THE FULTON COUNTY NEWS

"A Community Newspaper—With Superior Coverage and Greater Reader Interest"

VOLUME TWO

FULTON, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1934.

NUMBER THIRTY-SEVEN.

Civic Interests of Fulton Encourage Railroad Support

In this issue of The Fulton County News the business interests of Fulton endorse the new low express rates on the Illinois Central System on less than carload freight, and urge that closer co-operation be adhered to between the railroad, railroad employees and the community as a whole.

"Pull With the Railroads Back to Prosperity" is the title of public-spirited advertisements which should serve as a civic-awakening movement. The community is solidly behind the railroads of Fulton, and it is the purpose of local concerns to promote closer harmony and co-operation between the community and the railroad.

Fulton is "the Hub" of the Illinois Central System which offers the best in transportation over a wide area, is the theme of the civic program. Fulton is unsurpassed in this entire territory in railroad facilities and is more centrally located than any other point on this division. The names of the following firms appear in the advertisements running in The Fulton County News this week:

A. C. Butts & Sons, Buck's Pool Parlor, Lowe's Cafe, Browder Milling Co., L. Conner Grocery, Parisian Laundry, Sawyer Bros., Illinois Oil Co., Bennetts Drug Store, A. ### THE ROTARY CLUB

W. R. Butt, chairman of the health and welfare league of Fulton, made an earnest talk about the work of the league. He said that this organization had a deficit last year, and unless something was done to increase appropriations for activities, the deficit would be even larger this year. He asked the co-operation of the Rotary Club in the annual seal sale to take place soon. Harvey McCampbell, representing the livestock bracket, was introduced as a new member of the club. Rev. C. N. Jolley, Vaughn Waymon of Mayfield and Walter Davis of Vinita, Okla., were visitors.

Rev. C. H. Warren Quits Pastorate

Rev. C. H. Warren, who has been pastor of the First Baptist Church here for more than fifteen years, turned in his resignation following the service Sunday morning. Next Sunday brings to a close his service at the church here, and he will go to the First Baptist Church in Greenville, Ky., where he will continue his labors in behalf of the church. He and his family plan to leave Fulton for Greenville some time next week.

Although the church here has not officially accepted his resignation, it will only be a formality for Rev. Warren states that his resignation is final, as he feels it better that a change be made. His successor will be chosen at a business meeting of the church.

Rev. Warren came to Fulton in April, 1919, from Jackson, Tenn., where he had been pastor of the West Jackson Baptist Church, following his graduation from Union University at Jackson. He was a sincere and faithful worker for the church, and for his community. It was through his efforts that the congregation built the new Baptist church edifice here, and moved into the new building in 1924. He was an ardent worker in interest of the schools here, and served on the board of education for four years. He took an active part in setting up the relief program in Fulton, and his efforts were unstinted in behalf of the relief problems. The church and the community will feel the loss of Rev. Warren, and miss his valiant efforts in improving his church and the community, and it is with regret that his friends bid him goodbye.

THRILLING ZANE GREY FILM STIRRING STORY OF CONQUEST OF WEST

One of the most stirring epic adventures in the history of the conquest of the West comes to the screen of the Warner's Orpheum Theatre Sunday. It is the thrilling Paramount filmization of Zane Grey's "Wagon Wheels" featuring Randolph Scott, Gail Patrick, Monte Blue and Raymond Hatton. Adapted from the well-known novel "Fighting Caravans" by Zane Grey, the picture is a stirring account of the famous trip from Independence, Mo., to Oregon in 1844, when the sturdy, adventurous American pioneers first went out to homestead the new country.

The natural scenery of the Rockies and the forest backgrounds, all filmed in their natural settings are among the most impressive and beautiful ever brought to the screen. And the dramatic scenes, including the fights with the Indians, are so capably directed and handled that it is not difficult to believe they are real.

SWING INTO ACTION

(EDITORIAL)

Now that the hot weather is over, and cooler weather is here to give us renewed enthusiasm and pep, it is time to think about starting activities in the Young Men's Business Association. As is natural everywhere, the hot summer weather brings decreased attendance at meetings of all kinds. Summer is vacation time, and everybody lives outdoors as much as possible. But with the coming of fall, business strikes its old stride, and organizations swing back into action.

There are many things of community importance that need to be done in Fulton, and a live commercial club must lead the way. Officers and committees of the organization should be continually alert to every opportunity which might improve our community. Constant, steady and concentrated efforts in interest of the community are bound to reap certain and definite benefits. Accomplishment and unity of purpose in small things will lead to bigger and better rewards.

Tuesday night, October 22, is the next meeting date of the Young Men's Business Association, and every public-spirited citizen should lay plans now to be present. Officers could promote wider interest by holding an executive meeting immediately and plan the program. And it might not be amiss to open the first fall meeting with a community-wide banquet. Together, one for all and all for one—the community can go forward. Building a community is a business—so let's be about our business.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Wall, young cowpuncher from Wyoming, in the early days of the cattle industry, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays.

CHAPTER I—Continued

"Wal, friend, the string is that I want to locate you. Bend over here, so I can get your ear," went on Hays, confidentially, and when Wall had complied he said: "I run true to form today when I hold up that stranger. But it was a blunder, considering the iron I have in the fire. Now, listen. Lately I've got in with a rancher over here in the Henry mountains. He's an Englishman with more money than sense. Bought ten thousand head of cattle and a lot of horses. There's some tough cowboy outfits over there, an' more'n one real rustler outfit. Wal, this Englishman—his name is Herrick—got the idea of hiring all the hands available, cowpunchers, range-riders, gun-toters and plain out-an-out bad men. An' to throw this select outfit again the whole country. What do you think of that idea?"

"Original, to say the least. But not practical, unless he can reform bad men," replied Wall, much interested.

"Wal, exactly. But I'm not concerned with the practicability of it. Herrick took a shine to me, made me what he calls his superintendent, an' sent me all over lookin' for hard-shooting, hard-ridin' men. An' that's how you happened to run into me. I call it good luck for us both."

"You've taken me for one of the hard-shooting, hard-ridin' kind, eh?"

"Wal, I want you in my outfit," resumed Hays. "Brad didn't cotton to you, I seen first off. But he's a gun-thrower himself. All the same he's in my outfit an' I reckon you might get along. It's Heeseeman who sticks in my craw."

"Heeseeman. Who is he?"

"Heeseeman is the rustler of Dragon Canyon. None of the ranchers even know he's here, but I know it. He's got a small outfit, but shore enough bad. An' in some way he got wind of Herrick's scheme. Darned if he didn't pack over to the Henrys with his outfit an' start ridin' for him."

"Heeseeman saw the same opportunity as you?" queried Wall, quietly.

"Wal, yes, I was comin' to that," resumed Hays, gruffly. "I got the upper hand, though, an' I'll be the boss. There'll lead to friction. There'll be two factions sooner or later, an' the sooner that fight comes off the better."

"I see. Less of a division of spoils?"

"Wal, I'm no rustler," snapped Hays.

"Excuse me. If it isn't impertinent, may I ask just what you are?"

"Ever hear of Henry Plummer?"

"Can't remember if I did."

