MARY WANCE

Answer: If he is a shoemaker, as you say, and if he is a good shoemaker, he will stick to his last.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

The other day I was laid flat on my back by an attack of "peritonitis." Now I am unable to work. What shall I do?

Sincerely,

N. VALID

Answer: Report to the government at once that you have been attacked by "peritonitis." Something should be done to teach a lesson to these foreigners.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I live in a little town in which is situated the state insane asylum. They have a tower on the main building with a large clock in it, but the clock is always one or two hours too early or too late. Do you think it is proper to have a clock that isn't right in a state institution?

Yours truly,

I. M. KNUTTY

Answer: It is perfectly proper in the case you mention. The reason they have that clock in the insane asylum is because it is not right.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I hear that Mussolini has insured the thumb on his right hand for $100,000. How can his right thumb be so valuable?

Yours truly,

I. TALLAN

Answer: It is probably the thumb he keeps the people under.

Thank God for a Friend Like You

By ANNE CAMPBELL

THANK God for a friend like you in bitter days! Your handclasp is firm and true, And staunch your ways.

Though shadows are bleak upon The morning skies, I glimpse the first hint of dawn Deep in your eyes.

Thank God for a friend like you! In joy or pain, A bird soars into the blue! I dream again!

Hope arches a rainbow high In the day's design! Thank God, as Time marches by, You're a friend of mine!

Truly yours,

LIFE'S LITTLE JESTS

HAD BEEN WARNED

They were late for the theater. The box office clerk was as polite as only a box office clerk can be, but he couldn't find them a seat. However, they were knowing ones, and slipped round the side and managed to find an attendant who let them in! At the first interval they felt for their hats to go home. "I want to see the box office man before we go," said one, "and tip him." "Why?" asked the other. "Well, he did his best to keep us out."—The Bits Magazine.

PARTICULAR

"Why did you pass him up, Edith? I thought you liked him?" "I liked him well enough, but I couldn't go through life with him. I didn't care for the make of his car."

A Friendly Warning

A farmer turned into his gate recently and met a tramp coming out. The tramp, greeted by a friendly "Hello," mistook the farmer for another wanderer in quest of a meal. "Say, mate," the tramp confided, "don't go in there. The cooking's not up to much!"

No Duplicates

Grandma was helping Peggy make out a list of little guests for her party.

"How about the Morton twins?" grandma asked.

"Well, there's no need to ask them both," Peggy answered, "they're exactly alike."

You Should Be More Careful

Enemy at the Maneuvers—You are my prisoner.

Sergeant Binks—Nonsense! How did you get here?

Enemy—Over the bridge.

Sergeant Binks—Then, my dear fellow, you are drowned. We blew up that bridge yesterday!

Limitations

"What are you going to say in your next speech?"

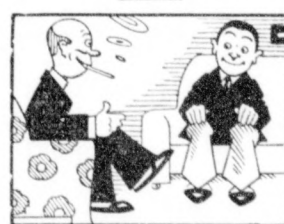

"I don't know," answered Senator Sorghum. "I'll have to make my remarks more brief so as to leave more time for the radio announcer and a band concert."

First Pick

"Can you give me a job where I can keep dressed up and won't have too much work?" said the applicant.

"I'll keep you in mind," said the office manager, "and when I find two jobs like that, you can have the other one."—Lathfinder Magazine.

NOT TAKING CHANCES

"So you went after the job, I thought you believed that the office should seek the man."

"I do; but this is a fat job, and I thought it would get winded before it reached me."

The Gentle Art

"What's the noise?"

"John, the barber, is shaving himself."

"What's the conversation about?"

"He's trying to persuade himself to have a shampoo."

Brilliant Idea

Prison Warden.—I think I'll have a party for you boys. What kind do you suggest?

Prisoners (all together)—Ooper house!

Transfer of Duties

"How do you think the stock exchange should be regulated?"

"By the Department of Agriculture," said Mr. Dustin Stax. "When dividends or profits get too high a way might be found to plow 'em under."

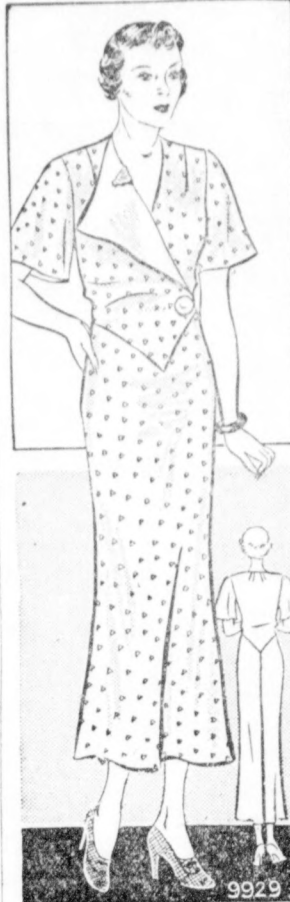

Bum Steer

"I hear you took a disastrous plunge in Wall Street."

"Yes; I was sort of standing on the edge and some one gave me a tip!"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "But politics is politics and you can't make economy do the work of liberal campaign expenditures."

Bulldogs Meet Humboldt Tonight At Fairgrounds

ELKS WILL ADD MANY NEW MEMBERS IN SEPTEMBER DRIVE

The Elks Club of Fulton, which has been engaged in a membership drive during the month of September, expects to initiate more than 50 new members next Monday night. Applications will be accepted all this week, but afterward the membership fee for new members will return to the usual $25 standard.

Following the initiations next Monday night there will be a banquet with visiting Elks present from neighboring towns. An interesting informal entertainment will be carried out.

Much interest is being manifested by the membership in tentative plan for inauguration of sporting activities by the club. It is proposed that the club sponsor an independent basketball team, boxing and wrestling. Along with this plan, it is hoped that other organizations and business firms can be encouraged to organize basketball clubs of their own to compete with the Elks team.

All members of the Elks are urged to be present next Monday night, for besides the initiations and banquet, much business will be discussed.

LOAN BERRY KILLED IN FALL FROM ROOF OF MILL

W. A. (Lon) Berry, 56, who was killed instantly here Monday, when he fell fifty feet from the top of Browder's Mill to the pavement below, was buried at Wesley cemetery Thursday, following a funeral service from his home on Bates-st.

Mr. Berry was painting the roof of the mill with tar pitch, working from a ladder laid flat on the sloping roof fifty feet above ground, when the fatal accident occurred. He dropped his bucket and brush which fell to the ground, following which he was making his way up the ladder to go below after them. Hugh Barnes, his son-in-law, who was helping him, seeing that he was tired and fagged, told Mr. Berry to cease work for a while, and that he would go after the brush and bucket, so Barnes went down after it. When he left to go down Mr. Berry was still on the ladder.

Several eye witnesses to the accident said that Mr. Berry seemed to swoon and lose his hold on the ladder, falling backward. He fell about 35 feet to strike head first on the roof of the office below. From there he rolled to drop 15 feet to the pavement below. His skull was crushed, and death was instantaneous. It is believed that sun rays on the roof with the fumes of the tar overcame the man, causing him temporary palsy.

Mr. Berry is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lucy Berry, one daughter, Mrs. Hugh Barnes of Fulton; a son, Travis Berry of Detroit; and several grandchildren.

Mrs. C. C. Hill of Darlington, S. C., is visiting with Mrs. T. H. Chapman on Second-st.

UNION CITY DEFEATS LOUISVILLE SUNDAY 2-1

Union City and Harry Kelly of the Southern League took the situation in hand Sunday afternoon on the beautiful ball park in Union City and defeated the Louisville Colonels of the American Association by the score of 2 to 1 allowing the Louisville club only one hit. Union City, however, made only four hits.

The crowd was tremendous with something like 3000 howling spectators sitting in Union City's scoring was attributed to Holiday, center fielder and Batts right fielder. Holiday singles and doubles with Batts bringing him home on both times he hit.

Next Sunday September 29 Union City will have as their guests the Memphis Chickasaws of the Southern League for a game. It will be remembered that these two clubs tangled twice last year with each team winning a game. Union City will have Harry Kelly on the mound again to face his ex-mates.

For the convenience of the many who did not get seats last Sunday they have constructed 350 extra reserved seats inside the fence on the playing field along by first and third which can be obtained by calling 608 Union City or calling D. Capps at the Fulton County News.

TRAFFIC REGULATION

Both the Lions and Rotary Clubs have voiced the opinion that something should be done about the traffic conditions in Fulton. A committee has been appointed to meet with the city council next Monday night for the purpose of discussing and working out some modern plan for traffic control.

This has been a long felt need here. It was only natural that the time would come when the public would demand that something be done to correct conditions. We are glad the worthy organizations that have taken it upon themselves to aid in this much needed civic improvement.

