BENTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY EVENING, NOVEMBER 2, 1892. NUMBER 2.

Vol. 5.

Barnett and Election

The speech that Senator Benton heard last week was highly thrice. He said that it was a speech that should be heard and repeated in every town and hamlet throughout the country. The speech was delivered by Mr. Blaine, who was at the depot at Bloomington, Illinois, listening to the train.

The speech was delivered in a manner that was calculated to arouse the emotions of the audience. Mr. Blaine began by saying that he had been in the East for the last few days, and that he had been impressed with the condition of the country. He said that the country was in a state of depression, and that the people were suffering.

He went on to say that the cause of the depression was the high tariff, which was preventing American goods from competing with foreign goods. He said that the American people were being charged too much for their goods, and that they were not being given a fair deal.

Mr. Blaine then turned to the subject of politics. He said that the people of the country were tired of the corruption and intrigue that had characterized the previous administration. He said that the people wanted a government that was honest and efficient.

He went on to say that the Republicans had promised the people a government that was honest and efficient. He said that they had promised to reduce the tariff, to increase the revenue, and to provide for the welfare of the people.

Mr. Blaine then turned to the subject of the Kansas-Nebraska controversy. He said that the Republicans had promised to protect the rights of the people of the territory. He said that the people of the territory wanted to be free to determine their own form of government.

Mr. Blaine then turned to the subject of the railroad question. He said that the Republicans had promised to improve the railroads, and to make them more efficient and convenient.

He went on to say that the people of the country were tired of the inaction of the previous administration. He said that the Republicans were determined to do something for the people, and that they would not be content until they had achieved their ends.

Mr. Blaine then turned to the subject of the tariff. He said that the Republicans had promised to reduce the tariff, and to make it lower and more equitable.

He went on to say that the people of the country wanted a government that was honest and efficient. He said that the Republicans would do everything in their power to achieve this end.

The speech was delivered in a manner that was calculated to arouse the emotions of the audience. Mr. Blaine's words were响亮 and his gestures were dramatic. The audience was thoroughly impressed by his words and his gestures.

To the voice of the Second Seal of the Apocalypse, 'the time of the warmth has come; and there is the beginning of the destruction of the earth and of the sea.'

The people of the nation are calling for the destruction of the party that sprang into existence under the name of the Democratic.

There never was a party that sprang into existence under the name of the Democratic and the Whigs, and the famous and illustrious Thorobred Horse, — NOW IS THE TIME.