"Wal, Plummer flourished some ten or more years ago, first in Montana an' later in Idaho. He was the greatest robber the West ever developed. Educated man of good family, born in the East. But the gold fever called an' he was not the kind of a man to dig. He operated on the placer mines. Was an officer of the law while he was head of the biggest robber gang the frontier ever knew. From Bannock to Lewiston he kept the miners, the stages, the Wells Fargo in terror for years. . . . Wal, I seen Plummer hanged. I was one of his gang, a young man then in years."

"Thanks for the confidence, Hays," returned Wall, in surprise. "You must have strong interest in me to tell that."

"Shore I have. But I don't care to be classed as a rustler."

"Too low down, eh?"

"It certainly ain't any two-bit cattle stealin'. . . . However, there's not the point between you an' me. What I want to know is, will you take a job in my outfit?"

"That depends, Hays," returned Wall.

"Any scruples about it? Remember, I come clean with you."

"No, I broke jail in Cheyenne."

"What was you in for?"

"Shot a man. They were goin' to hang me."

"Ahuh. Was that square?"

"I didn't think so. . . . Had to kill the feller to get out."

"When was all this, Wall?"

"Some years ago."

"An' since then?"

"Been shooting my way out of one jam after another."

"Much obliged," replied Hays, feelingly. "Wal, you're a hunted man. You're broke. It's about where you cross the divide."

"One more question. What 'bout this Herrick's family?"

"Wal, he ain't got any," rejoined Hays. "We heard somethin' about a sister comin' out, but she never turned up."

"Sister? It'd be a h—l of a note if she did."

"Wal, this shore ain't no country for women."

It seemed to Jim Wall that this sally completed a definitely conscious feeling in his mind toward the self-confessed robber. If it had not been dislike and disgust before, it certainly fixed at that now. Wall sensed a gathering interest in the situation he had happened upon.

Hays called for drinks and insisted on a handshake which he executed solemnly, as if it were a compact which implied honor even among thieves. Shortly afterwards the saloon gradually began to fill with loud-voiced, heavily booted men.

Among them were Happy Jack, Lincoln and a giant of a man with a russet beard, whom Hays introduced as Montana. Then a man, undoubtedly a trapper, entered. He wore buckskin and seemed out of place in that crowd. The bartender, Red, did a thriving business.

"Seems to be no lack of money," observed Wall to the watchful Hays.

"Where do they get it?"

"Wal, you're surprised, I see. So was I. This burg here is a stage stop for points in Utah an' west. Lots of travel. But there's big cattle ranges off toward the Henrys."

"I see. But at that bar there are half a dozen men who are not travelers or ranchers or riders."

"Wal, for that matter, all men in these diggins have got to be riders."

"Sister? It'd be a h—l of a note if she did."

It's a long way from one waterin' place to another. But you hit into things, at that. There's four or five fellers I never seen before."

"Who's the tall one, with his hat pulled down, so you can only see his black, pointed beard?"

"That's Morley. Claims to be a rancher. But if he ain't the boss of the Black Dragon outfit, I'll eat him."

"And the loud feller—the one with the plaid vest?"

"His name is Stud somethin' or other. Seen him before an' ain't crazy about him."

"Let's play poker."

"Shore, but not just among ourselves."

"Got any money, Hank?" asked Happy Jack.

"Did you ever see me broke? Brad, go dig up some suckers. But not the hombre they call Stud. He didn't get that name playin' solitaire."

There were only two large gaming tables, one of which was in use. Lincoln went among the men to solicit players, returning with Morley and the russet-bearded giant, Montana.

There was no formality of greeting between Hays and these men. It was dog eat dog, Wall grasped.

"Make it six-handed. Come an' set in, Wal," said Hays. "Friendly little game of draw. Sky limit."

Wall laughed. "I couldn't play penny ante."

"Wal, I'll stake you."

"No, thanks. I'd rather watch."

"Excuse me, sir, but we don't care for watchers," interposed Morley.

No sooner had they seated themselves than the man Hays had called Stud strode up.

"An' I bein' left out of this on purpose," he demanded, and evidently he addressed Hays.

"Lincoln got up the game," replied Hays, coolly.

"You ask my friends to set in, an' not me."

"Wal, if you're so keen about it, why set in with us," went on Hays, fingering a deck of cards. "But if you want to know bad, I'm not stuck on playin' with you."

"Mean that to insult me?" Stud queried, sharply, his right hand riding to the lapel of his open vest. If Wall had not observed the bulge of two guns inside this vest he would have divined from Stud's action that there was one at least.

"Not at all," replied Hays, leaning back in his chair. That significant movement of Stud's had not been lost upon him. A little cold glint appeared in his pale eyes. "Reckon you're too slick a poker player for Hank Hays. I want a run for my money."

"Slick, eh? Wal, I don't mind bein' called that. It's a compliment. I've yet to see the gambler who wouldn't be slick if he could. But when you ask my pards to play an' not me—that's different."

"Set in, Stud," rejoined Hays civilly, as he began to shuffle the cards. "I feel lucky tonight. Last time you had it all your way."

The game began then with Morley Jack and Wall looking on. Morley made rather a pointed move and remark ancient Wall's standing behind him.

"Shore I'll change seats with you," replied Hays, obligingly, but it was plain he felt irritated.

"Never mind, Hays," interposed Wall, deliberately. "The gentleman evidently fears I'll tip off his cards. So I'll stand behind you, if I may."

CHAPTER II

From the very first deal Hays was lucky. Morley stayed about even. Brad Lincoln lost more than he won. The giant Montana was a close, wary gambler, playing only when he had good cards. Stud was undoubtedly a player who required the stimulation and zest of opposition. But he could not wait for luck to change. He had to be in every hand. Moreover, he was not adept enough with the cards to deal himself a good hand when his turn came. He grew so sullen that Wall left off watching and returned to the thrills.

But presently he had cause to attend more keenly than ever to this card game. The drift of conversation toward an inevitable fight. These men were vicious characters. Wall knew that life out here was raw. There was no law except that of the six-shooter.

While he bent a more penetrating gaze upon Stud, to whom his attention gravitated, Wall saw him perform a trick with the cards that was pretty clever and could not have been discerned except from Wall's position.

Nevertheless, little fortune most certainly had picked on Stud. He bet this hand to the limit of his cash, and then, such was his confidence, he borrowed from Morley. Still he could not force Hays to call. He fell from elation to consternation, then to doubt, from doubt to dismay, and from this to a gathering impotent rage, all of which proved how poor a gambler he was. When at last he rasped out:

"Wal, I call! Here's mine."

He slammed down an ace full. Hays had drawn three cards.

"Stud, I hate to show you this hand," drawled Hays.

"Yes, you do! Lay it down. I called you."

Whereupon Hays gently spread out four ten spots, and then with greedy hands raked in the stakes.

Stud stared with burning eyes. "Three-card draw! . . . You come in with a pair of tens?"

"Nope. I held up one ten an' the ace," replied Hays, nonchalantly. "I had a hunch, Stud."

"You steal coppers off a dead man's eyes."

"Haw! Haw!" bawled the victorious gambler. But he was the only one of the six players who seemed to see anything funny in the situation. That dawned upon him. "Stud, I was takin' that crack of yours humorous."

"Was you?" snapped Stud.

"Shore I was," returned Hays, with congealing voice.

"Wal, I didn't mean it humorous," Stud retorted.

"Ahuh. Come to look at you I see you ain't feelin' gay. Suppose you say just what you did mean."