Perhaps the most troublesome traffic condition here is the parking situation. The downtown business area is woefully short of parking space, and due to this condition traffic congestion is aggravated. We suggest, however, that the following steps might improve the situation:

1. Parking zones should be marked off downtown, and cars parked correctly in these zones. On Lake Street where congestion is worst, the north side should have parking areas marked off at 45 degree angles; while on the south side parking should be done parallel to the curb. This would facilitate easier parking, give more width for driving, and aid in relieving traffic congestion in general.

2. There should be a parking limit on Saturdays especially, for Lake-st. where traffic congestion is worst. Thirty minutes or one hour would suffice for shopping purposes. The council could decide on the length of time to be allowed.

3. No parking should be done near corners where congestion is worst and accidents more likely.

4. Parking should be allowed on one side of the street only, and then parallel to the curb, where street is narrow like Commercial Avenue.

5. Traffic regulations are needed at the new bridge at the west end of Lake-st. A stop sign should be placed on Carr-st, stopping all cars entering Lake and State Line at this intersection. Traffic lanes should be marked out where these three streets join, directing the flow of traffic along definite pathways in order to prevent accidents.

The proper control of traffic in Fulton will provide a safety measure and facilitate easier operation of motor vehicles. Every effort should be made to improve traffic conditions and provide adequate parking accommodations for those who shop in Fulton.

A dreadful condition now exists. Double-parking, criss-cross driving, parking and driving on the wrong side of the street, stopping anywhere blocking traffic, etc., are common traffic violations and a public nuisance.

With national highways coming right through the heart of the business district, traffic congestion becomes even heavier. It would be a mighty good thing if some place could be arranged (maybe directly across the street on the vacant lot) so the buses would not block traffic at the corner of Lake and Fourth streets. This should be gone into thoroughly and some arrangement made with the bus company which would alleviate this problem.

The time has come for the city council to go into action, and take definite steps to regulate traffic.

MEMPHIS GOLFERS TAKE REVENGE ON FULTON

Memphis golfers invaded the Fulton County Club Sunday, defeating local players 33 to 20. Twenty-one Memphians were here for the match with most of them good players, only three of them passed the 100 mark. This was said to be the first time Fulton has suffered a defeat on its own course. H. Nichols was low for Memphis being medalist with 79, while Boots Rogers was low for Fulton with an 84. Following are the scores of Fulton players:

Herbert Carr 93, Hoyt Moore 95, R. C. Pickering 88, Lynn Taylor 99, Jim Gordon 99, John Hill 93, Leland Bugg 89, Boots Rogers 84, Ward McClellan 94, Otis Carter 91, Billy Carr 85, Harold Owen 94, W. Utterback 91, Chas. Fritts 87, Dave Craddock 90, Dr. Latimer 91, Gid Willingham 98, J. Rippey 91.

NURSERY SCHOOL MAKES STEADY PROGRESS

Mrs. Mansfield Martin has two classes in Home Economics. Her cooking class in the morning. This has as one of its daily projects the preparation and serving of lunch to the nursery school. These classes meet in the Home Science department of the high school.

Wayland Rayburn, supervisor of Educational projects under the F. E. R. A., inspected the Fulton units on Tuesday. He was very complimentary of the type of projects being carried and stated that the housing arrangement of the two classes here was by far the best he had seen in all the counties under his supervision.

The operation of these units has been made possible through the cooperation of the following persons, firms and institutions, and the teachers wish to publicly acknowledge this help:

O. K. Laundry, laundering; Kramer Lumber Co., a table; Pierce-Cequin Lumber Co., a table; Louis Kasnow, a covering for a table; Continental Baking Co., bread service; Fulton Ice Co., ice service; Browder Milling Co., meal, flour, etc.; Singer Sewing Machine Co., servicing machines; Midwest Ice Cream Co., ice cream; Cloverleaf Dairy, milk, cream, etc.; National Biscuit Co., cakes and crackers; Honra Brothers, covering for tables; First Baptist church, use of chairs.

THE ROTARY CLUB

Joe Bennett had charge of the Rotary program this week. He told a very interesting account of his recent motor trip in which he visited Washington, New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Virginia and North Carolina. Judge L. L. Hindman was a visitor, and spoke briefly about what the club could accomplish in a community.

Ernest Fall, Gus Bard and J. O. Lewis were appointed as a committee to encourage the better enforcement of traffic laws inside the city. The club went on record that something should be done to bring about observance of traffic rules and regulations here.

THE LIONS CLUB

The Lions Club with Louis Kasnow in charge of the program held an interesting meeting at the Methodist church last Friday, with 100 per cent attendance. One of the most important features of the program was the discussion led by Clarence Reed for a modern system of traffic control for Fulton. It was suggested that a committee be appointed to appear before the city council to discuss this project. Steve Wiley, city attorney, Bailey Huddleston, chief of police and A. G. Baldrige made brief talks about the traffic situation here.

MATTHEWS WILL MEET LARRY KOFFMAN AT MAYFIELD, OCTOBER 12

Bobby Matthews, middleweight fighter of this city, is scheduled for ten rounds in the main event fight at the Legion arena in Mayfield, Friday night, October 12. Larry Koffman of Louisville, who has established quite a reputation for himself, including the defeat of Freddie Eiler by a knockout, is slated to mix it up with the Fulton boy. It will be remembered that Matthews recently won a close decision over Eiler.

Matthews recently returned from a trip to Chicago, where he contacted Jim Mullins, promoter at the Chicago stadium. Mullins promised to use him on the opening card there some in October.

P. C. Ford and daughters returned to their homes in Fulton after spending several days in Memphis visiting friends and relatives.

COACH POWELL MOLDS MACHINE FOR BATTLE WITH HUMBOLDT TONIGHT

Coach Powell is working to correct defects in the Bulldog machine in preparation for his game with Coach Herndon's Humboldt club on Friday night. In scrimmage Tuesday the Bulldogs were especially vicious in the way they tore into each other. Every one sees a chance to win a starting berth so each one is trying to out do his opponent for that honor. So far only five have played with enough consistency to be rated a place in the starting line-up.

Boyd Edwards, at quarterback, who gave a good exhibition of composure under fire against Hornbeak, Dallas at tackle, Campbell who is one of the most vicious of the lot, at guard; Hamby at the other guard position and Hancock who is playing his first season on the first team and who played a remarkable game against Hornbeak, are almost sure to start.

It is quite certain that Dycus who showed much promise at full will not be able to play. He has a tricky knee which he injured last week. Joe Beadles who has been afflicted with boils will be able to play this week. Every boy is eager to show the coach and the fans he can deliver in order that he may win the coveted honor of playing against Paducah. This will be a good game, one that you will want to see. You will especially enjoy the fight the Bulldogs will display Friday night.

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—Well all I know is just what I read in the papers, or what I see as I stroll hither and thither. Did I ever tell you about the time we steamed into the beautiful Pacific Ocean. Well set down mates, draw up a coil of ropes to set on, and I will tell you. We had sailed out of Los Angeles harbor.

Now mind you Los Angeles is a place that had no more harbor than Claremore, Oklahoma. But by golly they just went out and dug em a harbor. Houston Texas did the same thing. Amon Carter of Ft Worth has the most ambitious plan of any of the late harbor diggers. Ft Worth is several hundred miles from the nearest sea gull, but Amon wants to give Ft Worth the benefit of a tidal wave. They have had drouths, floods, boll weevils, cattle fever ticks, and were struck by two visits of Jim Furguson, but they never have tasted salt water.

But to get back to the Los Angeles harbor. There was a town called San Pedro. That had what might in a pinch, or a bad storm, be called a kind of an amateur harbor. They had stole it away from Santa Monica many years before, as Santa Monica was where it should have been located. So Los Angeles said to themselves one day, "We ought to have a harbor." Someone happened to think of this little place San Pedro having one, so they decided to take them. Now in most countries you would say as dear old Charlie Mack of the two Black Crows used to say, "You cant do that." You cant just go out and take somebodys harbor away from em in broad daylight.

Well you dont know our town. They have a thing called "Annexation." They dont buy you, or borrow you, they just annex you. Well they just grabbed this San Pedro by the scruff of the neck one night, and when it woke up the next morning it had a big L.A. branded right on its left hip. And it was written on the minutes of the meeting as, "We annex you for harbor purposes." And they commenced piling rocks out there, and the first thing you know they had quite a pile, but like everything in our fair land that wants to put over something, you show what a great thing it would be for the U.S. Government if Los Angeles had a harbor. Well the Government had never thought of that, but they had some Congressmen there reminding em of it. Thats what a Congressman or Senator is for, is to see that too much money dont accumulate in the National Treasury. They said "We got a million people." (old time figures) "We want a harbor."

