FULTON, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1934.

NUMBER FORTY.

Officials of 2 Cities Meet

A special session was held at the city hall Tuesday night between the city councils of Fulton and South Fulton, for the purpose of discussing the problem of handling the water situation that now exists between the two cities. The city of Fulton has been furnishing South Fulton with its water supply, collecting from users for the service.

In the past it has been a custom to refund 25 percent of the gross receipts from the city of South Fulton to that municipality. Recently, the authorities of South Fulton were notified that they would not receive this rebate until some agreeable adjustment could be made, as the city council of Fulton felt that this rebate was too high in face of the fact that expensive repairs will soon be necessary upon the water plant here.

The question was discussed by members of both councils. South Fulton insists that they are due the rebate, while Fulton contends for an adjustment. No definite decision was reached in the meeting Tuesday night, but it is likely that the matter will be decided upon at the next regular meeting of the Fulton council Monday night.

Inasmuch as many property owners in Fulton are behind in payment of their street assessments, the Fulton council discussed the problem facing the city. Unless these delinquent assessments are paid the city will default on some of the street bonds now outstanding, it is stated by officials.

Farm Bureau In Membership Drive

As was announced last week, Ben Kilgore, executive secretary of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, will deliver an address at the Chamber of Commerce tonight, Friday, Nov. 2. Members of the Fulton County Farm Bureau and farmers of this section are expected to compose a large attendance.

A letter has been sent out to the farmers in this county by Cecil Burnett, president of the Fulton County Farm Bureau, urging them to become members of the organization, and assist in carrying forward a constructive program this coming year. The object of the bureau is to lay plans and carry them out in order to put agriculture on a paying basis.

Among the important features of the talk to be made by Mr. Kilgore, will be a discussion of the plans of the Farm Bureau for 1935 and the AAA.

PROF. CHECK AT MURRAY COLLEGE

Murray, Ky.—Prof. J. C. Check, 83, noted educator of Fulton, Ky., has donated to Murray State College his lifetime collection of minerals, shells, curios and specimens of timber from all parts of the world.

Mr. Check, superintendent of the Fulton city schools for 35 years, was a homecoming visitor at Murray State College. He made a brief talk at the meeting of the alumni. The collection of rare gifts is worth several thousands of dollars, according to Prof. E. H. Smith, director of extension at Murray State College.

Prof. Check spent five months last year in California and Florida collecting materials. Mr. Smith and Prof. G. C. Pennebaker, biology instructor, went to Fulton Tuesday, October 30 and brought the collection to Murray College. The collection is now under care of Mr. Pennebaker and will soon be placed in Murray College's rapidly enlarging museum.

Most of the business men of Fulton are former students of Mr. Check. While at Murray College Mr. Check was greeted by many Murray College students whose parents and grandparents had been his students.

NEWS BRIEFS

A revival is now being conducted at the First Presbyterian church of this city by Rev. L. R. Neill of Troy. Services are being held each night at 7:30 o'clock.

A revival will start next Sunday at the Pleasant View Baptist church near Dukesboro. Rev. L. W. Carlin of Waynesboro, Tenn., will do the preaching. The meeting will continue each evening next week thru Thursday.

At the regular weekly meeting of the Elks Club Monday night, six more new members were added by initiation as follows: Frank Wiggins, Fred Patton, H. B. Reeves, Oscar Dun, Jack Edwards, Charles Murphy. Twelve more new members are to be initiated next Monday night.

Checks totaling over $111,000 have been received this week by Ohio county farmers in payment for their co-operation in the corn-hog program. These checks have been distributed to the farmers.

Bo Hicks, the 640-pound negro who attracted so much attention here recently, while enroute to his home in Mississippi, dropped dead on the streets of Leland, Miss., this week. He had been working with a carnival at Greenville, Miss., but had returned to his home in Leland a few days before because of illness.

When seen in Fulton Hicks was at the passenger station awaiting arrival of train taking him home. He had been with a carnival traveling through Kentucky and Tennessee. After his death 11 negroes were employed to carry him to his home, where he was prepared for burial. Carpenters were hired to make a special casket for the "heavyweight king."

FULTON HIGH NEWS

The Alumni Association is giving a play Thursday and Friday nights to help pay for the football blankets they bought for the team last year.

The Bulldogs went down before the Union City freshman team Saturday 6-0. The Union City boys have defeated the Bulldogs twice this year.

The High School band, under the able management of Mr. Floyd, made their first public appearance Wednesday at the gymnasium. A most enthusiastic pep meeting was held, assisted by the band playing the Washington Lee Swing. The band is composed of about thirty-five members. Miss Peggy Williams has been elected drum major.

The High School will be dismissed at 1:20 o'clock Friday afternoon and the student body will meet at the Science Hall. They will then participate in the football parade to be led by the band. The football queen, who will be publicly announced Friday morning, will march in front of the band. They will leave the school Friday afternoon at 1:45 o'clock and march straight down Second-st into Lake-st, cross the railroad to Main-st, back to Lake-st at Irb's corner and then out to the football field. The band will march on the football field at the half. Admission to the game will be 35c 25c and 15c.

A movement has been made for all the business stores in Fulton to be closed Friday afternoon from 2:15 to 4:00 o'clock on account of the big home coming game.

Civic Clubs Show St. Louis Business Men Swell Time

Fulton civic clubs and business men turned out in large numbers to welcome and banquet with the St. Louis group at the Usona Hotel Tuesday at noon. The St. Louis visitors stopped in Fulton on their good-will tour of West Kentucky and Tennessee. Their special train arrived here at 11 o'clock to leave for Martin the next stop on their tour at 1 p. m.

The St. Louis group, accompanied by Mayor Paul DeMyer of Fulton, and members of the Rotary, Lions and YMBA, marched through the downtown business district, after which they went to the hotel for luncheon.

John Earle, president of the Rotary Club, presided, introducing Mayor DeMyer who welcomed the St. Louis men to Fulton. After a few brief talks by representatives of the various civic organizations, the meeting was turned over to John Earle N. Lashmet, president of the sales managers bureau of St. Louis. He introduced W. H. Bryan, who spoke briefly on the purpose of the visit to Fulton, and expressed appreciation of the hospitality extended by the St. Louis visitors.

Various members of the visiting group were introduced to make a few brief remarks. The meeting was one of good fellowship, and was enjoyed by all present. "PLANT-TO-PROSPER" IDEA PROMOTES HEALTH IN DELTA

Savings of several hundred dollars annually have been made possible on the R. A. Ireland place near Greenville, Miss., through the adoption of the "Plant to Prosper" idea in substance and in spirit. Mr. Ireland says:

"The savings comes in reduced doctors' bills and medicine costs for the tenants," declared Mr. Ireland, member of the county control committee and one of the contestants in the "Plant to Prosper" Competition sponsored by the Commercial Appeal and the Memphis Chamber of Commerce agricultural committee.

"Up until recent years, my medical bills and doctors' charges for tenants has run from $200 to $500 or more every year. It never occurred to me that there was any way to remedy this situation.

"Then I began to require each tenant to plant large vegetable gardens and to eat a greater variety of food. Instead of dried meat and cornmeal peas, they had real edible vegetables and good wholesome meat.

"I spent $175 screening the tenant houses and ditching the place for proper drainage. Next year this bill will be only a fraction of that amount, but I had to make a start on a large scale.

"The result of all this is that the cost of medicines and doctors on my farm this year will not exceed $15. There was less disease than I had ever seen. The tenants were well fed, wholesome fed, and they are a healthier, happier lot. Not only did I actually save money despite the cost of ditching and screening, but I got more labor out of my hands because they were better able to work than has been the case in the past.

"I have always been a believer in diversified farming and I am convinced now more than ever that there is tremendous good in the 'plant to prosper' idea."

Miss Elizabeth Shankle returned to her home on Edgington after visiting a few days in Paducah with her sister, Mrs. William Caldwell.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Harding announce the birth of a daughter, born Sunday, October 28, in Detroit, Mich. Mrs. Harding is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Gardner of Fulton.

Herbert Williams and George Rothenbough spent last week end in Fulton with the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Williams on Green-st.

COMMENTS

St. Louis business men have seen Fulton—with its five-point railway and highway systems. Representatives of many manufacturing concerns were in the group of visitors. Many of them learn facts about this community which they will recollect for a long time.

J. C. Wiggins, one of Fulton's popular clothing merchants, received a deck of cards Tuesday as a souvenir from one of the visiting St. Louis men. He said, however, that he couldn't use them for "fish bait" so he'll have to trade them off. J. C. is a great fisherman, you know.

Montel Manley, songster of local fame, put the St. Louis "song birds" to shame, who tried to sing their way into the heart of Fulton. As they visited local stores they stopped by Wiggins'. The band struck up the music, then a solo was given by an enterprising St. Louis man. Montel came back at them with a few "notes" of her own.

Great work, Mr. Floyd! The school band is making wonderful progress. At this rate Fulton will have some mighty good young musicians.

Despite gas wars, closed bridges and all manner of catastrophes Sam Taylor at Shell Service Station on West State Line won his suit of clothes. It was like this: Sam was to beat his past month's sales of gasoline and sell so many thousand gallons to get a new suit. He did by the hardest, reaching his mark on the night of the last day of the month.

There are several good fellows around town who will be initiated as Elks next Monday night. They don't know what's in store for them as a royal welcome—but they will!

Louis Kasnow is a great talker when he gets started. Everyone who heard him at the banquet Tuesday will testify to that. He is a great fellow in boasting. "Never kick a fellow when he's down" Louis advises, or he may get right up and put you down with one punch.

It is always interesting to watch a live wire at work, pulling for something worthwhile. Again, we congratulate a Fulton institution that is helping put this community on the map. Mr. Waitman and Warner Bros. are bringing the best in theatrical entertainment to Fulton, with the result that hundreds of out-of-town people attend the show here. Now comes the announcement that Will Rogers will appear here soon in "Handy Andy." Too, that popular serialization, "Merry Widow," is coming. All in all, a "greater movie season" will include pictures that offer the highest entertainment.

R. M. Belew, who has bid you "good morning" at the money order window of the postoffice here for many years, is no longer there to greet you. He has served his allotted time with the postal department and is now a man of leisure. Mr. Belew started as a mail carrier at Crutchfield when a young man of 29. That was in the year 1904, on October 15. He served there until July 1, 1913, when he was transferred to Fulton, taking the General Delivery window here. In 1917 he went to the money order department, where he has labored faithfully ever since. He had spent 30 years in the postal service October 15, 1934. Under the recent ruling he was eligible for retirement, so asked to be relieved.

In all the years of his service he missed only one day because the postmaster at Crutchfield told him that he was permitted to take Christmas Day off with pay, which later turned out to be incorrect. Mr. Belew has remarkably good health, and informs us that he has no plans for future occupation other than his home, and farm near Crutchfield.

Depositors To Get 10 Pct.

Three years and fifteen days after the Farmers Bank of this city closed its doors, depositors received a ten percent dividend on their frozen deposits. E. F. Thomason, special deputy bank and securities commissioner, who is in charge of liquidation of the Farmers Bank, announced that a dividend would be paid beginning this past Monday, which would amount to approximately $18,000.

The Farmers Bank closed on October 14, 1931. At that time its capital stock was $50,000, with deposits ranging around $235,000 for fifteen hundred depositors, according to Mr. Thomason. Collection of notes and other outstanding indebtedness has made it possible to pay the first dividend of ten percent, and it is probable that another will be forthcoming in a short while. It is estimated that there are $180,000 in claims against the bank.

Preferred claims against the bank have been paid, and in the future all money collected will be applied on the payment of depositors and other creditors. Mr. Thomason explained. Every effort is being made to liquidate the frozen assets as soon as possible.

Says WILL ROGERS

BEVERLY HILLS.—This is an article on "Cosmic Rays." You know what a cosmic ray is? Just what I thought.

Well you just as well learn now for you are going to hear a lot about em now any day. You are going to wake up some morning and a big headline will be in the paper and wont be about Sinclair being elected, or "Dizzy" Dean gets $1000 per batter to pitch. It's going to be about cosmic rays.

A cosmic ray, or cosmic rays, as they may be found in the plural, or bunches, or they may be located away off by themselves. They are a possible new source of energy, they are about 45 thousand feet up in the air. To bring it down to the understanding of my lay readers, that's about nine miles. Now anything to be nine miles away dont mean much, especially if there is a good road and the old car is going good, but nine miles straight up, thats about equal to 18 miles on the flat.