"I meant what I said."

"Shore, I'm not so awful thick. But apply that crack to this here card game an' my playin'."

"Hays, you pained them three ten-spots," declared Stud hotly.

Then there was quick action and the rasp of scraping chairs, and the tumbling over of a box seat. Stud and Hays were left alone at the table.

"You're a liar!" hissed Hays, suddenly black in the face.

Here Jim Wall thought it was time to intervene. He read the glint in Stud's eyes. Hays was at a disadvantage, so far as drawing a gun was concerned. And Wall saw that Stud could and would kill him.

"Hold on there," called Wall, in a voice that made both men freeze.

Hays did not turn to Wall, but he spoke: "Tard, lay off. I can handle this feller."

"Take care, stranger," warned Stud, who appeared to be able to watch both Hays and Wall at once. They were, however, almost in line. "This ain't any of your tricks."

"I just wanted to tell Hays I saw you slip an ace from the bottom of the deck," said Wall. He might as well have told of Hays' irregularities.

"Wot! He filled his ace full that way?" roared Hays.

"He most certainly did."

"All right let it go at that," replied Stud, deadly cold. "If you can say honest that you haven't pulled any tricks—go for your gun. Otherwise keep your shirt on."

That unexpected sally exemplified the peculiar conception of honor among thieves. It silenced Hays. The little gambler knew his man and shifted his deadly intent to a more doubtful issue.

"Jim Wall, eh?" he queried, fawningly.

"At your service," retorted Wall. He divined the workings of the little gambler's mind. Stud needed to have more time, for the thing that made decision hard to reach was the quality of this stranger. His motive was more deadly than his will, or his power to execute. All this Jim Wall knew. It was the difference between the two men.

"I'm admittin' I cheated," said Stud, harshly. "But I ain't standin' to be tipped off by a stranger."

"Well, what're you going to do about it?" asked Wall, while the spectators of the drama almost held their breath.

Stud's lean, dark, little hands lifted quivering from the table.

"Don't draw!" yelled Wall. "The man doesn't live who can sit at a table and beat me to a gun."

EVERYDAY NEW YORK

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK.—Purely personal piffle: I quit coffee because I tired the taste, always enough after ice cream and can't spell—just a second—occasion, without looking it up. Feminine names I like: Beth, Hope, Faith. No one can revive an old horror crime like Edmund Pearson.

If I had a huffer I'd call him Giles. My choice for the last of the aristocrats is Frank Crowninshield Ray.

Belger and Fred Astaire, double starred, would be my idea for a dance party. Anything whose name I don't know is a "hoot nanny." Nothing so boring as being dragged through a new home.

Anyone playing a harmonica or accordion excites my envy. I would rather have written Maugham's "Of Human Bondage" than any novel of my time. Next to that, "Maurice Chevalier." No European country suggests security like Holland. Or is any meal so stimulating as breakfasting in the snow at St. Moritz.

Popeye the Sailor is a ringer for Claud Shaffer's "Old Man Grump." A middle west comic of 20 years ago. Two worldliest looking men in New York—Ben Ali Haggin and Salling Baruch. My first close-up of Irvin Cobb was in the old Waldorf's Peacock Alley and I followed him like a dog a covered wagon to 59th street.

I know a traveler always seashore until he lost his sense of smell. The first post I ever met was Horton Bradley, and the first movie director Alan Dwan. Zita Johann made a customer of me at any movie. Elsie Janis wrote about the best short story of Montmartre ever written. I can't convince Major Boxes and Deac Aylesworth that movie stage presentations are entirely too long. But I keep on trying.

I've wanted to own Mark Twain's private residence on lower 5th avenue. Favorite marches: Gershwin's "Strike Up the Band" and "I Love a Parade." On the promenade of the Europa I saw a drunk walk the rail from one post to another in a plunging sea. Almost every "that" in writing can be eliminated. James Oliver Curwood once told me. And he's right. Ladies never looked so regal as in the new long-sleeved evening gowns. No people seem so foreign as Turks. Very few would care to be Mayor of New York these days. Five-and-ten-cent stores suggest phony princes. Everybody seems to know several who are getting undeserved relief.

The Eva Coo case was a dud in murder stories for me. The thinnest man I ever knew was the late Grant Clarke. I can't go those Afghan hounds, am a flop at baby talk and think the most important thing the S. P. C. A. can do is to have rodeos and horse jumping races legally banned. No public entertainer ever fascinated me like Boone, the hypnotist, riding blindfold through town in his gold suit.

Few know George Burns, of Burns and Allen, was once in a skating act and that Gracie Allen is as Irish as Dublin. The best dressed boys are wearing single breasted Tuxedos again. The Bronx County court-house for sheer and exciting architectural beauty. Montagu Love and Bernard Noble are the "chickiest" two hereabouts. I never miss a chance of program at the Trans Lux or Embassy. Stage midgets depress me. No movie star has been as handicapped by bad camera effects as Joan Crawford. "Rain" was almost ruinous but "Chained" was superb. The only hero parade I'll march in is for Mickey Mouse. Because I'm building a home in Ohio, a lot of people think I'm going to quit columning. I couldn't if I wished—and I don't—without breaking an honorable contract. Never knew an Indian athlete who wasn't a chief.

Aren't there audiences any more for quartettes such as the Avon Comedy Four, etc., etc., or am I just old fogey? They are over-exploiting Shirley Temple and it's a pity. My favorite pair of palamas are white silk jacket and black pants. I once with an O. O. M. monogram in red on the handkerchief pocket that would destroy you. I often put myself to sleep plotting mysteries that begin at the Raffles Hotel in Singapore.

Cole Porter's lyrics top 'em all. I can't listen to Frances Williams singing for gazing at her platinum hair. Simile: "As strange as a chauffeur in a straw hat." I once roomed with an anti-germ fiend who caught everything going. Fifteen years later when I saw him he was recovering from sleeping sickness. Not many actors can give as convincing a performance as Otto Kruger. My only hanker for tobacco is a pipe after sharp cheese. When I cross the street in front of motor traffic I wave them back like a flustered old man.

Crochet Motif for Bedspread

A bedspread in crochet is a work of art, attracts attention and frequently becomes an heirloom. A motif when made of carpet warp measures six inches. Thirty-two motifs can be made from one pound of warp. This is only one of the 29 motifs shown in our book No. 27 on motif bedspreads. These motifs can also be used to make match sets for bedroom: curtains, pillows, chair backs, scarfs, etc.

Got Her Lock of Hair, but Not Paderewski's

Paderewski has, like many another notability, undergone the ordeal of complying with autograph hunters' demands for signatures. But the famous pianist, if we may judge by what is said to have happened on one occasion, draws the line at the distribution of mementoes in the shape of samples of his beautiful hair, albeit gifted by nature with a profusion of that article.

It was when he was visiting America that a well-known society woman had the audacity to hand through the window of his private car a gushing epistle, winding up with the request for "a lock of hair." It is alleged that Paderewski's secretary replied as follows: "You fail to specify whose hair you desire. M. Paderewski, therefore, in order to avoid disappointment, has secured for you some fine specimens from his manager, secretary, valet, waiter two cooks, and the cat."

AFRICAN "WIRELESS"

The "hush telegraph" of African native tribes is still a mystery to whites in the interior of Africa, although radio has robbed it of its one-time value as a conveyor of important world news to remote outposts.

