New Fulton Department Store Opens Thursday

The new Fulton Department Store will open in its handsome and newly modeled home on Lake-st on next Thursday, Feb. 28th at nine o'clock. L. Kasmow, owner and operator, announced here this week. Many weeks of remodeling and redecoration have been necessary in order to modernize and conveniently arrange the interior of the new store. Mr. Kasmow states, and every effort has been directed toward making the store one of the most appealing in this section.

It was first planned to open the new department store on March 1st but Mr. Kasmow decided to move the opening date forward to February 28th, as arrival of new spring merchandise and its arrangement was accomplished sooner than was expected. On an inside page of this issue appears an announcement of the formal opening, and next week a special message will be brought to the people of this community, and Mr. Kasmow asks his friends and patrons to look forward to the grand opening.

WASHINGTON. The appointment of Admiral Carl P. Grayson (above), as Chairman of the American Red Cross, by President Roosevelt, has met with popular favor. Admiral Grayson was personal physician to the late President Woodrow Wilson.

NEWS BRIEFS

The Fulton city council met informally Monday night to discuss various PWA projects. The mayor will send to the state planning board the following proposed projects: Repair of Carr Institute school building; Laying approximately 3 miles of paving on Mears, Cleveland Avenue, Washington and other streets; Building a new city fire department building; Widening of Lake-st from Walnut-st crossing to the new bridge at lower end of Lake-st; Putting a wall around Fairview cemetery; Acquisition of a subsistence farm; Building one mile of concrete sidewalks; New bridge on Agents and station operators of the Illinois Oil Company in West Kentucky met here Wednesday night in regular monthly session. A banquet was given at Lowe's Cafe and from there they adjourned to the Legion Cabin for a business meeting. J. C. Reedy and Mr. Hargrove of Rock Island, Ill., and M. E. Lane, district manager, were present. The meeting was well attended, and of much interest to West Kentucky operators of this company. Herman Sams and Hardin Morris were hosts to the gathering.

Talking with A. A. Larsen this week, and he had a question which, if answered correctly, should have employees of the Railway Express Agency, thoroughly familiar with the business of operating this transportation service. These questionnaires take up every phase of express operation, and are sent out monthly to student-employees of the Mississippi division. A. W. Wade of Fulton got one, and we imagine he had to think twice to answer some of the questions.

The West Kentucky Press Association will meet at Paducah Friday at Hotel Irvin Cobb. The state primary law, codes and postoffice rulings will be among topics of discussion. A. Robbins, president of the Kentucky Press Association and publisher of The Courier at Hickman, and J. Paul Bushart and David J. Capps of The Fulton County News will be present from this county.

Rev. Woodrow Fuller, the recently appointed new pastor of the First Baptist church, will begin his ministry there Sunday, March 3. Next Sunday immediately after the Sunday School a mass meeting of the men of the church will be held, for the purpose of discussing the various phases of the church work and arousing deeper interest and enthusiasm.

John Koehn feels much better, thank you! His car has been recovered, being found at Collinsville, Ill. near St. Louis. Mo. Some crook "borrowed" his car here on February 7th.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Gerling announce the birth of a daughter born Wednesday night, February 20th in the Fulton Hospital. Both mother and baby are reported doing nicely.

Showing to a packed house here Wednesday night, at the Orpheum Theatre, the WMC radio artists gave a highly entertaining performance. In the amateur show several of Fulton's own artists provided additional entertainment. Little Miss Eileen Ragsdale won first prize in the contest, with Dick Hill and Mrs. Mentel Manly tied for second honors. Miss Tommie Nell Gates took third prize. The stage show was highly appreciated by the audience, and the management deserves commendation for bringing it here. May there be more of them in the future.

Little Juanita Hatler fell from the high slide at the Cary Institute grounds Tuesday and broke one of her legs in two places. She was taken to the office of Dr. Ward Bushart where the bones were set and the leg placed in a splint.

DEATHS

Sam E. Turner, age 64, died Monday afternoon, Feb. 18th at 5 o'clock at his home on Park-av after a two months' illness. Mr. Turner was born and reared in Missouri and for the past twenty-five years has been a resident of Fulton. He was a member of the First Baptist church here and was a very active member both in church and civic affairs. He was secretary of the Baptist Men's Sunday School class and was usher at his church. At one time he was an employee of Homra Bros. dry goods store, but for the past ten years has been employed with the Humphrey-Huddleston Coal Co. He will be missed much by his church and a host of friends in this community.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Boaz Turner and one daughter, Miss Gladys Turner. The News extends sympathy to the bereaved.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the First Baptist church, conducted by the Rev. Frank Adams, pastor of the First Baptist church of Paducah. Burial followed in the Greenlee cemetery in charge of Hornbeak Undertaking Co.

Active pallbearers were: Messrs. Charles Huddleston, T. S. Humphreys, Earl Boaz, Brown Moss, Guy Gingles, and C. R. Collins. Honorary pallbearers were Messrs. W. C. Valentine, Walter Boaz, George Roberts, E. E. Mount, Dr. L. V. Brady, W. E. Flippo, Guy Duley, J. H. Rankin and R. E. Goldsby.

John D. Ferguson, 29, died Saturday morning, following a short illness of pneumonia. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at Chapel Hill, by Rev. Stanley Jones, with Winstead-Jones & Co., in charge of burial. Besides his widow the deceased is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ferguson.

Five brothers, Jordan, Bruce, Paul, Charlie and Dee; five sisters, Mrs. Harry Wallace of Doona, Mo; Mrs. E. O. Picken, Akron, O; Mrs. Harry McQueen, Mrs. Ed Wiley of Hornbeak, and Mrs. Birdie Ferris of near this city. The News extends sympathy to the bereaved, for John D. will be missed by his many friends.

Rochelle Irby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Irby of Tulsa, Okla., underwent a major operation at the Fulton hospital, Monday afternoon. Mr. Irby was returning to Fulton to visit his parents, and for treatment at a local hospital, when he became worse. He was taken from the train to the hospital.

Mr. Irby has many friends here who regret to learn of his illness, and hope for his early recovery.

IN FASHION NOW

The evening dresses being worn and displayed in the smart shops are enough to cause one to go into raptures. They are so alluring as to make the confirmed "stay at home" want to "go places and do things."

There seems to be frock for every type of woman but very few of the late "vampish" styles. Everything is designed to accentuate feminine loveliness.

To the delight of most men, the dance frocks are leaving off those troublesome shoe trains and are now barely touching the floor, giving the wearer more freedom and grace.

Among the more preferred materials one might mention first chiffon—yards and yards of it in a frock—lace, net, organda and new printed, embroidered and even painted taffetas.

One characteristic is common to all the frocks and that is the waist and hips are tightly fitted with all the fullness falling below the knees. This gives an appearance of slenderness to one's hips and waist—usually greatly to be desired.

Among the color that are favorites, gray seems to be outstanding. White is also as popular as ever with black running it a close race. However, a midnight blue slipper satin frock worn with a stiff white plique stitched belt and white corsage was a stunning as one might want.

BULLDOGS DEFEATED PADUCAH HERE 33-27

Hitting their shots with deadly accuracy, the Fulton high school Bulldogs defeated the Tilghman basketballers of Paducah, 33 to 27, on the local floor Tuesday night.

With the exception of a slight lead twice in the first quarter, the Paducahans were on the little end of the score throughout the game. Fulton had a score of 9 to 6 at the end of the first, 16 to 9 at the half, and early in the third Fulton held an advantage of 22 to 9. But before the end of the period Tilghman rallied and cut the margin down to 23 to 15. The visitors staged another rally in the fourth and trimmed a lead of 30 to 18 down to the final score. The lineups:

FULTON	POS.	TILGHMAN
Dycus 8	F	8 Pace
Peoples 6	F	2 Ogden
Carver 6	C	Davis
Reades 8	G	6 Evans

Substitutes: Fulton—Bard, Grogan, Nanney; Tilghman—Alderson, W. Davis 1.

The Fulton Bullpups, tore at the throats of the Union City Junior Tornados Tuesday night and completely smothered them under a barrage of successive field goals to win 42-18.

Genung for Fulton was high point man with fourteen, while Powers ran a close second with thirteen.

ATTORNEY GENERAL HANDS DOWN RULING

Supt. J. O. Lewis of the city schools recently asked the state's attorney general office to rule on whether the board of education would be affected by the state sales tax on purchases made by it. Under the rules of the state tax commission, boards of education are exempt from sales taxes on purchases made, and on food sold in cafeteria operated by school. The tax is to be collected on books and on entertainments, and on tablets, pencils and similar products when sold under direction of the board of education.

The 1935 corn-hog sign-up campaign will close on Feb. 25th. Commitment will be a Cayce and Hickman to fill out applications until this time. Elections for the new community committeemen will be held at Fulton, Saturday, March 2, at 2 p. m. and at Cayce, Monday, March 4, 10 o'clock for middle district two. Hickman, Monday at 2 p. m. for district No. 3. Landlords and producers must have applications completed and signed by the 28th to be eligible to vote.

A District Missionary Institute of the Union City District, Memphis Conference, was held at the First Methodist church here Tuesday, Rev. J. Mack Jenkins, presiding elder, presided. Bishop W. W. Darlington of Huntington, W. Va., Dr. J. F. Ravels of Nashville and Rev. T. C. McKelvy, of Henning, Tenn., and other prominent conference members were present. Mrs. J. E. Fall, of Fulton, district secretary, reported on Woman's Work in this district. Approximately 300 people attended the conference. Lunch was served at the noon hour.

