The remains of Lieut. Chas. E. Smith arrived in Fulton from St. Louis Sunday morning, accompanied by Lieut. Edward B. Rice,_minor_of Lieut. Smith, his son, Rev. H. I. Patterson, Marshall Advertising Inc., St. Louis, Field Leader, and the decedent's wife, who gave a touching address and the accidents caused when the casket was eased into the grave.

At the same time they saw him step out of his cockpit and the intention of spotting his parachute, when he was clear of the roofs of the plane. However, as the smoke to jump, he was held and to save did not get away from the plane, nor get protection during the first engaged last week in a contest for the position of chief pilot at the Chaffee Field, St. Louis, is in the forward cockpit of the airplane for the purpose of recognizing the organization in the event of an emergency. The only thing that prevented the pilots from taking advantage of it was the fact that the plane was not a commercial one.

However, as he sought to jump, the only thing that prevented the pilots from taking advantage of it was the fact that the plane was not a commercial one.

WE INVITE CRITICISM

We are seeking constantly to improve and improve the quality of service performed by the Illinois Central System, and we are glad to have our patrons cooperate with us by giving us the benefit of their constructive criticisms and suggestions.

Our patrons are entitled to the best in transportation—a passenger service that will transport them safely and with a minimum of speed and comfort and is a freight service that will render prompt and dependable delivery of their freight. These are the only forms of service. The new equipment we purchase embodies the latest and most improved designs. Our locomotives, cars, trucks, and other facilities are given frequent and close inspection to make sure that they are always in first-class condition. Employes are selected with care and thoroughly instructed in their duties, and their united effort is devoted to the provision of a courteous, efficient service that will be pleasing to our patrons.

The merit of this service, our patrons, we are a position to judge of our service in maintaining the highest standard of work. Although we try to give every detail of our service the most effective supervision, it is only reasonable to assume that it may sometimes appear imperfections that are not immediately noticeable to us. We request our patrons, without fear of reprehension, to point them out to us if practicable. This is why we invite constructive criticisms and suggestions. A patron who is incomparably impressed with our work is a patron of a service which he has experienced, and he will not hesitate to let us know of such satisfaction as well as his fellow patrons, if he will make the fault known to us on that corrective measures may be applied.

We tender our most complimentary letters and express our esteem and appreciation for your suggestions and criticisms. We are glad to respond to our earnest invitation, because we realize the value of learning that we are rendering a service that is not up to the standard of the highest degree. We are prepared at all times to make such changes as will improve the service and to act promptly upon such suggestions and criticisms as may be submitted by our patrons.

We are grateful for the good reputation which we have in the public esteem, and we are always willing to do what is within our power to increase it. Constructive criticisms and suggestions are invited.

His word is his bond!

A "personal guarantee" means very little to you unless you know the man who makes it.

Ninety per cent of the things bought for your home are selected by the lady member of the firm. She is the purchasing agent. Most men admit that she is a capable buyer, and the reason is this: She must be shown — convinced by proof—that an article is what she needs and is worth the price!

For that reason, she sees the advantage of dealing with a local merchant—a man whose "personal guarantee of satisfaction" means just what it says.

She knows that what he advertises in this paper is entitled to her consideration. Because she has confidence in her neighbor—the local dealer—she can safely invest the family funds in what he guarantees.
