City Has Legal Status to Improve Creek

Harris Fork Goes On Rampage Again: Fulton Inundated

Excessive Rains Cause Local Stream to Overflow, Damaging Business and Residential Property.

The perennial spring flood struck Fulton again Friday night, as incessant rains over the water shed above the city, caused the Harris Fork creek to swell and overflow into the business and residential district of the city.

Flood waters first poured under the viaduct on Lake-st Extension, spreading to Fourth-st and Lake-st and other regions. At 10:45 water was already in some stores on Fourth-st, and the rise continued slowly until about 1:30, then the waters began to recede gradually.

Although the flood did not reach the stage of that attained last spring, it was serious, for it remained longer, and spread into more of the residential districts of Fulton and South Fulton. Last May, Fulton had its worst flood, when thousands of dollars damage was suffered by local stores. Considerable damage was reported this time, but not as heavy as last year.

Around Town

In recent weeks Fulton has been hit by two major disasters.

First, we had the hail storm which did so much damage, that many homes are yet without new roofs.

Then, last week another one of our perennial floods rubbed our noses to the breaking point.

But, fortunately, this week we are glad to report that there is a bright spot on the horizon. We are speaking of the flood control project in Fulton, which has been an incessant worry and aggravation for so long. Long, patient, hard work by the creek committee has, at last, brought the project to a head, and now the City of Fulton has the legal status on which to proceed and take definite action for RESULTS.

The State Legislature of Kentucky recently passed two acts that make it possible for cities to set flood control districts, establish creek boundaries, and take such land or property as is necessary for proper control systems. This action may be reached by an agreement with property owners, or the court will decide fair compensation for private land needed.

It is understood that the creek bed will be approximately 32 feet wide, and the creek survey calls for the straightening, widening and deepening of the creek through Fulton.

In addition, cities may float bonds for payment of flood control projects. All property in the drainage district may be assessed in proportion to its valuation, and taxes collected until the debt is liquidated.

Naturally, there are going to be some who will complain about such a program, but the matter of flood control in Fulton has become our major civic problem. For the common good of the community, no further delays may be brooked, and immediate action is imperative.

Every civic-minded individual in Fulton is eager and anxious for steps to be taken to provide proper flood control. We feel that most of our citizens will be in there "pitching in" and pushing until the job is done. In fact, a good many property owners along the creek have voluntarily offered the city right-of-way, and there are many other like them. We're off to a good start now on a job that has needed doing, and a little team-work will bring real results.

Kentucky Forests Need Protection

Washington — (Special) — More than three-quarters of all state and privately owned forest lands in Kentucky are without any form of organized protection, according to a survey just completed by the American Forest Products Industries Inc. Based upon the latest U. S. Forest Service figures for the nation, the report shows Kentucky as one of 21 states in which a high percentage of forest lands are without protection. In addition, the publication gives several standards of comparison by which the effectiveness of fire control on protected lands can be judged.

"One index of the effectiveness of fire protection is the average size of fires on protected lands," said the report. "The fighting organizations, generally, strive to attain a goal which would restrict woodland fires to an average of 10 acres or less. Only seven states reached this objective for the comparative year with the average fire in Kentucky burning 36.5 acres."

"In states where goals of forest protection are not being reached," the publication stated, "stronger public support of all fire control agencies is indicated to provide them with backing in efforts to reduce losses to a minimum. It is a challenge to all citizens to get behind a program which will insure provision of funds for a type of forest protection that actually protects."

The report stressed the vital need for maintaining the security of our woodlands against fire if we are to have trees for future requirements. "Unless fires can be controlled," the publication said, "we cannot successfully develop tree-growing programs upon which the future wood supply of our nation depends."

Complete and adequate protection of all forest lands in America was given as the aim of state foresters, private lands owners and federal fire control agencies. At the same time, the report laid the blame for the nation's annual fire loss directly upon the public. "The effectiveness of forest fire control can be greatly increased with wide-spread public support, not only for adequate funds, but also in understanding where the responsibility for fire prevention actually rests. The sad truth is that 89 per cent of all forest fires in America are caused by human carelessness."

One of the R's of current education means that grain makes gain, as 8 hundred million hungry people can testify.

It was the purpose of the meeting to discuss the new acts of the Legislature, and to appoint a committee to employ an engineer to stake off the creek bed and set up the drainage district; and to contact property owners affected. The committee, named is composed of Smith Atkins, Maxwell McDade, and John R. Melton.