COMMON SENSE DISCARDED

The Townsend plan of providing for old age and creating prosperity was quickly branded as a joke by the serious thinking, and remains the same with that class, but it has been accepted and heralded by a large group of people throughout the country who seem to put all common sense in the discard and hope for the impossible.

Mr. Townsend would authorize the government to hand every citizen over the age of 60, and who is unemployed, a pension of $200 per month with no other restriction than it must be spent within the month and in this country. Every one over 60 years of age would be eligible for all that would be necessary if the person was employed would be to resign the job at hand and start spending the $200 coming in each month.

There are so many gaping discrepancies between the theory of the plan and the actual facts that would be encountered that it is difficult to enumerate them all in detail in one brief discourse.

According to Mr. Townsend, the plan would call for a 2% sales tax on all sales which would be sufficient to raise the money necessary to create such a Utopia. But actual facts show that the total amount of money needed for such a pension would amount to about half of the yearly income of the nation. A fifty per cent tax on all salaries would be necessary.

Only about nine per cent of our population is over 60 years of age. Thus, ninety-one per cent would sacrifice 50 per cent of income to give the $200 per month to the other nine per cent.

And the plan is supposed to create prosperity! Robbing Peter to pay Paul will accomplish no such end. If one member of a family is working and divides his salary with the others of the family who have no income, the spending power of the family does not increase. It remains the same as before and what applies to the family unit in this example, applies to the nation as a whole.

Those with the slightest knowledge of economics know that the plan is ridiculous, yet thousands beseeched their representatives in congress with letters asking them to support the plan. Many of these letters are threatening, promising political extinction to all congressmen who oppose the plan.

There is much logic in the irony of recent articles ridiculing the idea of Townsend. One writer says, "Why go only half the way, why be pickers? Why not make it $500 per month or $1,000? Let everybody have lots of money instead of a paltry $200 per month." It would be just as easy and just as feasible to make the amount much greater.

Another writer says, "The plan is only elementary. It's just a halfway affair. What should be done is to abolish all money; everyone go on with their jobs as they are at present but without any sort of pay. Then government disbursement headquarters be set up in each community where every citizen could go and get whatever they needed and wanted free of charge. There would be no need for money for everyone would have everything wanted or could get it for the asking." Such a plan would just be as reasonable as the Townsend idea and would be much more simple in its execution.

There is much to be said in favor of a plan for providing for old age for those in need. But the plan must be reasonable and within the limits of what the taxpayer can afford.

WHERE DOES THE MONEY GO?

We haven't heard very much lately about the charges which were first voiced by Senator Borah of widespread waste and extravagance if not of actual misappropriation in the administration and disbursement of relief funds. As we understand it these charges were taken with some seriousness and Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins promised a thorough investigation. There is little use in crying over soured milk or to use another homely old-fashioned expression, in locking the stable door after the horse has been stolen.

We do not profess to have any special information of particular instance of waste of public funds or of malfeasance on the part of those charged with distributing them; but we think we have a broad enough understanding of human nature to recognize the probability that a great deal of the Federal relief money, disbursed as it has been through state and county and local political bodies, did not get to its ultimate destination, the people who were really in need of relief.

That is not to be taken as a criticism either of the Relief Administration or of any political party or organization or of anything but the human race as a whole. We do not believe it is possible in the present imperfect state of human nature, to suddenly entrust the distribution of enormous sums of money to individuals and groups who have had no experience in handling money and who have not been trained to a sense of trustworthiness, without a great deal of that money sticking to the fingers of a good many of the people who handle it.

For that reason we think that it is a very wise decision on President Roosevelt's part that Federal relief will from now on take the form of employing men on real work at real wages and putting it squarely up to the states to take care of those who cannot or will not work.

Whether or not this will put an end to persons on relief driving up for their grocery orders in their Packards, we cannot predict. At least it will cease to be a national scandal and become a situation for each state and community to control for itself.

We do not wish to cast a slur upon any particular state, but we have noticed lately the report of one community in which in the past year some 80 babies and 102 hound dogs have been added to the relief rolls. We understand the Relief Administration has accepted the babies but has begun to draw the line at the dogs.

It is a pretty risky thing to expose most people to temptation.

BOARD OF EQUALIZATION IN SESSION AT HICKMAN

The county board of equalization, composed of J. R. Graham Sr., of Fulton, Ray Thomas, Cayce, Henry Helm, of near Hickman, and Guy Hale of Hickman, have been busy this week reviewing the tax list of Fulton county, at the court house in Hickman.

County Judge Walker asked the board not to make any drastic cuts, and assured taxpayers that no raise in rate is contemplated, only where volunteer assessments, have been lowered, and restoration is necessary to systematically balance the budget of the county. The county is endeavoring to operate on a cash basis, Judge Walker states, and in order to do this 1932-33 assessments will have to be maintained.

Officers and teachers of the First Methodist church will hold a council meeting and dinner at the church Friday night at 7 o'clock. Much interest discussion will follow the dinner.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Mussolini Warlike
Supreme Court Power
All Happy There
Learning How to Spend

Mussolini has found the opportunity to show the world what it means when

Arthur Brisbane

direct descendant of King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Maybe he is, but he will encounter a problem that King Solomon's wisdom could not solve for him when he meets Mussolini's airplanes.

If wise, Selassie will pay the indemnity that Mussolini demands. As a practical business man, Mussolini always asks a little something extra. He got some from Greece. Also, Selassie must salute the Italian flag, which costs nothing. Mexico would not do that.

One question may surprise you concerning Supreme court decisions setting aside laws passed by the congress and signed by the President, on the ground that congress, in passing the law, had exceeded its constitutional authority. This is the question: Are those Supreme court decisions in themselves unconstitutional?

When the Supreme court, sometimes by a narrow margin of five to four, declares a law unconstitutional and void, is it exceeding its constitutional authority?

Where in the Constitution of the United States do you find authority for the Supreme court power to overrule congress and the President in the making of laws? This absence of authority is no accident. Those that wrote the Constitution, after long arguing, discussing and many concessions, knew, presumably, what they wanted the Constitution to say. And they did not want it to give the Supreme court the power to veto laws, that it now assumes and exercises.

In London, John Pickering, fifty-eight, apparently dead, was revived after five minutes. Meanwhile, he had gone to heaven. He saw interesting things, came back to tell of them. Souls, evidently, travel more rapidly than light, which takes 900,000,000 years to get outside of the universe as we know it, going 186,000 miles a second. Mr. Pickering says heaven is filled with a "happy crowd."

There were no children. "All were dressed as on earth."

No motifs in heaven, of course; no depression either.

Mayor LaGuardia, consulting with President Roosevelt about loans for New York city improvements, again proves that we have at last learned to spend money. Something over $1,000,000,000 would be the preliminary total, for tunnels, highways, public schools, a $150,000,000 housing program, $232,000,000 for a better water supply from the Delaware, extension of Park Avenue as a broad highway above the tracks of the New York Central north to the Bronx, elimination of slums and the slum character from the East river shores.

From Ireland comes Jack Doyle, via Mayfair, London, 6 feet 4, handsome face, nice smile, big muscles, telling the truth about himself, whatever the damage to his lowbrow fighter: "I am not like the usual lowbrow fighter. I'll go up and up and up to the very top."

Mr. Doyle slings "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" very sweetly. Mr. Max Baer, at present prize-fight champion, cannot sing well, but he, too, has self-confidence: "Jack Doyle's prophecies are all very well. He may go up and up and up, but sooner or later on the road up he will meet me, and then he will go down and down and down."

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., head of General Motors, announces that 200,000 employees, under the company's saving and investment plan, will have $11,000,000 cash divided among them. The employee who saves $25 a month, the maximum, $300 a year, gets back his $300 plus $321.52, contributed by the company, including $114 for interest. It is rather difficult to persuade men to "raise, ye prisoners of starvation," and "throw off their chains," when one of the chains is attached to an $11,000,000 melon.

Germany plans an army of 400,000 men, small compared with the Kaiser's army. But the real fighting machine hereafter will be located in the air. As, besides, German recruits for the 400,000 army will serve only one year instead of four, giving a rapid turn over of trained fighters. At the end of five years Germany would have 2,000,000 men trained to fight. It is likely however, that whatever is going to happen will happen long before five years are up.

SYNOPSIS

The luck that had brought the Boston Lawrences to California at the beginning of the gold rush has deserted the present generation. From a 4,000-acre ranch, their holdings have shrunk to a small farm, and the old family home in Clipperville. The death of their poetic father forced the three eldest children to work so that Sam and little Ariel might continue their education. Phil, now twenty-five, had gone into the iron work, Gail to the public library and Edith to the book department of Clipperville's largest store. Seventeen-year-old Ariel is becoming a problem, and Phil is fascinated by "that terrible" Lily Cass, whose husband has deserted her. Young Van Murchison, son of a wealthy family, returns from Yale. He and Gail had been close friends before he went to college and Gail has visions of the turning of the Lawrence luck. Dick Stebbins, Phil's best friend, has the run of the house.

CHAPTER II—Continued

He had brought a large box with him; a florist's box.

"Dick, don't tell me you remembered my birthday?" Gail exclaimed as he gave it to her.

"Whose birthday?"

"Mine."

Dick's dissatisfied look traversed the circle.

"I didn't know today was your birthday," he said resentfully. "No—I just met the boy bringing this in."

