Thanksgiving Rose

By "Wandering Joe"

THE Thanksgiving story of the present week is about Mabel, one of the boarders in the house of Mr. Charles Mingot, at Frankfort, Kentucky.

Mabel was the husband's favorite. She was fortunate in being employed in a room near her own, and she never knew what an anxious and went about her work more carefully than usual. The other boarders were more or less shut up in their rooms, and Mabel was allowed to go about the house as she pleased. The only time she was not at home was when she was at the dinner table.

On the evening of Thanksgiving, Mabel and the other boarders were seated at the table. The door was opened, and a young man entered. He was the son of one of the boarders, and he had been away from home for some time. He had heard that Thanksgiving was a special day, and he wanted to come home.

"Happy Thanksgiving, Mabel," he said, and kissed her on the cheek.

Mabel was surprised, but she was also happy. She had been missing him, and she was glad to see him again.

"Happy Thanksgiving to you too," she replied.

The young man was a good-looking boy, and he had been changed during his absence. His face was thinner, and his eyes were brighter. He seemed to have grown up during his stay away.

"I've been thinking of you a lot," he said.

"I've been thinking of you too," Mabel replied.

They talked for a while about their families, and then Mabel asked him if he wanted to eat with them.

"I'd be glad," he said.

So they all sat down to dinner together, and they had a good time. They talked about their plans for the future, and Mabel thought that it was a special day because it was the beginning of something new.

"I'm glad you're home," she said to the young man.

"I'm glad too," he replied.

After dinner, they went to the living room to play cards. Mabel won a few hands, and the young man laughed.

"You're a good card player," he said.

"Thank you," Mabel replied.

They played for a while, and then the young man said that he had to go. He had to get back home, and he didn't want to be late.

"Goodnight," he said, kissing Mabel on the cheek.

"Goodnight," Mabel replied.

The young man left, and Mabel was left with her thoughts about the past and the future. She knew that she would miss him, but she was also happy to have him back.

And so the Thanksgiving story of Mabel and the young man continued, with Mabel's hope for the future and the young man's plans for the future.