J. H. Lowe, mayor of South Fulton, was also present at the meeting to sit in on the discussion. Because the flood waters spread over business and residential districts in Fulton and South Fulton, both Kentucky and Tennessee officials are interested.

Two special acts recently passed by the Kentucky Legislature are House Bill 386 and Senate Bill 206.

House Bill 386, which was passed March 7, 1946, and becomes effective on June 7, provides that cities of the Fourth Class have a right to purchase or condemn any property for the purpose of straightening or widening of creeks or streams, where overflow conditions exist, and some action is necessary for the general good of the community, sanitation and public health.

Senate Bill 206, which was passed March 6, 1946 as an emergency bill, became effective immediately. This bill empowers cities of all classes to control and maintain flood control systems, and to issue bonds for payment.

In other words, cities may now set up drainage districts, and assess all property in that district in proportion to assessed valuation, until such flood control debts are liquidated.

Second, cities have the right to declare a right-of-way for a creek or stream. This right-of-way may be obtained by the voluntary cooperation of the property owner, who may deed necessary land to city without cost, or may agree to a price for property with city officials; or the city may condemn and take by action of law the necessary right of way, and let the court decide the price to be paid.

Third, cities may after the engineer has staked off the creek and declared the drainage district, proceed with flood control work, and do not have to wait until a settlement is reached between property owner and a municipality.

It is believed that there will be very little trouble in Fulton in obtaining right of way for the creek, because property owners have suffered such serious damage in recent years, that everybody is anxious to obtain flood control here.

The CIO, in its loudly ballyhooed Southern drive, seems to be getting all set for another of its junkies into New Deal "Democratic" politics. In doing so it is inviting a major union defeat. Once again, the CIO is attempting the hazardous game of mixing politics with unionism.

The New Dealers having thrived now for fourteen years on emergencies, they cook up another to keep bureaucrats busy. The scare of inflation is the new emergency. (You remember 1932, with the banks closing and unemployment?) We have had one emergency after another until we are now confronted with the peace emergency.

In 1933 it was NRA. A floor had to be put under everything to shut out the chislers. Now it is the OPA. A ceiling had to be put on prices to squeeze out the profiteers (but what about the black markets). We had a Supreme Court in 1933. But now—

The OPA is just as unconstitutional as was the NRA, but our Supreme Court has gone inferior and the Constitution subject to rules and regulations. The real purpose behind the OPA is not to deflate prices but to inflate bureaucracy. The relentless expansion of our controlled economy is primarily political, not economic. And every controlled economy, in the light of history, ends in inflation, dictatorship and economic collapse.

If we look about we will find that almost every government in the world with a controlled economy is already busted. No politically controlled economy has ever worked for long anywhere at anytime. The whole record of experience shows that it is impossible for government to fix prices, wages and interest rates, give subsidies or make loans to private business without finally taking over management or assuming actual ownership of private property.

A controlled economy leads to a controlled people, and the less of personal freedom. And, apparently, that is what these political plotters promote.

If natural laws of supply and demand had been permitted to function in 1933 we would have pulled out of that depression, as we pulled out many times before. All the New Dealers have accomplished in their tampering with natural laws is to postpone the day of reckoning and multiply the evil.

Little men for a long time endeavored to circumvent the law of compensation, but it always catches up with them. So far man has not been able to beat God.

What Do You Think?

One of the greatest blessings that could befall mankind would be prohibition if it worked. We tried it and the result of which was worse, prohibition and non-prohibition is so close it is debatable. In other words, it proved itself a failure at attaining the goal. This is true of OPA. It would be fine if it worked, if it did not create bootleggers of merchandise, the black markets that are rampant throughout the land. Every village has them and every village has its patrons. Without the patrons, no black market.

But whenever you regulate to the dislikes of the majority of the people in a supposedly free country, you find rebellion. Rebellion is the breakdown of regulation and chaos results. This nation is now in the greatest civilian goods production mess in its history. When we say mess, we mean something that smells, stinks. Let's do some thinking for ourselves to see if we can change and not be content to accept the offerings of some bureaucrat who speaks off how he believes things are working out. Send a telegram to your senators and congressmen.