Cosmic rays—well the fellow that explained em to me wasent any too plain. Its sorter like the "Atom." The atom is a thing that Brisbane is always explaining to us. He seems to think quite well of it. In fact I think he has recommended some of the stock for sale. He seems to think if they can split the atom, that it will do even better than it is. Well this cosmic ray is a sort of atom splitter.

Now with this good working knowledge of the cosmic ray that I have given you, I will go ahead now and describe the cosmic ray hunters. The ones I run onto was a man and a woman, in fact a wife. Their names are Mr. and Mrs. Jean Picard.

Well these Picards that crave these cosmic rays are making preparations to go on this cosmic rodeo. He is a brother of that one that went up over in Switzerland to about 10 miles, so you cant blame this fellow too much as its a family thing. Well I had read about em, and heard about em, but I never had any idea I would ever be so fortunate as to meet em.

Well I thought I ought to go over and see their machine. It was a sort of a home made contraption. Course part of it is a balloon 175 feet high, with 105 feet diameter. It was just as big, lying in this hangar, but the thing is an iron basket or gondola. (Thats what they call it.) I crawled into the thing at a hole in the top.

Before Mr. Roosevelt spoke, the bankers were addressed by Jackson Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York and a staunch sound money advocate. He appealed for co-operation with the President, highly praising his efforts at rehabilitation and saying:

"If the government and the banks continue in the role of antagonists it will invoke the gravest consequences to our country, perhaps even the destruction of many institutions and principles we have long held dear.

"The poor, whom we have always with us, will not be much worse off. The rich will survive in comfort at least, as they always have, but the great stratum of our people between these two groups will be irretrievably ruined.

"If, on the other hand, we abandon our antagonism for friendly, understanding, sympathetic co-operation, I believe we can make a great contribution toward the perpetuation of our cherished institutions, the encouragement of our fellow citizens, and the gradual and sound rebuilding of the shattered economic and financial structure of our country."

Further overtures to the bankers were made by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and J. P. Morgan, controller of the currency. Both of them gave assurance that the economic condition of the country is sound, and Mr. Jones urged the bankers to expand their loans to business.

To all this the bankers responded by unanimously adopting resolutions promising to co-operate with the government but demanding a balanced budget.

Rudolf S. Hecht of New Orleans was elected president of the association to succeed Mr. Law.

WAR clouds over central Europe are not dissipated by the partial solution of the plot that resulted in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia. It is established that the murder was the work of the Croatian group of terrorists called the Oustacha and the head of the gang, Dr. Anton Pavelic, has been arrested together with his assistant, Eugene Kvaternik.

The three companions of the assassin, who were captured in France, have confessed that they trained for the job in a camp in Hungary and held Hungarian passports. It is charged in the French press that they or their Oustacha chiefs were in secret contact with Hungarian or Italian officials, and if it can be established that their funds came from such sources, most serious complications may result.

The permanent councils of both the little entente and the Balkan entente, which include Rumania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Greece and Turkey, have issued identical communiques asserting their solidarity with Yugoslavia and laying responsibility for King Alexander's assassination upon terrorists urged on by the foreign policies of nations which were not named but which clearly are indicated to be Hungary and Italy.

The communiques gave warning of a probable war unless "international measures are loyally adopted" to stop political assassination and conspiracy. Both the ententes decided to adopt common measures against all political conspirators.

So far, Hungary is bearing the brunt of the blame for the Marcellus assassination, but Premier Goemboes asserts his country is "entirely guiltless of any connection with the foul crime."

BREAKING records all along the route, the new streamlined train of the Union Pacific, made an extraordinary run from Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours 55 minutes. The best previous time for a transcontinental train crossing was established in 1906, when the late E. H. Harriman, then chairman of the Union Pacific, traveled from San Francisco to New York in 71 hours 27 minutes.

The new tube-shaped train also established a world's speed record of 120 miles an hour as it sped from Buffalo to New York. The train passed over the 30-mile stretch of straightaway between Buffalo and Batavia, on which the Empire State Express of the New York Central achieved a speed of 112½ miles an hour on May 10, 1933.

IMMEDIATE cash payment of the veterans' bonus certificates was demanded by the American Legion in convention at Miami, Fla., despite the knowledge that it is opposed by President Roosevelt and the belief that he would veto any legislation providing for such payment.

The vote was 97-183.

The Legion's new national commander is Frank Belgrano, Jr., of San Francisco, now a banker. All other candidates withdrew and were elected unanimously. In his speech of acceptance he said he would conduct his office with vigor and determination and would give it his undivided attention.

"Our country is filled today with too much talk about isms," he said. "Everywhere we hear about Communism, Socialism, Fascism, Hitlerism, and others too numerous to mention.

"There is room in this country for only one ism. That is Americanism. Without equivocation or reservation, I say to you that under my administration this American Legion is a sworn enemy of every other ism. That is a declaration of war."

The following were elected as national vice commanders: Daniel J. Doherty, Woburn, Mass.; Harold J. Warner, Pendleton, Ore.; John Kennedy, Mandan, N. D.; Milo J. Warner, Toledo, Ohio; and Quimby Melton, Griffin, Ga.

Rev. Dr. Park W. Huntington, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran church in Wilmington, Del., was chosen unanimously as national chaplain.

John D. Crowley of Cambridge, Mass., was elected chief de chemin de fer of the "40 and 80" play organization of the Legion and Mrs. A. C. Carlson of William, Minn., was elected national president of the American Legion auxiliary.

Next year's convention was awarded to St. Louis, Mo.

PROF. JEAN PICARD made another balloon excursion into the stratosphere, and accompanying him was his plucky wife, Jeanette, the only French woman balloon pilot in the United States. They ascended from Detroit with their 600,000 cubic-foot bag, passed over Lake Erie, rose to a height of about ten miles, and then came down on a farm four miles west of Cadiz, Ohio. The gondola landed in a tree but the two occupants were only slightly bruised and scratched, and it was believed the delicate scientific instruments they carried were unharmed.

EIGHT federal officers led by Melvin Purvis, head of the Justice department's bureau of investigation in Chicago, caught up with Charles A. Floyd, known as "Pretty Boy," on a farm near East Liverpool, Ohio, and a few minutes later the desperado of the Ozarks was dead with fifteen bullets in his body. He had two automatic pistols but did not fire a shot as he sought to escape across a field. Floyd, accused of at least seven murders and lately of complicity in the Kansas City depot massacre, was held for years. He was Oklahoma's most notorious outlaw since the days of Jennings and the Daltons.

News Review of Current Events the World Over

Bankers and President Roosevelt Move Toward an Accord; War Clouds Still Hover Over Balkans; Legion for Bonus Cash Payment.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FOUR thousand or so financiers gathered in Washington for the annual convention of the American Bankers' association, and it became apparent at once that they were far from unanimous in their opinions concerning the economic policies of the New Deal. Francis Marion Law of Houston, Texas, retiring president of the association, gave out an interview in which he said he believed that economic recovery had arrived at a point where bankers of the United States could honestly advise business men to go into debt again in order to put idle bank reserves to work. Further, he stated that bankers feel that the securities of the United States government are the best investment "on the face of the earth" and that there need be no concern over the condition of government credit.

What made this expression especially noteworthy was the fact that only recently the federal advisory council, composed of leading bankers, issued a warning that government credit was being menaced by the unbalanced condition of the federal budget and the unbalanced dollar.

Then appeared before the bankers in Constitution hall President Roosevelt himself and made an appeal for "an alliance of all forces intent upon the business of recovery." He called on the banks to lend more money to finance the New Deal program.

"Government should assert its leadership in encouraging not only confidence of the people in banks but the confidence of the banks in the people," he said.

"In March, 1933, I asked the people of this country to renew their confidence in banks. They took me at my word. Tonight I ask the bankers of this country to renew their confidence in the people of this country. I think you will take me at my word."

He said that the administration stood squarely back of continuance of the profit system and that emergency activities would be curtailed as fast as private business could pick up the load.

It was noted that the President made no promise to balance the budget or to stabilize the currency; also that he did not comment on the proposal to create a central bank. His talk was heartily applauded, but many of his hearers were far from satisfied.

Before Mr. Roosevelt spoke, the bankers were addressed by Jackson Reynolds, president of the First National bank of New York and a staunch sound money advocate. He appealed for co-operation with the President, highly praising his efforts at rehabilitation and saying:

"If the government and the banks continue in the role of antagonists it will invoke the gravest consequences to our country, perhaps even the destruction of many institutions and principles we have long held dear.

"The poor, whom we have always with us, will not be much worse off. The rich will survive in comfort at least, as they always have, but the great stratum of our people between these two groups will be irretrievably ruined.

"If, on the other hand, we abandon our antagonism for friendly, understanding, sympathetic co-operation, I believe we can make a great contribution toward the perpetuation of our cherished institutions, the encouragement of our fellow citizens, and the gradual and sound rebuilding of the shattered economic and financial structure of our country."

Further overtures to the bankers were made by Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, and J. P. Morgan, controller of the currency. Both of them gave assurance that the economic condition of the country is sound, and Mr. Jones urged the bankers to expand their loans to business.

To all this the bankers responded by unanimously adopting resolutions promising to co-operate with the government but demanding a balanced budget.

Rudolf S. Hecht of New Orleans was elected president of the association to succeed Mr. Law.

WAR clouds over central Europe are not dissipated by the partial solution of the plot that resulted in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia. It is established that the murder was the work of the Croatian group of terrorists called the Oustacha and the head of the gang, Dr. Anton Pavelic, has been arrested together with his assistant, Eugene Kvaternik.

The three companions of the assassin, who were captured in France, have confessed that they trained for the job in a camp in Hungary and held Hungarian passports. It is charged in the French press that they or their Oustacha chiefs were in secret contact with Hungarian or Italian officials, and if it can be established that their funds came from such sources, most serious complications may result.

The permanent councils of both the little entente and the Balkan entente, which include Rumania, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Greece and Turkey, have issued identical communiques asserting their solidarity with Yugoslavia and laying responsibility for King Alexander's assassination upon terrorists urged on by the foreign policies of nations which were not named but which clearly are indicated to be Hungary and Italy.

The communiques gave warning of a probable war unless "international measures are loyally adopted" to stop political assassination and conspiracy. Both the ententes decided to adopt common measures against all political conspirators.

So far, Hungary is bearing the brunt of the blame for the Marcellus assassination, but Premier Goemboes asserts his country is "entirely guiltless of any connection with the foul crime."

BREAKING records all along the route, the new streamlined train of the Union Pacific, made an extraordinary run from Los Angeles to New York in 56 hours 55 minutes. The best previous time for a transcontinental train crossing was established in 1906, when the late E. H. Harriman, then chairman of the Union Pacific, traveled from San Francisco to New York in 71 hours 27 minutes.

The new tube-shaped train also established a world's speed record of 120 miles an hour as it sped from Buffalo to New York. The train passed over the 30-mile stretch of straightaway between Buffalo and Batavia, on which the Empire State Express of the New York Central achieved a speed of 112½ miles an hour on May 10, 1933.

IMMEDIATE cash payment of the veterans' bonus certificates was demanded by the American Legion in convention at Miami, Fla., despite the knowledge that it is opposed by President Roosevelt and the belief that he would veto any legislation providing for such payment.

The vote was 97-183.

The Legion's new national commander is Frank Belgrano, Jr., of San Francisco, now a banker. All other candidates withdrew and were elected unanimously. In his speech of acceptance he said he would conduct his office with vigor and determination and would give it his undivided attention.

"Our country is filled today with too much talk about isms," he said. "Everywhere we hear about Communism, Socialism, Fascism, Hitlerism, and others too numerous to mention.

"There is room in this country for only one ism. That is Americanism. Without equivocation or reservation, I say to you that under my administration this American Legion is a sworn enemy of every other ism. That is a declaration of war."

The following were elected as national vice commanders: Daniel J. Doherty, Woburn, Mass.; Harold J. Warner, Pendleton, Ore.; John Kennedy, Mandan, N. D.; Milo J. Warner, Toledo, Ohio; and Quimby Melton, Griffin, Ga.

Rev. Dr. Park W. Huntington, pastor of St. Stephen's Lutheran church in Wilmington, Del., was chosen unanimously as national chaplain.

John D. Crowley of Cambridge, Mass., was elected chief de chemin de fer of the "40 and 80" play organization of the Legion and Mrs. A. C. Carlson of William, Minn., was elected national president of the American Legion auxiliary.

