Whether Norway Will Choose a King or Barntia a Republic

Berlin, Oct. 25.—Reports current in Berlin that the question of the future occupation of Norway is being discussed in the German cabinet. This is caused by the discovery of gold in the North Sea, which would considerably alter the present situation on the continent. Further, it is known that several nations have expressed interest in the occupation of Norway. It is expected that the German government will make a decision on this matter soon.

The New York Vote.

There has been many impression as to the outcome of voting in the coming election. The press is now returning to the wise vote system of voting, and it is likely to return to the wise vote system of voting. It is likely to be useful to you in the following proposed system.

The system proposes to register all votes, and if a vote is cast for a candidate whose name appears on the ballot, the vote shall be counted. If a vote is cast for a candidate whose name does not appear on the ballot, the vote shall not be counted. The system is designed to encourage the intelligent voter to vote for the candidate whose name is on the ballot, and to discourage the uninformed voter from voting for the candidate whose name is not on the ballot.

The system is said to have been invented by a Mr. Smith, who is a well known political organizer. Mr. Smith is reported to have said: "The intelligent voter is the best voter. He will vote for the candidate whose name is on the ballot, and he will not vote for the candidate whose name is not on the ballot. The uninformed voter is the worst voter. He will vote for the candidate whose name is not on the ballot, and he will not vote for the candidate whose name is on the ballot. The system is designed to encourage the intelligent voter to vote for the candidate whose name is on the ballot, and to discourage the uninformed voter from voting for the candidate whose name is not on the ballot."
SOMETIMES IT'S A RISK, SOMETIMES IT'S A DISASTER.

It was a risk that turned into a disaster when the steel mill in Paducah, Kentucky, was destroyed by fire. The mill, which employed over 2,000 workers, was a major contributor to the local economy and had been in operation for over 100 years. The cause of the fire is still under investigation, but初步报告显示，可能是由于电线短路引发的。这起事故不仅摧毁了工厂，还造成了大量的人员伤亡和财产损失。政府已承诺提供援助，帮助受影响的社区恢复重建。

ADrift On A Dead Whale.

(Chapter Five: Improvisation.)

Living off the creatures of the sea, my companion and I had toiled for a week on the New England whaleboat, sixteen feet long and eight inches wide, built of oak and driven by a quadrant and sail. We had a crew of four men, including the captain, and a boy as our only crew member. Our home was out on the sea, a single cabin with a small deck, where we could sleep and eat and wait for the whales to come.

The captain, John Martin, was a hard-drinking, hard-living man, who had been whale hunting for over twenty years. He was known for his size and strength, but also for his foulmouthed language and belligerent attitude. He had a particular dislike for the crew members, especially the boy, whom he referred to as "just a kid." But despite his gruff exterior, he was a skilled leader and knew how to navigate the waters.

One day, while we were fishing, we caught a large whale. It was a majestic creature, its skin glistening in the sun and its fins flapping in the wind. We tried to cut the whale free, but it refused to let go of our net. We fought it for hours, until finally it was forced to surrender. But the whale was not done yet. It thrashed around, its teeth and jaws tearing at the net. We were all fearsome, and some members of the crew were injured.

Despite the danger, we continued to work, until finally the whale was dead. We dragged it on deck and began to cut it up, but it was a difficult task. The whale was huge, and we had to work hard to cut through its flesh. We were all covered in blood and sweat by the time we were finished.

But as we worked, a new problem arose. The whale had a large number of eggs, and we had to remove them before we could eat the meat. It was a delicate task, and we were afraid of hurting the whales. But we had no choice. We had to eat, and the whale was a rich source of food.

Finally, we were able to cut up the whale and begin to eat. It was a delicious meal, and we ate until we were full. But we were not done yet. We had to return to our boat and continue our journey. The captain was already planning our next move, and we knew that we would have to work hard to find more whales.

As we sailed away, I couldn't help but think of the whale. It was a powerful creature, and we had taken it from him. But we had no choice. We had to eat, and the whale was a rich source of food. I knew that we would have to work hard to find more whales, but I was determined to do it. I was a hard-drinking, hard-living man, and I knew that I could do anything I set my mind to.