In spite of differences of language, the negro tribes are able to convey complicated messages clear across Africa by relays of drums. It was thus that many a white man learned of the death of Queen Victoria and the fall of Khartoum weeks before they had confirmation of the news.

No white man has ever learned the code, although the drums are used as frequently as ever for carrying messages between tribes.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic is pleasant to take and contains nothing harmful. Even children like it and they can take it safely. For sale by all drug stores. Now two sizes—50c and $1. ## For good digestion —there is nothing that can take the place of your own gastric digestive secretions. Frequently, poor digestion is due to lack of tone in the stomach walls—because of low blood strength. S.S.S., the great, scientifically-tested medicine, is specially designed to fill a two-fold purpose in this respect... it aids in stimulating the flow of natural stomach secretions... and by building up deficient red corpuscles, with their hemoglobin, it restores to a more normal functioning the secretions of the stomach digestive juices. . . . so necessary for good digestion. This double value of S.S.S. is important. By all means try S.S.S. for better health and more happiness. Its benefits are progressive. . . . accumulate... and enduring. Unless your case is exceptional, you should soon enjoy again the satisfaction of appetizing food and good digestion. . . . sleep sound... and renewed strength. This is why many say "S.S.S. makes you feel like yourself again."

Do not be misled by the efforts of a few unethical dealers who may suggest substitutes. You have a right to insist that S.S.S. be supplied you on request. Its long years of preference write their own praise.

STEALING ELECTIONS

Much notoriety and scandal has prevailed in recent years in many of our states and communities because political rings are running our government. The right to vote and choose honest men for important official places has become a misnomer in some instances. Like the gang lords of the underworld these unscrupulous politicians hold sway. They usurp the power to govern and proceed to levy taxes in new and devious forms "in order to balance the budget." But the budget never gets balanced, because political friends must receive favors and jobs. This naturally strengthens the power of these blood-sucking leeches who don't deserve the salt in their blood.

As a result of the concealed power of these cankerous politicians, and abandonment of old-fashioned statesmanship administered by men of integrity and character, duty-bound to serve the people who elected them, many of our good people do not go to the polls to vote. This is a bad state of conditions. There is a gathering rumbling of dissatisfaction among the people. There is plenty visible evidence that many changes are due to happen in our political set-up in the next few years.

A MEANS TO AN END.

Fingerprinting can stop election "steals," as this art is recognized as one of the foremost methods of preventing crime and tracking down criminals. But finger printing can be put to a far greater use in a commercial way.

Take at our polls for instance. Just suppose every person who registers in order to be eligible to

THE COMMON COLD

The common cold is the most frequent affliction of man. Its specific cause is unknown. The consensus of medical men is that the causative factor is some germ or the product of germs, but as yet this has not been definitely proven. That it is infectious and contagious the medical profession is agreed. It is both sporadic and epidemic.

The common cold is so common that people do not give it the serious consideration it deserves. A common cold is the forerunner of some of the most fatal acute diseases, as pneumonia, as well as some of the chronic conditions as sinusitis, infected ears and bronchitis.

Considered from an economic standpoint it is the most costly affliction we have. The loss of time from business, work and school is much greater from the common cold than any other disease. Realizing the above facts a common cold should not be treated lightly. Every sufferer from a common cold should seek good medical advice early, striving in every way to cure the condition as soon as possible, lessening the chances of dire complications, the loss of time from business, work or school. Also every precaution should be taken to prevent others from catching the disease.

People vary very much in their susceptibility to the common cold. Some have colds rarely, others almost continuously. To those who have colds often, we would advise that they have a thorough physical examination, as there is a cause of their extreme susceptibility, and many times the cause can be located and removed thereby lessening the number of colds materially.

The prophylactic treatment of colds by bacterial serums or vaccines now seems to be on a sound footing. Many are now availing themselves of these measures to prevent having colds, and results show about 85 percent immunity. This immunity only lasts about one year, therefore the vaccine has to be taken each year. In the early fall is the most opportune time to take the vaccine.

vote, was required to give his finger prints along with his signature and other facts about himself. With no two set of finger prints along, we would have no reason to worry about fake names for voters and the voting racket. But, my; what would become of the maneuvering politician and his kind? At least, we'd have no reason to mourn his passing, with jolly good riddance.

Crooks are the only ones to be afraid of being finger printed. On the other hand, commercial fingerprinting can be made a real community and national asset in more ways than one.

Every factory or business concern should use a finger-print record system for the safety of themselves and their employees. If every child was finger-printed soon after birth, this official record should be a constant reassurance that the child could be easily identified at any future time if lost, stolen or killed. Think what it would have meant to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh if their baby had been finger-printed.

Suppose every driver of a car carried an official card bearing his own finger prints, properly signed and witnessed for checking if necessary. How simple it would be to recover stolen cars and identify persons when killed in some catastrophe.

There is a great future for finger printing. The field is an extensive one and can stand a lot of development. Great strides have been made in recent years, but the next few years will see even greater progress.

Sparky Newton spent Thursday night in Fulton visiting family and friends.

LABOR COSTS LOW,
SAYS BUILDERS' HEAD

The general public must cooperate with the Government if the Better Housing Program is to stimulate business to the extent of national recovery, according to N. F. Helmers, president of the Associated General Contractors of America.

"There must be a revival of the capital goods industries," Mr. Helmers said in a statement commending the modernization movement, "in order to successfully promote real recovery. To this end, the entire public must become 'modernization minded.' In times of retrenchment, the average householder immediately cuts off expenditures, such as upkeep, renovation, and above all, modernization of his property. The minute he does this, he automatically forces others out of employment.

"When the average man can be sold on the idea that it will be to his own good to spend a real amount of money on his home, we are indeed on the upgrade."

The public should be made to realize, Mr. Helmers pointed out, that materials can now be purchased at reasonable prices, that labor is obtainable on a reasonable wage scale, and that the certainty of better times ahead make it safe for most people to assume obligations in the form of easy modernization credit.

In assuring the Federal Housing Administration of the support of the Associated General Contractors Mr. Helmers said:

"I believe that our entire membership realize fully that when your program is in full swing, it will do more to revitalize general construction and national recovery than any other move which could be made."

MANY PEOPLE FROM FULTON

It is a community-wide celebration marking the completion of the new sea wall at Hickman, which will protect that town from the flood waters of the Mississippi.

The celebration will start Friday morning and continue through Saturday. Hundreds of exhibits are expected in the various departments. A gigantic parade is planned, with plenty of music on the program. Among the outstanding features will be games and contests of various kinds, baby show, dog show, numbers, doll show and a number of specialty

ECONOMY IN USING BETTER MATERIALS

The necessity of the use of quality materials in the Better Housing Program of the Federal Housing Administration is stressed by William W. Woodbridge, manager of the cedar shingle industry.

Outwearing other materials, those of indisputable quality are always more economical in the end, according to Mr. Woodbridge. Once applied, good materials often remain in excellent condition for decades. On the other hand repairs and replacements of poor materials are often necessary within a few years.

Especially are high grade materials needed in those sections of the country where intense weather conditions exist, whether in the form of high winds, extreme heat or cold or disastrous hail or sand storms. Against such meaneas, the pitting of poor materials is folly, Mr. Woodbridge indicated.