Now all the million had come in by land and was going out the same way, and a harbor had never entered their heads. In fact if it hadnt been for reading about San Franciscoes we wouldnt have know what one was. But we showed the Government where they could anchor near the movie studios, where it would make it handy for the picture companies taking pictures, and by golly the Government pitched in and helped em pile rocks. And you would be surprised, they got a rock coral built away out like a cattle chute, so you went run past the harbor, like a wild steer will by the coral if the chute aint there. And you would be surprised at the amount of stray ships they catch in that trap.

Well the big strike had been on, and it was just in the first throes of being settled. Wait a minute I am wrong, I didnt sail out of this harbor at all, I got a little afraid of it. I was afraid we couldnt make it, so we drove down and when we found that the boat was going to go to San Francisco, why we just loaded the plunder on it and turned right around and beat it to Frisco, beat the boat I mean. Ever since they so cruelly robbed Santa Monica from having it, I have never used it. I am on what you call a port or harbor strike. I wont sail out of it till they move it to Santa Monica.

So I just drove 400 miles and used another harbor. Thats the best way to take a boat trip anyhow, is to load your baggage on and then get in car and go and meet it when it gets there. There would be fewer sea casualties if everybody did that. But we are building what they call a yacht harbor in Santa Monica. None of us living down there have a yacht. There is a good many horses and an awful lot of Fords, but no yacht in the village. But we hope in this "Chute" we are building there to catch a few, for a fellow on a yacht never knows or cares where he is going anyhow. So he had just as well wind up in Santa Monica as anywhere else. If we ever get him in there, I think it will be so rough he wont ever get out, and we will have more yachts for sale than we do fish. In fact there is more yachts for sale now than fish, and cheaper.

Lindbergh Baby Kidnaping Brought Near Solution by Arrest—President's Board Offers Plan for Settling the Textile Strike.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

WITH the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in New York city, the government agents and state police appeared to be well on the way toward solving the Lindbergh baby kidnaping and murder mystery. The prisoner, a German alien thirty-five years old, was nabbed after he had given to a filling station man a $10 gold certificate that was found to be part of the ransom paid the kidnapers by Dr. John F. Condon—"Jafsie"—over a cemetery wall in a vain attempt to get the baby returned. In Hauptmann's garage in the Bronx the police found $13,750 which also was identified as part of the $50,000 Jafsie had paid. Then circumstantial evidence rapidly was gathered to prove Hauptmann was one of the guilty men, and he was partially identified by Doctor Condon, as well as by a taxi cab driver who said the prisoner was the man who gave him $1 eleven days after the kidnaping to carry a note to Jafsie.

Officials of the department of Justice announced that Hauptmann's handwriting tallied with that of ransom notes sent by the kidnapers. Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan, who made the official announcement of the developments jointly for New York and New Jersey authorities as well as for the federal department of Justice, declared that Hauptmann admitted under severe questioning that he had been employed as a carpenter near the Lindbergh home at Hopewell. O'Ryan also asserted that police had established that Hauptmann had had access to the lumber yard in which lumber was found bearing a peculiar mark, similar to that found on the ladder left at the scene of the kidnaping. Hauptmann, he added, is in this country illegally. He is married and has a ten-year-old son.

Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh, who were in Los Angeles, were said to have known in advance that the arrest was expected. They secluded themselves and would say nothing for publication. FEDERAL JUDGE W. CALVIN CHESNUT of Baltimore handed down an opinion holding that the farm moratorium amendment to the federal bankruptcy act passed by congress last June is unconstitutional. This amendment, known as the Frazier-Lemke law, authorizes debt-ridden farmers to go into federal courts and reduce their obligations. The judge held that it violates the rights of creditors as outlined in the fourteenth amendment to the Constitution and that it seeks to supersede the rights of state courts.

The court pointed out that each state has laws to protect both the creditor and the debtor. The Frazier-Lemke act, it was stated, wiped away the safeguards for creditors and amounted to confiscation of property.

PEACE in the textile industry was almost in sight after the President's special mediation board reported to him its plan for ending the bloody strike that has been going on for weeks. The report was carried to Mr. Roosevelt at Hyde Park by Secretary of Labor Perkins and Gov. John G. Winant, chairman of the board. It proposed the following four-point program:

1. Appointment by the President of a textile labor relations board of three members to settle all questions of union recognition at the several textile mills and to handle all other employer-employee disputes in the industry.

2. An investigation by the Department of Labor and the federal trade commission of the textile industry's ability to meet the higher wage payments which the union is demanding.

3. A moratorium on the "stretch out" system, whereby the union claims, employers are adding to the work load of their employees; during the moratorium the textile labor relations board shall appoint a textile work assignment control board to plan a permanent control of the stretchout.

4. An investigation by the Department of Labor into the various classifications of work in the textile industry and the wage scale for each classification.

President Roosevelt was highly pleased with the 10,000-word report of the board and expressed his hope that it would show the way to end the strike. F. J. Gorman, leader of the strike, submitted to the union's executive council the question of having the workers return to the mills pending final arrangements.

Immediately preceding these developments the mills had been reopening under military protection, and in consequence the strikers had resumed their acts of violence. There were numerous bloody encounters between them and National Guardsmen in New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Georgia and the Carolinas. In Connecticut the disorders abated and the state troops were being demobilized. Carrying out his plans for extending the strike to all branches of the textile industry, Gorman sent out orders for 20,000 dyers to quit their jobs.

The union workers were still enraged at Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, for his attack on the strike at a meeting of code authorities in New York. He charged that the walkout was in "absolute violation" of an agreement made by the United Textile Workers with the government last June. This the union leaders flatly denied, and they demanded the resignation of Johnson. Gorman said:

"We will not join in submitting any issue to the NRA as long as General Johnson is administrator or occupies a position of determining influence in the recovery administration. We said he ought to resign and we meant it. Since that is our view, we could not join in any submission to the NRA while he has the power to make NRA decisions."

If present plans are carried out, a quarter of a million cotton garment workers will go on strike throughout the country on October 1. This strike is called, according to the union leaders, because the manufacturers refused to comply with NRA's order to reduce the weekly working hours from 40 to 36.

ONE of the sharpest thorns in the side of the Roosevelt administration will not be in the next congress to give pain to the New Dealers.

James M. Beck of Pennsylvania, leading authority on the Constitution, has announced he will not seek re-election because congress has become "a rubber stamp." He had been renominated, but prefers not to run. However, the administration will not be relieved from his attacks, for he intends to continue them in the courts.

"I am not retiring from public life," Mr. Beck explains. "This is no time for any citizen to lessen his activities in defense of our form of government. I believe I can help in this great cause more effectively in the federal courts, where I have practiced for more than fifty years, than in congress, where the minority is gagged and reduced to impotence."

"Our form of government can only be saved by restoration of the Republican party to power, and I hope with my pen and voice to serve that party as effectively in the ranks as in congress."

WISCONSIN'S state primary was especially interesting because of the fact that the Democrats polled the largest vote by a wide margin, the La Follette Progressives and the Republicans trailing. The Democrats re-nominated Gov. Albert G. Schmedeman, vigorous supporter of the New Deal. He will be opposed by Phil La Follette, who received the Progressive nomination without contest, and Howard T. Greene, Republican, who defeated former Governor Zimmerman and J. N. Tittmeyer.

John N. Callahan, former national committeeman, was named for the senate by the Democrats, and John B. Chappelle was the unopposed choice of the Republicans. Senator Robert M. La Follette, Jr., was of course nominated by his new party.

RUSSIA was duly admitted to membership in the League of Nations, only three votes in opposition being cast, and then was given a permanent seat in the council of the league. Maxim Litvinov, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, pledged his nation to work through the league for world peace.

Declaring flatly that Russia would give up no attribute of its social system, Litvinov warned the assembly that "peace and security cannot be organized on the basis of shifting sands and verbal promises." It should be established, he said, "that any state is entitled to demand reasonable security from its near and remote neighbors." This, however, should never be interpreted as distrust Litvinov added.

Next day, after a debate on plans to end the war between Paraguay and Bolivia, spokesmen for Russia privately asserted that the danger of war in the Far East has lessened, relations between Japan and Russia having improved.

NOME, the once famous gold city of Alaska, lies in ruins, having been swept by flames with damage estimated at $1,000,000. Four hundred persons were rendered homeless, and most of the food supplies were burned up. Relief vessels with food and medical supplies were rushed to the place and there was no fear of shortage. The government at Washington granted $50,000 in direct assistance and planned other relief measures. The citizens were hurriedly procuring lumber and other materials in the hope of at least partly rebuilding the city before it is isolated by winter ice.

JAMES A. MOFFETT, federal housing commissioner, announced that on November 1 he would begin releasing funds for the construction of at least a million new homes.

Concerning the home modernization and repair phase of the program, the administrator declared that more than 1,000 communities have set up or are setting up committees to direct the program locally. He predicted that by Thanksgiving more than 5,000 municipalities will have established such committees.

Financial support, he said, has come from 7,000 banks, and such loans have been made in all states but three. "From field reports we estimate that one million dollars a day of loans are being made under our plan; and from experience in past community modernization campaigns we are sure that double that amount of cash business is being done."