All you Democrats of the old school, who still vote the democratic ticket just because it says it is democratic, might stop to consider these points. In 1936 President Roosevelt in a Jackson Day address advised the people to vote for the man and not for the party, and explained that he himself voted for Teddy Roosevelt, the Republican nominee, in preference to the Democratic candidate for President, because, he said, he considered the Republican candidate the best man. Mr. Wallace was a Republican until Roosevelt took him under the wing. And there are a lot of others in the New Deal government who are not really Democrats, but are socialists, communists and radicals. Personally, so far as the national election is concerned, we declared ourselves opposed to New Deal Democrats in 1937, after the national election is concerned, the Supreme Court. We often wonder how real Democrats can go to the polls and vote for the party now flying the Democratic banner, and believe that they are following in the footsteps of their Democratic forebearers.

The time has come for Congress to establish a national labor policy designed to deal with the basic causes of industrial strife—a policy based on equality and responsibility in the public interest—one which will make collective bargaining work. True collective bargaining is impossible if the bargaining parties do not come to the table on equal terms and bear corresponding responsibility for their actions.

Today, the restrictions, the laws, and the penalties for breaking the laws, apply only to management. An employer is compelled by law to bargain collectively; unions have no legal responsibility to bargain at all. An employer's right to free speech is curtailed. On the other hand, unions are perfectly free to make any kind of irresponsible statement about the company, without regard to facts. Equality and the laws is the first principle necessary to a sound national labor policy.

For years I have taught a course in the history of the English language. To many of my students it is a revelation to find that Grandma was not necessarily wrong in many of her pronunciations or her uses of words, though she may have been a little old-fashioned. One of my students told me at the end of the term once that she felt the greatest value of the course was this new tolerance for her ancestors that she had acquired.

Suppose we take a few of the language habits of Grandma and see how they used to be correct. Every spring the Service Berry tree blooms brightly in our woods; later the berries make about the best jam you ever tasted. But Grandma called it Sarvice, and many of us of my generation wondered why we could not find the word in our dictionaries. The combination-er-in many words in England still has this same -ar- sound; such words are derby, clerk, etc. Our good friends thar, whar, and hjar are parts of this same development, probably continued longer in the South because of the strong Scotch-Irish element in our early pioneers. Another word that seems strange to youngsters is varmint, as it illustrates the older sound of -er- and also a tendency to add -t- to words, like clifft, skift, oncet, twicet, etc. Rather oddly, -t- was added to amonges to give our modern word amongst, a perfectly good word today. Seed, knowed and heard are not left-overs of correct usage, but they illustrate a tendency that has produced many such words swelled, for instance, as the past tense of swell; the form used to be swole. And it is not too smart to laugh at the oldster who says three year ago, for a few hundred years ago that was the only correct way. We still say sheep and deer in the plural, words that came from the same declension in Old English. Long ago we used to laugh at the elderly gentleman in one of churches who called father fayther, not knowing, of course, that everybody used to say the same thing. I am reminded of the epitaph of Richard Mather, of Massachusetts, the ancestor of the Mather family in America. He had a famous son, Increase, who was once president of Harvard College; his grandson, Cotton, was the greatest of the clan. Here is the epitaph:

"Here lives the body of Richard Mather, Who had a son greater than his father

And eke a grandson greater than either."

Believe it or not these last words rhymed in those days, having an a sound. That is, Mather was sounded as Mayther, with the th soft, as in them. Father sounded fayther, and either was ayther.

Much has been made of Grandma's victuals. Grandchildren have often been humiliated by this word, forgetful that it used to be the essence of good manners, as far above food as food is today above grub. But victuals fell on days and is now regarded as very old-fashioned, even coarse. Food was the correct word for ages before victuals was borrowed from French, but snooty people looked down their noses at it for a long time and refused to use such a commonplace word. By a strange miracle food came back into respectable usage, and dressed-up victuals had to take a back seat. Who knows? It may be that Grandma, if only she might live a century or two longer, might be as much in style among her descendants as she was when she could spell down the whole school at Rabbit Ridge or Turkey Hollow, somewhere between the Civil War and the turn of the century.

PANAMA LIMITED TO SPEED UP TIME BEGINNING JUNE 2

The schedule of the Panama Limited between Chicago and New Orleans will be speeded up one hour in each direction effective June 2, it was announced today by Albert C. Linton, passenger traffic manager of the Illinois Central Railroad. The new 17-hour schedule for the Illinois Central streamliner is the fastest train time ever scheduled between New Orleans and Chicago.

The new schedule will call for departures at 4:30 p. m. and arrivals at 9:30 a. m. Central Standard Time in both directions. The 4:30 departures will increase to number of connections at both New Orleans and Chicago.