Her fingers had been experiencing the unfamiliar delight of tearing away green strings and cardboard and massed layers of silky green paper. Roses—wet, sweet roses, two dozen of them!

"A dozen and a half," Edith breathed, awed.

"Two dozen, Edie."

Gail had wrenched the card from its wire and torn open the wet envelope; the ink on the card was blurred, but the words unmistakable.

"Twenty-three times twenty-three more. Love from Van."

She seemed amused and pleased; they were all pleased. But Gail's moderately gratified manner gave no hint of the bubbling geyser of ecstasy that arose within her. This was almost unbelievable. Roses—and the intimate, offhand card from Van Murchison!

Gail was only confusedly aware of what went on about her, of what the others were saying.

"School tonight, Phil?" Dick asked.

"Oh, sure."

They went off together and, in a happy daze, Gail began automatically the business of clearing up. Her thoughts swam in a sea of golden light.

The kitchen grew hot; the gas soared and whistled. Gail worked on obliviously. Roses, roses, roses—the world was nothing but pink roses.

Gail had come into Ariel's room, as was her habit the last thing at night, to see that her little sister was comfortably in bed. She kissed Ariel, and smoothed the discarded folds of blanket at the foot of the bed.

When she left the room Ariel seemed to be almost asleep.

Edith, meanwhile, had come into Gail's room. "When all's said and done—" she began, and paused.

"Which God forbid should ever be?" Gail interposed.

"Well, I know. But when all's said and done, Gail, who are the Murchisons? They're nothing but money."

"Still . . . money . . ." Gail was laughing at her sister, but Edith did not resent it.

"Of course," she answered the uncompleted suggestion with a smile. "But I mean that money isn't—like birth," she pursued.

Gail went about the room quickly, long adept in the business of making it ready for the night. She said her prayers in a brisk, businesslike way, with her eyes on Edith's face, and got into bed. Her sister came to sit at her foot.

"It would be wonderful if one of us married well," Edith offered dreamily.

"On the strength of two dozen roses," Gail countered. "At a time of the year when roses are two dollars a dozen!"

"They have seeds," Edith mused, undisturbed.

"Murchison's Mills. I suppose they have millions," Gail agreed soberly.

"But he's not really a Murchison, Edie."

"He was adopted. Nobody ever calls him Kinney."

"Was he legally adopted?"

"Oh, yes. He was only five when his mother got a divorce, and when Van's father died Mr. Murchison practically adopted him."

"How'd you happen to know that, Edie?"

"Reading a book about old Clipperville—you know that crazy book that hardly mentions Grandfather? Well, it had all about some lawsuit, and the Clippes and the Kinneys were in it."

"He's awfully nice," Gail said impulsively, out of a silence.

"He just is. . . . Is he handsome, Gail?"

"Oh—collegiate to-king."

Edith was silent for a full minute. Then she said, with conviction, "You ought to come to Muller's and get one of those striped lineas."

"I was thinking I'd get one of those dotted swiss dresses at the sale. They're thirty-five."

"You ought to get both," Edith said firmly.

"I wish I had a white hat!"

There was another silence in the big, dim, old-fashioned bedroom, whose heavy hunged wall papers had not been changed or cleaned for twenty years, and whose windows were still curtained in fringed rep.

"Isn't it fun, the way unexpected things happen?" Edith said.

"I was thinking we could ask him to Sunday supper."

They were silent, staring into space.

"Do you know we're very romantic?" Edith demanded then.

"I suppose we are?"

"You know we are. I mean—Phil's so handsome and so smart, and everyone likes Sam, and everyone regards Ariel as a sort of genius, who's going to inherit Papa's gift, and you—you certainly can write."

"Oh, Edie! I had one article in the Challenge, and that was only because it was in favor of the Bay bridge."

"Abigail Lawrence! Your compositions always took prizes at school, and your Mother's day article was published on the front page of the San Francisco Call."

"Well, I know," Gail pondered it a minute, and then said with a sudden flush of face, "If I should marry any one who had any money, Edie, and didn't have to work so hard and worry so much, I believe I could write stories!"

"You don't have to tell me that," said loyal Edith.

"Are two of your daughters going to be writers, Mr. Lucky Lawrence?"

Gail whimsically asked the enormous, enlarged crayon portrait of her father hanging on the wall.

"All of us are going to get somewhere, and put the Lucky Lawrences back on the map!" Edith prophesied.

Left alone under her greenish light, Gail fell into a happy musing mood that made her supply of books entirely superfluous. She had been getting tired and discouraged of late; for months she had seemed to drag with her, to lack its accustomed sweetness and interest. After all, Papa had been dead for almost seven years now, and they had been hard, puzzled years for the children he had left behind him, years barren of results. The old house had grown shabbier, the garden more of a jungle, the children themselves had grown only poorer and more bewildered. There appeared to be no escape; there had been no miracle.

Just at first there had been a decided social movement toward the orphaned Lawrences; immediately after Patterson Lawrence's heroic death in overpowered Washington, all Clipperville had made a gesture of kindness and concern toward his children. During these days Gail and Phil had been the center of a happy, fun-loving group. These had been days of picnics, charades, amateur theatricals, parties at Dobbins', movies, occasional hilarious gatherings at theaters or dances.

All that was over now. Gradually the smart crowd had drifted away, taking to motor cars, hotel tea rooms, roadhouses.

Gail had neither the money nor the goings to hold her own; Phil, always something of a Puritan, had frankly abandoned a company and a code with which he had no sympathy, and Edith had withdrawn first of all.

For actual years now—Gail almost winced away in her secret thought from calculating them too exactly—there had been no attempt made on the part of Clipperville's golden youth to include the Lawrences in good times. Edith had become just a little bit twisted, in consequence, just a little too prone to explain merely that the Lawrences did not want to have anything to do with modern ways, for they intended to marry men worthy of their name. And Phil had given up society entirely, and admired—or had admired, for Gail never admitted it—that wretched little social outcast, Lily Cass.

As for Gail, for many months she had known herself to be sinking into utter commonplaceness. As time went on she was becoming more and more drab little Miss Lawrence of the library; Phil more and more the quiet, hard-working, underpaid iron worker; Edith more and more bookish, old-maidish.

The joyous promise of the romantic Lawrence youngsters had long been lost. Phil had told Gail, with a little patient bitterness, that it was the Hunter and the Barchi boys that all advancement at the Iron Works had been given. Months had gone by without seeing one single eligible man coming to the Lawrence house.

Hardest of all for Gail to lose had been her faith in herself. She had been so sure, at sixteen, seven long years ago, that courage, self-confidence, high spirits, and honest service were the weapons with which to conquer the world. She had been so sure that she knew the secret!

She had seen herself writing children's stories. Oh, nothing sensational, nothing classical—but simple, charming, boarding-school and if possible stories that all girls would love, and that would assure Gail pleasant fame among her townpeople, insure her an income that would mean pleasure and beauty for Ariel's girlhood, and an opportunity to develop the little sister's poetical genius.

But it seemed that forever—forever—the once lucky Lawrences would be poor, shabby, hardworking, and obscure, that Phil would help to build ships, in which luckier men should cruise the waters of the world, that Edith would sell to more fortunate women the romances she would never realize in her own life, and Gail taste in her own mind only the rapture of typewritten pages, the ecstasy of holding her own book in her own hands, the shy delight of being introduced in distinguished gatherings as "the authoress."

Now, on her twenty-third birthday, unexpectedly, Van Murchison had given her back these dreams. Oh, how good she could be, how gracious and sweet and fine she could be! If Van Murchison fell in love with her! That was all she needed, just a break—just an indication that wonderful things could happen, that poor girls were sometimes sought in marriage by rich young men.

Young Mrs. Murchison. After all, if she was married at—say this time next year—nobody could say that she had been an old maid. Twenty-four—that was young to marry. And then Edie should marry—it would be easy enough to find husbands for the other girls, with the Murchison money and position behind her!

The fun of it! The beauty of it! And why not? Other girls had had that much luck, and much, much more.

Drowsing off to sleep in the sweet summer darkness, Gail heard a door bang downstairs, just as the clock struck a drowsy eleven. The Lawrences, having little to protect, rarely locked doors; perhaps this was Sam coming in late, perhaps it was Phil. Anyway, unless it banged again she did not propose to get up to bother with it.

As it happened, it was neither, but Gail could not know that, and so she drifted happily off into the deep sleep of tired twenty-three. Van Murchison's laugh, his voice, still in her ears.

Sam had been in bed and asleep for an hour when the clock struck eleven. Phil had walked home from night school with Lily. He was now sitting on the steps of the Cass shanty at the end of Thomas street, murmuring incoherent and foolish absurdities to the little dog that smelled of heavy cheap powder and perfume.

No; the door had been slammed by Ariel—or rather it had been caught and slammed by an unexpected gust of wind when her small frail hand had opened it upon the summer dark. She had stood there, trembling, terrified, waiting to see if Sam or Gail or Edith had been roused, ready to fly to her room and scramble into bed at the first sound of an investigating footstep.

But there had been no disturbance upstairs, and after an interminable silence Ariel had opened the door and slipped down through the overgrown garden, and into the deep green shadows at the gate. In a sky of clear dark blue millions of stars had been twinkling, and in the side lane, deeply rutted from winter rains, there had been two other stars, the watchful lamps of a shining low open car.

Ariel knew Buddy Ralsch very slightly, but she knew, as all the town knew, that he was an overgrown big boy who had been in Stanford university for about three years and was still a sophomore. She knew what the scent of Buddy's breath signified, too.