TOBACCO, which is the third largest crop in the United States, has always been without an organized futures market. But it has one now, for the New York Tobacco Exchange, Inc., on Broad street, has opened for business after two years of preliminary organization work in which the federal department of agriculture cooperated.

The contract basis is United States standard fine cured type 12, grade BAF. There are nine types and numerous grades deliverable under specified differentials under the form of contract that has been adopted. The unit of trading is 10,000 pounds and quotations are in cents and five one-hundredths of a cent per pound. Delivery points have been established to date at Norfolk and Newport News, Va., and Louisville, Ky.

NEW YORK'S city assembly has adopted a lottery scheme for the purpose of raising relief funds, a way having been devised to circumvent the law. The business men and the clergy are protesting violently.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI repeatedly asserts that Italy wants no more war, but he is taking no chances. In an order designed to make Italy an "armed nation," his cabinet has directed that all males above the age of eight and below thirty-three, shall receive military training.

At the same time it was revealed that Italy's farming industry will be brought into strong national organization under the corporative state system, to be inaugurated November 10.

The working class will be welded together in one group and the owner-manager class in another. The two classes will be united in the central corporations. Two major national co-ordinating bodies have been created for the separate groups. These are the Fascist Confederation of Agriculturists, for the owner-managers, and the Fascist Confederation of Agricultural Workers.

If Italy does have a war in the near future, it is likely to be with Jugoslavia. Just now the two nations are quarrelling bitterly. Mussolini is especially vexed because Jugoslavia is harboring 2,500 Austrian Nazis close to the border and not curbing their plans for another push.

AUSTRIA is thoroughly aroused by seemingly authentic reports from Brussels that former Empress Zita intends to establish her residence in Austria, along with her eight children, including Archduke Otto, pretender to the throne of both that country and Hungary.

It was asserted that this Hapsburg family had been granted permission to return as plain citizens if Otto would promise not to seek in any way to bring about restoration of the monarchy.

Quite unofficially, it is said restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy would not be opposed by either France or Italy, but the British foreign office scouted the idea. The little entente nations would be strongly against it but might not hold the Vienna government entirely responsible.

In Vienna a spokesman for the foreign office said that the return to Austria of the Hapsburg family, even as private individuals, is "still impossible."

Some member of the Hapsburg family may be allowed to return to represent the family in the long pending lawsuit over the Hapsburgs' properties, he said, but this is not likely to be Archduke Otto, because of the danger that disturbances might result from his presence. Socialists and labor unions would surely start trouble.

C. A. COHR, chief of the cotton production section of the farm administration, announced that the third cotton "parity" payment due in December would be combined with the second rental payment and that both would be distributed in October. The total thus to be paid out will approximate $72,000,000.

Mr. Cobb said that tenants and share croppers had an interest in the "parity" payment and that to put off payment until December, the usual season for many tenants and renters to move to other farms, would cause unnecessary complications.

W. LAWSON LITTLE, a husky San Francisco youth, has accomplished the feat of capturing the British and American national amateur golf championships in one season. Little has been done only twice before. Little easily defeated David Goldman of Dallas, Texas, in the finals of the national tournament at Brookline, Mass.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted by William Bruckart

Washington.—As plans for the expansion of the New Deal program go on, it becomes more and more evident that the session of congress convening in January is due to take up the question of railroad legislation. Its nature is yet undetermined. Its scope is still veiled in secrecy. There is the certainty, however, that the Roosevelt administration is prepared to present far-reaching proposals dealing in a new way with the railroads of the country.

The first intimation of this probability came recently through a visit to the President by Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of railroads. Mr. Eastman let it be known after an extended conference with the President that railroad legislation was being drafted and that it would be presented to congress with the request that it be placed near the top of the "must" legislation desired by the President. Since Mr. Eastman's visit to the summer white house at Hyde Park, New York, however, it has been next to impossible to discover additional facts respecting the railroad program being worked out by the brain trusters and Mr. Eastman.

On unquestioned authority, nevertheless, it is made to appear that Mr. Eastman, or his professor aides, have an idea that there ought to be another member of the cabinet and that this member ought to be the secretary of transportation. On equally good authority it can be stated that the present plans—programs under the New Deal have proved to be like railroad time-tables, subject to change without notice—as designed to give the federal government additional supervisory authority over the railroads. Indeed, some insiders claim that Mr. Eastman may go as far as proposing that the government buy the railroad properties and lease them back to the railroad corporations for operation. This phase of the program remains wholly undisclosed beyond rumor and gossip, but it seems proper to say that, thus far, there has been no denial issued from any responsible quarter.

It is my understanding that numerous groups in the country are organizing for a bitter fight. It is well known, of course, that the railroads themselves have reorganized their associations into one solid and substantial agency which is to act as their spokesman. Indications are that out of the movement by the railroad managements will come a trade body to be known as the American Railway Institute, which will serve as the spokesman for all of the railroads. Plans call for establishment of headquarters in Washington where the group will be in close contact at all times with the shifting trends of governmental maneuvers respecting the railroads.

Coupled with the certainty that there will be railroad legislation considered by the forthcoming session of congress is a strong renewal of activity among advocates of government ownership. In previous letters, I have reported ownership advocates in and out of the administration were said to be working on plans for legislation designed eventually to result in federal ownership of the transportation systems. How far this has gone cannot now be stated. It can be said definitely, however, that the movement is gaining force and observers well acquainted with the ins and outs of government plans insist that the railroads have a battle on their hands that is larger than the immediate prospect of additional restrictive legislation.

In some quarters in Washington we hear the expression that the administration plans to seek enactment of regulation for the bus lines and other carriers that are in competition with the railroads. This has been tried several times before, but nothing has come of it because congress heretofore has refused to be serious about legislation for control of the bus lines operating over state and national highways. It is to be recalled, though, that congress heretofore have not been as subservient to the Chief Executive as has been the case since the New Deal became operative a year and a half ago. So the extent to which the administration will or can go respecting control of the bus lines seems at this writing to be highly predubitable. Authorities tell me, however, that the Eastman plan, which must be assumed to have Presidential approval, will be comprehensive and of itself, should give an indication of the severity of the fight that is to come.

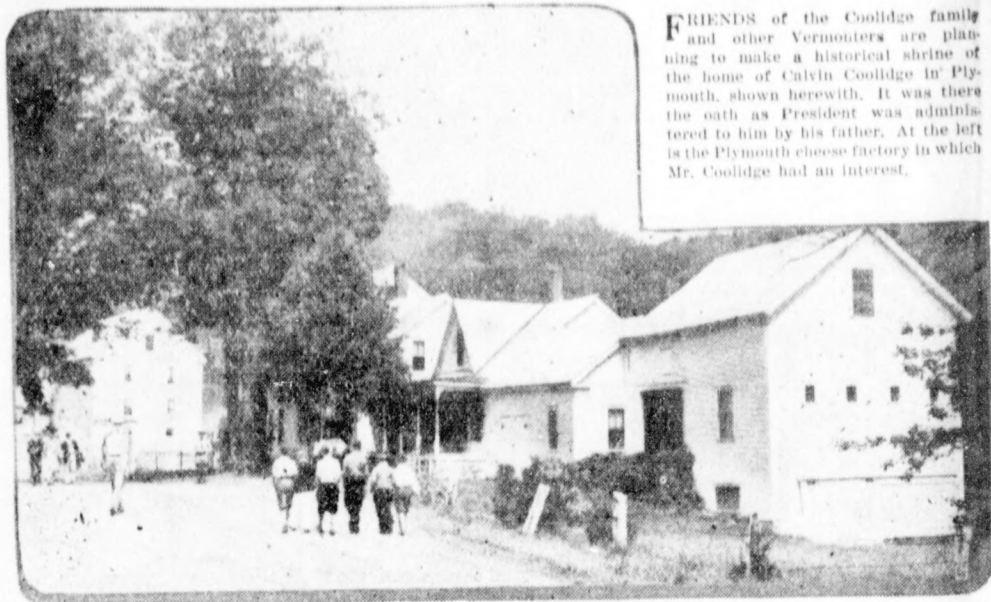

The argument that, I am told, is going to be advanced for further federal encroachment on private management of the railroads has to do with the sorry state in which it is claimed the roads find themselves as a result of the depression. They have borrowed about $400,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, thus using government credit to tide them over. As a result of these borrowings a belief has sprung up that the railroads are unable to finance themselves longer. Railroad corporation statements, however, seem to dispute this belief, but it is always difficult to offset argument of that kind. Government ownership ad-

In Sorry State

The Department of Agriculture has made a complete compilation of statistics showing that farm production in the United States during 1934 was valued at $5,385,000,000, or approximately $653,000,000 greater than in 1932. But the farmers received an additional $271,000,000 in cash payments from the government for co-operation in restricting production in 1933, so that the gross income was around $6,255,000,000. The department's statistics indicate that the farmers, after paying their production expenses, had net income in 1933 of about $2,027,000,000 whereas their income after expenses, in 1932 was only about $1,465,000,000, showing a definite improvement in the farmers' financial status.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

AN UNDESERVED BAD NAME

FROM somewhere in the Old Orchard sounded a clear, "Kow-kow-kow-kow-kow." It was quite unlike any verse Peter had heard that spring and he exclaimed, "Who's that?"