In commending the work of the Federal Housing Administration Mr. Woodbridge anticipated a renewed volume of business for the building industry and greater prosperity for the nation as a whole.

SOUTH FULTON SCHOOL

Bro. C. O. Fry conducted assembly recently. He read from the 3rd chapter of Proverbs and delivered a talk on a subject he termed Horse Sense. Bro. Fry suggested that those with highly trained minds and no common sense find it hard to fit into many of life's difficult situations. Good behavior, in all places goes with horse sense. Parents of well behaved children have honor reflected upon them the speaker said. Another attribute of horse sense is an inclination to listen to sound advice. Be docile and yielding to those in authority. A third point in connection with the subject is co-operation. Team play in all things for the best of all concerned—unity and one mind in school, church and community activities was stressed. In closing the speaker admonished all to be careful in crossing "fools hill"—the period from age fourteen to twenty. Stay in school and equip for life. Another short definition given for horse sense was "stable-thinking."

School has been open six weeks and examinations are being given this week to sum up the work for that period. Report cards will go out and the honor roll for the first six weeks will be published next week.

The Junior Class had a party Friday in the Home Economics room to honor the boys basketball team which won the class tourna-

BUTCHER THE SHRIKE

"WHO is Butcher the Shrike?" asked Peter Rabbit.

"He's new to the Old Orchard," replied Skimmer, "and you probably haven't noticed him. I've often seen him in the South. There he is now, on the tip-top of that tree over yonder."

Peter and Johnny Chuck looked eagerly. They saw a bird who at first glance appeared not unlike Mocker the Mockingbird. He was dressed wholly in black, gray and white. When he turned his head they saw a black stripe across the side of his face and that the tip of his bill was hooked. These were enough to make them forget that otherwise he was like Mocker. While they were looking at him he flew down into the grass and picked up a grasshopper. Then for some distance he flew with a steady, even flight only a little above the ground, suddenly shooting up and returning to the perch where they had first seen him. There he ate the grasshopper and resumed his watch for something else to catch.

"He certainly has wonderful eyes," said Skimmer admiringly. "He must have seen that grasshopper way over there in the grasses before he started after it, for he flew straight down. He doesn't waste time and energy hunting aimlessly. He sits on a high perch and watches until he sees something he wants. Many times I've seen him sit on top of a telegraph pole. I understand that Bully the English Sparrow has become terribly nervous since the arrival of Butcher. He is particularly fond of English sparrows. I presume it was one of Bully's children you saw in the thorn tree, Peter. For my part, I hope he'll frighten Bully into leaving the Old Orchard. It would be a good thing for the rest of us."

"But I don't understand why he fastens his victims on those long thorns."

"For two reasons," replied Skimmer.

"When he catches more grasshoppers and insects than he can eat, he sticks them on those thorns so that later he may be sure of a good meal if it happens there are no more to be caught when he is hungry. Mice, sparrows, and things too big for him to swallow, he sticks on the thorns so that he can pull them to pieces more easily. You see, his feet and claws are not big enough to hold them while he tears them to pieces with his hooked bill."

"Does he kill many birds?" asked Peter.

"Not many," replied Skimmer, "and most of them are English sparrows. He is a good deal like Billy the Sparrow Hawk in this respect. Hello! Now what's happened?"

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN... The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I was riding in a trolley car yesterday. Sitting opposite me was a man reading a Texas newspaper. As he started off the car I saw a headline in his paper which read: "Well-Known Mexican Flees with $350,000." My curiosity is aroused, as I saw nothing in the New York papers about it. What do you know about it?

Truly yours,

NICK L. RIDE.

Answer: Don't believe it. Looks to me as if the Mexican government is trying to take the edge off the Florida boom and get the people to go to their country. It is true that Mexican "fleas" are well-known, but I doubt if they have any money.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a chap who lives next door to me and I absolutely know he is a bootlegger. He has a sign in front of his home which says he is a "Marine Attorney." Can you see any connection between the sign and what he does for a living?

Yours truly,

U. MAYNO.

Answer: My dear friend, I'm surprised at you. A "Marine Lawyer" is the same as a "bootlegger." A "Marine Lawyer" is a fellow who takes cases off ships.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you think traveling broadens one's mind? The reason I ask is, I have the opportunity to take a trip across the Atlantic and back again without getting off the ship. Do you think a trip of this kind will add any to my present knowledge.

Sincerely,

C. WEED.

Answer: If there is anything at all in a man, a fifteen-day trip on the ocean will bring it out.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

There is a man living next door to me who drinks heavily and is nearly always drunk. I don't drink at all, yet I have only one-half the friends he has. How do you account for that?

Yours truly,

T. TOTALER.

Answer: You say he is always drunk. That's the reason. He sees twice as many people as you do.

Russia in the World War

Pre-revolutionary Russia had the only national anthem which contained as its chief note a prayer for peace. Yet, writes F. G. Taylor, Jr., New York City, in Collier's Weekly, when the World War came, no country mobilized more quickly. In fact, enthusiasm ran so high in Petrograd that a prize of $100,000 was raised as an award for the Russian who set foot in Berlin.

Relics Found in Palestine

All that remains of an Egyptian town which flourished more than 3,000 years ago, on a site near the present city of Tel Aviv, Palestine, are a heart-shaped scarab, the sacred beetle of ancient Egypt, a fragment of an Egyptian seal used on a papyrus document and a few bronze and flint implements. The large stone scarab, which bears a hieroglyphic inscription, is the first of its kind to be found in Palestine. It was placed over the heart of a mummy and is believed to have come from the tomb of some Egyptian official.

What You Read You Are
She Is Lonely
Yes, Money Does Count
The President's Broadcast

The whole country follows the "Hauptmann case," dealing with the Lindbergh kidnaping. Newspapers have increased circulation since Hauptmann's arrest. This proves that citizens, able to get along without ordinary news of national and international affairs, cannot do without the Lindbergh kidnap news.

The East reads about the "Bobby" Edwards case, that of a young man accused of killing a girl, Freda McKechnie—knocking her on the head and drowning her when he tired of her.

Others are much interested in the case of a woman with a well known name and a quarrel about control and possession of a child, heiress to several millions. Foreign princes, plain American drunkards, many unpleasant details, are dragged into the story. A considerable crowd finds that interesting. That judge's decision will be interesting.

Future historians will know what we were by reading the "news stories" that interested us.

Mrs. Eva Coo, whom reporters choose to call "Little Eva" Coo, now in the women's wing of the death house of Sing Sing prison, convicted of murdering a man whose life she had insured, and waiting to be electrocuted, makes a statement.

It has nothing to do with the hereafter, death's uncertainty or its meaning, the horror of the electric chair. The statement says:

"I like company. I am so lonesome I don't know what to do."

Only a few weeks to live, the electric chair and all that is on the other side of that chair just ahead of her, and Mrs. Coo's strongest impression is that she likes company.

We are a gregarious race, and absence of imagination is a great help if you must be electrocuted.

Does money make a difference in the United States? It made some difference when, in Foley Square, opposite New York's Supreme court building, six rather old men were arrested charged with "vagrancy." One of them, sixty-four years old, who gave a name not his own, was found with bank books showing that he owned $6,000, safe in the bank.

The magistrate "suspended sentence" on the $6,000 vagrant. He was not even fined. Five others that had no money were fined $10 each and sent to jail for ten days when they did not pay.