Next year's convention was awarded to St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Van Loon Says We Build Good Planes Ford Sees Light Why Pedro Jumped

Mr. Van Loon, able writer, who is "Dutch" and proud of it, doesn't wait anybody to call himself a Netherlander or anything but just a plain "Dutch man"—wishes this fact made clear.

The two Dutchmen that followed so closely behind the British winners of the 11,000-mile air race were really demonstrating serious flying. They did not fly any made-to-order racing machine. They piloted a regular commercial plane and they carried passengers, as airplanes should do.

British aviators, interested in making flying pay for American machine, a Douglas air liner, with Wright Cyclone motors, and the United States Boeing transport plane in which Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn were trailing for third place, are "straight stock commercial planes."

The British race winner is a "bullet-like racer."

This doesn't take away from the credit of the plucky Englishmen, or diminish in any way their marvelous performance in cutting the flying time from London to Australia by 100 hours. They made the flight to Darwin in 52 hours. But the race does show that private enterprise in the United States is able to build useful commercial planes.

Henry Ford, who even now pays out hundreds of millions a year, directly and indirectly, for well paid labor, sees "light in the darkness," and says our "Santa Claus methods" of handing out money have "made softies of many Americans."

But, in President Roosevelt's apparent determination to encourage independence and allow business men to run their own businesses, Mr. Ford sees great hope. He thinks we are crawling up over the top.

Let's hope we shall see from the summit, not too far off, bunches of prosperity as big as the bunches of grapes that cheered the Israelites nearing the promised land.

Here is a suicide story, brand new. Pedro Crocetto, fisherman of the island of Cerrato, found a pearl weighing 100 karats, thought it was worth $100,000. When, at La Paz, Lower California, dealers would give him only $1,000 for his pearl, Pedro hurled his pearl into the ocean, jumped in after it, was torn to pieces by sharks.

Moralists would have convinced him that $100,000, if he had got the money, would have done him no good. He did not wait.

President Roosevelt possesses, among other agreeable and unusual qualities, that of giving full credit to others.

Receiving an honorary degree of doctor of laws, and speaking at William and Mary colleges, where Thomas Jefferson, Patrick Henry, John Marshall, James Monroe and John Tyler were students in the old Virginia days, the President gave full and generous credit to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., for his patriotic work in restoring to its colonial condition Virginia's ancient city, Williamsburg, "the cradle of American liberty."

Wherever there is trouble in the human body there is, not far away, some remedy for that trouble. Surgeons have always dreaded peritonitis, a widespread, dangerous inflammation that sometimes accompanies surgical operations.

Now science has discovered that a certain "amniotic fluid," always present in the child bearing period in human beings and animals, supplies a vaccine that prevents peritonitis.

Doctors extract the amniotic fluid from cows, use it on their patients, and have reduced from 50 per cent to 2 per cent the mortality caused by peritonitis following operations on the bowels.

This discovery will prevent many deaths from intestinal gunshot wounds and other typical American injuries.

Patrick Mulligan, of New York, unemployed chauffeur, penniless, learned just before midnight that his wife, Cecelia, aged twenty-five, had given birth to three boys and one girl in the Lincoln hospital, first quadruplets born in that hospital in more than 50 years.

The four babies, total weight only ten pounds, lived only four hours. Perhaps that illustrates the difference between the life chance of babies born in the city and babies born in the country air, as were the still living Dionne Canadian quintuplets.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, back from Germany, where he saw Hitler and Schacht, says that discrimination against the Jews is diminishing in Germany, the attitude of the Nazi being considerably modified.

The really surprising news, which might be listed under "Irony of Fate," is that Germany's export business is seriously crippled in all directions, except in one country, and that country—you would not guess it—is Palestine.

German statistics show that exports from Germany to Palestine rose 66 per cent in the first year of the Hitler regime, and are continuing to rise. Now Palestine buys from Germany more goods than from the United States and almost as much as from Britain.

Diesel Engine Supreme in Economy and Power

Diesel locomotives have had a year's test and according to a bulletin issued by the manufacturers the cost of operation is little over half that of steam locomotives.

"They are now in the class of the automobile, for adaptability and availability," says the bulletin. "When needed it is necessary only to get into the cab and pull out. All that is required is to see that the fuel tank is supplied and that engine oil is O. K. and once a week to check the water. No longer are an engineering doctor and a mechanical nurse necessary. Each night they would run her into the engine yard, lock her up, just like the family motor car and go home. Each morning a different crew would take her out for work in some other locality. No instructions, no mystery, no preparation."

"The old steam locomotive requires a powerful lot of hostling every time she is needed. That takes time and money. It takes close to an hour to light the fires and raise steam. The Diesel, like the motor car, is always ready to go on the instant. Just push on the starter and you are off. When you bring her back you are through. No stabling operations, such as dropping fires, cleaning ash pan, smoke box and so forth.

"Reduction in cost of operation will pay for the engine in five years."

DRUGS?

Don't make the mistake of giving even a 14-year old boy strong medicines meant for adults.

Boys and girls who have reached their "teens" are not ready to be given powerful drugs!

It is not wise to give laxatives of adult strength to a child, just because you give them less frequently or in less amounts. Many stomach upsets and bowel troubles of growing children can be traced to this single mistake.

Use a liquid laxative containing senna (a natural laxative). California Syrup of Figs has the right amount for children's use, and this rich, fruity syrup does not harm or upset a child's system.

Give that headachy, bilious child a little of this gentle laxative when constipated, and a little less, if dose is repeated until bowels seem to be moving regularly and thoroughly without need of help.

Get the true California Syrup of Figs containing senna and cascara, which will not weaken the bowels or irritate the kidneys. You'll soon have full evidence that it safely relieves constipation in children.

THE "LIQUID TEST." First: select a liquid laxative of the proper strength for children. Second: give the dose suited to the child's age. Third: reduce the dose, if repeated, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

An ideal laxative for this purpose is the pure California Syrup of Figs, but be sure the word "California" is on the bottle.

PETER FINDS HE IS MISTAKEN

off. He didn't hop, but walked, and at that distance looked all black. The way he carried himself and his movements as he walked, made Peter think of Creaker the Grackle. In fact, Peter mistook him for Creaker. That was because he didn't really look at him. If he had he would have seen at once that the stranger was smaller than Creaker.

Presently the stranger flew up in a tree, and at once Peter saw that his tail was little more than half as long as that of Creaker. At once it came over Peter that this was a stranger to him. Of course his curiosity was aroused at once. Anything like that is sure to arouse Peter's curiosity. He didn't have any doubt whatever that this was a member of the Blackbird family, but which one it could be he hadn't the least idea. "Jenny Wren will know," thought Peter, and scampered off to hunt her up.

"Who is that new member of the Blackbird family who has come to live in the Old Orchard?" Peter asked as soon as he found Jenny Wren.

Jenny's sharp little eyes snapped and she twitched her funny little tail as only she can. "What's that?" she cried.

"Who is that new member of the Blackbird family who has come to live in the Old Orchard?" repeated Peter.

"There isn't any new member of the Blackbird family living in the Old Orchard," retorted Jenny Wren tartly. "There is, too," contradicted Peter. "I saw him with my own eyes. I can see him now. He's sitting in that tree over yonder this very minute. He's all black, so of course he must be a member of the Blackbird family."

"Tut, tut, tut, tut, tut," scolded Jenny Wren. "Tut, tut, tut, tut, tut! That fellow isn't a member of the Blackbird family at all, and what's more, he isn't black. Go over there and take a good look at him and then come back and tell me if you still think he is black."

Jenny turned her back on Peter and went to hunting worms. There being nothing else to do, Peter hopped over where he could get a good look at the stranger. The sun was shining full on him, and he wasn't black at all. For the most part he was very dark green. At least, that is what Peter thought at first glance. Then, as the stranger moved, he seemed to be a rich purple in places. In short, he changed color. His feathers were like those of Creaker the Grackle—iridescent.

QUESTION BOX

By ED WYNN—The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn: I just heard of a man who kept company with a woman for sixty years and at last he married her when he was 109 years old. Do you believe this? If so, how do you account for a man marrying at 109 years of age, after going with a woman for 60 years?

Sincerely,
B. WILDERED.

Answer: He probably couldn't hold out any longer.

Dear Mr. Wynn: My son, who is in Bridgeport, Conn., has gotten into some sort of trouble and has been arrested. I have been advised to get a criminal lawyer in Bridgeport?

Yours truly,
E. LIZABETH.

Answer: There probably are several, but you'll have a hard time proving it.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I just visited the city of Washington and went to the government buildings. I was particularly interested in the senate chamber. I saw a minister sitting next to the vice president of the United States. Tell me why is the minister there? Does he pray for the senators?

Sincerely,
A. SITESER.

Answer: No! No! No! The minister does not pray for the senators. The minister takes a look at the senators and then prays for the country.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I met a young lady last week and am very fond of her. We were discussing "kissing" last night and she said that kisses were like a bottle of olives. What did she mean by that?

Sincerely,
OS. Q. LATION.

Answer: Very simple. She means that after you get the first one, the rest come easy.

Dear Mr. Wynn: I have traveled all over the world. Everything is hustle bustle. There seems to be no sentiment left in the world. Is there one place in the world where I can find "happiness" and "contentment"?

Yours truly,
PHIL OSOFER.

Answer: There sure is. You can find them both in the dictionary.

MOTHER—THE GOLFER

SHE would be a better golfer if she had a keener eye. For the ball, instead of gazing at the woodlands and the sky. She can never think it better to keep looking at the ball. Thin to watch the baby robins, And to hear their mother call.

She would be a better golfer if she could be taught to know it's the game that is important. Not where four-leaf clovers grow; For she stops the most strategic play and lets a foursome pass. Just to pick a four-leaf clover That is hiding in the grass.

She would be a better golfer—She might get a decent score—If she'd keep her mind on golfing And think manfully of "Fore!" But a golf game means to mother Nothing but a chance to laze Through a green field that reminds her Of her happy rural days.

Preserved Pears.

Take one pound each of pears and sugar, one pint of water and one lemon. The fruit may be preserved whole, in halves, or quartered. Boil the sugar and water five minutes. Cook the lemon in just water to cover, slicing thin; when tender and transparent add water and all to the pears and sirup and cook until the pears are clear and the sirup is thick. If the hard pears are used cook them in the water until tender and use the water for the sirup. A few cloves and stick cinnamon may be added if desired, and pineapple juice instead of water makes a most delightful flavor.

Pumpkin Preserves.

Remove the rind and seeds from a small pumpkin and cut into inch cubes. Cook in a small amount of water until tender. Drain and weigh. For each pound of pumpkin allow a pound of sugar, two lemons and two ounces of ginger root. Slice the lemon and soak with the ginger overnight in cold water. Next morning cook in the same water until the lemon rind is clear and tender. Add the sugar and pumpkin and simmer until the pumpkin is transparent. Drain, pack in jars. Cook the sirup until thick and pour over the fruit in the jars. Seal.

Southern Authors Win Nation Praise

The increasing importance of Southern authors in contemporary American literature is strikingly shown in the current list of books published by Charles Scribner's Sons of New York. Six authors either living in the South or of Southern ancestry are represented. The work of one of these writers is the most popular novel in America today! Another has produced a superb biography, already recognized as the last word on its subject. "So Red the Rose," a novel of Southern life in Mississippi before, during and after the War Between the States, by Stark Young a Mississippian, has led the fiction best selling list from coast to coast ever since its publication in July and has been acclaimed as "the best and most completely realized novel of the Deep South in the Civil War that has yet been written." "R. E. Lee," a biography by Dr. Douglas Southall Freeman, editor of the Richmond, Va. News Leader and well known as a student of Southern history, has been acclaimed as the greatest life of the Southern leader and one of the finest of all American biographies. On the strength of the first two volumes of this work, there will be four in all—Stephen Vincent Benet has already recommended Dr. Freeman for "at least ten Pulitzer prizes."