Departure from St. Louis will be 6:30 p. m. and arrival northward at 7:38 a. m. The running time in both directions between St. Louis and New Orleans will be reduced to fifteen hours, also the fastest ever.

As examples of the effect of increased connections, Mr. Linton pointed out that the new schedule will provide approximately 24-hour service between Minneapolis-St. Paul and New Orleans and between south Texas points and Chicago.

"This shortening of the schedule of the Panama Limited is one of many postwar improvements in passenger service which have been planned by the Illinois Central Railroad," Mr. Linton said. "Others include the City of New Orleans, a new streamline luxury coach train now under construction to operate between Chicago and New Orleans, and new streamline trains also under construction to replace the Green Diamond and the Daylight between Chicago and St. Louis. Other improvements will be announced as our plans develop."

The new schedule of the Panama Limited will be made effective with the departures from both Chicago and New Orleans on Sunday, June 2.

Car engine testing has become a precision operation, completely automatic and electronically controlled. This new dynamometer room is one of the showplaces of the Dodge Main Plant in Detroit. Engines on test generate 510 kilowatts of the plant's electric power per hour—without coal.

The method is an outgrowth of experience in testing more than 18,000 engines for B-29 Superfortresses at Chrysler Corporation's wartime-operated Dodge-Chicago Plant, headed by L. L. Colbert, now Dodge Division president.

LONG DISTANCE CALLS ARE STILL INCREASING

The volume of Long Distance calls keeps right on growing. Between towns and cities only a few miles apart, folks are making one-fifth more calls today than during the peak of the wartime load.

As a result of this postwar rush of short-haul calls there is likely to be some delays on calls to nearby points until the necessary materials can be obtained and additional circuits provided to relieve congestion.

In the meantime, everything possible is being done to handle all calls promptly.

INVITE your friends to come to Kentucky this summer. It's a fair land, where old-fashioned courtesy and the art of gracious living have not been forgotten.

Let them meet Kentucky's neighborly people. Let them feast their eyes on Kentucky's glorious vistas... its wooded mountains, rolling meadows, sparkling streams... from the Penny-rile to the Big Sandy, from Cumberland Gap to the Ohio. Invite them to visit Kentucky's historic places... its Lincoln and Davis Memorials, Fort Harrod, its state and national parks... its Mammoth Cave and Cumberland Falls and famous stock farms.

Review for them the work of Kentucky's pioneer men and women who shaped a commonwealth out of a wilderness, and cite the deeds of its leaders who helped to make this nation great.

Then, point out to them the evidence of the forward looking spirit that pervades post-war Kentucky. Show them our new schools and churches, our new parks and playgrounds, our new plants and factories.

There is no finer advertiser for a state than the satisfied visitor who looks forward to coming again—who perhaps plans his next visit even before he leaves. Whether he goes home with the feeling that a vacant lot is an eyesore or a good site for some progressive business is largely up to you. Much of what he sees will be through your eyes.

Cooperate with your community planning committee. Help it make your city a garden spot for visiting eyes by beautifying the town approaches, by making yours the clean-

"The Relief Retonga Brought Me Was A Happy Revelation," Declares Mrs. Webb. Eats Anything Now, Sleeps Fine Again.

MRS. FRED WEBB

"Thanks to Retonga I can eat anything now and I have regained twenty of the twenty-four pounds I lost while suffering from nervous indigestion," gratefully declares Mrs. Fred Webb, respected housewife of Evansville, Tenn. Discussing her experience, she gratefully stated:

"Nervous indigestion kept me feeling so upset it was almost impossible to get refreshing sleep. I couldn't eat much and what I did eat apparently gave me little nourishment. I lost weight and felt distressingly weakened. My elimination was sluggish and I lived in dread of becoming an addict to the harsh laxatives I had to take. My arms and shoulder muscles ached and I suffered terrible gas pains in my stomach after almost every meal. I couldn't help worrying. Retonga promptly brought me glorious relief. Within a few days I no longer needed strong laxatives. Muscular aches are relieved and I now sleep soundly. My appetite is fine and food seems to digest well for I have regained twenty pounds. The relief Retonga brought me was certainly a happy revelation."

Retonga is intended to relieve distress due to insufficient flow of digestive juices in the stomach, loss of appetite, Vitamin B-1 deficiency and constipation. There is only one Retonga; accept no substitute. Retonga may be obtained at the DeMyer Drug Co.