"That's Cuckoo," said Kitty the Catbird. "Do you mean to say you don't know Cuckoo?"

"Of course I know him," retorted Peter. "I had forgotten the sound of his voice, that's all. Tell me, is it true that Mrs. Cuckoo is no better than Sally Sly the Cowbird, and lays her eggs in the nests of other birds?"

"There isn't a word of truth in it," declared Kitty emphatically. "She builds her nest, such as it is, and she looks after her own children. The Cuckoos have been given a bad name because of some good-for-nothing crows of theirs who live across the ocean where Bully the English Sparrow belongs, and who, if all reports are true, really are no better than Sally Sly. It's funny how a bad name bird alighted close to the caterpillars' nest. Above he was brownish gray with just a little greenish tinge. Beneath he was white. His wings were reddish brown. His tail was a little longer than that of Mourner the Dove. The outer feathers were black tipped with white, while the middle feathers were the color of his back. The upper half of his bill was black, but the under half was yellow and from this he was called the Yellow-billed Cuckoo. He has a cousin with an all black bill who is called the Black-billed Cuckoo.

Cuckoo made no sound, but began to pick off the hairy caterpillars and swallow them. When he had eaten all those outside, he tore open the nest and picked out those inside, then he flew off as silently as he had come.

The hollyhocks are gay,

We missed the happy blossoming

Our world seems much more glorious

Our little pear tree grows, we know,

New York Needs Money

Mussolini begins military training for Italian boys at the age of eight years, the idea being to "give boys a passion for military life through frequent contact with armed forces."

The red Indians went even further back. They developed a passion for war and scalp in the square even before the little fighting papoose was born, providing the females with interesting little stone hammers used to crush in the skulls of surviving enemy warriors as the squaws went carefully over the battlefield at dusk.

Sparta trained her boys for killing, even encouraging them to murder, for practice, unarmed helots, as they went to their work before sunrise.

But Sparta was unimportant compared to intelligent Athens, and a few white Puritans easily disposed of the Indians. Intelligence and Justice win wars.

In these days of airplanes and poison gas the warrior with a mere "passion for combat" will soon get more of it than he can digest.

Long ago in Venice was built a fine palace, the "Abbey of St. Gregory." The palace has changed hands and is now being "renovated," with plumbing, bath tubs, showers, electric bells, telephones, radio, that would considerably surprise any ancient abbot.

No "Long Bear" from across the mountains, no roving Hun from beyond the Volga, has appropriated the religious palace to other uses. The new tenant is a very pretty slender American girl named Barbara Hutton, who brings with her the proceeds of a five and ten cent store system that can quickly change any old abbey into a modern, fashionable "dilatatory domicile." She brings also a husband, a "Georgian prince," named Mdivani, by-product of the five and ten cent stores, who will know how to make the old abbey "ring with merriment." Strange old ghosts will creep cautiously over highly polished, newly waxed floors and say to them: "Well, live and learn."

A young lady, christened "Greta Gustafson," known to many by her invented name of Greta Garbo, celebrated her twenty-eighth birthday recently. As a young girl she worked in a store in Stockholm, Sweden, and here she has made and earned ten thousand dollars a week. Her birthday is mentioned because this queer young lady did not "throw" any great party on the edge of any costly California swimming pool. "Just a quiet evening at home," said she, and stayed at home to think of swiftly passing time. That helps to explain her success. Es bildet ein Talent sich in der Stille.

New York City must feed 400,000 and more hungry families, also pay their gas, light and rent bills. The city has been paying out $17,000,000 a month, or at the rate of $204,000,000 a year, almost half what it cost to run the whole national government before the big war started.

The problem, "How to continue getting the money," has been temporarily solved by a three-cornered agreement between the mayor and board of aldermen. Business in New York City will pay a "relief tax" of one-tenth of 1 per cent. Those that pay income tax to the national government will pay to New York City relief 15 per cent of what they pay the government.

The world's richest city will also organize a public lottery and invite citizens to gamble, profits to help public relief.

Another scientific discovery, most important if it stands the test of cold experiment, is revealed to the American Chemical society by Dr. Ellice McDonald, director of cancer research laboratories. The kidneys of men and animals produce an enzyme, or biological catalytic, called "phosphatase," that effectively resists the action of cancer. Human beings afflicted with cancer lack the phosphatase in the kidneys and have too much of it in the blood stream. Man's intelligence eventually will conquer all diseases.

President Roosevelt will be mildly interested in an article published in Mussolini's newspaper, Popolo d'Italia, because Mussolini wrote the article himself. It says the President hasn't succeeded in his "four fundamental objects, but it is too soon to conclude that experiments he is undertaking are not successful."

Scientists have found what they call the Rosetta stone of heredity. That famous stone, as you know, with the same words cut on its surface in various languages, made possible the reading of Egyptian hieroglyphics. The heredity Rosetta stone is a giant chromosome, with strings of the queer little genes that control heredity.

Many Americans take Communism in the United States most seriously. Governor Green of Rhode Island ever says his state is "facing a Communist uprising." Fortunately, under the worst of conditions, the state's militia, backed by the army of the United States and its airplanes, should be able to deal with that situation.

SHOCK FATAL TO HEART FAILS TO STRIKE AT ONCE

A nurse who walked, smiled and said she was all right after she had been killed was the victim of a recent accident at the Wimbledon hospital, near London, says the Springfield Republican. She was helping to take an X-ray photograph of the broken shoulder blade of a bedridden woman. Because of the patient's condition the usual X-ray room and table were not used, but portable apparatus was set up at the bedside and experts were at work making the necessary exposures. During one of these the nurse apparently forgot momentarily the dangers of high-voltage electricity and stretched out her hand toward the bed as though to rearrange a pillow or do something else to make the patient comfortable. The extended hand came too close to one of the electric terminals and a flash like miniature lightning shot out and struck it.

The nurse jumped backward, but smiled and said that she was unhurt. The physicians therefore proceeded with the X-ray exposure. In a few moments, however, the nurse spoke of feeling queer, collapsed suddenly and was found to be dead. The shock had killed without her knowing it. For the few moments that she survived she was literally one of the living dead. Although the incident apparently is unique in medical records, physiologists explain it by the way in which such electric shocks sometimes act on the victim's heart.

This is to set the heart muscle to quivering violently, but irregularly, replacing the usual regular contraction which is necessary for the heart-beat. Evidently this happened to the unfortunate nurse's heart, although the electric shock did not affect her brain or nerves. She felt nothing until the stoppage of the heart-beat decreased the blood supply of the brain and caused unconsciousness.

If you feel low-

SCOUTING

Scouting is one of the most beneficial field of training known for boys. It offers a program of interesting, useful things for boys TO DO in their leisure time. Scouting is characterized directly by Congress and the President of the United States is its "Honorary President."

Scouting gives boys a chance to serve their community. Its activities not only give pleasure and knowledge, but they prepare the boys to meet community emergencies.

Scouting helps the Scout to value the great heritage which the past has brought to him in the life and ideals of America, and Scouting points the way of good citizenship through service.

Here is the Scout Oath, and it would be a good one for everybody to adopt: "On my honor I will do my best—To do my duty to God and country, and to obey the Scout Law—To help other people at all times—To keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight—and the Scout Law is always be trustworthy, loyal, helpful, friendly, courteous, kind, obedient, cheerful, thrifty, brave, clean and reverent.

Scouting teaches the value of time and the use of it thriftily and with a purpose. Scouting is a great world brotherhood of boys and men, and, as a President of the United States has stated, is one of the big forces today making for world peace.

All you parents should encourage your boys to become Boy Scouts. There's not a finer organization for training of the hand and body. Scouting strives to build boys of character with clean, healthy bodies.

WAR PROFITS

"War is a racket, possibly the oldest, easily the most profitable, surely the most vicious. It is the only racket of international scope," says Major General Smedley D. Butler.

Only a small "inside" group knows what the war racket is all about. Out of war a few people make a huge profit. Nations acquire additional territory (only to have it exploited by the few for their own benefit).

On the other side of the picture we have a horrible accounting of newly-placed graves, mangled bodies, shattered minds, broken hearts and homes, economic instability and back-breaking taxation of the masses for many generations.

Still, the countries in Europe are "choosing sides" in preparation for another war. France and Russia stand side by side. France, Italy and Austria are striving for a similar agreement.