James Trustlow Adams, Virginian on his father's side, has written "America's Tragedy," an historical study of the growth of sectionalism in the nation, which has been called his best book, and widely praised for its daring, truthful and unbiased handling of such highly controver-

C., a Texan, is represented by two titles on the current Scribner list—"The Adventures of Baron de Marbot," selected passages from the memoirs of a famous Napoleonic cavalryman, which Major Thomason has edited and illustrated in his most brilliant and individual style; and a new, popular-priced edition of his famous biography of the dashing Confederate cavalry leader "J. E. B. Stuart." In fiction, beside "So Red the Rose" there will shortly appear on the Scribner list "Alec Maury: Sportsman" by Carolyn Gordon (Mrs. Allen Tate) of Tennessee. Miss Gordon's novel is completely Southern in background and deals with a man whose ruling passion throughout life was nature and outdoor sport—hunting, fishing and shooting. Its scenes are laid in Kentucky, West Virginia and Tennessee and it has been called the most effective "sporting novel" since Siegfried Sassoon's "Memoirs of a Fox Hunting Man." Scribner's fiction list also includes "This Man and

RED CROSS AGENCIES SAFEGUARD HEALTH

First Aid, Life Saving, Nursing Care, Promote Health and Safety

Five outstanding services make up the health-conservation program of the American Red Cross, according to the annual report just issued in Washington. These services are first aid and life saving, which together have trained more than a million persons; nursing, with an active enrollment of 36,132 registered nurses; Public Health Nursing, conducted by 750 nurses in 424 chapters last year; and Home Hygiene, which has taught more than 700,000 men and women simple ways of caring for the sick at home.

"The achievements of the Red Cross in public health nursing place it among the leaders in this field," said James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations. "This service was organized in 1919 to meet needs developed by the World War and the ravages of the flu epidemic which in 1918-1919 took so great a toll of life."

"Since that time Red Cross nursing services have been pioneers in more than one half of the counties in the United States. Many services we established were taken over later by civic, state and federal agencies, and the Red Cross continues to establish services in other new fields. Red Cross nurses made more than a million visits to patients last year, and 629,025 children in schools were inspected. "Red Cross courses in home hygiene and care of the sick are especially important in times of depression, because they teach families to maintain hygienic conditions in their own homes and to recognize symptoms of illness early enough to prevent serious consequences."

"Our courses in first aid have been instrumental in saving lives of the injured, in safeguarding the accident victim until the physician arrives, and in reducing time lost by workers in factories, mines and other industries. We are also giving the course extensively to police and fire departments throughout the country, and to state highway patrols."

Everyone is invited to join the Red Cross during the annual membership roll call which continues from Armistice Day to Thanksgiving, to have a part in the health program and the other humanitarian services of the Red Cross.

An Army of Goodwill

When members of the Junior Red Cross learned that schoolbooks had been destroyed in the Kentucky floods last August they gave $100 from the National Children's Fund to buy new textbooks for use in the schools. The maximum membership for the Junior Red Cross last year was 2,350,280, an increase over the previous year of more than 200,000. They carry on civic and service programs in their own communities which each year bring comfort and pleasure to thousands of needy and unfortunate people. An international friendship is built up through correspondence with Junior Red Cross members in foreign countries.

To Teach Water Safety

Life saving services offering training in first aid methods for swimmers have been carried on by the Red Cross for two decades. In 20 years life saving certificates have been awarded to more than a half million people who are interested in water sports. Last year chapters issued 72,503 life saving certificates.

The Red Cross enrolled 2,802,358 members in last year's roll call. Join in the 1934 roll call—Armistice Day to Thanksgiving.

In the early months of 1935 Scribner's expect to publish the new novel by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings whose "South Moon Under," a novel of Florida life, was a Book of the Month Club selection and one of the best selling novels of 1933. The first half of next year will also see the completion of Dr. Freeman's "R. E. Lee" and new books by F. Scott Fitzgerald, of Maryland, and Struthers Burt.

JOE E. BROWN IN THE "SIX DAY BIKE RIDER" AT ORPHEUM SUNDAY

Joe E. Brown seems to have gotten himself into a pretty little mess in this scene from his latest First National film, "Six Day Bike Rider." This picture celebrates Joe's 10th year in movies, and is said to be funnier, if that is possible, than any of his past comedies. Maxine Doyle, Frank McHugh and Gordon Westcott are in the cast, along with Reggie MacNanara and a troupe of world famous bike riders. The film is coming to the Orpheum Theatre here Sunday.

RAILWAYS PRESENT A UNIFIED FRONT

New Organization Will Work for Interests of Roads and Public.

WASHINGTON.—For the first time in a number of years the railways of the United States have banded together to present a united front in proposing solutions for their problems and for defending against unjust criticism. They have organized the Association of American Railroads. It will soon be functioning as their spokesman, as their representative on all matters affecting the welfare of the rail transport lines, and in the right to use every modern device and method that will improve their service to the public.

Development of the new organization, which is formed out of the Association of Railway Executives and the American Railway Association would appear to carry out the suggestion by Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Coordinator of Railroads, who several months ago suggested "a more perfect union" among the railroads to deal with matters of common concern. The leaders among railroad managements have been working in this direction for several years, and only last year the managements sponsored a statement through the National Transportation Conference to the effect that the railroads should act jointly and more affirmatively than heretofore has been the case.

Purpose of Organization.
It is the indicated purpose of the new association to take an affirmative position at all times on questions relating to the steam railway carriers. It will be directed by men who have courage and vision and who are insistent upon policies among the railways that will keep abreast of the times. The understanding is that the governing board of the Association will formulate all policies from the railway standpoint and will be prepared at all times to promote them before the proper authorities, whether such authorities be national or state. Member railways of the Association will be bound to follow the policies thus enunciated and, of course, will support the pronouncements of their authorized spokesmen.

Announcement of the formation of the Association of American Railroads has brought forth much comment in Washington and elsewhere. For the most part, the course the railways have adopted is looked upon with favor, because anything that concerns the railways concerns individuals wherever they live. In addition, there are more than 910,000 persons who own shares of stock in the railroads, and obviously their interest is concrete. Shippers and patrons of the railroads' passenger service likewise have an interest in this new development because for them it means at last there has been an agency created and equipped with definite powers and responsibilities in meeting the ever arising attacks on the railways.

Creation of an agency of this type has a further significance. There is a very sound and widespread belief that the Association will be able to defer passage of legislation or regulations that has not been well considered. In other words, according to the opinion frequently expressed, organized hostilities will not be able to "run away" with legislation or regulations that may have a burdensome result. It appears to be certain that hereafter any federal or state action in dealing with the railroads will not be rushed through the machinery of government without the country as a whole being made acquainted with the ultimate effect.

Means Better Legislation.
Since there is to be federal legislation proposed to the next Congress affecting transportation—and early indications are that it will broaden the powers of Federal regulation—observers in Washington are saying that the chances are for a more constructive review of transportation problems than the country has witnessed in a generation. The common expression is that for once the railroads are in a position to aggressively take the field in the face of any onrush by politicians.

It must be remembered, however, that the forthcoming session of Congress probably will be as subservient to President Roosevelt as any session since he entered the White House. It is to be assumed then that if and when he proposes new rail legislation, he will have the support of his enormous majority in the House and Senate. This would seem to mean easy sailing for the legislation, but many transportation experts are of a different opinion. They believe that they can present whatever valid objections they find to the program submitted and can appeal to a sufficient number of Representatives and Senators to curtail provisions they deem too radical. However one may look at this situation the conclusion cannot be avoided that a vigorous fight will take place, and out of it will come a desirable clarification of the whole transportation situation.

WARTS AND MOLES

Warts and moles are so common that few give them the consideration they deserve. Warts and moles are of many and various kinds, shapes and forms. They may grow on any part of the skin and mucous membrane. Some character of warts seem to be contagious, moles are never contagious. Either may be harmless or cancerous. Warts often appear without any assignable cause and may disappear in the same manner.

Moles and warts on the exposed skin surface of the body are not only unsightly and disfiguring, but in many cases are actually cancerous and a menace to life. Many medicines, ointments, and treatments, scratching, picking or any form of irritation to moles and warts seems to have a tendency to change them from harmless growths to cancers. So if you have a mole or wart, do not monkey with it yourself or allow another to treat it, unless it be a graduate physician.

The treatment of moles and warts in the past was based mostly on superstition and hoodooism, and by some this method of treatment is still practiced. Nearly all of the known medicines, ointments, and what have you, have been used as treatments. Scientific research has amply demonstrated that warts and moles are dangerous, and at all times deserve the most painstaking diagnosis and treatment. The proper treatment depends upon the character of the growth, whether benign or malignant. Internal medication plays a very small part in the treatment.

The consensus of medical opinion at present, is that most warts and moles should be completely removed. Eradication should be thorough and complete, and only skilled doctors should be entrusted with their treatment. Treatments of these conditions are now upon a high scientific plane, insuring very satisfactory and safe results, without hospitalization or loss of time and at a very reasonable cost.

PARTY SATURDAY NIGHT

Miss Judith Hill entertained a number of her friends Saturday night at her home on Walnut-st. About twenty were present and enjoyed dancing to music of a radio throughout the evening. The home was beautifully decorated with a color scheme of yellow and black. Delicious punch and pumpkin face sandwiches cleverly carried out the Halloween idea.

Those present were Misses Julia McCampbell, Mickie Marsh, Sook Weaver, Louise McAnally, Betty Norris, Sarah Helen Williams, Ruby Boyd Alexander, Messrs. Bill Cheniae, George Rodenbough, Herbert Williams, Gilbert Cheniae, Coffman Omar, Sheddou Douglas, Frank Marsh, Paris Campbell, and Myron Weaver.

PARTY IN UNION CITY

Mrs. Macon Batts and Miss Ann Russell were joint hostesses to a beautifully planned bridge party given Friday night in Union City at the Davy Crockett Hotel. Nine tables of guests included a large number of their Fulton friends. At the end of several games of progressive contract high score was held by Miss Martha Smith and was given silver ware. Second high score was held by Mrs. Cresap Moss and was presented dusting powder as a prize. Low score prize was presented to Mrs. Fred Lucas, a double deck of cards. Late in the evening a salad course with coffee was served.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PARTY

Miss Elizabeth Witty and Mrs. Ernest Huffman entertained the Junior Sunday Class and the Christian Endeavor with a Halloween party Saturday night at the First Christian church. About twenty-three guests were present, each came dressed in a Halloween costume. The church was decorated with the holiday colors. Games and contests were enjoyed during the evening. Virgil King was a winner in a contest and received a prize. At the end of the party delicious candy was served by the joint hostesses.

SIX O'CLOCK DINNER

Mrs. Dudley Meacham entertained a few of her friends with a six o'clock dinner Thursday evening at her home in the Highlands. After the lovely dinner was served contract playing was enjoyed during the evening. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Weatherspoon, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Houston, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Mount, and Joel Thompson.

THURSDAY NIGHT CLUB

The Thursday night bridge club met last week at the home of Mrs. George Moore, hostess. Three tables of guests included club members and one visitor, Miss Ula Rogers. At the end of a series of games of bridge Miss Adolphus Mae Latta held high score and received a prize. Mrs. Howard Strange received low score prize. Late in the evening peaches and cake were served.

Those present were Misses Ula Rogers, Adolphus Mae Latta, Mary Anderson, Ruby V. Yarbro, Tommie

Rubber 3-1000th Inch Thick Makes Telephone Transmitters Damp-proof

Above: Airtight "bomb" in which thin rubber diaphragm was tested in pure oxygen under pressure and heat.

Above: Highly polished steel mold for manufacture of very thin rubber diaphragm used in moisture-proofing outdoor telephones.

Moisture-proof telephone transmitters, for installation in exposed locations or where moisture conditions are particularly severe, such as markets, taxi stations, police call boxes, harbor vessels and similar places, are a recent development of the Bell Telephone Laboratories.

Must Be Thin and Supple

To prevent the entrance of moisture into the transmitter, a rubber membrane has been designed which can be interposed between the mouthpiece and the diaphragm. This rubber membrane is extremely thin and supple, to avoid interference with the acoustic transmission from mouthpiece to diaphragm. This means that it must not be thicker than about three one-thousandths of an inch.

Until recently, rubber as thin as this would not last more than a year or two at the most, and in order to meet the moisture-proofing, transmission, and life requirements, a special rubber compound has been developed at the Bell Laboratories.

Requirements for Rubber Compound

The function of the rubber chemist is to select and blend, in such proportions as to obtain the desired result, the vast amount of materials which have to be admixed with rubber for the compounding of rubber goods. These compounds also have to be designed for long periods of life; and since in most cases trials cannot be carried on for the desired life period, the rubber chemist resorts to laboratory methods of accelerated aging to predict the period of usefulness of the rubber.