It's a familiar scene, as American as the Stars and Stripes. A herd of cows, peacefully grazing over green fields, cows that never heard the roar of hostile guns, that never saw the ravages of war. ### BUMPER BEEF AND FIELD CROPS BUILD FARM PROSPERITY

CHICAGO—Peacetime prosperity of Midwestern agriculture will depend not on the size of the farm operated, but on the crop yield per acre, a statement by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee points out.

"That includes the meat output from beef cattle, and the dairy production from milk cows as well as the yield from grain and field crops," the statement declares. "In the competitive years ahead, the advantage will lie with the farmer who is able to boost his per acre production and lower his costs. "War time experience has taught farmers the value of adequate fertilization.

"The farmer's peacetime production program will be greatly aided by the fertilizer industry which is ready to meet his postwar needs."

HIGHER QUALITY CROPS PRODUCE HEALTHY HUMANS

CHICAGO — Soil conservation measures building the fertility of our farm lands can do more to improve the nation's peacetime health standards than all the pills and drug store panaceas put together, according to a statement made public here by the Middle West Soil Improvement Committee.

"Human health depends on the soil," the statement points out. "If the soil is fertile, then the crops it produces will build strong bodies and sturdy physical characteristics. If the soil is poor, the crops it produces will be deficient in vitamins, minerals and proteins necessary for insuring healthy humans.

"The remedy for diet deficiencies lies in putting essential minerals in the form of mixed fertilizers into Nature's hands so that she can fabricate them into health-building foods for the human body."

Licensed retailers of beer in Kentucky have the courage to say "No" whenever asked to break the law or to ignore the rules of good conduct.

This is because of the brewing industry's determination to deal only with good, law-abiding citizens and because of the United States Brewers Foundation's program of education, vigilance and Self-Regulation — a program designed to maintain clean, wholesome surroundings wherever beer is sold. Failure to cooperate in the public interest is not tolerated.

THE AMERICAN WAY

THE MITCHELLS,
BILLY AND HUGH

"The course of science is too swift to allow public policy to drift idly by. Almost a year has gone by since VE-Day, and we still lack a national air policy that will draw upon the lessons of war and insure uninterrupted research and development." Those are the words of farsighted Senator Hugh Mitchell, (Dem., Wash.) in referring to his Bill now pending in Congress. This Bill proposes the appointment by the President of an impartial board to study the status of our air preparedness, planning and to recommend a national air policy to assure that adequate research and development facilities are made available.

It is peculiarly significant that the Washington Senator bears the same surname as the late General "Billy" Mitchell, who after World War I, had the vision to see the vital role that air power would play in future warfare. "Billy" Mitchell not only had the foresight but he had the intertinal fortitude to stand almost alone against the military "Brass Hats" of his day in his demand that this nation be mad strong in the air. So vociferously did he campaign for a strong air force that in 1925 he was court-martialed and forced to resign from the Army.

We can thank "Billy" Mitchell for what little air strength this nation had when the Japs precipitated us into World War II. It took that war to completely vindicate "Billy" Mitchell. It is a crying shame that he was not alive (he died in 1936) to witness that vindication and to hear the plaudits of his former critics and defamers.

"Billy" Mitchell is dead but another Mitchell endowed with resourcefulness and courage, carries on. One hopes that Senator Mitchell will not encounter the same stubborn opposition in his efforts to lay the ground-work for keeping America supreme in the air—that it will not require the devastation of a third World War to prove another Mitchell has found the right answer to world peace, is to keep America strong.

Fortunately, this present-day Mitchell is not meeting with the same opposition on the part of our present top military leaders. For instance, on April 26th of this year, General of the Army, Dwight D. Eisenhower, in mapping out Army planning for the next eighteen months, PLACED FIRST EMPHASIS TODAY ON AIR POWER, "full, free and open-minded" scientific research and a world-wide intelligence service. He warned that it is now "possible for any country possessed of scientific resources and ruthless purposes to inflict devastating blows against the most powerful nation."

Committee hearings are now being conducted on Senator Mitchell's proposal. By all means let us continue to hound and pray that the United Nations will work out a solution for permanent world peace. But while that is in the making, let's keep our powder dry. We can do that by maintaining supremacy in the air.