Of the couple sunk in the rumble seat, an overcast man with a collapsed little bobbed, slick head on his shoulder, she had known nothing. But she had settled beside the driver with a little gasp of satisfaction and excitement.

Buddy had whispered, "Listen, we're only going down the Road a ways, and come back."

"That suits me," Ariel had said, unperturbed.

"You're a good little sport," Buddy had told her. They were out of hearing of the Lawrence house now, and he could move faster. He had stepped on the gas, and the car had shot like a projectile into the starry night.

Fifth Memphis Carnival May 6-11 To Feature National Cotton Show

Scarcely three months away is Memphis' fifth Cotton Carnival that promises to be the most successful of them all in entertainment, in commercial value and in an educational way.

Many new attractions are in store for every individual that is fortunate enough to witness and take part in this great spectacle of the South during the week of May 6 through 11th.

This year, as in each preceding year, the Executive Committee of the Memphis Cotton Carnival, has strived to bring to Memphians and the people in the Tri-State some feature that will be of great interest to all. The Executive Committee after much time and effort have arranged for this year's Carnival an attraction that they hope will in time develop into a permanent part of the Carnival.

Straying slightly away from the purely festive atmosphere which has been its chief characteristic, this year's Cotton Carnival strikes a serious note with the initial presentation of the National Cotton Show in conjunction with the Memphis Cotton Carnival and National Cotton Week.

The National Cotton Show, which will be housed in three mammoth buildings at the Fairgrounds, scene of the 1935 Carnival, will portray the South's greatest cash staple in all of its phases, from planting, through production, to the many finished products into which it enters. The exhibit will be divided into two groups, the textile group and the non-textile group. The textile group will present a showing of fine cotton fabrics that are featured in the style centers throughout the world. Several hundred manufacturers of cotton textiles are sending their products to Memphis to be placed on exhibit.

Many museums throughout the country along with the Cotton Textile Institute and the Federal Department of Agriculture are lending their cooperation towards making this the greatest exhibit of its kind ever held.

The Cotton Seed Products Division will present an educational exhibit, tracing the path of the non-textile product throughout its four stages, seeds, hulls, linters and oils. This exhibit will tend to place before the many visitors that are expected to attend the Carnival the tremendous number and variety of finished products of which cotton is a component part with a range from paper to salad dressing. This show will bring about the first time that any effort has been put forth to present to the public the many and divergent uses of cotton and its by-products.

The gay side of the Carnival has not gone by unnoticed for even a wider variety of activities in the way of parades, sporting events, boat races, dances, pageants, tableaux, and one of the world's largest carnival shows, with hundreds of attractions ranging from the freaks of nature to the old time burlesque shows. One parade alone will exhibit to the on-lookers one of the most gorgeous displays of electrical floats ever presented. The cost alone to bring this marvelous display to Memphis at this time reaches the top mark of some $15,000.

Not one detail has been overlooked by the Carnival Association to provide for all that come to this outstanding event that has been rightly named "The South's Greatest Party." Already having received both national and international fame via the hook-ups on the radio and through articles in the press and magazines, this year's Carnival is slated to be publicized more than any other recent exhibit except the World's Fair.

MEDIUM FAT HOG IS BEST

A 225-pound moderately fat hog produces the "family" size cuts of pork, says Prof. R. R. Hinman of the New York State College of Agriculture.

Such hogs, he adds, will yield hams and three rib shoulders each weigh about sixteen pounds each, bacon strips and loins that weigh from ten to twelve pounds. These cuts, of desirable size to cure and store after smoking, may be cut or roasted for cooking. Heavier hogs normally produce a greater proportion of lard. They also produce bacon and hams that some families consider too fat.

Good quality, thrifty hogs normally produce the most desirable meat, Professor Hinman says. Precaution should be taken to see that all animals dressed are in healthy condition.

FIGHTING LICE ON HORSES

The best way to treat horses infested with lice is to apply equal parts of ground sabadilla seed and flowers of sulphur, using two or three handfuls per horse. Rub the mixture into the hair along the back from the tail to the withers and around the neck. Apply some between the forelegs and hindlegs, especially if the lice are bad. Two or three applications during the winter months should control the infestation.—A. L. Harvey, University Farm, St. Paul.

Breach Widens Between Administration and Labor—Hauptmann Sentenced to Death—Inquiries Into Causes of Macon Disaster Get Under Way.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT extended no olive branches toward the American Federation of Labor when he signed the cigarette industry code, which labor leaders had declared was "a bill of a story."

S. Clay Williams

The breach between the administration and labor is daily growing wider. The code, finally signed after months of argument between the tobacco industry and labor, calls for a forty-hour week and minimum wages from 25 to 40 cents an hour. Labor leaders also objected to the presence of S. Clay Williams, administration board chairman, who they declare is not in sympathy with labor. The President issued a curt statement informing the federation council that Williams' services had been satisfactory and that he had no intention of removing him without cause.

The executive council of the federation, composed of William Green and presidents of the federation of seven international unions, states that some present administration labor policies are bringing increased unrest among workers which may reach the danger point of widespread strikes unless corrected.

Thus far, the President seems to have had the best of the argument. Labor leaders, however, are expected to push the fight for a "prevailing wage" clause in work relief legislation, thus endangering the administration program.

INQUIRIES into the causes of the "quiver" which ripped away the two gas cells and caused the giant dirigible "Macon" to plunge into the Pacific has been started. Even the surviving 81 officers and men of the "Sky Queen" are not certain just what caused the catastrophe, although Lieut. Com. H. V. Wiley, survivor of the Akron disaster and master of the Macon, was said to have "some ideas" about it. His findings will be placed before the board of inquiry.

Some hints were made about structural weakness of the $2,450,000 craft, but naval officers refused to discuss the subject. In Washington, President Roosevelt said there would be no immediate move to replace the ship.

Survivors of the crash told a dramatic story of heroism. Cruising along at a speed of 63 knots, the ship twice lowered its elevation to avoid rain squalls. A short jar was felt, the ship began to take a bow-up position, and Commander Wiley received a report that one of the 12 helium gas cells was gone. The Macon then rose rapidly to 4,000 feet, its nose sticking up at a sharp angle and then slowly sank toward the ocean as the crew made frantic efforts to right the lurching craft.

As it hit the ocean the crew slid down ropes or dived into the heavy swells. Men swam through flame where flames had ignited oil and gasoline, others rescued companions whose lifeboats were lost or broken in long leaps into the sea. The sailors watched the ship crumble under the waves and at last disappear. Only two men were lost. Cruisers rushed to the scene and picked up the survivors.

BRUNO HAUPTMANN will die in the electric chair at Trenton, N. J., during the week of March 18, unless attorneys secure a stay of execution by filing an appeal. The prisoner showed no trace of emotion as the jurors announced their verdict and did not break under the strain until after Justice Trenehard had pronounced sentence, and he was returned to the cell. There, his iron will gave way and he sobbed as he sat on his hard iron cot.

The jurors required more than 12 hours to reach their verdict. Two of the women were said to have held out for a recommendation of mercy which would have resulted in a life sentence for the man accused of the murder of the Lindbergh baby, but there was no mention of mercy when the verdict was read.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT eked out a close victory in the senate appropriations committee, when the amendment to cut $2,000,000,000 of the administration's $4,280,000,000 work relief bill was defeated by the close vote of 12 to 11. Administration forces scored another victory by the adoption of a compromise amendment to the proposal of Senator Pat McCarran for the payment of prevailing wages on all federal projects. Witnesses testified that McCarran's amendment would have increased the cost of putting 3,500,000 men to work by more than $2,000,000,000 and would have defeated the purpose of the bill.

McCarran did not press his amendment in committee when a substitute was offered, but insists that he will do so on the senate floor. The fight the American Federation of Labor is making on this point is expected to have considerable influence with a number of senators, who fear the wrath of their labor constituents.

The substitute, proposed by Senator Richard B. Russell, and adopted by a vote of 14 to 9, provides that the President shall establish the prevailing rates of pay whenever an investigation discloses that the federal wages of $30 a month are affecting adversely the rates on work of a similar nature. The matter is entirely up to the President, however, and he can take any action or withhold any investigation, just as he sees fit, which may mean much or nothing.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI found Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia is a man not easily frightened. Duce's demands for indemnities for Italian colonists killed on the borders of Italian Somaliland were politely, but firmly, refused. The Ethiopians, undisturbed by the vast preparations Italy has been making, declared they would fight to their last drop of blood to preserve their independence, and that they would not apologize or make reparations for what they maintain is merely defense of their own country. This puts Mussolini in an embarrassing position. He must either send an expeditionary force against the Ethiopians, or back down after mobilizing troops, and that would be a bitter pill for the Italian dictator to swallow.

CHANCELLOR HITLER emerged from his hermit-like seclusion with a number of counter-proposals which he offered in reply to the Franco-British proposals. Der Fuehrer, a government spokesman, stated, would definitely refuse to join any pact guaranteeing Austria's independence unless "the will of the Austrian people is first consulted" by means of a plebiscite to determine whether the nation desires an "anschluss" (union) with the German reich. Hitler will also follow Poland's stand, and will have nothing to do with the French-sponsored eastern securities agreement "if it is to be based on mutual assistance," although he is willing to join an air force equal to Soviet Russia's. Hitler seems particularly anxious to avoid any agreement which would bind Germany to Russia in event of war between that country and Japan.