There is a text for some budding Communist orator.

Some call President Roosevelt's broadcast "crumbs of comfort," thrown to "the right," where dwell big industrialists, disgruntled financiers and other sad conservatives.

It is taken as "hitherto shalt thou go and no farther, and here shalt thou stand waves he stayed," addressed to on-rushing "radicalism."

The President's broadcast proves that gentlemen were mistaken who said the President intends to do away with "profits," making private enterprise an obedient unit in the new system of society. The address means to optimistic conservatives that the New Deal desires only to be "helpful" to private enterprise, not choke it. But private enterprise must be good, and, with the New Deal, keep its eye on the ultimate happiness of the many.

If you buy whisky it is wise to buy a brand that you know. In New York, this year, government agents seized 100,000 cases of "queer" whisky. Including 15,000 cases of "Scotch" whisky made in America, with one-eighth Scotch to make it taste "smoky," the rest being sherry, glucose, and home made alcohol.

The old game for children was "But, ton, button, who's got the button?" The new game for grownups is, "Doll, dollar, who's got the dollar, and how shall we tax it?"

New York city, seeking $17,000,000 a month now, more later, for welfare relief, has already put a tax on income taxes.

To "tax a tax" is a new idea. If only deficits could be taxed, the problem would be easy.

Secretary Wallace suspects, and farmers will be glad to hear it, that "an ignorant, unscrupulous" political attempt will be made this fall to make the government lend 75 cents a bushel on corn and $1 additional on wheat. If Mr. Wallace's fears are realized the "new frontiers," as regards United States finance, will be as wide as the Milky Way and as high as the blue star Vega.

H. H. Kunz, intelligent Chinese statesman, finance minister, tells Secretary Morgenthau that he would really and truly like to know what the United States means to do about silver. Also, since this country is anxious for silver, China will sell us all she has taking gold in exchange.

Tred Hartle, considering that Chinese statesman, might add a verse to his description of Ah Sin, who possessed "a smile that was childlike and bland."

ZONES OF PEACE LINKED MAN AND LOWER ANIMALS

There are a few zones of peace left in the world, says Science Service. Naturalists venturing into the highlands of Tibet have been told of finding one of these Edens, where wild animals are not afraid of man. The Tibetan government maintains the peace by forbidding men to introduce fear.

An archeologist intent on digging up prehistoric settlements at a lonely island off Alaska found that a fox would come close to his tent to eat scraps. Seals snuggled themselves without nervously keeping watch for Eskimo hunters on the horizon. Wild geese, scurrying creatures as men think of them, ate quietly along the shore. A little auklet perched on the ridgepole of the tent and faced a camera three feet away without a tremor.

Over a hundred miles away the nearest village of humans had its guns and campfires that are so startling to the animal world. But the birds and beasts of the uninhabited shore have never been frightened out of their Garden of Eden.

"In the early days of the human race, large areas of the earth were zones of peace like these," says the writer. "So we are told by Dr. Walter Hough, curator of anthropology of the Smithsonian Institution. Stone age man, far from being continually at grips with nature, had friendship, or at least a feeling of tolerance, for the lower creatures."

"Reporting these conclusions to the Scientific Monthly, Doctor Hough finds reason to believe that man succeeded in domesticating animals by friendship, not by force of mastery. Most of the domesticated animals we owe to efforts of early man in Central Asia. There, Doctor Hough believes, early man had a temperament to inspire friendship and confidence among his fellow-creatures. "The zones of peace, all too few today, are a vanishing glimpse into the sort of world that men lived in when they first made friends with the dog, the cat, the cock, the cow."

New Leningrad

Plans for a new Leningrad, which will have a population of 5,000,000, are being made. The architectural planning section of the Leningrad Soviet is drawing up a scheme for re-planning the city. The new Leningrad will stretch on both sides of the Neva, from Lake Ladoga to the Gulf of Finland over a distance of 40 miles.

Age 13

Old enough for strong drugs?

It is not wise to give a laxative of adult strength to a child, just because you give it less often or in less amounts.

Stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can often be traced to this single mistake.

There is a better way to relieve those occasional sluggish spells or constipation in a child of any age:

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, creamy syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Doctors advise liquid laxatives, and hospitals use the liquid form. Almost any child who has been constipated in the hospital usually comes out with bowels working like a well-regulated watch.

Make the change now to pure, California Syrup of Figs instead of harsh medicines. You won't risk any more violence to your child's appetite, digestion, and general physical condition. Those little upsets and complaints just disappear as a rule and the child is soon normal and happy again.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

President Calls for Truce Between Labor and Industry—
Convention of A. F. of L.—Air Combat Forces
Taken Away From Foulis.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© by Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S latest radio talk with his fellow citizens was well written, well delivered and peculiarly vague as to his future intentions. He sought to reassure business and labor, both of which are questioning him anxiously, but he made no definite replies to their categorical queries. His one specific statement was that within a month he would seek to negotiate a truce between large groups of employers and large groups of employees through which there would be a cessation of the strikes that have been disrupting the nation's business. He said he would ask the representatives of those forces to agree temporarily on questions of wages, hours and working conditions, and that with such agreements in force he expected further adjustments would be made peacefully, through governmental or private mediation.

"I shall not ask either employers or employees permanently to lay aside the weapons common to industrial war," he added. "But I shall ask both groups to give a fair trial to peaceful methods of adjusting their conflicts of opinion and interest, and to experiment for a reasonable time with measures suitable to civilize our industrial civilization."

By way of reply to the appeals of many business, industrial and financial leaders that the more radical measures of the administration's program be abandoned, Mr. Roosevelt declared the New Deal is to go on. To the questions of those leaders concerning balancing of the budget, government expenses, further devaluation of the dollar or return to the gold standard, he made no reply. However, he did declare himself in favor of a system of business based on private profit. Then he said:

"I am not for a return to that definition of liberty under which for many years a free people were being gradually regimented into the service of the privileged few. I prefer and I am sure you prefer that broader definition of liberty under which we are moving forward to greater freedom, to greater security for the average man than he has ever known before in the history of America."

Concerning the NRA, the President gave praise to General Johnson and said the national recovery administration was entering its second phase, "which is in turn a period of preparation for legislation which will determine its permanent form." He admitted there was a question as to the wisdom of some of the decrees enacted during the first phase of the NRA, but he declared the attacks on the constitutionality of many of the things his administration has done, "We are not," he said, "frightened by reactionary lawyers or political editors. All these cries have been heard before."

Near the beginning of his address, the President said:

"I am happy to report that after years of uncertainty, culminating in the collapse of the spring of 1933, we are bringing order out of the old chaos with a greater certainty of the employment of labor at a reasonable wage and of more business at a fair profit. These governmental and industrial developments hold promise of new achievements for the nation."

First formal response to the President's speech came from the National Association of Manufacturers, which urged him to issue a proclamation for a "truce on industrial warfare" during which existing employment relations would be continued, and challenged the American Federation of Labor to take like action. Its statement said:

"The President will find employers willing to sit down with him, as he proposes, to devise means for ending the constant series of strikes which have been one of the major obstacles to recovery."

Green and Morrison, respectively president and secretary of the federation, said this was a subterfuge and that the manufacturers should first publicly announce they would obey the decisions of constituted authorities, especially concerning discrimination and collective bargaining.