"Billy" Mitchell was a martyr in fighting for what he sincerely believed, and what history has proven, was essential to America's safety. Let's make sure that a similar fate does not befall Senator Mitchell—let's get behind him in his proposal to have the President appoint an Air preparedness planning board. I'm telling my Congressman and Senators to give his proposal most serious consideration—I urge every reader of this column to do likewise.

WAYS TO SAVE WHEAT

To help meet the emergency that has arisen because of a shortage of flour, every housewife has been asked to help save wheat. There are so many ways that one can cooperate with the government, on this great problem. Everyone should be willing to aid this program to help feed starving millions in war-stricken Europe, Asia and China.

Here are some suggestions on saving wheat:

1. Serve potatoes in the place of bread. One small potato has as much food value as a slice of bread.

A. Use wheat cereal or biscuit in place of bread.

B. Serve potato salad instead of a sandwich.

C. Use potatoes in the place of bread for stuffings.

D. Top meat pies with fluffy mashed potatoes instead of pastry crust.

E. Serve creamed meats on mashed potatoes instead of on toast.

F. Serve poached eggs on mashed potatoes instead of on toast.

G. Use potato flour in the place of some wheat flour in pancakes.

H. Eat potatoes as bread.

I. Serve more potatoes for breakfast as potato-cake or hashed brown potatoes.

2. Substitute oatmeal for wheat products.

A. Use oatmeal to replace part of the wheat flour in making muffins, biscuits, pancakes, and cookies.

B. Use left-over oatmeal as thickening for gravies, soups, and stews.

C. Use oatmeal as a binder in meatloaf instead of bread.

D. Use oatmeal in making puddings and fruit betties instead of bread.

E. Serve oatmeal for breakfast instead of some or all of the toast.

3. Use cornmeal for bread when cornmeal is plentiful. Make cornbread without the addition of wheat flour.

4. Prevent the waste of bread.

A. Store bread in moisture-proof wrappings in the refrigerator or unwrapped in a well-ventilated bread box. The breadbox should be sunned and scalded often.

B. Serve only one piece of bread per person at a time. Cut pieces of bread in halves so that if one does not wish a whole slice of bread the remainder will not be wasted. If more bread is desired let the family ask for "seconds."

C. Put unsliced loaves of bread on the table and slice only as bread is desired by the family. Bread will keep much longer if it is unsliced.

D. Make dry bread into Melba, French, cinnamon, milk, cheese, and jelly toast. Melba toast is good with soups or with the main meal.

E. Use ends of bread for dry bread crumbs on baked dishes on in making croquettes.

F. Make bread puddings of left-over bread.

G. Make open-face sandwiches, using one slice of bread instead of two. Do not trim off the crusts of bread. Open-face ground beef sandwiches are made by broiling directly under the heat.

H. Use stale bread for stuffings for fowls or meat. Bread stuffing may be used between layers of ground meat and baked.

I. Split dry rolls or biscuits, dip in egg and milk mixture, fry on both sides until brown, and serve with stewed fruits or syrup as a dessert.

J. Reheat rolls by dipping them in water before putting into a hot oven.

K. Reheat left-over coffee cake, or slice and toast it.

L. Avoid buying an assortment of breads at a time.

M. Be careful in toasting bread so that it is not burned.

N. Where eating in a restaurant request waitress to bring less bread if not desired. Any left-over bread served in a public eating place is wasted.

O. Plan reducing diet's low in bread for those who need them. Cutting down on bread is one of the best ways of reducing overweight. People over 50, young mothers, one with heart disease, or one who is only a few pounds overweight should not reduce unless directed to do so by a doctor. Weight reduction should be gradual.

5. Don't be afraid to use the emergency flour. There is, of course, slight change in flour and color. If the emergency flour is enriched, it contains more food value than the enriched wheat flour. It is richer in protein, iron and Vitamin B. The only change to be made in baking is to add a little more flour or subtract a little liquid.

6. Do not hoard flour. Insects will get into it during the summer months.

ROUTE THREE

Hi, friends. Continued rains and rheumatism have not sweetened our disposition, or changed our natures. So be patient and I'll give you the news hereabouts. May exaggerate a bit, or leave off an item, but charge it to the weather. It's terrific.

SUNDAY, JUNE 2
CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Ancient and Modern Necromancy, Alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced," is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, June 2, 1946.

The Golden Text is "My flesh and my heart faileth; but God is the strength of my heart, and my portion for ever. For, lo, they that are far from thee shall perish." (Ps. 73:26,27).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many." (Matt. 24).