Making Laboratory Tests

Laboratory methods for testing the life of rubber goods accelerate the action of oxygen, as the oxygen in the air is the principal agent which deteriorates rubber. Specimens of rubber are placed, for varying periods of time, in a vessel of pure oxygen at a pressure of three hundred pounds per square inch and a temperature of 155 degrees Fahrenheit. When subjected to this test, poorly compounded rubber loses its original form and completely deteriorates, as far as further usefulness is concerned. This sometimes happens in less than a day, especially when the specimen is very thin.

Tests Indicate Long Life

The rubber compound designed by the Bell engineers for transmitter membranes, when given this test for ten days, failed to show any appreciable deterioration and thus its usefulness for the purpose remained unaffected. A service life of many years under moderate conditions of temperature and of protection from ozone and sunlight may be safely predicted for the new rubber membrane as a result of the researches made at the laboratories.

Design Special Molds

A problem almost as great as the development of the rubber compound was that of the design of special molding equipment for preparing membranes of the required thickness, form, and accuracy of dimension.

Such parts are formed in a highly polished steel mold, shaped to the dimensions of the desired part, with allowance for slight contraction. Overflow cavities are connected to the mold cavity itself by narrow wedge-shaped channels. The constituents of the rubber compound are mixed to a plastic homogeneous mass between closely-set steel rolls which revolve at different speeds.

Manufactured Under Pressure

A quantity of the plastic compound is inserted in the mold cavity and a pressure of several tons per square inch is applied and steam at twenty pounds per square inch is circulated in the platens for twenty minutes. Under the pressure and heat, the raw rubber compound flows, most of it filling the exact shape of the mold, and the excess passing through overflow channels into the overflow cavities.

At the end of the heating period, the membranes are removed from the mold and are ready for assembly in the telephone transmitters.

SOUTH FULTON SCHOOL

By Louise Freeman

Basketball received a good start at the South Fulton gymnasium Friday night when a packed house watched the girls win from Obion by a 32 to 22 score and the local boys defeated the visitors 49 to 8. Irene Doran and Myrtle Williams were in top form for the girls while Malcolm Johnson stood out in the boys combine. The teams go to Hornbeak Friday night, meet Obion in Obion Nov. 9, and play Cloverdale here on Nov. 16. The remainder of the schedule is as follows: Nov. 28, Palmersville at Dresden; Dec. 7, Palmersville here; Dec. 14, Dixie there; Dec. 21, Martin here; Jan. 4, Rives there; Jan. 11, Martin there; Jan. 18, Rives here; Jan. 25, Troy here; Feb. 1, Hornbeak here; Feb. 8, Dixie here; Feb. 15, probable date of County Tournament.

Honor Roll for Second Month

First Grade: Charles Oliver, Ben Clifton Taylor, Martha Sue Campbell, Mary Frances Davis, Mattie Virginia McClain, Gwendolyn Nantony, Maxine Sutherland, Edna Maxine Taylor, Roy Browder Easley, Bob McGee, and Lela Roth Allen.

Third Grade: First Honor Roll—Jackie Matthews, Dorothy Robey. Second Honor Roll—L. C. Jamison, J. A. Taylor, Kathleen Brown, Bonnie Copeland, Mary Ruth Davis and Virginia Pearl Omar.

Fourth Grade: First Honor Roll—Hubert Bynum, Lillian Webb, Margaret Gately and Harrie Lynn Bowen. Second Honor Roll—Edward Brockwell, Jimmy Clement, Billie Easley, Reba Jean Brown, Katherine Collins, Audrey Hefflin, Ruby Mary Henderson, Edna Earl Midyett, Eva Thomas, Mildred Speed and Imogene Williams.

Fifth Grade: First Honor Roll—James McKinney and Nell Rizzle. Second Honor Roll—Billy Sten and Ruth Ellen Valentine.

Sixth Grade: Second Honor Roll—Crystal Kuykendall, Radie Palsgrove, Joe Woodfin Treas.

A program of quartet members by the Murray State Teachers College singers will be given in the auditorium of South Fulton High School on Tuesday, Nov. 6 at two o'clock P. M. The quartet will be accompanied here by Prof. C. P. Poole, of the department of Psychology, who will give a brief address on the national education program for 1934-35. All patrons and friends of the school are urged to be present.

CAYCE NEWS

Mrs. Clara Carr, Mrs. Inez Meneses, Mrs. Mollie McCellan and Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Holt attended the Rush Creek Missionary Society at the home of Mrs. Effie Davis Thursday.

Oakton came over and played basketball with Cayce Friday and the score was 12 to 6 in favor of Cayce. About fifteen teachers and pupils attended the homecoming and football game at Murray Saturday, and had a fine time.

Rev. Wilson filled his regular appointment at the Baptist church Sunday.

A large crowd attended the birthday dinner at Turner Parcell's in honor of his father's 77th birthday. The table was spread with good things to eat and enjoyed by all.

Mrs. Pearl Fisher returned home after a six weeks visit with her children in Memphis.

Mr. and Mrs. Deamon Vick and children spent several days last week with Walter Corum.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Burnette, Mrs. Lucy Burnette and Miss Myrtle Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Inman and Miss Annie Laurie Burnette spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Bondurant.

Chas. Fisher and Misses Anna Pearl and Annie Laurie Fisher spent the week end with their mother, Mrs. Pearl Fisher.

Miss Mary Jo McNeill spent the week end with her mother, Mrs.

Hattie McNeill.

There will be an indoor carnival at the high school auditorium here Friday night, Nov. 2. This entertainment which is sponsored by the faculty for the benefit of the school will be an entertainment quite different to anything that has been staged here before. There will be plenty of laughs throught the entire evening.

ROBBERS' ROOST

by ZANE GREY

Copyright.—WNU Service.

SYNOPSIS

Jim Wall, young cowpuncher from Wyoming, in the early days of the cattle industry, seeks a new field in Utah. He meets Hank Hays, who admits being a robber, and tells Wall he is working for an Englishman, Herrick, who has located a big ranch in the mountains. Herrick has employed a small army of gun-fighters, and Hays and others are plotting to steal their employer's cattle and money. Wall saves Hank's life by bluffing a gambler out of shooting. With Hays and two other rustlers, Happy Jack and Lincoln, Jim Wall goes to Herrick's ranch. Herrick announces that his sister, Helen, is coming to the ranch. Hays unfolds his plan for getting possession of Herrick's 12,000 head of live stock. He and his lieutenants ride away to drive off the first bunch of cattle.

"Smoky, it's shore a big idee," declared Hays, enthusiastically. "But what about Heeseman?"

"Let's clean out his bunch," Hays shook his head.

"Fellers, if we pick a fight with that outfit some of us will get killed an' others crippled. Then we couldn't pull the deal. A better idee is for one of us to kill Heeseman."

"Reckon it would be. They'd bust the outfit."

"Who'd you pick on to do that, Hank?"

Jeff Bridges boomed out: "Why, Smoky, of course, or Brad?"

"Nops," said Hays, shaking his head. "With all that due Smoky an' Brad I wouldn't choose either. Jim, here, is the man for that job."

"Mebbe we could drive off six or eight thousand head of stock before Heeseman ever found out," put in Smoky. "What's the sense of fightin' it out till we have to?"

The suggestion found instant favor on all sides.

"But we don't want Heeseman trailin' us," expostulated Hays.

"You mean after we pull the deal?" queried Brad, incredulously.

"Shore I mean after."

"Wal, what in thunderation do we care for him, when we've got the coin an' are on our way to that roost we're due to find?"

"I don't just like the idee, fellers," replied Hays, evasively.

Jim Wall, studying the robber leader closely, imagined that Hays was not exposing all the details of his plot.

"Let's put my idee to a vote," said Smoky.

When this suggestion was solemnly complied with, making use of the deck of cards, it was found that Slocum had won.

"So far, so good," said Hays, as if relieved. "Now let's see. . . Smoky, tomorrow you take your gang, includin' Brad, an' quit. Pack a slew of grub an' grain, an' hide out below. Cache what you don't need. I'll go to Grand Junction for new hands. See? But all I'll come back with will be instructions for you to follow. Then you can go drivin'."

"Good. An' how about the cash?"

"Wal, them buyers won't pay me in advance, you can gamble on that. But they'll pay you. Just divide with your outfit an' save our share."

"Short an' sweet. I like it more all the time," declared Smoky.

"We'll want to know where your camp is," went on Hays. "Reckon I'd better ride out with you tomorrow."

"No. You rustle for Grand Junction. We'll see that Happy an' Jim know where to find our camp."

Jim thought of something: "Men, has it occurred to you that you can't drive cattle up this road and through the ranch?"

"Shore. No need. It'd be a seven-mile drive if we came this way. But we'll drive round by Limestone, an' up the other valley road. About the same distance to Grand."

The conference ended. Hays turned to the open fire and, seeking a seat in the shadow by the chimney he pondered. It was Jim's opinion that the chief had vastly more on his mind than he had divulged. Lincoln gave him a suspicious stare. The others seemed eminently pleased with the outlook, though no more was said in Jim's hearing. They joked and smoked.

Jim bade them good night and went out. His last glimpse of Hays was thought-provoking. Lighting another cigar, Jim strolled up and down the porch, revolving in mind the conference.

It was a spring night, starry, with an edge on the mountain air that meant frost in the morning.

Was it possible that this lantern-eyed robber had evil intentions toward Herrick's sister? Jim scouted the suspicion.

"Hang the girl part of it, anyhow," he muttered, flinging his half-smoked cigar out into the noisy brook. Why did a woman have to come along to upset the best-laid plans of men?

The next morning brought somber faces and action. Five of Hays' outfit rode away with six of the pack horses and most of the supplies. Hays watched them until they disappeared among the cedars.

"Wal, now I'll brace the boss," he said.

"What excuse will you give him?" asked Jim.

"Anythin' would do to tell Herrick. But Heeseman will see through me. I'm afeared."

"Very well. You tell Herrick that your outfit split over me."

"Over you? Dog-gone! That ain't so poor. But why?"

"Both Slocum and Lincoln are sort of touchy about gun-throwing, aren't they? Well, tell him how queer that brand of gunman is—how he instinctively hates the real gunman. And that Slocum and Lincoln made you choose between them and me."

"Ahuh. Sort of so the idee will get to Heeseman's ears that in a pinch with guns I'd rather have you backin' me than them?"

"Exactly."

Not long afterward Hays returned to the cabin jubilant. "You'd never guess, Jim. That Englisher laughed like the very devil. An' he ordered me to ride off after some desperadoes who're not afraid of Jim Wall."

"Ha! Ha! But Heeseman won't get a laugh out of it."

"Shoot the lights out of him," said Hays, fiercely. "Wal, I'm off for Grand. Happy, pack me a snack of grub."

"How long will it take you to ride over?"

"Eight hours, I reckon. An' I'll be back tomorrow night."

"Certainly these buyers will know you're selling stolen cattle?"

"Oh, shore."

After Hays had gone Jim settled himself to pass the hours away.

"Mebbe it won't be so tedious," observed Happy Jack, dryly. "We've got three rifles an' a sack of shells right handy. So let 'em come."

Jim half expected a visit from Herrick, but the morning dragged by without any sign of anyone. About mid-afternoon, however, six riders appeared coming down the lane along the bench.

He Would Put His Horse at Anything and He Had a Jarring Fall.

The sight made Jim start. How often had he seen the like—a compact little company of riders, dark-garbed, riding dark horses! It was tremendously suggestive to a man of his experience.

He reached inside the door and, drawing out his rifle, advanced to the front of the porch.

CHAPTER IV

When the group of riders reached the point where the lane crossed the brook, just out of pistol range, they halted, and one, evidently the leader, came on to the bridge.

"Hi, thar," he yelled, reining his horse.

"Hi, yourself," shouted back Jim.

The man, who, of course, Jim took to be Heeseman, walked his horse half the intervening distance and stopped again.

At this juncture Happy Jack emerged from the cabin and carelessly propped a rifle against the wall.

"Who's callin'?" he boomed.

"I'm Bill Heeseman, an' I come to talk," called the visitor.

"Friendly talk?" queried Jim.

"Wal, if it ain't you'll be to blame."

"Come right over."

Jim leaned his rifle against the rail and stood aside. Heeseman did not look up as he mounted the steps. He took off an old sombrero to disclose the tanned, clear-skinned face of a man under forty with narrow, blue eyes reddened by wind and dust. It was a more open visage than Jim had expected to see. Certainly Heeseman was a more prepossessing man, at first sight, than Hays.