Chancellor Hitler

From the tone of Hitler's demands, he evidently did not entirely believe that France and Great Britain were not preparing some trap for him. The Hitler reply demands that Germany must be given absolute equality of armaments before anything else can be discussed, and that Germany will negotiate an air pact if her relations with Soviet Russia are considered, and if England, France, Belgium and Italy agree to consult each other before any action is taken. He also insists that the general question of disarmament is allied with the air pact and must be settled at the same time.

When notified that Der Reichsfuehrer would make reservations, official British sources indicated that Germany must either accept or reject the agreement in its entirety, and stated partial acceptance would not be agreeable to Great Britain. All of which may be true, or it may be just the old horse-trading spirit which seems to break out in the best diplomatic circles.

DISPATCHES from Bolivia, which must be taken with several grains of salt, indicate that the Bolivians are meeting with success in defending Villa Montes, their last important stronghold in the disputed Gran Chaco, and that the scissor-like offensive of General Estigarribia, Paraguayan commander in chief, is seriously menaced. It was reported the Bolivians, struggling desperately to relieve the pressure on Villa Montes, had defeated the Paraguayans in the Nancorainza sector after three days of bitter fighting. This offensive, it was thought, might force Estigarribia's northern wing to retreat.

FRANCIS RIDDLE and his national labor relations board took a hand in the controversy between the administration and the American Federation of Labor by offering a suggestion that section 7-A of the recovery act "should be clarified." William Green and his fellow leaders of the federation have long contended that the clause, guaranteeing employees rights to bargain collectively, should be enlarged to specify that the majority of employees should have the right to choose the spokesmen for all employees, and that company unions should be barred. The nation's labor board, which submitted a report of its first six months' work, defended the majority rule at length. As is well known, the administration desires section 7-A continued unchanged in the new NRA law which is in the process of making.

WITH the full approval of the administration, the army and navy are to receive $40,000,000 to carry out a program of national defense which will consist mainly of improved strongholds on the west coast and in the Pacific. The money, which will be shared equally by the two departments, comes from a $300,000,000 public works fund. Some of the navy's part will be spent along the Atlantic, but the greater part will go for shipyards, dry docks and bases on the Pacific coast, at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, and at Coco Solo, Canal Zone, which is a submarine base.

Nearly $11,000,000 of the army's share is to be used in beginning the construction of a great air base in Hawaii. The total cost of this base is estimated at $18,000,000. The decision to use most of the money in the Pacific was said to have been influenced by the fact that the fleet has been concentrated in Pacific waters during much of the past two years. Navy officials stressed before the naval committee, that facilities on the coast are inadequate.

Japan is supposed not to be alarmed by this program, congressional leaders having given public and careful assurance that no "offense" is intended and that such propositions as the Hawaii air base would have been put forward even if Japan had not denounced the Washington naval treaty.

At a meeting of the army high command with the military committee of the house these plans for defense were thrashed out thoroughly. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, recommended to the committee the purchase of 300 new armored and equipped airplanes at a cost of $30,000,000 to give the army the aerial armada of 2,320 modern aircraft recommended by the Baker aviation committee. These additional aircraft are necessary, MacArthur said in a memorandum, to expand the new general headquarters air force to give it 900 fighting units, for its Pacific, Atlantic and central divisions.

Soon after this meeting the commanders of these three divisions were announced by Brig. Gen. Frank M. Andrews, head of the GHQ air force. Lieut. Col. H. H. Arnold, March field, Calif., was named commander of the first (Pacific) wing with the rank of brigadier general. Lieut. Col. H. C. Pratt, former assistant chief of air corps, was named commander of the second (Atlantic) wing at Langley field, Va., with the rank of brigadier general. Lieut. Col. Gerald C. Brant will command the third (central) wing, Fort Crockett, Texas, with the rank of colonel.

WHETHER he desires it, President Roosevelt will have to "face an early test of his strength against that of bonus payment advocates. If present signs are read correctly, although bonus leaders have been unable to agree among themselves, they insist the plan be brought up for consideration. Some administration leaders have expressed belief such a step is necessary to prevent a revolt on major administration legislation.

Wright Patman

The controversy over possible methods of payment is becoming increasingly bitter. Representative Patman, Texas Democrat, author of a bill to pay the bonus certificates with an issue of new currency, gave out a statement asserting that Commander Frank N. Belgrave of the American Legion wanted to finance payment with a bond issue because the bank of which he is vice president receives $1,250,000 in interest annually on $5,000,000 worth of government bonds.

The American Liberty league also issued a statement applauding the President's stand against paying the bonus. The league said the Legion-backed Vinson bill to finance the bonus through the sale of bonds was "the lesser evil," but asked congress to defeat both it and the Patman measure.

"The President's opposition to immediate payment of the entire face value of the bonus certificates is based on sound principles and deserves to be upheld," the organization added.

NINE old gentlemen of vast dignity, comprising the United States Supreme court, conferred together for five hours Saturday. Then through Clerk Charles C. Cropley, Chief Justice Hughes announced that there would be no decisions handed down on the following Monday. Nothing was said about the rest of the week, but it was assumed the ruling on the gold clause cases would not be handed down before February 18. It was thought by the well informed that the delay was due to the slowness with which the dissenters were preparing their views.

Meanwhile anxiety over the matter, at least in government circles, was growing less daily. Attorney General Cummings spent two hours with President Roosevelt going over the plans which have been drawn up for immediate action in the event that the decision goes against the government.

ROME and Tokyo were the chief bidders for the 1940 Olympic games, and it now appears that the Japanese capital is likely to be the winner. Count Soyesima, representative of the Japanese Olympic committee, had an interview with Premier Mussolini in Rome and talked him into a swap by which Japan will use its influence to obtain the 1944 games for Rome. The count said that at first Duce was not inclined to agree to the shift but softened under the plea the Olympics would loan much to Japan's celebration of the three thousand six hundredth anniversary of the founding of the empire.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—It begins to appear that the Roosevelt administration has returned from its excursion into foreign ports, and is now ready to engage in rehabilitation of domestic affairs to the exclusion of international problems, except the matter of reciprocal treaties. It is true that Secretary Hull of the Department of State, Secretary Roper of the Department of Commerce, and Senator Borah, in the senate, have talked about foreign affairs in one way or another, but none of them occasioned any observation or suggestions from the White House by their assertions.

Among the occurrences in the recent period that tend to show how the administration again is putting home affairs to the forefront are the new banking bill, the plans for recovery revival under the five billion dollar public works bill, and the determination of house and senate lately, under a White House spur, to clip the wings of, if not wholly eradicate, the so-called holding companies. Attention might be called also to the uprising in the Department of Agriculture where Secretary Wallace, and Agricultural Adjustment Administrator Chester Davis combined a few days ago to eliminate left wing members of their respective staffs. They did it summarily, but the end is not yet, either as respects plans of Messrs. Wallace and Davis, or the yeeps that may be expected from the radicals who were ousted.

The general information is that, in shelving foreign matters, Mr. Roosevelt has determined to lay aside the St. Lawrence waterway controversy until "pressing domestic matters" are disposed of. Almost in the same breath it can be said that new activity has been disclosed on the part of the New Dealers to spread their doctrine into the states and establish, if possible, uniform laws everywhere concerning privately owned utilities such as electricity and gas. While no one will say so, it is the understanding that considerable pressure is being placed behind the effort to get state legislatures to pass uniform public utilities bills, measures which have been drafted in the Public Works administration here.

Probably as important as any legislation that has gone to congress in recent months is the New Banking new banking bill. It was transmitted to congress in a most unspectacular manner. There was no out-and-out endorsement by the White House, nor was the sponsoring of the draft made clear. The legislation was dropped into the house hopper the day after Representative Steagall, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency, had given out his own summary. Chairman Fletcher of the senate committee on banking and currency received the bill the same day as Mr. Steagall's, and immediately went into a huddle with himself behind closed doors to study the draft. Later he announced with apparent pleasure that it was a great piece of legislation.

Now that the bill has been printed and is available for public inspection, a perfect furor has been aroused. The conservative critics began to squawk immediately that the measure proposes to destroy the Federal Reserve system and concentrate on power of credit and currency expansion or contraction. In the hands of a small group in the treasury they contend that this amounts to establishment of a central bank and that, under our political system, a central bank would mean an unstable currency. What more could there be, they ask, to destroy confidence in the currency which we use?

New Dealers, in defense of this new banking legislation, have been given to making wise-cracks about the Old Dealers, who, they assert, desire to see conditions of 1928 and 1929 repeated. They cite, with some justification it seems to me, that central banks exist in most of the major countries of the world and that their service has not been a bad thing at all. Further, the New Dealers argue that the political capital of the United States is in Washington, and the financial capital has been in New York. Why, they ask, should there be such a division?

In between these two schools of thought are sound money advocates and courageous conservatives who take the position that the bill has many good qualities and that it likewise has many provisions definitely to be avoided. You have heard very little expression of opinion from this type because, it is apparent, they are giving the measure close study. They will be heard from later when the legislation is taken up by the respective committees of the house and senate and it is made to appear that some changes surely will result.

To summarize the banking legislation—and I think it is of paramount interest to every one because it touches the currency and credit so directly—the real end likely to result from the legislation is a centralized control in Washington of the very nerve center of business, money. The bill proposes to establish what is called an open market committee in Washington and to include as members of this committee three members of the Federal Reserve board. The two remaining members would come from Federal Reserve banks. From this it is seen that the Reserve board becomes the dominant body. It takes no stretch of the imagination to recognize the possibilities. Members of the Reserve board, while they are appointed for a term of ten years, sometimes resign or die off. It immediately becomes possible, therefore, to make the Federal Reserve board a purely political body dominated by the President of the United States.