Even over here, with foreign nations owing us millions in war debts, there is talk of war. When Japan and Russia fought in 1904, the United States backed Japan, because capital from this country was financing Japan.

But, today, the story is different. We are being poisoned against the Japanese, to protect China's "open door" to us. Our trade in China is about $90,000,000 a year. Too, we have spent and have private investments in the Philippines totaling $800,000,000. And to protect these we are being stirred up to hate Japan and to go to war. Meanwhile some of the foreign nations are breeding hate and greed in the hearts of their people for the United States. From such insidious propaganda wars started.

"Yes, they are getting ready for another war," Major General Butler declared. "War like any other racket pays high dividends to the very few. But what does it profit the masses?" Major General Butler contends that the only way to stop war is by taking the profit out of war. And the only way to do that is by conscription of capital before conscription of the nation's manhood.

A WEEK OF PLEASURE

By Ole Dave

I quit off last week where I was taking in the night life at Chicago, during my recent visit to the Exposition there.

Sunday morning, who should roll up in front of the house but my life time friend and pal, Leroy Nowlin, whom I chummed with at Martin, Tenn., where he lived until March 19, 1919, when he and his family moved to Valparaiso, Ind. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Will T. Nowlin and a brother of Taylor and Vivian Nowlin. Leaving Gary, Ind., Sunday morning we went directly to Valparaiso (as it is called there) to spend the day and Monday. There we got to see how the northern farmer does his work. Most every farmer in that part farms on a more extensive scale than they do in these parts. Farms there run from 100 to several hundred acres with only one or two attending it. In this place there was a farm of 252 acres tended by only one man and a helper. Tractors and all kinds of machinery going to make up the balance of the labor on the farms. These people are well known in this section having lived in Martin for 20 odd years and having relatives in Fulton. All were in the best of health and enjoying life abundantly.

Coming back to Gary on Monday afternoon we took dinner and before long we were on the road to Crown Point, Ind., the famous spot where John Dillinger made his escape with the wooden pistol. There we were carried on the trail Dillinger took when he left the jail, a four story building one block from the square south. Traveling north, at the rear of the jail and garage for about 50 steps, he went in the back of the garage and took the car. Thinking we had seen all there was to be seen here we started back. Arriving at the court square we were shown the room in the court house where Dadoh Valentino bought his marriage license; immediately across the street we were shown the room in which he "got hooked."

Monday night we went to Chicago being a newspaperman I headed for the Chicago Tribune building to inspect their editorial offices and plant. Altho it was after visiting hours we were admitted and shown around. The large presses for printing the paper, the rotogravure section, "funny papers" and magazine section were extremely interesting. The large battery of Linotype machines for type-setting was amazing. We enjoyed our visit immensely.

Tuesday morning we were up bright and early and journeyed to the plants of Swift & Co., where we were special guests of W. P. Ayers, local manager of Swift & Co. plant in Fulton. There we met Mr. Gifford, head of the produce department, who after a short conversation turned us over to F. M. Simpson of the Commercial research Department, and who is also a Southerner. He wanted to know how long we could be with them, and we were invited to dinner with them in their large and magnificent dining room which is for the office force of approximately 1500. Their office building is the largest individual office building in the U. S. Mr. Simpson turned us over to Mr. Matthews who carried us through the entire plant, requiring one hour and thirty minutes. He showed us and explained every move of the entire force of 21,000 employees.

From here we went to the Field Museum where we saw everything there was to see in about four hours. But of course everything was not explained in detail in that time. Next we went to Shedd Aquarium to see every kind of fish imaginable. Beauty in all its splendor was there. Fish of every kind, color, shape and size were there. From there we went to the Fair where we really took it in, spending Tuesday, Tuesday night, Wednesday and Wednesday night. Going to all the principal points of interest.

Yes, we got to see Sally Rand and her famous (No not a Fan Dance, but a Bubble Dance). She evidently lost her fan and had to resort to the Bubble. This was one of the most beautiful scenes on a stage I have ever seen. Then back home and work.

PALESTINE HOMEMAKERS

Mrs. Harry Murphy was hostess to the Palestine Homemakers Club at their regular meeting. Friday afternoon. Twenty-three members were present and three visitors, Mrs. Ruby Wright, Miss Helen King and Miss Caroline Caldwell.

The foods leaders, Mrs. Gus Donoho and Mrs. Leslie Nugent, discussed the common foods in which are found a high per cent of vitamins A and B, and their value as body builders and aid in resistance of common diseases. Miss Anna Culton, the home agent, gave some timely hints on care of the lawn and preparing for fall planting of bulbs. Mrs. Clyde Burnett read an interesting article on Associated Country Women of the World. Delicious sandwiches, cookies and tea were served by the hostess.

SPEED OF ELECTRICITY PLAYS ODD TRICKS WITH TIME AND DISTANCE

Today Talks With Tomorrow by Telephone—Electric Waves Reach Mars in 20 Minutes

This is an era of speed. Faster and faster go our automobiles, our airplanes, our boats, our trains. Yet of all speedy things on earth, the swiftest have been here since the world began: electric waves and light waves. They travel at a rate which would take them around the earth at the equator seven and one-half times in one second.

Electric waves, of which radio waves are one manifestation, travel at this very high speed through space. When electric waves travel along wires widely separated on poles, the speed is practically equal to that of free space. When electric waves travel along wires closely packed together, as in telephone cables, the speed is materially reduced. There are several different types of telephone cable, and the speed of transmission is different for each type. It may be 199,000 miles per second, or only 10,000 miles per second. Even the latter speed seems instantaneous to the telephone user, as indeed it is for all practical purposes.

The very high speed of electric impulses is one of the factors which makes the telephone such a useful substitute for face-to-face conversation.

From New York to Sydney, Australia, by radio telephone circuit it is a distance of about 14,000 miles. If, instead of telephoning, one could converse with Sydney, one could have a very high speed of electric impulses is one of the factors which makes the telephone such a useful substitute for face-to-face conversation.

about loud enough so that Australia could hear the sound waves, it would require about 18 hours for the sound waves of the voice to reach Australia from New York and another 18 hours for the answer to come back by sound. Yet in 1/13th of a second, the telephoned "Hello" from New York is heard in Sydney. In 1/13th of a second, sound travels about 80 feet. So it might be said that, by the swift flight of electric waves, 14,000 miles of space is squeezed into 1/13th of a second.

Time and space, so annihilated, play some queer tricks on us. When chilly blasts blow in this country, bathers are diving into the surf at Sydney. Men banded in fur coats talk with those slipping in the surf. Whatever day it is in New York, it may be tomorrow in Australia. If at nine o'clock on a Monday evening, someone in New York calls a friend in Melbourne, he might reach the called person at his club, attending a regular Tuesday luncheon.

From a mundane point of view, radio waves are space-spanning and time annihilating. Much is heard about the man and the message from Mars. If we did communicate with the man in Mars by radio, the conversation would be somewhat stilted, even if we talked in English. For the radio waves to reach Mars, 14,000,000 miles would be reached in 20 minutes. At another time of year, when the planets are in a different configuration, 20 minutes would be the time it would be quite a bashful conversation.

versary celebration starts at 7:30 o'clock. Come early and get your seat. All fiddlers are urged to be present and play for the award. The following progressive business firms of Fulton are co-operating with Kentucky Home Camp No. 11351, in this celebration:

M. W. GARDNER REACHES FOUR SCORE YEARS

YOUR HEALTH

by C.W. CURLIN, M.D.
FULTON, KENTUCKY

THE STORY OF JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

It is said that John D. Rockefeller, reputed to be one of the wealthiest men in the world, developed a very troublesome stomach ailment during his early fifties. Everything money and influence could do was done for him, but nothing made his stomach work normally, so that he could eat and live as he had in the past. The story goes that he offered to pay any doctor $1,000,000 if he would get his stomach in such condition that he could eat anything he cared to. While his stomach never reached a state where he could eat any and everything, when and where he wished, he did improve by heeding his physician's advice, by observing the laws of health, eating the proper food for his condition, exercising and resting as he should, so that he has lived past the ninety year mark in comparative comfort, able to attend to his business and do a world of good for his fellow man.

This story vividly illustrates the condition of thousands and thousands of people, who have had some minor ailment, but instead of seeing their doctor early, they have let themselves drag along until some irreparable damage has occurred. The human body will stand lots of abuse and still hit on enough cylinders to carry the individual along without pain or apparent illness, but sooner or later some organ gives way, then there is a stampede to the doctors and drug stores. Many times the curable stage of condition has passed, and the damage done materially shortens the victim's life or renders his remaining years devoid of happiness.

To obviate such conditions as detailed above, it is absolutely necessary that all abnormal conditions of the body be investigated early and properly cared for. The best way to do this is to have a competent doctor thoroughly examine you every year. By so doing if any cogs or screws are slipping in the body machinery such conditions are recognized early, before serious damage, and the proper steps can be taken to remove the cause and start repair.