While President William Green and some other leaders of the American Federation of Labor, just convened in San Francisco, expressed approval of what Mr. Roosevelt said in his radio address, many others prominent in the federation are far from satisfied with the way things are going. The executive council's annual report devoted pages to an analysis of the effect of the NRA upon the interests of labor. Almost without exception, the effects were found either directly harmful or at least unsatisfactory.

The criticism was directed at the workings of the recovery program, in actual operation. The NRA and the New Deal itself were not condemned. But the committee indicted the program on these main grounds:

That it has failed to increase the purchasing power of workers.

That because it has failed to reduce hours of labor sufficiently it has also failed to create a satisfactory number of new jobs.

That its compliance machinery is ineffective, with the result that violations of the spirit of the codes are easily accomplished and quite general.

Labor does not have proper representation in either code enforcement or administration.

"In one way," the report says, pointing to what seems to be viewed as the only satisfactory accomplishment thus far under the NRA, "codes have fulfilled expectations. They have with few exceptions wiped out child labor."

PRESIDENT GREEN in his address to the Federation of Labor declared the establishment of the 30-hour week was one of the possible means of wiping out unemployment.

and said those opposing it have offered no other remedy. First actual results in the campaign for this were announced later to the convention by Frank Feeney, president of the Elevator Constructors' union. What he called the "greatest labor document ever written" has been signed—a five-year agreement with contractor employers providing the six-hour day, five-day week for the 19,000 members of the union on a pay basis of the eight-hour day. The contract will become effective immediately, Feeney said, in any locality in which any other four of the building trades unions negotiate similar agreements.

The document also provides for an absolutely closed shop and gives the elevator constructors the right to strike any time to support any movement for the 30-hour week.

The arrival of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, gave impetus to the fight for extension of the A. F. of L. into the industrial union field and to the plan to increase the executive council from 11 to 25 members.

Although Lewis, controlling 3,000 convention votes, was opposed by Green on the council plan, the miners' leader removed the last doubt concerning Green's reelection by announcing that he would not only back Green but would place him in nomination.

"If we want to get business back we must give employment to labor," Axtell said. "Industry at the same time must be protected from unfair competition by such means as codes."

The arrival of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, gave impetus to the fight for extension of the A. F. of L. into the industrial union field and to the plan to increase the executive council from 11 to 25 members.

Although Lewis, controlling 3,000 convention votes, was opposed by Green on the council plan, the miners' leader removed the last doubt concerning Green's reelection by announcing that he would not only back Green but would place him in nomination.

FOLLOWING the recommendations of a special committee appointed by the War department and headed by Newton D. Baker, the department has created a general headquarters air force, comprising all the air combat forces, and placed it under the direct command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff.

Thus all the fighting planes are taken away from Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the air corps, and he is left in command of only the army air schools and air depots. "Benny," who flew with the Wrights in 1909 and worked his way to high command, has long been at odds with the general staff, struggling against what he considered its intrigues and politics. Now the general staff is having its way with him and, as one Washington commentator says, instead of the flying air fighter which his record fitted him to be, he has become a desk soldier and a school teacher.

Just as this order was issued Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, former chief of the air corps and a perpetual storm center, was testifying before the commission appointed by the President to study the government's aviation problem. Mitchell called the organization of a "GIHQ" air force "a lot of bunk," and he declared that all army officers who signed the Baker report should be "kicked out of the service." He referred to army aviation plans as the work of "Boy Scouts" in the War department.

According to Mitchell, these are the measures the country should adopt for its aerial defense:

Merge army, navy, and all air services under one command.

Build planes with a cruising radius of 6,000 to 8,000 miles.

Make detailed plans for war, including the evacuation of New York city in case of an air attack by Japan "from a base in Alaska."

Construct dirigibles, for 50 of them "competently" handled could destroy Japan within two days.

BEVERLY HILLS — Well all I know is just what I read in the papers. Hawaii! (I don't think that's the spelling of it, but spelling don't mean much out here. You just add plenty of H's, U's and K's and let her go.) And the funny part of that every one of these names over here are like that.

There just ain't any Oklahoma names, I tell you, you pretty near got to be a Hawaiian to be able to ask your way home.

Well it's a great country though. Was just sitting up there in the Royal Hawaiian Hotel listening to a band right down under our window. I doubt if there is a more wonderful setting in the world. Course we were placed on the ocean side where we got a wonderful view. Right there under our nose is the famous Wiliki Beach. Surf boards are coming in there like Ford's down a Boulevard at home on Sunday.

Those guys really ride em. It's the peculiar formation of the Coral Reefs that reach s. far out that makes it possible for it to be so fine to do and here is the funny part of it, its the only place in the whole islands where you can do it. So when you see them trying it at home and not getting far, you know why.

My wife and daughter Mary had been out there and had such a good time a couple of years ago, and she kept yapping it to me, that finally on this trip, I said well lets stop a week in the islands. And I tell you it was a month or two too short. A guy on the boat from there kept telling me that the time was too short, and I kept kidding him, and asking him what I would do with the other five days.

The folks were awful excited when I was over there over the sugar quota. You see the Hawaiian islands are really and truly a territory of the United States. Not only of those things they call an "Insular Possession." Insular possessions are like Porto Rico and the Philippines. An insular possession is like a first mortgage. You get it if nobody else pays it off and takes it off. But this ukulele group out there in the very bowels of an ocean, why it is just as much a part of us as if it was down in one of Huey Long's parishes.

But there was some kind of an argument on where the Government had kinder used them like they were only an insular possession. It was more a case of pride than a case of dollars and cents. They felt that they had been discriminated against, and I guess you come down to the thing they really had, but they had been doing well and lots of em thought it might be better not to make a fight. You know these islands are in pretty good shape, lots better shape than the mainland. There had been no drought there, and there is parts of the islands that it rains every thirty minutes. They got a golf course there where they say you get rained on at Number one, you dry off by Number two, it starts raining again at 3 and visa versa. So we are wet on even numbers and dry on odd ones.

Its the greatest country for clouds floating low over the mountains, they just come pretty near into your house. Its not a tropical country, but it just borders on to being one. They sure raise an awful lot of stuff. Sugar fields are just like wheat fields in Oklahoma, every thirty minutes. They got a golf course there where they say you get rained on at Number one, you dry off by Number two, it starts raining again at 3 and visa versa. So we are wet on even numbers and dry on odd ones.

National Topics Interpreted

by William Bruckart

Washington.—As the federal relief administration looks forward to the winter months when the relief burden obviously is heaviest, Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, makes public figures showing that the average cost of maintaining a family of four on public relief now is $23.09 a month. He says this figure varies materially from section to section, that it is materially higher in the industrial centers of the South where relief rolls are largest and that, probably, the country may expect a higher average cost during the forthcoming winter.

The statement by Mr. Hopkins becomes exceedingly significant, in the opinion of observers here, especially with reference to the likelihood that there will be an increase in cost this winter. It reflects two things. First, the administration's drive to bring about increased prices through crop limitation or crop destruction or any of the several methods employed not only is adding to the burden of those with limited buying power but it is compelling Uncle Sam and the states and counties and charitable organizations everywhere to pay an added price to keep people from starving. Second, the Hopkins statement gives more than an intimation of how many additions to the relief rolls there may be as a result of refusal of some people to accept any kind of jobs. It has been known many months that relief rolls carry a certain percentage of individuals who amount to the same thing as parasites, but the mounting cost both in the average and in the total figures are being examined by many experts with the thought in mind that considerable waste is in prospect.