The function of the open market committee, as proposed in the bill, is to order the purchase or sale of government securities in the open market. If these securities are bought, the Reserve banks issue currency for them and they increase the amount of money in circulation, thereby easing credit. If the bonds sold bonds which they have in their portfolios, the currency paid for those bonds obviously is taken out of circulation and that action results in a contraction or reduction of the amount of credit available.

If, for example, the occupant of the White House at any time happens to be an out-and-out inflationist, it is easy to see how government bonds can be absorbed by the Reserve banks and new currency put in circulation in whatever volume the administration policies require.

Another phase of the bill would allow national banks and state banks that are members of the Federal Reserve system to make loans on real estate for a twenty-year term. Five years is the present limitation. One has only to go back for an examination of causes of hundreds of bank failures in recent years to discover that the five-year limitation probably increased the mortality among otherwise sound banks to a greater extent than any other factor. In other words, to grant a bank the privilege of making a loan for twenty years means that such a bank ties up an equal amount of depositor's money in a place from which it cannot be suddenly recalled if the depositors take a sudden notion to withdraw substantial sums from that bank.

There is another section of the measure which I think is worthy of close Federal Reserve examination. It proposes to combine the jobs of governor and agent, and that the bank policies should be executed by the governor who is selected by the bank board of directors.

This provided something of a dual control, a check and balance on the exercise of power. Now, however, the effort is to be made to combine the jobs and make the head of the bank a strictly government representative.

That course naturally is in line with the Roosevelt program of extending and expanding federal authority. The President has constantly increased the scope of power and influence exercised from Washington. The current offering is accepted everywhere as bringing under federal domination completely the banking system of this nation. It does so because none can deny that the Federal Reserve banks hold a club over the heads of private bankers wherever they may be.

So I believe it is a fair statement to say that Mr. Roosevelt, or those who are responsible to him, is reaching out to amplify the control of credit from Washington which was initiated through the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the Home Owners' Loan corporation, and other lending agencies. The Federal Reserve system was set up, according to the debate on the measure in congress at that time, to decentralize credit control and break the grip which New York exercised over the volume of credit. Now, apparently, it is all coming back to Washington, probably to be exercised by politicians instead of men with banking training.

In connection with the administration's attention to domestic affairs and the consequent legislative changes, attention might well be centered on the meaning of some of the moves. One Washington observer wrote in his newspaper the other day that the administration was renewing its notes at the bank. What he referred to was the extension of life of the Reconstruction Finance corporation and the pumping of more blood into the veins of the Home Owners' Loan corporation.

Something similar has occurred with respect to the Reconstruction Finance corporation which has been given new life and about $350,000,000 in new money by an act of congress.

Then, President Roosevelt has asked for renewal of the life of the National Recovery administration and for re-actment of the National Industrial Recovery act, both of which expire on June 16.

As a result of these maneuvers a good many observers are of the opinion that the recovery efforts have not been as successful as their optimistic sponsors had predicted a year ago. Renewal of these stop-gap agencies, extension of power here and there, and the initiation of new experiments are given as reasons for the belief that uncertainty exists and satisfactory progress toward recovery is still more apparent than real.

SPEEDY WAR TANKS

The United States army now has a new tank, weighing eight tons which, in demonstrations, has reached a speed of more than 60 miles an hour. It is built "enterpillar" style for difficult travel as well as ordinary wheels for use on more level ground. These new war machines are 12½ feet long, 6½ feet high and 7 feet wide. It takes four men to operate one of them. The tank was first used as an instrument of war in the World war and had a speed of 6 to 7 miles an hour.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE SHOULD BE LIQUID

(Ask your doctor)

For your own comfort, and for your children's safety and future welfare, you should read this:

The bowels cannot be helped to regularly by any laxative that can't be regulated as to dose. That is why doctors use liquid laxatives.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

The right liquid laxative dose gives the right amount of help. When repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will clear up a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. Every druggist has it.

WATCH YOUR KIDNEYS!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood

YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering impurities from the blood stream. But kidneys get functionally disturbed—lag in their work—fail to remove the poisonous body wastes.

Then you may suffer nagging backache, attacks of dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains; feel "all worn out."

Don't delay! For the quicker you get rid of these poisons, the better your chances of good health.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are for the kidneys only. They tend to promote normal functioning of the kidneys; should help them pass off the irritating poisons. Doan's are recommended by users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

Ford V-8 Four Door Sedan

Ford dealers are introducing the biggest and comiest Ford ever made. Seats are wider, comfortably seating three persons. The new car is comfort engineered. The engine is placed over the front axle, permitting the seats to be moved forward so that all passengers ride in the "comfort zone." The new roll floating spring base smoothes out rough roads. New luggage compartment behind the rear seat, new air wheel with built-in ball on tire, new streamlining, new smart upholstery, new equalized brakes, and new leather touch-clutch are introduced.

MAINE MEMORIAL SERVICE
AT FULTON HIGH SCHOOL

The Maine Memorial service sponsored by Ken-Tenn Camp, United Spanish War Veterans at Fulton High School Friday, Feb. 15, was well attended, and enjoyed by the pupils of the school. This service was in memory of the two hundred and sixty seven American sailors and mariners who lost their lives in the blowing up of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, Feb. 15, 1898, thirty-seven years ago. The service was begun by a number of selections by the High School band Little Maurine Ketchum, master of the local Auxiliary sang a song and gave a toast to the flag. The invocation was given by Rev. L. E. McCoy, of the Cumberland Presbyterian church.

Address of Welcome by Supt. J. G. Lewis. Response by Past Commander Jack W. Nelson of Paducah who introduced the principal speaker, Will H. Farley of Paducah, Junior Vice Commander, Department of Ky., United Spanish War Veterans.

The address of Mr. Farley was masterly. He stressed patriotism and love of country, and warned against the invidious propaganda now being spread through the country and especially among the schools, against organized government.

The benediction was given by Rev. Robinson of the Presbyterian church. Seated on the stage were the following veterans: Jack W. Nelson, W. H. Farley, Paducah; E. Cosby, of Mayfield; R. H. Cowardin, George Hall of Fulton.

The man who knows a little and knows that he knows only a little is often referred to as a "bighead." When a man is uncertain of his standing he becomes very jealous of his prerogatives and rights.

Making your plans for 1935 will mean little if you don't get busy and begin carrying them out. Leave it to Congress and this country will spend more money, if it will mean more votes.

PNEUMONIA.

Pneumonia is one of the most serious diseases that men are heir to. It occurs mostly in the temperate zone, and is most prevalent during the months of January, February and March. It attacks all ages and is most fatal to the very young and the old. Pneumonia is a complication of many of the acute diseases.

Pneumonia is an inflammation of the lung tissue. There are several types of pneumonia, each has its special symptomatology and pathology. The onset of most types of pneumonia is characterized by chills or chilly sensations, fever, pain in chest, cough and the expectoration of blood streaked sputum. Some types are of only a few days duration and terminate abruptly, while other types last many days and gradually clear up.

The common cold, whooping cough, measles, influenza are in many instances followed by pneumonia, therefore the great importance of the utmost care when convalescing from the above named diseases. If people would only heed the advice of their physician while convalescing they would escape many cases of pneumonia.

There is no specific medicinal treatment for pneumonia, but a competent physician can do much with drugs in treatment of the symptoms as they arise. In the past few years a pneumonia serum has been developed which seems to act at times as a specific. As yet it is rather expensive and out of the reach of many. In diathermy, an electrical treatment has been developed which offers a great deal in pneumonia, as well as the infra red rays.

In treatment of pneumonia every case should be in a hospital that is equipped to administer these later treatments. Application of these treatments in the home can not be carried out successfully. To be most effective all of these newer treatments should be applied in the first twenty hours of the disease.

BACKYARD FRIENDSHIPS

For more years than man can remember "clothesline scraps" have been the source of endless jokes. But what of clothesline friendships? They are not jokes—they are healthy realities instead. Millions of women have made lifelong friends through talking over the backyard fence.

Gossip? Of course, but no more than you find on the streets, in the home, at parties, or even on the way home from church.

Keep up the clothesline friendship. Make them an endless chain that circles the home community and binds us one to another. There are none better or more lasting to be had.

The real triple A is advertise, advertise, advertise.

There is a feeling of neighborly intimacy in the act which is seldom found in the formal call.

A "Dark flying rime against the western glow
It tells the sweep and loneliness of things"

The writer of these lines and other poets have drawn inspiration from the striking formations that especially characterize the movements of swans, geese and ducks.

That flying wedge or undulating line etched against the sunset sky or the orderly, swift-moving formation high overhead! Here is the symbol that inspires the imagination of even the casual observer, as it has the poets who have written of flying wild fowl through the ages.

Behind this aura of glamour and mystery lies the fascinating life story of the majestic wild swans, the wily geese, the hardy and adaptable ducks, and the fish-loving mergansers. They are a fairly compact and homogeneous group of birds, their only relatives of undoubted connection being the screamers of South America, large, goose-like, wading birds with unwebbed toes.

Geese and ducks are found all over the world wherever water exists, except on the oceans far from land.