REXALLS WIN DOUBLEHEADER

The Rexalls wound up their 1934 season with a double win over Pierce Sunday 12 to 1 and 12 to 11. Shag Weaver allowed only six scattered hits, while his mates were making it look more like a track meet than a ball game. Buckingham got six for nine in the two games, while Maddox dove in ten runs.

In the second game, everyone on the Rexall outfield tried his hand at pitching and Weaver and Merryman played every position. The second game was a thriller despite the high score. Going into the last inning behind, Buckingham doubled to score two, and when Hall singled Buckingham came in with the winning run as Bas'am came into Jerusalem.

The Rexalls had a very successful season, considering all games were played away from home, winning eleven and losing twelve. The team wishes to express their appreciation of all donations of transportation, uniforms, baseballs, publicity, etc. Batteries: First game—Rexalls, Weaver and Merryman; Pierce—Ferguson and Pannet. Second game—All hands and Merryman and Weaver and Reeves; Pierce—Robertson and Gardner.

NEWS SPOTLIGHT AT FULTON HIGH SCHOOL

Freshman News, Kathleen Winters
There have been a few Freshman boys showing up every morning a little late. It looks like football is too strenuous an exercise. What's the matter boys; can't you take it?

The student body held a pep meeting Thursday morning. The enthusiasm was running high and a stone deaf person could have heard the yells. Friday morning in Chapel Mr. Holland got up and made the customary announcements and then called on certain ones of the football boys to make speeches. The Freshmen feel left out because he didn't call on one of our boys. Coach Powell also made a short talk.

Our hopes were fulfilled Friday night when the Bulldogs beat Hornbeck 20-0. The Freshman class was well represented by James Thomas Nannery and Neal Leony. Both played an unusually good game.

The yells that were given at the game were good and loud but the Freshmen did not have a cheer leader. I don't know what was the matter unless our cheer leaders were timid. One of them stood on the other side of the field and the assistant wouldn't lead the yells. We hope the Freshman class will be represented in every game as well as they were last Friday night.

Sophomore News, Virginia Whyne
It seems that Mr. Holland has succeeded in scaring the Sophomores almost to death. When he asks us questions in Geometry class, before the answer is completed he has said "Aw, baloney, preposterous!" May we'll get over it.

There was only one Sophomore on the football field Friday night. We are hoping to have at least two in the line-up this Friday.

The other day in the commercial arithmetic class Mrs. Butterworth wrote the word "percent" on the board. She asked a certain boy the meaning of the word. Waymon answered, "Well, I reckon it means how much you get for a penny."

Junior News, Leon Davis
John L. Jones, the mighty guard of the Bulldogs, demands a position on the team this Friday night or else he might tear the Bulldogs into tiny shreds. Both of the ends, Carver and Byars, played a head-up game Friday night, slipping up behind the ball carrier and laying him to the ground when necessary.

Edwards, Cooke, and Scott, three of the galloping backfield men carried the ball like they do watermelons when they make a raid on some unsuspecting neighbor's patch. Roy Hamby, a fine young guard, laid his opponent to the ground the other night and will be found in there doing the same this Friday.

The Juniors with their merchandise will be at the game Friday night. Chewing gum, candy and cold drinks will be sold, proceeds to be used for the Senior-Junior banquet.

Senior News, Virginia Fleming
Jeanette Watts, active member of the 4-H Club and the Senior Class, deserves a column devoted to her work this summer in 4-H circles. She has received several honors which have been offered by the county and state. The first of these was a trip to Lexington given by the county for winning first place with the Demonstration team. She won second place in the county style show with a power pull muslin evening frock. The latter part of June she attended the Junior Leaders conference in Princeton, N. J., and was elected secretary. At the 4-H Club camp she was presented with a medal for leadership, sportsmanship and ability in club work. She received word Tuesday that a dress which she entered in the dress making contest at the Kentucky State Fair had won fifth place. This may be regarded as an exceptional honor for it was competing with four for five hundred garments.

Professor Cheek is displaying an exhibit this week of his many beautiful shells which he has been at working gathering for the past several months. He has novelties from all parts of the world. Prof. Cheek spoke to the student body Tuesday at chapel period, and revealed many interesting facts about his collection.

SOUTH FULTON SCHOOL

The South Fulton basketball tournament resulted in victory for the Sophomore girls over the Seniors by a score of 13 to 12. In the boys division the Junior were winners over the Seniors by a score of 1 to 9. An all star team composed of H. P. Allen, Robert Furlong, Paul Nanny James Cooke and some of the teachers, Roberts, Moore and Priestley defeated the champion 20 to 13. Another game will be played Friday between the all stars and the champions of the girls division.

The Sophomore class is giving a lemon squeeze party in the Home Economics room at South Fulton Friday night. Everyone invited.

Some of the classes have elected the kings and queens for the Halloween carnival. Some of those elected are Katie Margaret Allen and Stanley Mills in the Sophomore class Louise Jones and Larry Taylor in the Junior Class, LaDonne McClain and James Warren in the eighth grade. Every class is working hard to win the crown for their King and Queen.

Superintendent Priestley has promised a half holiday to the class in high school and the one in the grades that has the best attendance from now until December.

Several former graduates have been back this year to visit. Among these are Marguerite Parker, Helen Sharp, Ruth Tucker, Margaret Valentine, Gaithor Ferguson, Fred Payne, Martin Henry Warren, Chas. Allen Williams, Robert Furlong, H. P. Allen, John Colley, Harold Holiday and James Bushart.

ALL-STAR CAST SEEN IN FOX "CAROLINA"

The most important all-star cast assembled by Fox Film since "State Fair" is complete with the signing of two of the screen's most popular young leading men and the assignment of Fox Film's newest feminine discovery to "Carolina." The roster of stars is made up of Janet Gaynor, Lionel Barrymore, Robert Young, Henrietta Crossman, Richard Cromwell, Mona Barrie and Stepin Fetchit. The three most recently named were Robert Young, Richard Cromwell, and Mona Barrie.

Robert Young continues his ascent toward stardom that has been marked by outstanding performances in "Saturday's Millions" and "Today We Live," by winning the star role opposite Janet Gaynor. Richard Cromwell, on the strength of his work in "Hoopla," plays his rival.

Mona Barrie, brilliant Australian actress recently discovered by Fox Film, won her role by her outstanding performance in "Sleepers East." "Carolina" is based on the Theater Guild stage success by Paul Green and was adapted for the screen by Reginald Berkeley, screen author of "Cavalcade." It is said to afford Janet Gaynor the most dramatically emotional role of her career, and will be presented on a scale to realize the full sweep of this story of the new South. It is scheduled for an engagement at Warner's Orpheum Theater beginning Sunday for two days.

EVERYDAY NEW YORK

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK.—Nice time of night for a bat to fly through my open window. Just as I finished a haunted house mystery, too. I suppose all day the thing has been hanging by his toes and thinking: "This will be a dandy night to fly around and frighten Odd McIntyre."

It's a good thing my wife is house visiting on Long Island. If she were here Lily Pons would have to reach for a new high note. The only reason I have the covers over my head is on account of the chill. Every August I sleep that way. Every Autumn I do. Ask anybody.

An evening alone and I have to draw something like this. I suppose when I reach for the paper in the morning there'll be a zebra in the hall. I can always go to sleep writing imaginary headlines: Girl jumps 10 stories. Ship Rams Yacht. Bloodsucking Vampire Attacks. ... A moron could think up something better than that.

I remember reading a man's hair turned white when a bat got into it. Mine is just muddy gray anyway. I'd like it white. And I'll probably wind up with a stiff straight-up pompadour. Something for the Mrs. when she arrives—a permanent fright wig.

Doesn't seem to be rustling anymore. If I have to have a bat around, I don't want the moody, sulky sort. Wonder how much he measures from tip to tip. Looked an eagle to me at first glance. There goes a crash. It's on the perfume table. A tom-boy, eh? From what I've heard of bats a little perfume won't hurt. The deaf dog is a help. For the memory book. An evening with a blind bat and a deaf dog. Life is certainly grand to me. Work my fingers to the bone and the best I get is playing host to a bat.

I guess it thinks I'm scared stiff. Well, look the way I'm wiggling my toes. Getting sort of smothery. I am. That's the fix the world is in. A fellow slowly asphyxiating sticks his head up for air and gets a bat in his hair. Can't even die with your boots on anymore. I'll take one quick peep anyway. There it is hanging to a curtain pole. Still putting, eh? Our first quarrel. I suppose it expects me to get up and cook it something. Maybe it would like to look through my Chicago Fair pen knife. Hang there and sulk for all I care.

Napoleon had to fight off bats on St. Helena. Flocks of them. And here I am complaining over just one teentwenty-one. I'll wave friendly like. Yoo-hoo! There's probably a nice streak in even a bat. It pays no attention. Dumbest thing I ever saw. No more waves for it. Not even a wavelet.

