Soil Conservation Notes By Herbert Anderson

The Marshall County Soil Conservation District Supervisors received the following letter from Lyle B. Leonard, Field Agent in Soil Conservation, University of Kentucky:

"CONTOUR CULTIVATION has always been a hard practice to establish, except on terraced land, or where some permanent guide could be used.

Last year it was hard to find many fields that had been contoured by laying off guide lines. Riding along the road they were seldom seen. Records show, however, that yields can be increased 10-15 per cent, in addition to saving fertile top soil for future production. To be most effective contour cultivation should include plowing the land as well as cultivation of the row crop.

SOD WATERWAYS are always needed where run-off water leaves cultivated land, but are especially needed in contoured fields. The level rows tend to conduct surplus water to the waterways. In most cases the sod in waterways needs manuring or fertilizing to make it as dense and vigorous as possible. That should be done early. In many cases a row of stakes should be set the proper width before plowing starts to insure sufficient capacity.

SOIL TESTING is important in a conservation program. No one can conserve poor soil. Testing to determine needs saves money and gives better results. It should be done early, however, so that fertilizer can be bought in time to use.

PASTURE and MEADOW Improvement is one of the best soil conservation measures that can be used. No other is so effective on so much land, with the possible exception of forestry in some places. The Green Pasture program has given a lot of impetus to this work, and is consequently a big help to soil conservation. This year with a widespread sign up in this program it would be a great thing if every district co-operator could be enrolled.

Observations

(Old Kodger's Column)

EVERY SO OFTEN WE run into that species that get a lot of kick out of spewing forth a venom more poisonous than a cottonmouth. It is not done by the fangs of pain, but by word of mouth. It is often said that so and so "is against everything and for nothing." It has never been my good luck to run into this type of man.

IN OUR EVERY DAY LIVES of haste, bustle, and overlook, we hear loud noises about what a majority wants, yet it is often the case that it is only the whimpering of the minority. In our way of thinking it is Democratic to take our cue from the majority, but at the same time it is also Democratic to take into consideration the minority. A lot of folks don't know it, but President Truman did not receive a majority of votes in the last election—neither did he receive a plurality.

IF 99 PERSONS WANT A certain object or law passed and only one opposed it, that one person should be given a chance to state the why of his opposition, and without any prejudice upon the part of anyone. Perhaps he may be looking at the problem from an unselfish standpoint and with a hope of doing good whether right or wrong. There are literally hundreds of laws and restrictions placed upon citizens that never had a chance to express themselves.

MANY ARE THE PEOPLE that oppose the death penalty for certain crimes, but they did not have a chance to express themselves. We cry out to high heaven about our inhuman actions toward our treatment of animals, but a human being can be scorched to a dark brown in the electric chair and we never blink an eye. Is it possible for a majority to be wrong? Can you think of any instance where the majority was wrong? Who has led us to believe that the majority are infallible?

THAT OLD VENOM SPREAD through the fangs of a human being is often a cover-up for the mask from whence it came. Often the simple truth is crushed to earth for a time being, but simpleton and fool is the man or woman who thinks it will stay crushed. Just plain, simple facts of truth should overshadow all of the venom spreaders any time or place. Most of us are much too eager to try the case before it reaches court. It is so easy for some who have committed almost every crime against society to point a bloody finger at someone else who may be seeing things in a different perspective.

IT IS SO EASY AND SOOTHING to read where a mob takes the life of a violator of the law, but we pay but little attention to the stupid little fellow who has successfully stopped the venom sprayers almost single handedly. The majority want to avenge—the minority only want to be heard. We hear lots about the "way being so plain that a fool need not err therein." Just what is so simple as an honest effort to seek and follow the truth? Where or how could anyone find more comfort and happiness than in such an effort? Not interpreted by our own way, but as it actually is, and without any doubts or reservations whatsoever.

WE ARE TOLD THAT, AND history records that from the days of Adam, there approached one of those crawling, squirming venom spreaders. Its methods and ways of attack have not changed. It is presumed this serpent will be with us until human beings begin to be just that.

Produces More Milk on Less Feed

Until 1949, Jack Southamer, whose farm is at Hammond, Louisiana, was getting little value from his land.

Then a complete soil analysis showed the fertilizers needed for a complete pasture program. Since then, 250 acres have been turned into abundant green pastures, providing grazing for 11 to 12 months out of the year.

White Dutch, Persian, Hop, alsike and crimson clovers provide late winter and spring grazing. Oats and rye grass provide fall and winter forage. Dallis grass and lespedeza supply green roughage for late spring, summer and early fall. Sweet sorghum is used for silage.

All of the pastures are mowed and grazed a week or two at a time to keep tender green shoots coming. Some of the clippings go into the silo.

Has it paid? "You bet," says Southamer. "In the first 4 months of 1951, we produced 50,000 pounds more milk on 12% less feed than we did in the first 4 months last year!"