Common to the order are a long neck, sometimes very long; short legs, webbed toes, and a bill covered with sensitive skin and provided inside with comblike structures known as lamellae, modified in the mergansers to sharp "teeth" for holding slippery fish.

The eggs are without markings, and the young, hatched covered with down, are able to find their own food very soon after they emerge from the egg.

The graceful, snow-white swans, sometimes five feet in length, make up the first of seven subfamilies into which are divided the North American members of the suborder. The other six are the geese, tree ducks, surface-feeding ducks, diving ducks, stiff-tailed ducks, and mergansers.

Swans Highly Esteemed.

Much that has been written about swans has been influenced by their aesthetic appeal. This is apt to distort the facts to their advantage, and it is just as well, because no other birds can provide the thrill that a flock of wild swans gives the nature lover. First in order and in size, they have a form too universally known to require description. The two North American species are so similar that they can be differentiated with certainty only by the character of their internal structure and by their very distinct voices.

The swans are perfect models of conjugal conduct. They mate for life and the sexes share the domestic responsibilities.

The downy young when first hatched are not the "ugly ducklings" of popular belief, but lovely little creatures, clothed in silky, golden down and without the exaggerated neck and huge paddlelike feet of their parents. Very soon, however, these characteristics begin to appear and ugliness replaces their natal loveliness until the grace and beauty of maturity appear.

Fortunately, there is small if any possibility of the extermination of the whistling swan, and with careful conservation it may even be possible to perpetuate the trumpeter.

The goose family is well represented in North America, especially in the West, where in some localities six species may be seen on the same ground.

Their extraordinary migrations and the mystery of their breeding grounds intensify the interest that both sportsmen and naturalists take in these fine birds. Even yet, there are a few whose summer homes are unknown, while the systematic status of some races and their relation to each other have still to be worked out. Much study in the field, especially at their nesting grounds, is required to establish these facts.

Geese, like swans, pair for life, and the young birds remain in the company of their parents for nearly a year after they are hatched.

Geese Are Smart Birds.

Endowed with keen intelligence and extreme wariness, they can be depended on to maintain a fair degree of abundance as long as adequate wintering grounds are afforded them. But, above all, they, like swans, require freedom from molestation when they are at rest, so that a large measure of solitude and wide spaces are the chief requirements for their perpetuation.

Both families have a lower rate of reproduction than ducks, as they require several years to attain maturity and the number of eggs laid is much smaller than with most species of ducks.

Whether by day or night, geese do a lot of calling while in flight; when migrating high overhead the clamor of their voices falling from the sky draws attention to the flock in arrowhead formation, clearing the upper air. Species can be identified by their different voices. When feeding they are silent, only gabbling a little to each other in low tones. The first appearance of danger will bring a warning challenge from the sentinel and every head is erected while the danger is scrutinized.

Both geese and swans are noted for their longevity, the latter being among the Methuselahs of the bird world.

There is actual record of a mute swan that lived seventy years, while rather uncertain report has attributed even a greater age to the birds.

Somewhat intermediate between ducks and geese are the tree ducks. They have only two representatives north of the Mexico-United States boundary, and neither of these penetrates much to the north of this line. Their name is misleading in our own territory, as here we seldom see them perching in trees and their nests are on the ground.

The great group of ducks is divided into two main sections, the surface-feeding and diving ducks. While these names actually afford a general basis of distinction, it does not follow that surface-feeders never dive for their food, nor that diving ducks never feed on the surface.

To separate the groups, look at the foot. In the diving ducks, the hind toe has a lobe, so that it resembles a little paddle. In the surface feeding group it is not particularly specialized.

How to Identify Ducks.

If sportsmen wish to identify the ducks they shoot in all plumages, it is essential that they recognize the distinction between the two groups.

By the "hind-toe" formula, stiff-tailed ducks fall under the category of diving ducks, but in many features of structure, plumage, and life characters they are further removed from true ducks than are the mergansers. The sometimes pugnacious and somewhat ludicrous-looking ruddy duck is the sole representative of the stiff-tailed ducks in the United States and Canada, although a South American species, the masked duck, has been twice recorded in the eastern states as a straggler.

Mergansers, the last of the duck group, are ducks with a narrow, specialized bill, edged with saw teeth, which enable them to catch and devour good-sized fish. Their feet, though proportionately smaller, resemble those of the diving ducks in having a paddle-shaped hind toe.

Ducks, for the most part, are very different from swans and geese in their family habits. While they pair much like other birds and are not as a rule polygamous or polyandrous, the male in most species is not a constant husband, and abandons the female and all family cares as soon as incubation of the eggs is well under way. Stiff-tailed ducks are noable exceptions to this rule, and in some true ducks, like the elders, the male is not altogether indifferent to his family obligations.

Labrador Duck Is Extinct.

Mention should be made of the extinct Labrador duck, Camptorhynchus labradorius, the last verified record of which was a bird taken in 1875.

The passing of this species is a mystery which cannot be accounted for; even from the earliest days for which we have any record of the bird, it was a scarce species in the limited area of its range on the North Atlantic coast.

Frequenting the shoal water of the shallow bays, it could not have been in much demand for food and few were brought in to the markets. There is no record of its nesting, nor even, with any certainty, of its summer home.

Although it was a diving duck, the peculiar shape of its bill suggests that it sifted its food in shallow water.

Of all the questions relating to wild fowl, the problem of their perpetuation is the most important. Every one naturally takes an interest in their conservation and wishes to see an increase in their numbers. But unfortunately there are two divergent schools at work, one that wishes to protect wild fowl from the viewpoint that they provide sport, and the opposite group that insists they be protected vigorously and all shooting be abolished.

For the good of the wild fowl of North America, it is essential that these different views be reconciled, and a concerted course of action that has the support of all parties is unquestionably the goal for which we must strive.

Design Wearer Can Depend On

PATTERN 1799

Anything you do with this design is smart, and you can do many things with it. Don't you like it as it is, made of a crisp, fresh little cotton? Now think of it in navy blue dotted voile with pleated net frills. Could anything be more charming? A surprise front is always one of the most becoming things a woman can wear, and the big revers make this one doubly flattering. The sleeves are as graceful as can be, and the well-proportioned points at the front and the back of the skirt do the most astonishing things for the figure when it is a bit large.

Pattern 1799 is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 4 1/4 yards 36-inch fabric. It illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Address orders to Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 242 West Seventeenth Street, New York.

SMILES

OH! OH!

Husband—Dinner isn't ready?
Wife—No, I've been shopping all day.
"Looking for something for nothing, I suppose."
"That is putting it a bit severe. I was trying to get you a present."

Making It Useful

Mrs. Platt—This steam radiator is a frost. Not an ounce of steam has come through the pipes this week.
Janitor—Well, madam, I will send a man up and have it removed since it is only in the way.

Mrs. Platt—Oh, no, thanks; I will just use it for a refrigerator for the butter and milk.

Lost and Won

"Yes," smiled the old maid, "I loved and won."
"How do you make that out?" asked the other one.
"Oh," she replied, "he jilted me and I had a lot more fun with the $50,000 heart balm he had to pay than I ever would have had with him."

Lesson for February 24

PETER HEALS A LAME MAN

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3:1-10; 4:5-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Then Peter said, Silver and gold have I none; but such as I have give I thee: In the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth rise up and walk.—Acts 3:6
PRIMARY TOPIC—How Peter Helped
a Lame Man.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter Carrying on Jesus' Work.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—
A Helping Hand.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—
Gifts That Are Better Than Money.

In the teaching of this lesson it will be necessary to include all the material in Acts 3:1 to 4:31.

I. Peter Healing the Lame Man (Acts 3:1-10)

1. The place (vv. 1, 2). It was at the gate called Beautiful, which leads from the outer to the inner court of the temple.

2. The man (v. 2). This beggar was infirm from his birth. When he saw Peter and John, he asked alms.

3. The method (vv. 3-8).

a. Gaining the man's attention (v. 4).
Peter and John commanded him to look on them, but not because they had any power within themselves.

b. Peter commanded him in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise and walk (v. 6). He had been unable to do this all his life, but with the command went the ability to do.

c. Peter took him by the right hand
(v. 7). This act was meant to give impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles.

4. The man's response (v. 8).
Strength came into his feet and ankle bones at once. He stood, he walked,
he leaped, and praised God.

5. The effect (vv. 9-11). The people were filled with amazement.

a. This helpless beggar had to be carried to the temple gate. Men and women out of Christ are so helpless that they need to be brought where the life of God can be applied to them.

b. Peter, in taking the man by the hand, shows the manner of helping the lost. While ministers and Sunday school teachers of themselves have nothing to give to the lost, they have the dispensing of the gospel of Christ.

II. Peter Witnessing Before the Multitude (3:12-26)

He told them it was faith in Jesus Christ, whom God had glorified and whom they had deliberately betrayed and crucified, that had healed this man.
Despite their awful guilt, he appealed to them to repent (v. 19). God would pardon them if they would repent, and refreshing seasons would come to them
when God should send back Jesus Christ to the earth to consummate the work of redemption.

III. Peter in Prison for Christ's Sake (4:1-4)

1. The leaders in this persecution
(vv. 1, 2). Both priests and Sadducees joined in this wickedness. The priests were intolerant because these new teachers were encroaching upon their functions. The Sadducees joined the priests because they did not believe in the resurrection, which was a vital part of the apostolic teaching.