"Mind if I set down?" he asked.

"Make yourself at home," replied Jim.

"Air you Wall?"

"Yes, that's my name. And this is Happy Jack, another of Hays' outfit."

Heeseman nodded to Jack, who replied with a civil "Howdy," and went back into the cabin. Then Heeseman leaned against the wall and treated Jim to a frank, shrewd gaze.

"You're Hays' right-hand man, just late from Wyoming?"

"Last is correct, anyhow."

"Do you know him?" queried Heeseman, in lower voice.

"Perhaps not so well as you," replied Jim, who suddenly reminded himself that he knew Hays but slightly.

"I'm goin' to tell you somethin'."

"Heeseman, you'll only waste your breath," declared Jim, impatiently.

"Wal, I don't waste much of that," drawled the other. "But if you wasn't new to Utah I'd save myself this trouble. An' you're goin' to believe what I tell you."

"Why will it?"

"Because it's true."

No argument could gainsay that; moreover, the man had truth in his blue slits of eyes and in his voice.

"Did Hays tell you I was a rustler?"

"I think he mentioned it."

"Did he tell you we was pardoned once? . . . That he double-crossed me?"

"No."

"Wal, I'll let it go at that," returned Heeseman, coolly. "Much obliged for lettin' me come up. An' if you get curious just ride over to see me."

He rose, stretched his long length, and walked off the porch to mount his horse, leaving Jim about as surprised as he had ever been. Happy Jack came out in time to see him join his comrades and ride back with them toward the corral.

"Short visit. Glad it was. What'd he want?"

"Durn! If I savvy, altogether. Didn't you hear any of our talk?"

"No. I reckoned the less I heard the better. Then Hank couldn't razz me. But I had a hunch of what he was up to."

Jim did not press the question. He carried his rifle back into the cabin rather ashamed of his overhaste, and feeling already curious enough to call on Heeseman.

They had supper, after which Jack smoked and talked, while Jim listened. Evidently Happy Jack had taken a liking to him. Jim went to bed early, not because he was sleepy, but to keep from calling on that fellow Heeseman.

How many nights Jim Wall had lain down under the dark trees to wakefulness, to the thronging thoughts that must mock the rest of any man who has strayed from the straight and narrow path! It tormented him at certain times. But that never kept the old concentrated pondering over tomorrow from gaining control of his consciousness.

There had been no hesitation about Hank Hays declaring himself in regard to Heeseman. Callous, contemptuous, Hays had indicated the desirability of riding the range of Heeseman. But Heeseman had been subtle.

Unquestionably his motive had been to undermine Hays in Jim's regard. And a few questions and an assertion that two had had their effect. Jim made the reservation that he had not accepted Hays on anything but face value. Still the robber had gradually built up a character of intent force, cunning, and strength. These had crashed, though there was no good reason for that. Jim had not accepted Hays' word for anything.

Hays was not a square partner! This stuck in Jim's craw.

Why this seemed true puzzled Jim. Heeseman had simply verified a feeling but still disputed suspicion in Jim's mind—that Hank Hays had evil designs upon Herrick's sister. Heeseman and Hays had probably known for weeks that this English girl was expected to arrive.

Suppose he had? What business was that of Jim's? None, except that he now formed one of Hays' band and as such had a right to question activities. Rustling cattle, at least in a moderate way, was almost a legitimate business. Ranchers, since the early days of the cattle drives from Texas, had accepted their common losses. It had been only big steals that rounded them to fire and action, to make outlaws out of rustlers. Nevertheless, it was extremely doubtful, out here in the wilds of Utah, that even a wholesale steal would be agitating. To abduct a girl, however, might throw western interest upon the perpetrators. Hays' object assuredly was to collect ransom.

Still that had not been Heeseman's intention, nor had it been Jim's original suspicion. He gave it up in disgust. Time would tell. But he did not feel further inclined to call upon Heeseman. He would stick to Hays, awaiting developments.

The ensuing day passed uneventfully. No one of Smoky's outfit showed up, nor did Hays return. Jim waited for Herrick to give him orders, which were not forthcoming. The rancher was chasing jackrabbits and coyotes with the hounds.

Next morning Jim made it a point to ride over to the barns. The rancher came down in a queer costume. The red coat took Jim's eye. A motley pack of hounds and sheep dogs was new to Jim, as he had not seen or heard any dogs about the ranch. Jim was invited to ride along with Herrick and the several cowboys. They went by Heeseman's camp, which was vacant. Jim was to learn that the rancher had put the Heeseman outfit to work on the cutting and peeling of logs up on the slope, preparatory to the erection of a new barn.

Jack rabbits were as thick as bees. The cowboys led the dogs, which soon became unmanageable and boisterous. Then the race was on. Where the ground was level and unobstructed by brush or cut up by washes Herrick did fairly well as to horsemanship, but in rough going he could not keep to the English saddle. He would put his horse at anything and he had a jarring fall.

Notwithstanding this, Herrick finished out the hunt. He was funny, and queer, but he was game, and Jim liked him. On the way back Jim amused the Englishman by shooting jack rabbits with his revolver. He managed to kill three out of five to Herrick's infinite astonishment and admiration.

Grazing Woodlands Harms Trees, Cows

3-Year Experiment Shows Practice Far From the Best Judgment.

By F. W. Dean, Extension Specialist in Forestry, Ohio State University.

Not only does the woodland suffer, but the cows suffer, too, when woods are pastured. This is a conclusion reached after three years of experimentation in Indiana.

When two, four, or even six acres of woodland pasture were allowed for each animal unit, and no outside range provided, the cows in the experiment lost weight rapidly and had to be moved to other range.

Effects noted upon the woodland were destruction of the young trees, damage to the roots of the older trees, hard-packing of the soil, and disappearance of moisture-conserving layers of leaf mold. Many farmers have observed these effects and have fenced their woods area from their pasture.

According to the last census, how ever, over 70 per cent of the farm woods in Ohio are grazed by live stock. Of the total pasture acreage in the state, eight million acres, fully two million acres are woodlands.

With the removal from cultivation of a half million acres of crop land, through the adjustment programs, that amount of land is available for grazing, relieving much of our woodlands from serving double duty as woodland and pasture.

Buckwheat Is Not Good

Feed for Fattening Hogs

Unless buckwheat should become much cheaper than the price of corn, it cannot be highly recommended to farmers as a fattening feed for hogs, says W. E. Carroll, chief in swine husbandry at the College of Agriculture, University of Illinois.

If, however, the market price of buckwheat should fall materially below that of corn, it might be fed in limited quantities, but never more than one-fourth to one-third of the hogs' ration. This fact alone suggests that buckwheat is considered quite improbable, and farmers with this small grain in their granaries will generally find it more profitable to sell the buckwheat and buy corn for their hogs. In fact there has been less than 60,000 bushels of buckwheat produced annually in Illinois during the past three years.

In composition buckwheat resembles oats more closely than it does any of the other more common grains, explains Carroll. Such a fact alone suggests that it should not be used extensively as a hog feed unless it is cheaper pound for pound than corn. Likewise, because it contains more than 10 per cent crude fiber, its extensive use will tend to produce slow gains and in the end will add to the production cost of the hogs. Heavy feeding of buckwheat is also credited with producing pork of poor quality, although if used in moderation this difficulty should not be encountered.

How to Inoculate Land

for Growing of Alfalfa

A good crop of sweet clover, burr clover or Black medic grown within the past three to five years is sufficient inoculation for most soils, says an authority at the North Carolina State college. Where these crops have not been grown, soil from a field that has been planted to them may be used. From 200 to 400 pounds of this soil should be applied to each acre of land seeded to alfalfa. Dampen the seed with a mixture of equal parts of water and molasses and sift on a small quantity of the soil from the inoculated field. Stir the seed until they are well coated with the soil. Commercial inoculating materials may also be used if inoculated soil is not available.

Denmark, Butter Country

In the Nineteenth century the Danes excelled in the art of butter-making, though history relates they imported their dairy maids from the Netherlands. Danish butter has long occupied a foremost place. Denmark is the leading butter-exporting country of the world. And, too, in the United States the production of butter has made rapid growth since the introduction of the creamery system. It exceeds over two billion pounds a year.

Make Woodlands Pay

Farmers and others who have a "woodlot" will find it worth while to treat it just as they would treat other land and make it pay its way as far as possible. Any amount of work can be put onto woodlands, in trimming the poor trees out and giving the good ones a chance to develop, burning the brush and undergrowth at the proper time, keeping out fires that will destroy the timber and otherwise caring for it.

The Wheat Supply

The experts of the bureau of agricultural economics have concluded that the drought has not endangered the food supply. In a normal year the people of the United States eat, or feed to animals, and save for seed for the next year's crop, 625,000,000 bushels of wheat. With a carry-over of some 260,000,000 bushels and a production which certainly cannot fall below 520,000,000 bushels, there will be plenty of wheat for normal consumption.

POULTRY

BETTER PRICES FOR CHICKENS AND EGGS

Outlook Is Encouraging for the Poultryman.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture—WNU Service.

Farmers may expect better prices for their chickens and eggs compared with last fall, mainly on account of the reduced production which it is expected will result from the scarcity and high price of feed, according to the bureau of agricultural economics in its poultry and egg outlook report.

Poultry production this year is the smallest since 1925, reports the bureau. The number of chickens hatched this year was about 10 per cent less than last year, and the number of hens in farm flocks was less than last year. There has been more than normal disposal of hens and pullets in drought areas of the central states.

Scarcity of feed in many important poultry producing states is forcing poultrymen to dispose of some of their surplus young stock earlier than usual, and a considerable reduction in number of layers carried through the winter is expected.

"The prospective reduction of eggs throughout the fall and winter, and the relatively small production in prospect next spring, should result in a level of farm prices sufficiently high to offset in part a higher price of feed," says the bureau.

The bureau suggests that producers who are able to do so, maintain their laying flocks and carry young chickens over to heavier weights where natural range is available.

Must Keep Eggs Moving,

Advices Poultry Expert

Producers who desire their eggs to reach the consumer in the best condition must not only give the eggs proper care while they are being held on the farm but the eggs must be kept moving from the time they are laid until they reach the consumer, says Berley Winton of the Missouri College of Agriculture. The consumer wants eggs with a thick, jelly-like white, and an upstanding, firm yolk. Such eggs bring the most money and find quickest sale.

Many eggs are reduced in quality while they remain in the nests. This is due to the fact that the temperature of the laying hen is normally 106 degrees Fahrenheit. If eggs are permitted to remain in nests during the forenoon when most hens lay, considerable deterioration takes place. It is a good practice, therefore, to gather eggs three to four times daily. After gathering they should be placed in a basket or exposed to the air, rather than kept in a bucket, and be permitted to cool over night before they are placed in the case. Exposure to the cool air will cause the body heat to escape the eggs and they will keep for a longer period.

Table Scraps for Chickens

Table scraps are usually an extremely concentrated, highly seasoned food and often produce dire results if the birds are allowed to gorge themselves. Where only a few birds are kept and fed only a grain ration the scraps undoubtedly supply some of the deficiencies brought about by such a feeding method. This system of feeding, however, does not bring out the best in the birds and causes low vitality as well as a decreased production. For best results all birds should have the proper ration and be well housed.

Importance of Sire

It is an old adage that the sire is half the herd. In poultry breeding it may be assumed that the sire is half the breeding flock, since the potent male stamps certain characteristics of his line upon each cockerel or pullet reared from the matings of which he has been one parent, whereas each individual breeding hen has the opportunity of stamping the characteristics of her line upon only the progeny hatched from her own eggs. High capacity egg production is transmitted by both sire and dam.

Poultry Notes

Every hen that drops into a molt is out of the production race until late in the season.

One of the greatest troubles most poultry men have to maintain winter egg production is to maintain body weight.

Infertile eggs may be left in a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit for 72 hours and still be good for food, poultry tests have shown.

It is best for the beginner not to cull too heavily, and not discard a hen on one point but rather on a combination of points.

It is surprising what the changing of growing chicks to fresh, new, untrained ground will do for them. It seems to act as a wonderful tonic.

Since four-fifths of the poultry in this country is raised by farmers and only one-fifth by commercial poultry men, grass is an important feed item.

Housewife's Idea Box

To Keep Jars Airtight

If you wish to keep food in jars airtight and have no paraffin or rings and covers, try this method. Dip tissue paper into milk. Place the paper over your jars while very wet. Tie it in place and allow it to dry. It will dry like parchment and the jars will be airtight as long as it is left on.