It looks as though things have settled down to an endurance test between us. It hanging there and me under the covers to a decision. I'm willing to meet the thing half way. Anything is better than this I wasn't going to mention it, but my heart's acting funny. Flutters a while m-r-r-r and then into slow tick-tock. I need air. So does the bat. Lots of it. Why can't it go on home now? It's had its visit. This place wasn't built for a bat roost. So long, I'll see you around. Don't act as though you noticed anything but I think it has flown across the room. If I called on anybody and they hid under the covers I'd take the hint. A fine how-do-for my wife to come home and find an old bat in my bed-room.

Maybe it thinks I'm just eccentric. Probably in other rooms where it has flown everybody begins to scream and carry on. Why should I get up and make a fuss. I'm better than any bat. Also I'm not a drone. Every day I'm up bright and early. What has a bat contributed to the art? Low skulking things flying into rooms unwanted at night. And what I've heard about what they carry on their wings.

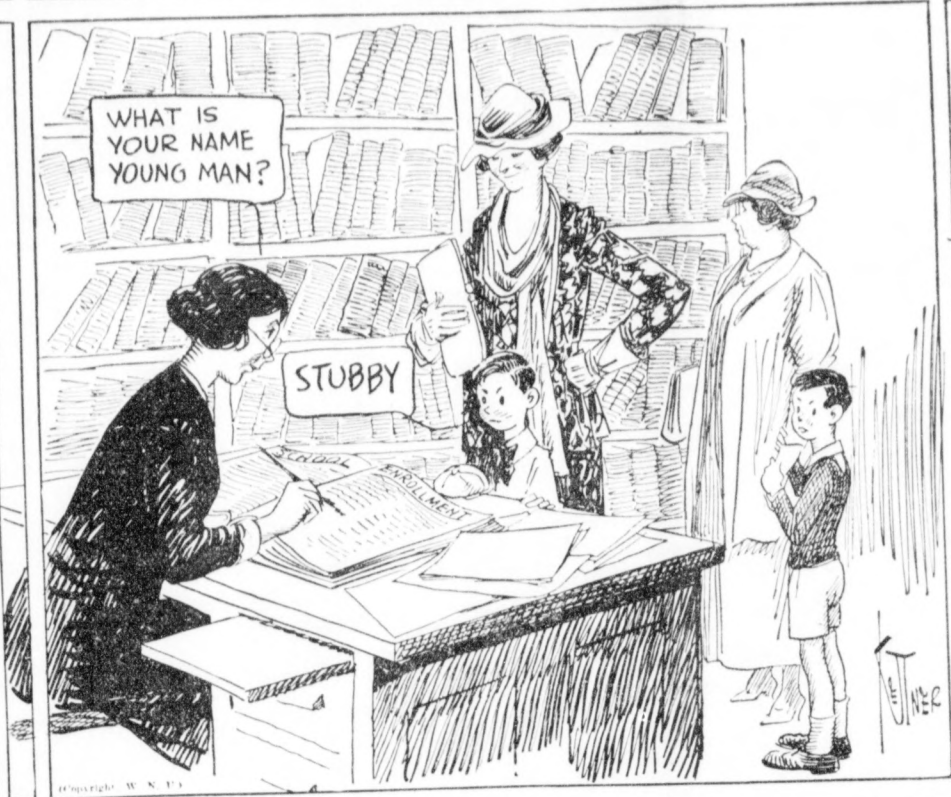

So long as it seems to think it owns the place, I wonder if it cared if I got a drink of water. I'll take a look again. It's gone. Probably hiding in some of my clothes. It will be my luck to dress all up, go some where and have a bat fly out of my pocket. Still no one will think anything. I've always been a card. No party is complete without me jumping out of a dark place with a feather duster. Or jerking a chair from under someone.

This hiding is cowardly. Where's the McIntyre spirit? The pioneer push? Off with the covers. Here stands the gladiator. That is for a second. A window shade flew suddenly up. And I made it across the twin beds in one bound and nothing flat. That bat thinking it could fly!

Scraps of Humor

ONE WAY TO HAVE PEACE

Briggs saw his neighbor walking up the garden path with a trombone tucked under his arm.

"Hallo! Been buying a trombone?" he asked.

"No; borrowed it from Robinson next door," said the other.

Briggs looked mystified.

"But surely you can't play, can you?" he asked.

"No," said his neighbor, with a smile of satisfaction, "neither can Robinson while I've got it."—Stray Stories.

Hopeless Case

Clerk—You promised me a raise if I was satisfactory.

Employer—But you are not, sir. No man is who reminds me of a promise.

Poor Kid!

Old Lady—Aren't you ashamed to be seen smoking cigarettes?

Urchin—Well, not can yer do, lady, when the ole man pinches yer pipe?—London Weekly Telegraph.

The Loafer!

"How did that fella get out of taking his turn at cooking?"

"He agreed only to cook the fish we catch."—Newark (Ohio) Advocate.

Not So Good

"I told you that was a used car when you bought it," declared the salesman.

"Yeh, I know," retorted the victim, "but you forgot to add 'up' after 'used.'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ABOUT AN AVERAGE

"Do you often forget to mail the letters your wife gives you?"

"Not any oftener than she forgets to take the studs out of my dress shirt before sending it to the laundry."

Small Mercies

"Hello!" exclaimed the investor, who was reading the third quarter report, "a reduction, by George! That's good news!"

"What? a reduction in profit good news?"

"Oh, no, not in profit—in deficit."—Boston Transcript.

On Paved Street

Binks—Where did you go last week in your new car?

Jinks—(gloomily)—To jail.

GARDEN CROP

"What did you raise in your garden?"

"Nothing. Some kids in the neighborhood raised Cain in it."

Unemployed Wife

Her Father—Harold seems to have an exemplary character. I don't see why you say your marriage to him was a hideous mistake.

Mrs. Junebride—It's just that, I married him to reform him and now I find that he never needed reforming.

Should Be

Dinner—This salmon isn't nearly so nice as that I had a week ago.

Waiter—It should be, sir; it's from the same fish.

Isn't It the Truth?

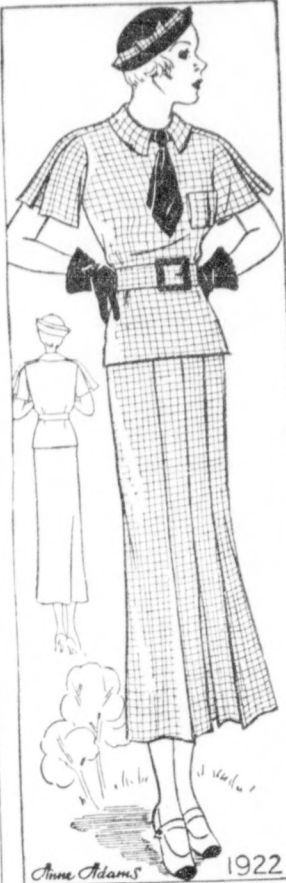

He—You are always wishing for what you haven't got.

She—Well, what else can one wish for?

TWO-PIECE FROCK HAS REAL CHARM

Pattern 1922

This is one of those tremendously chic two-piece frocks which do their stuff so quietly and subtly you have to stop and look carefully to find out where all that style really comes from. Front pleats that all turn in, are one of its clever little tricks, and pleted sleeves that grow into a devastatingly smart epaulet on the shoulders are another. The rest of it is mostly very good proportions and a demure and becoming little round collar. The original was made of red and white checked ging-ham and worn with navy blue accessories. It was stunning!

Pattern 1922 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30. Size 16 takes 5 yards 36-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York city.

TOUGH

Blinks—To hear him talk you'd think up some bigger whoppers from the depression.

Jinks—Yeah! He feels abused because he now has to mow his own lawn instead of hiring it done so he will be free to get his exercise playing golf.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Plenty of Milk

Jane is very fond of milk, and when she returned home from a visit on the farm she was relating her experiences, especially in having more milk than she could drink.

"You just ought to see the lot of milk they've got," said the child.

"They have three whole cows full every day."—Indianapolis News.

Her Party Role

Dorothy's mother was having a party and Dorothy was playing with a little girl friend in the neighborhood when she was overheard saying:

"Well, goodby, Jean; I've got to go home now and say something cute for the party."—Exchange.

And Not Always Politely

"People are not nearly so formal as they used to be."

"No," said Mrs. Chuggins. "Nearly every time I go out in the car policemen to whom I have never been introduced don't hesitate to speak to me."

You Know the Kind

"There's a decided uniformity in the contents of my post this morning, Julia."

"How do you mean?"

"All my letters begin with the same word—'Unless.'"

Her Paleness

"You should take this mulberry-colored dress, madame. It would suit you, as you are so pale."

"But I'm not usually so pale. I am shocked at the price."