2. The result (vv. 3, 4). Peter and John were arrested and imprisoned.
Though the witnesses were held in bondage by chains, Christ was not bound. The number of believers had greatly increased, so that there were now about five thousand.

IV. Peter Witnessing Before the Sanhedrin (4:5-22)

1. The inquiry (v. 5). They inquired as to by what power and name
they had wrought this miracle.

2. Peter's answer (vv. 8-12). With stinging sarcasm he showed them that they were not on trial as evildoers, but for doing good to the helpless and needy man. Since they could not deny the miracle, he boldly declared that it had been done in the name of Christ, and that the only way for them to escape God's judgment was to believe on his name.

3. The impression upon the San-hedrin (vv. 13-22).

a. They marveled (v. 13). They were made conscious that they were on trial instead of sitting as judges upon Peter and John.

b. They took knowledge that Peter and John had been with Jesus (v. 13).

c. They forbade them to speak in Christ's name (v. 18).

d. Peter and John expressed their determination to obey God rather than man (vv. 19, 20).

e. Their release (v. 21). Seeing that the people were on the side of the apostles they had no way to punish them.

V. The Church at Prayer (vv. 23-31)

They prayed for deliverance and prayed for boldness to speak the Word of God.

Religion

Religion should be to every man not merely a creed, but an experience; not a restraint, but an inspiration; not an insurance for the next world, but also a program for the present world.—
Stalker.

Peace of God

We need the peace of God in our heart just as really for the doing well of the little things in our secular life
as for the doing of the greatest duties of Christ's kingdom.

Prints Gay With Color Now Arrive

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

surprising variety of colorful materials that are just as practical as they are good looking.

PLAYING the game of fashion, the next move is to acquire a bright simple daytime wearable frock which has the freshness of the new season in its looks, to wear under your fur coat
during lingering snows and departing wintery chills. Later this gay little gown will companion admirably with a chic light wool topcoat in role of a smart springtime ensemble.

If it is your custom to buy ready-made a casual saunter through leading dress departments will be your budget's undoing, for the new between-seasons dresses are not to be resisted.
A most exciting feature about the early spring arrivals in the shops is the abundance of frilly ornate neckwear which lends a delightfully feminine air
to the new modes.

The woman who likes the fun of making her own simple daytime frocks
will find inspiration-plus in the spring fashion displays which in their gay colorings have turned winter into spring within store walls. Walking through the aisles and aisles of fascinating, joyous-looking linens that flaunt their rows of voguish linens before enchanted eyes, and the novelty cottons which were never more novel, no matter how conservative you may have been up to this season in matter of colors and patternings you will throw discretion to the winds and indulge to your heart's content in the giddiest, prettiest, most flatering materials you have known for this many a day.

As to the new prints the arrival of the first robin in your garden is no surrier sign of spring than is their appearance on the style horizon. You will be delighted, if bewildered, by the

The three frocks shown here illustrate but a fraction of the perfectly beautiful washable prints that are in good taste now for wear under a coat and for later on when no coat is necessary. These attractive dresses are made up in rayon chilla crepe, in the brightest of colorfast colors.

For campus or office wear or for resort wear with light accessories, the tailored frock to the left of print in a spaced conventional dot design with its ascot type scarf and cuffs of self-fabric, is both smart and practical.
There are no fussy details or tricky places that your iron cannot reach in a hurry, and you probably know that you can wash and iron these chilla crepe frocks with no more special care than fine cottons.

The frock with the two-tone tie will carry you through a day that includes shopping, luncheon, matinee and tea.
The lines are becomingly simple, the better to accentuate the beauty of the design of colorful leaves against a dark background. It is easy even for the amateur to work with this crepe. It stays so accurately in place as you cut out the pattern, with no frayed or curled up edges as you bustle it together.

The print that fashions the dress on the seated figure is stunning. Solid black dots together with white dots that are cross-lined with fine red and black lines stand out boldly against a bright red background. The button fastening and the touch of knife pleat-ing are important style details. As you see from the smart models pictured, you do not have to sacrifice any style points this spring when you look for washable dresses.

TAFFETA TUNIC

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Taffeta silk for tunic, for blouse, for the frock entire, for trimming touches is the great hue and cry for spring.
The knee-length tunic-blouse pictured is of printed taffeta in exotic coloring.
The skirt is black crepe and the accessories are black. Intriguing white stitchings on shoes and bag. The hat is a very modish sailor of shiny black straw.

NEW STYLES SHOW GREEK INFLUENCE

The Greek influence on current styles has spread so far now it is to be seen in furniture and dishes as well as in the lines of the feminine figure. The popularity of the flat Greek rear profile has made the figure ideal of the Greeks an established vogue.

The influence of this Greek ideal is to be seen in Mainbocher's recent introduction of a gown modeled on the ones worn by ancient Greek dancers.
This filmy, graceful garment heralds a turn from the "important" gown, with its stiff formality, to the softness of net and tulle. Its straight skirt is short in front and to the ground in back. There is a garland of fruit or flowers around the waist. Very authentically Greek. And very revealing of the state of one's figure. Hips must be slender, small breasts uplifted in youthful silhouette. The flat Greek rear profile was never more important than
to this new and slimly molded style.

To complete the picture, a great vogue for classical Greek furniture is predicted for this spring.

New Fur-Lined Slippers Slender as Satin Pumps

The fur-lined slipper is probably one of the greatest joys the modern woman has ever known. And because it is fur-lined, doesn't mean that it is bulky or clumsy looking. No at all. It is as sleek and slender as the sheerest satin pump or sandal, but the sole of the foot is protected against cold pavements by a thin, but warm, layer of rabbit or sheepskin, fuzzy side footward.

The strapless brassiere is another no-nonsense to smart women. For evening it has certainly become an indispensable
item in the society woman's wardrobe.
Because of its clever construction of the sheerest and most clinging fabric, it stays perfectly in place without the bothersome need of straps over the shoulders.

Serenity Should Mark Man's Evening of Life

Youth and middle age conjure up an old age that is an "old man of the sea." They dread the coming of the time when they shall have to carry him on their back. This dread of something that has not happened is an example of the almost universal human instinct to worry.

But the elderly man himself often knows nothing of the burdens to which his youth looked forward with shrinking. Now and then you hear one of them say that his decade from sixty to seventy has been the best of all the seven decades he has passed.

Thanks to the medical and dental sciences, some of the worst burdens have been lifted from age. What a source of trouble and pain their teeth were to our ancestors! Today this trouble, and the pain often are easily forestalled.

Then, too, advanced age has its serenities, its freedom from responsibilities and many other similar advantages. Younger persons sometimes suspect that the cheerfulness of age is partly hypocrisy. The statements of an old man that he "never felt better in his life" and that he is "just as young as he used to be,"
are received with smiles and polite incredulity. Yet the old man is often telling the truth. He has learned the "trick of living." He doesn't poison himself by overeating
or by indulgence in alcoholic liquors
—that is, he does not, if he really has learned the trick of living—and he knows enough to keep himself clean and to go to bed nights instead of tearing across the countryside at all hours. He has leisure for neglected reading and he has mind philosophical enough to appreciate the finer meanings of life, whether found in books or among his friends and relatives. And he is more tolerant. He sees that most of the evils of life are due rather to immaturity than to inherent viciousness.

Serence as it may seem to youth,
the fear of age often vanishes with age. The old man finds that it is nothing, after all, but just another phase of life. And it appears far more illusory than do some of the other phases. The real man underneath sees clearly that it does not pertain to him any more than do the actor's charges of garments in his various parts pertain to him. This view, once clearly attained, takes away whatever terror may have been brought over from middle age. And with it, often, goes the lifelong fear of death. After all is said, death itself is only another phase of living.

And so, what have we been worrying about all our lifetimes?—

LOVE IMPERATIVE

It is a mere miserable solitude to want true friends, without which the world is but a wilderness. . . .
Little do men perceive that solitude is, and how far it extendeth; for a crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk
but a tinkling cymbal where there is no love.—Francis Bacon.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night, if needed.
How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminants, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the blood. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical;
only twenty-five cents for the family
package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

FAMOUS DIAMOND ON DISPLAY HERE

Replicas of the world's famous historical diamonds are on display in the DeMyer & Scates Drug Store window on Lake-st. Pieces of ore mined in Lesiegas, Mexico, from which they are made, and various sizes of Mexican diamonds are also being shown by Sid Sidenberg, owner and representative of the Mexican diamond company.

In this display is a replica of the Great Mogul, supposed to be in possession of the Russian Crown Jewels and the largest diamond known. The true stone weighs 279 carats. "Excelsior," one of the largest stones ever found weighed 971 and three quarters carats, but a black stone in the rim made it necessary to cut it down and the weight is now 238 carats. This giant belongs to a syndicate of capitalists, together with the mine owners of Jagersfontain, where the stone was found. A duplicate of this stone can be seen in the window.

Replicas of these stones, displayed with the history of their origin, if known, their present owners and values are: The Polar Star, The nra pren sentir henktweowd Nts Puyrot, Orloff, Pasha of Egypt, Shah of Persia, Nassak, Kohinoor (in new shape and cut) Sancy, Tskaner or Florintiner, Regent or Pitt, Star of the South, Hope Diamond, the Culliana diamond taken from the Premier mine in South America in 1905.

F. H. Riddle, superintendent of the Intermediate Department of the First Baptist church Sunday School was on program at the State Conference of Baptist Sunday Schools in Princeton, Wednesday. Mr. Riddle, who is manager of the local telephone office, is an active church worker in this community.