Why Liquid Laxatives Do You No Harm

The dose of a liquid laxative can be measured. The action can thus be regulated to suit individual need. It forms no habit; you need not take a "double dose" a day or two later. Nor will a mild liquid laxative irritate the kidneys.

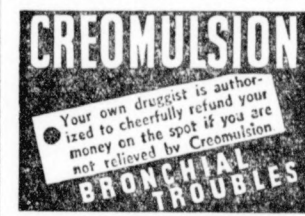

The right liquid laxative will bring a more natural movement, and with no discomfort at the time, or afterward.

The wrong cathartic may often do more harm than good.

An approved liquid laxative (one which is most widely used for both adults and children) is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a prescription. It is perfectly safe. Its laxative action is based on senna—a natural laxative. The bowels will not become dependent on this form of help, as they may do in the case of cathartics containing mineral drugs. Ask your druggist for Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

HELP KIDNEYS

If your kidneys function badly and you have a lame, aching back, with attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains . . . use Doan's Pills.

Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. Millions of boxes are used every year. They are recommended the country over. Ask your neighbor!

EVERYDAY NEW YORK

BY O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK—Thoughts while strolling: Many of the social shoulder lifters have a shanty background. Galloway's Kentucky term for a heavy downpour—a duck downer, Singin' Sam, of the radio, doesn't look as one might imagine from his up-the-holler drawl. He's dudsish.
Add resemblances: Marc Connelly and Jas. W. Wadsworth, Lawrence Tibbett and Donald O'Brien, Jules Brulatore and Russell G. Colt. Never see Eddie Peabody without his wife. Haven't seen a finger ring around a four-in-hand since Ralph Barton's day. That distinctive sprinkle of white in Edna Ferber's hair.

What became of Sailing Baruch? And his middle hair part to his collar. Never knew a taxi driver who didn't call it Detroit. Certainly giving the blood shirts with black ties a play. The 400 actress, Whitney Bourne. The Social Register turns out for her. Vivien Fay, newest dancing toast.

Broadway now calls the yoked a zither picker. Leo Newman is lost without his old running mate, C. B. Dillingham. Conversation piece. "And I gave up my gold? So what?" How does Sid Solomon get that balsam slick to his hair? George Matthews Adams, first of the newspaper syndicators. And still going.

Betzl Beaton walks like Dolores. The Will Rogerses' Mary suggest blue-bells, sunbonnets and the starchy lane. Elizabeth Arden is always fitting about like a butterfly. Bernard Macfadden, nearing 60, stands on his head every morning before breakfast. Read here for all the standing-on-head news!

New York artists were several weeks realizing the Robert J. Wildhack, whose snore lecture was a high light of the Winter Garden show, was the Bob Wildhack of Washington Square and Gramercy 20 years ago. His comeback is an epic of fortitude and courage. As a promising magazine artist, he suddenly cracked up physically and was shipped to California. There he and his wife fought a game but constantly losing battle financially, although his health improved. He came to New York several months ago looking for a break. Someone suggested to Lee Shubert a made-up act Wildhack used to perform for friends. He was spotted in the revue that opened in Boston. Next night he got his notice. A few days later, he was convulsing audiences, they asked him to tear up his notice. His struggles are over. Few know his health permits him only a few hours on his feet daily. Most of the time he must lie down. But for 15 minutes of his standing up period he can make people laugh as they have seldom laughed before.

Among reputedly richest stage actors are David Warfield, George M. Cohan, Otis Skinner and Joe Weber. Maud Adams, in the millionaire division, is the wealthiest actress, with the far younger Katharine Cornell a runner-up. Among young actors topping the wealthy list are Al Jolson, Chie Sale, Eddie Cantor and William Gaxton.

In the old trouping days, the actor rarely banked in the traditional manner. Usually savings, to tide him over his summer pasturing, were sent to some cafe or hotel keeper. Barthold's Inn and Joe's cafe were two better known coaches for such deposits. Also Considerable and Churchill's. Actresses thought the best security against old age was jewels. They had added value in the prestige of personal adornment. Bernhardt spent 50 per cent of her savings on such baubles. Lillian Russell made no other kind of investment.

There is, incidentally, constant over stressing the plight of stage players as result of the collapse of the theatre. No other profession in the corner of eclipse has been so hand somely treated by Fate as the legitimate actor. Nearly all the highest salaried stars, featured and character players of Hollywood were once hauptstadt troupers. They are getting higher pay and steady work for 40 weeks. Big movie cathedrals in large cities with stage shows take care of a larger number than is imagined. Indeed there are more firmaments for the stellar display than ever before. The real economic tragedy in the theatre has been among pit musicians, box office men, stage hands, scene shifters, electricians and the like.

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart

For the first time since the federal reserve system was created a very real rift has developed between the federal reserve board and the federal advisory council, that group of business leaders which is supposed to act as intermediary between the reserve board and the public. The line of cleavage has developed over gold. How far it may go in disturbing faith in the federal reserve system as a banking structure it is yet too early to tell, but I find in many quarters frequent questions as to the indication that politics may be creeping into government supervision of the country's largest banking unit, the federal reserve system.

The controversy had its origin in a statement of views delivered to the reserve board by the advisory council last month. Of course, the advisory council has no power and can only function in accordance with its name and give suggestions to the reserve board. Its influence nevertheless here before always has been an important factor in federal supervision of bank policies and any wide difference of opinion between the advisory council and the reserve board naturally is an influential factor in financial conditions.

The reserve board did not enjoy the statement of views from the advisory council, which was to the effect that "no real or permanent recovery" can be hoped for until the federal government returns to the gold standard for our currency. It said unequivocally that the currency and credit supply now existing is ample for all needs and that business cannot be expected to go forward until it has some assurance of a permanent in our currency. In other words, the advisory council takes no stock in the "baloney dollar" which has been so strongly advocated by Prof. George F. Warren, one of the important brain trust advisors to the President.

In addition to the council's criticism of the currency policy of the administration, it did not pull its punches with respect to the countless governmental experiments in business. I quote that paragraph of its statement: "A serious factor of rapidly increasing importance is the tendency of business enterprises directly conducted by government agencies to reach out further and further into fields heretofore occupied by private capital, thereby destroying taxable values. The use of government money in competition with private business is not only paralyzing to private initiative but experience has amply demonstrated that it is costly, generally inefficient, and that its disastrous effects reach far beyond the limitation of the particular industry immediately affected."

The council had much more to say respecting other policies of the present administration, including what it described as a constant "threat of inflation," a condition that the council felt was stifling personal thrift. It asked directly whether there was any inducement for an individual to save or to buy life insurance and preserve earnings against the time when age will prevent continued production of income if there was an overhanging threat that all these savings may be wiped out by uncontrolled inflation of the currency.

Obviously, the federal reserve board was wrought up when the advisory council did the unusual thing of making public its views. Although the council withheld its statement until three weeks after the meeting at which it was drafted and given the reserve board, that lapse of time did not save the feeling of the board.

To show how it felt about the action of the advisory council, the board very promptly met and adopted a resolution by unanimous vote returning the council's statement to its secretary. This "spanking" has aroused a great many business leaders who have expressed fears that politics now is permeating the two federal agencies, for the advisory council is a body created by statute just as much as the federal reserve board. No one can tell what the outcropping of this situation may be. There are a number of men in the advisory council membership who have been outspoken in their support of President Roosevelt. Likewise, the President has named two members of the present reserve board, and one or two others of that group of seven are entirely in harmony with his economic policies. Consequently, there is much talk in Washington that the two schools of economic thought are engaged in a clash that may be serious in its effect on the supervision of the country's banking structure.

Whatever may be the attitude of the reserve board, I have found a considerable body of opinion holding that the advisory council was functioning within its own sphere when it made the statement to the board. As explained above, the board was under no compulsion to abide by the expressions from the advisory council, and if it elected to do so it could allow the council's views to be pigeon-holed and forgotten. But the point is that the council is representative of business and financial interests and therefore, when it considered federal policies, it was speaking for that segment of our national life which otherwise had no means of making itself vocal, according to much opinion in the National Capital.

Further, the fact that the council took direct issue with the administration is being regarded in many quarters as a healthy sign. I believe there is no dispute about the right of individuals or groups to criticize the political party responsible for government management at any time and if the particular part of our commerce and industry, represented by the advisory council, feels dissatisfied with the gold policy, with the unbalanced budget, with the continual spending and experiments that have gone on, there is a great number of people who insist those views should be disclosed. Some students of economy and government here hold to the opinion that such expressions may have a tendency to lead to policies acceptable to both sides.

This phase of the situation may be linked to the efforts which the administration has been making to accomplish an understanding with some important business leaders through frequent conferences at the White House and through informal and indirect meetings outside of Washington. I refer to the dinners and meetings which have been held, many in New York, by Prof. Raymond Moley, formerly the number one member of the brain trust but now a magazine editor. Although White House sources deny any part in the Moley dinners, most Washington observers accept the denial with a grain of salt. They are convinced that Mr. Roosevelt is fully informed of the views expressed by individual business leaders in those meetings and that he is seeking some basis of understanding with business. It takes no stretch of the imagination then to connect these various happenings, despite the wounded feelings of the federal reserve board.

Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, said the other day he anticipated little in the way of Republican membership in the house of representatives. He can see no method, he said, of defeating the disbursement of cash that has been going on in the Roosevelt administration.

The Republican chairman's statement followed compilation by the Democratic national committee of figures showing the amount of cash that has been paid out by the government through its various channels throughout the country, each one quoting some Democratic candidate who had informed an audience as to the beneficence of the federal government in that particular state.

The Republican chairman told news paper correspondents in a press conference that he was not accusing the Roosevelt administration of buying votes but he added with candor that votes naturally were going to go towards the source of money supplied. With several billions being distributed and a considerable amount being turned loose within the last month, Mr. Fletcher made a clean breast of his feelings that it was difficult to battle Santa Claus.

In connection with the Republican charges over cash distribution both of the national committees have been compiling statistics respecting registration of voters through the country in preparation for the election. These reports indicate that public interest is aroused far beyond the usual condition. Voters are awakened to the importance of these elections.

Obviously, there are many local issues to be fought out and settled by the ballot. The situation in California is illustrative of this. Never before, I am told, has California seen such a registration list as is made up there in anticipation of the vote on Upton Sinclair's program to "eliminate poverty in California."

Agricultural areas, according to the registration lists, are prepared to support or upset policies of the agricultural adjustment administration and some industrial centers show figures indicating widespread interest in the vote that is naturally to have a bearing on the status of the national recovery administration. Many astute politicians are saying that the great registration lists are guesses as to the outcome rather than barometers while the students of government welcome the large polling lists as encouraging evidence of an awakened interest among the populace in this thing we call government.

It is proof, they say, that, whether right or wrong, more voters want their feeling known in the current election than hitherto has been the case except when the ballot involved the Presidency.

Hearing that a stable-lad was wanted at a certain racing establishment, one of the boys of the village went to apply for the job. Outside the stables he met a jockey, who had the bow legs peculiar to his profession. The jockey asked him his business.
"I've come to see the boss about a job," replied the applicant.
"Right!" said the jockey. "Just walk this way."
The lad gazed in consternation at the other's legs.
"I might have known there was a catch in it," he gulped. "I can't."

"I'm going to get some money soon."
"Who's telling you?"
"A fortune teller."
"I'd rather have that sort of information from a paying teller."

An emigrant was preparing to leave his native land to try his luck abroad. An acquaintance inquired, casually, "What are you going to do when you arrive at your destination?"
"Oh, take up land."
"Much?"
"Only a shoveful at a time."—Tit-Bits Magazine.

What She Enjoyed Most
"So you took your wife to the baseball game."
"Yes."
"Did she enjoy it?"
"Only a part of it. She thought they wasted a great deal of time running around the lot, but she thought the arguments with the umpire were quite interesting."

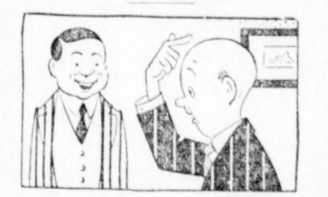

Not a Bad Idea
"When you are going on a journey, why do you always get to the station an hour before the train starts?"
"So that I have time to go home again if I think of anything I have forgotten."—Chicago Tribune.