The relief administration has been attempting to make surveys of relief rolls in many jurisdictions. The results in some of the cases have been quite disturbing to those in the government who are wholly desirous of lending help wherever help is necessary but who obviously are unwilling to see government funds drained off to care for individuals who are refusing to help themselves. How far this condition is going, none can foretell; nor can anyone at this time say definitely how extensive has become the list of those who regard relief rolls as their rightful meal ticket.

Some of the political leaders have become alarmed because, having knowledge of the dole system in England and in some of the other European countries, they know how hard it is to separate individuals from relief after those individuals have lost the pride and morale which causes people to support themselves. Hearings before congressional committees last winter disclosed in numerous cities how some people had declined to do the odd jobs created under the "make work" campaigns for the unemployed and had preferred to make their semi-weekly trips to the relief stores. At that time there were relief advocates of the sobriety type who insisted that the number of such unemployed was very small and that it would not increase. Relief administration figures, however, seem to show that the contrary is true and that wherever they may be there is a certain number of the unemployed who will remain attached to the government relief roll until that roll is absolutely liquidated.

I have heard several members of congress express the opinion that this phase of the relief problem is really the most difficult of the whole structure. They want to see the government spend all of the money that is necessary to keep people from starving but they are beginning to demand that some way be found by which the sheep may be separated from the goats and properly fed.

Here in Washington a taste of the condition mentioned above has been exposed as the result of complaints by a taxpayers' organization. The taxpayers' group declared that its investigators had found many unemployed appearing at relief headquarters driving their own automobiles, they thought it was paradoxical that a man could afford to maintain his automobile and could not maintain his family. Relief authorities in the local offices denied these charges. The relief experts said some of the destitute were being transported to relief headquarters in the cars of friends, but despite the denials there seemed to have been some fire in all of the smoke.

Whatever the facts in the National Capital situation may have been, the condition itself nevertheless is attracting attention for the reason that some of the soft-hearted individuals who usually do more talking than anything else have risen to the defense of those who called for their doles in their motor cars.

The upshot of this and of the veiled charges of waste—and sometimes graft—in other cities is that this government is approaching a point where it must become more or less hardboiled in its relief administration. If it does not, nearly all of the observers agree, the United States will have a relief roll of six or eight millions which will continue to serve as a drain upon the treasuries, both national and local, for a good many years to come. Some of the authorities are growing fearful, too, of what may happen should the parasite element be separated from its meal ticket. With winter coming on radicals can make a fine case out of a refusal by relief managers to feed this or that "starving family." I have even heard suggestions that the coming winter may see some riots of a character more severe than anything we have yet known. But if they do come it seems to be agreed they will not be due entirely to lack of food but to agitation on the part of some of those who have desired only to wreck our present structure of government.

With the return for the winter session of the Supreme Court of the United States, New Deal Up Dealers as well as to High Court old dealers may have some ground for belief that questions respecting their acts in the last year soon will be answered. In this country, we have always looked to the courts as the last resort to tell us when our legislative bodies as well as executive officers of our governments, state or national, have gone beyond bounds. All through the summer there has been the mounting demand for juridical construction of New Deal acts. It appears we are about to get them in numbers from the highest court in the land. There are sufficient petitions before the Supreme court to provide a rather accurate delimitation of the New Deal scope in its constitutional aspects.

Expert legal opinion here seems to lean toward substantiation of most of the New Deal activities by the high court. But at the same time some of the best legal minds in the country are maintaining that while part of the New Deal props look good, they are outside of what has hitherto been regarded as constitutional acts on the part of government and so the consensus is that there will be many five-to-four decisions forthcoming from the Supreme court before it lays aside its robes next spring.

As the Supreme court now is constituted, I think it is generally regarded as leaning to the conservative side. While the court is not supposed to be influenced by economic phases, the economy of the New Deal is so entwined with law that many astute observers tell me there can be no segregation of those two elements when it comes to ruling on constitutional phases of the New Deal.

The best available figures show that the government has instituted about 140 cases charging violation of NRA codes. It has won about 37 of these, and has lost about 15 of those coming to a decision. Private litigants have brought action against the NRA in 29 cases and the government has won 20 of these.

Similarly, there have been something like 20 cases in the courts involving Agricultural Adjustment administration rules and regulations, of those that have gone through to a decision the government has won seven and lost three.

While it must be remembered that only a small percentage of these cases represent clear-cut issues, the box score certainly indicates the New Deal to be the winner thus far. But as said above, the lower court decisions mean next to nothing on questions of such import as these; none of the litigants will stop short of a final decision by the Supreme Court of the United States.

A situation, somewhat unique in American politics is developing in Wisconsin where the La Follette brothers are undertaking to continue the family dynasty by marching under the banner of a new organization, the progressive party. It is all being done very quietly but the facts seep through the national political headquarters here in Washington.

The regular Republican organization sees an opportunity to "knock off" the La Follette brothers by throwing their support to John M. Callahan, the Democratic candidate for the senate. Apparently they have little or no hope of electing their own senatorial candidate, the Wisconsin publisher, John B. Chapelle, who ended the political career of former Senator John J. Blaine in the primaries of 1932.

If Mr. Callahan does poll a sizeable Republican vote the question is whether this will offset the defections in the Democratic party. He was one of the leading supporters of Alfred E. Smith at the 1932 convention and neither the President nor his lieutenants have forgotten that it was the present Democratic senatorial candidate in Wisconsin who gave publicity to charges that Mr. Roosevelt's early campaign in the South for presidential nomination was in part financed and supported by the officers of the Ku Klux Klan in Georgia.

All of which leads to the observation that political leaders sometimes do very strange things. They have been known to throw their own candidates overboard when the occasion required if they were to hold their control of the party machinery, state or national. Consequently, it is not particularly strange that the Republicans will support a Democrat for the senate if it would mean the removal of the thorn in their sides which the La Follette family has proven for several decades.

Potatoes for Salad
Some housewives always peel potatoes before cooking them, no matter for what purpose they are preparing them. You will find it much better to cook them in their jackets and peel them afterward when you are to use them for potato salad. They are easier to peel and retain more nourishment, and this procedure saves time.

Vanishing Islands
Failure of a Japanese naval survey party to find Ganges Island, in the Magellan archipelago, is a new reminder of the constant changes going on in the earth's surface. For years Ganges Island was there, near the steamship route from Yokohama to Honolulu, about one-fourth of the distance from the Japanese port. Now it has vanished. Such a fate is not unusual. For the Pacific islands are frequently of volcanic origin, and that which pushed up their soil above the waves occasionally draws them back beneath the waters, leaving not a trace.—New York Evening Post.

Why Hospitals Use a Liquid Laxative

Hospitals and doctors have always used liquid laxatives. And the public is fast returning to laxatives in liquid form. Do you know the reasons?

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

The right dose of a liquid laxative brings a more natural movement, and there is no discomfort at the time, or after.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

A properly prepared liquid laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin brings safe relief from constipation. It gently helps the average person's bowels until nature restores them to regularity. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is an approved liquid laxative which all druggists keep ready for use. It makes an ideal family laxative; effective for all ages, and may be given the youngest child.