Forbearance Ceased
"Have you a political boss in Cincinnati?"
"Not now," answered Cactus Joe.
"We had one, but he got tired of being blamed for everything that went wrong."

"Say, look at my head after taking all that hair tonic. I'm completely bald."
"Well, you don't need hair; you've nothing to protect."

Not if You Like Hard Work
Policeman—How did you come to get that jar of honey?
Tramp—Well, I admit I don't keep no bees; but what's to stop a fellow from squeezing it out of the flowers himself?

Courage and Backbone
Freddie—A woman needs a lot of courage to wear a modern evening gown.
Teddy—Yes, and most women show they have a backbone.

Plural
"Do you say 'politics' is or 'polities' are?" said the grammarian.
"I use the plural," answered Senator Sorghum. "We have national politics, state politics, county politics, town politics and office politics, and they're all different."

Looking Out
"Does your friend still live in that house overlooking the prison?"
"No, he now lives overlooking that house."

Traveler—What do you do, my good man?
Announcer—I call trains.
Traveler—Well, call me one; I'm in a hurry.

Stranger—I want to buy a good farm.
Real Estate Broker—You've come to the right place, sir. What's your business?
Stranger—I'm a farmer.
Broker—Oh, we have no good farms for farmers! I thought you were a city chap.—Montreal Star.

Practical Enforcement
"What's the idea of going down the street at 10 o'clock each night and shooting out the lights?" asked the traveling salesman.
"Crimson Gulch has a curfew law," answered Cactus Joe, "and us respectable citizens are going to see that it's obeyed."

Neck-and-Neck Contest
"I don't know what to give my father for his birthday. Sometimes the idea to give him a shirt wins out, then the thought of a cigarette case seems to be the choice."
"How will it end?"
"Oh, I suppose it will be a tie."

Useless Discussion
"Which do you prefer, money or brains?"
"There's no use to bother about making a choice," answered Miss Cayenne. "A person is uncommonly lucky not to find himself without either."

Memory Lingers
Jackson—I noticed you got up and gave that lady your seat in the tram the other day.
Jackson—Since childhood I have respected a woman with a strap in her hand.—Melbourne Today.

HAD HIM GUESSING

"Have you a political boss in Cincinnati?"
"Not now," answered Cactus Joe.
"We had one, but he got tired of being blamed for everything that went wrong."

"I can't quite make out what Maude means."
"Why not?"
"She keeps on referring to my man, doncher know, as a keeper."

Ready Reference

"What I want," said Senator Sorghum, "is to get my own financial affairs straightened out along with those of the nation."
"I don't believe my scientific calculations are sufficiently advanced to help you," said the friend with the pale, thoughtful face. "But I can recommend you a good lobbyist."—Washington Star.

All Right Tomorrow
Mistress—Mary, Mary! Yesterday you broke two vases and today you've broken three plates and four cups. What will be broken tomorrow, at this rate?
Maid—Not so much, ma'am. It is my afternoon out.

The Young Mind
"Mother, is grandma grandpa's wife?" asked little Edith.
"Yes, of course," answered the mother.
A few minutes elapsed and the child said: "Why did he marry such an old woman?"

Here's Slip That Has "Everything"

PATTERN 1897

There are only a few things that we can count on in this funny old world, but one of them is that no woman ever really has enough slips. She just gets all set when along comes a new frock and the whole business has to be done over again. With this pattern she is prepared for any emergency. It is no trouble to make, fits beautifully, and it is shadow-proof—just about all any dress can ask of the slip which goes under it. It is nice in white and simply grand in a color to go under transparent dresses.

Pattern 1897 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3½ yards 39-inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.
Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

Greene—Yes; rich uncle give it to him.
Brown—Why, he told me he put all the money he had into it.
Greene—So he did. He bought four gallons of petrol.—Grand Forks Sun.

Hard to Believe
Aunt Hetty—Sakes alive! I don't believe no woman could ever be so fat.
Uncle Hiram—What y' readin' now, Hetty?
Aunt Hetty—Why, this paper tells about an English woman that lost two thousand pounds.

POSITIVE PROOF

But, darling, why were you so sure that I had never proposed to any other girl?
She—Because, you wonderful boy, you were not married.

SWIFT CLUB

Mrs. Herman Ensley entertained her bridge club Thursday at her home on West-st. Two tables of club members were present. After several games of progressive contract high score prize was presented to Mrs. Wade Joyner, and second high was held by Mrs. Fred Lucas. At a late hour a delicious party plate was served by the hostess.

WEINER ROAST

Misses Audrilla and Helen Watts entertained a number of their friends Thursday night with a weiner roast. About twenty met at the Watts home on West State Line and from there went to Hebron Church where they enjoyed weiner roasting. Those present were Misses Ora Pearl Weaver, Mary Frances Hardy of Corinth, Miss, Jeannette Watts, Sara Wade, Frances Thompson, Helen and Audrilla Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Bob Comer, Edward Dunn, W. P. Wade, H. P. Allen, Coy Wilson, Jamie Wade, and Wilber Hardy. After roasting weiners they returned to the Watts home and enjoyed a social hour.

TUESDAY NIGHT CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. George Hester entertained their Tuesday night bridge club at their home on Eddings-st. The home was beautifully decorated with Halloween colors. Three tables of club members were present. At the conclusion of the games high score prizes were awarded to Mrs. Abe Jolley and Mr. Vester Freeman. Low score prizes were presented to Mrs. J. L. Jones, and D. Seblon Cohn. Late in the evening a salad course and coffee were served.

SHOWER FOR BRIDE

Mrs. Claude Linton, formerly Mrs. Lois Thompson, was honored Thursday afternoon when Miss Fannie

Lee Nix and Mrs. M. K. Chowning entertained with a tea and shower. Members of the faculty of the High School and Carr Institute were present, each bringing a useful and beautiful gift for the honoree. The rooms were decorated with garden flowers and pot plants, carrying out a color scheme of yellow and green. Little Miss Mary Jean Linton dressed in a yellow dress, pulled a large wagon decorated in yellow crepe paper, into the room and presented the lovely gifts to the honoree. Late in the afternoon tea and sandwiches were served by the joint hostesses.

CLUBS ENTERTAINED

Mrs. Bob White and Mrs. Elizabeth Snow were joint hostesses to their Saturday and Tuesday night bridge clubs this week end at the home of Mrs. Snow. Seven tables of guests were present. After a series of games of contract high scores were held by Mrs. Bob Binford and Mrs. Lynn Askew, both receiving prizes. Mrs. Leon Bondurant enjoyed a lovely salad plate was served.

PARTY TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. L. Read, Mrs. Lawrence Holland and Mrs. A. T. Hornbeck were hostesses to a bridge party Tuesday afternoon given at the home of Mrs. Read on Jefferson-st. Eleven tables of guests were present and enjoyed games of progressive contract. At the end of the games Mrs. Eugene DeMyer held high score for the afternoon and was presented a prize. Mrs. Gus Bard received second high score prize and Mrs. Frank Wiggins out consolation. The home was decorated with Halloween colors and tallies and sandwiches carried out the Halloween idea. Late in the afternoon a delicious salad course was served.

Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Crocker, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Alton and family, and Mrs. Henry Alford.

HALLOWEEN PARTY

James Howard and Billy Hagan entertained a number of their friends Monday evening with a well planned Halloween party, carrying out the color schemes and decorations for the occasion. As the guests arrived they were invited into the living room by Mrs. Melton and were asked to register. All the children came unmasked and after the party began they were asked to guess the names of the different ones present, after which all were then directed to remove their masks. Following this they were carried to the dining room which was decorated for the occasion with pumpkins and witch faces, where many games and contests were played and enjoyed. Three prizes were awarded to Martha Nell Houston, Mary Shirley Melton and Charles Dixon for winning the various contests.

Following the contests they were taken to the back lawn where a gigantic bonfire was built, where the toasting of marshmallows and telling of ghost stories was enjoyed. Each child was then served a nice hot hamburger.

Those assisting Mrs. Hagan in serving were as follows: Mrs. G. D. Robertson, Mrs. J. P. Denning, Mrs. R. B. Camp, Mrs. Mary Melton, Martha Nell Houston, Betty Ann Reed, Daisy Deen Fenwick, Mary Neil Jones and Marjorie Kelton.

Other guests who enjoyed the party with James Howard and Billy Hagan were Margaret Virginia Melton, Mary Shirley Melton, Marjorie Mae Davis, Virginia Ann Hardy, Margaret Nell Brady, Bobby Comp, Charles Dixon, Charles Joyce Fenwick, Herschel Hawkins, Willard Terry Payne, Joe Gene Armstrong, Eugene and Bobby Lynch, Charles Browder, Fred Winters, Tommy James, Edgar Drysdale, Jack Hart, Buddy Steele, Delbert Thompson, Billy Reed.

UNEEDUS PAGEANT

A pageant and mock wedding was given Tuesday night at the First Methodist church sponsored by the ladies of the Unneedus Circle. Wedding dresses were modeled, some as old as 100 years. A very beautiful and very interesting history was told of each.

The first model was Mrs. Jean Moon, Secretary of the Unneedus Circle. She was beautifully gown in a gorgeous wedding dress which was worn in 1860 by Mrs. Lucy McWeather of Lancaster, Ky. This dress won first prize at the State Fair in 1932. Mrs. Moon stood on the stage and as the models walked upon the stage a brief history of each was told by her. Others who participated were Ruth Graham, Mrs. Milton Exum, Margaret White Warren, Evelyn Davis, Ruth Jolly, Frances Brady, Mrs. Frank Wiggins, Martha Moade Merryman, Charlotte Davis, Ruth Marsh, Mr. Wallis Koelling, Annie Laura Barnett, Katherine Koelling, Lena Evelyn Taylor, Judith Hill, Mrs. Robert Graham, Katherine Taylor, Anna Buckingham, Louise McAnally, Jane Lewis, Florence Eleanor Pickle, Annie Lee Cochran, Robert Koelling, Jettie Sue Omar, Tommie Powers, Julia Mcampoe, Janice Puckett, Ann Murrell Whitnell, Almada Hudleston, Helen King, and Miss Margaret Butts.

The last feature of the program was a mock wedding in which Miss Virginia Fleming acted as bride, and Ward Johnson, the groom. Bridesmaids were Susie Fall, Virginia Mescham, Betty Koehn, all dressed in modern evening dresses. Groomsman were William Henry Edwards, Bud Davis and Bob Binford. The bride was given away by Mr. Smith Atkins and the couple were married by C. N. Jolley.

BROWN-HENDERSON

On last Friday evening at six o'clock Miss Pauline Brown was quietly married to Mr. Alton Henderson. The ceremony took place at the home of Rev. Danley, the Presbyterian minister of the Beclerton community. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. James Kimbell, Miss Ruth Hancock and Mr. Leslie Walker. Mrs. Henderson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Brown of near Water Valley. She is employed in the Beclerton high school as a teacher. Mr. Henderson is the son of Mrs. Charles G. Gifford of Fulton community. He is a Senior in Beclerton high school and is one of the outstanding basketball players there. Immediately following the wedding the happy couple drove to Clinton where Beclerton met Clinton for a basketball game. The groom played a great game leading his team mates in the last half.

At present they are a home with the bride's father. The faculty and student body of Beclerton extend to them a hearty congratulation.

HALLOWEEN PARTY

Wednesday night the children of the Terry-Norman grade school in East Fulton entertained a large number of people with a Halloween party. The entire building carried out the Halloween color scheme. All children came costumed with the spooky frocks and masks. There was the country store, the fish pool, the candy counters and even the picture show in which to give entertainment to the many present. The main program was a number of readings and songs by the little tots with two special numbers. One a dance of Halloween by Misses Dorothy Anne Pierce and Margaret Butts and the other a tap dance by Miss Maude Jones, all of which were very delightful.

B. Y. P. U. PARTY

The Intermediate Department of the B. Y. P. U. of the First Baptist church enjoyed a Halloween party Monday night at the home of Mrs. G. C. Hall in the Highlands with Miss Maurine Ketchum as hostess. About thirty members were present, each disguised in a Halloween costume. Games and contests furnished entertainment throughout the evening. At a late hour delicious refreshments of hot chocolate and donuts were served by Mrs. Spud Edwards and Miss Sara Bondurant, sponsors of the repast.

SURPRISE BIRTHDAY DINNER

On Sunday, October 28, the friends and relatives of Mr. Lee Patrick surprised him with a dinner celebrating his 78th birthday, each guest bringing well filled baskets of good things to eat.
