Soil Conservation Notes By Herbert Anderson

W. M. Turner, east of Hardin, made a complete soil and water conservation farm plan last month. Pasture seeding and improvement was the main soil saving practices which he wants to use. However, a diversion ditch was planned to be dug at the foot of a steep hill to keep excess runoff from flooding a small bottom.

Jack Shemwell, south of Oak Level, plans to sow about ten more acres of permanent pasture this fall as another step in the establishment of his conservation farm plan. About eight acres was seeded last year. A farm pond is to be dug this year.

Joe Parker, southwest of Benton, has between five and six acres in land capability classes two and four which have been lying idle for a number of years. This land can be economically reclaimed for pasture. He has owned the farm only a short time.

As an incentive for more farmers to reclaim idle land, the P. M. A. Committee has set this up as a practice for which there is a payment of ten dollars an acre. The Soil Conservation Service must check this land before work is begun to determine if it meets the requirements for payment.

T. E. Harrison, west of Benton, is reclaiming about two acres of idle land. Permanent pasture grass is to be sown on this and about twenty more acres this summer. Harrison is a cooperator of the Marshall County Soil Conservation District.

I helped Con Clay Sargent stake a stockwater pond on his mother's farm north of Sharpe, last month. Two natural draws or valleys were checked in the selection of the final site. This was necessary in order to find a site which would hold the largest amount of water by removing the least amount of dirt in building the levee.

James Hamlet and Rochie Jones, west of Benton, received complete soil and water conservation farm plans last month.

Robert McKendree, Joe Young, James Clayton, C. H. Fowler, and Jamie Dotson have received conservation farm plans this month.

ANGLING ANGLES BY OLD HI

When you come right down to it, many of us get a heap of fun and sport out of catching spotted trout with live baits. Maybe we got that way as kids, but anyway we still like to dunk a worm, grasshopper, or small minnow into a pool or riffle.

It's not so easy, either, to dupe eager trout with natural baits, for you have to exercise skill in presenting each type of lure or you won't fool the fish. There's a knack to rolling a garden worm along the bottom, close to snaggy hideouts, that will fetch results; while otherwise you may damage the bait for hours without a touch.

A worm or minnow, then, must not only be lowered to the right depth, but also be rolled or twitched along in a manner that prompts the trout to attack. Care and patience often turn the trick—especially with brown or Dolly Varden trout—while hurried fishing only gives you an empty creel.

There are times when live baits are more effective than spinners or flies. This is true in early season when the water is high and murky, and also after rainfalls. When there are no hatches of insects, and the trout are nabbing minnows or picking up crawfish from the bottom, then your live baits will make your day on the stream worth while.

For this kind of fishing, Old Hi likes three types of rods: a 3-piece 9½-foot cane 8-foot tubular steel bait rod; the 6-piece Sportsman tom-cin cane rod easily carried in pocket or pack basket on wilderness trips; and the Mohawk 4-section steel telescopic rod.

scope rod 8½ feet in length when extended, for streams thickly lined with alders and other bushes.

In fact, the telescope rod is practical for a lot of rough work and for hard-to-reach places. It's a popular style of rod with a great many anglers. It is inexpensive, and long-lasting if properly dried and oil coated after each trip.

With any of these rods you would want a Lakeside or Mohawk level wind reel and 50 feet of Meadow Brook hard braided line. A 3-foot nylon leader, light Saranac sinkers, and some packages of size 4, 6, or 8 New Central Dought double-needled hooks complete the rig.

Get the most out of this method, read the chapter on trout in Old Hi's free booklet, "Fishing For The Millions," a copy of which you may have by sending a postcard request to me in care of this newspaper.

For a change of action this season, you may want to share in the adventure of catching big and small game fish in the ocean. There's a great variety to try for by trolling, surf casting, bait and fly casting, still fishing, and spinning.

Details on the proper gear to use in taking the different species will be found in Old Hi's other free, illustrated booklets called "Pacific Coastal Fishing," and "Salt Water Sports Fishing." The latter covers the principal features that draw thousands of anglers to the beaches, inlets, points, and reefs along the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico Coastlines. Get your copies of these booklets today.

"Most Visitors Are Amazed"

"In this country, you don't have to ask anyone if you can go here or go there. You can do as you please. That's what America means to me," says Leon, a veteran of 18 months of infantry combat in the Pacific.

"We're able to buy the things that make life easier to live—the appliances we have, our cars. From what I understand, from what I see and read, in other countries it's more or less just a set class that can have these things."

Like other Texas Gas men, Leon considers his family, his job and his way of living among the most important things in life. His place in the community is also a continuing source of satisfaction to him. As he puts it, "When we came here, the people took us in. We feel, now, like we're part of the community ourselves. It means a lot."

Mobilgas Economy Run

New Ford Mileage Maker SIX Thrift

Again this year, Ford was first in gas economy over all cars in its price class in the Mobilgas Economy Run. In this toughest test, a Ford Six with Overdrive (optional at extra cost) averaged 53.855 miles per gallon and 26.463 actual miles per gallon. A very important contributing factor is Ford's Automatic Power Pilot which squeezes the last ounce of power out of every drop of gas. Pounds for pound, Ford's All-New Mileage Maker SIX is definitely the most economical low-priced car to run!

"The AAA Contest Board determines the winner by a 'miles per gallon' formula to insure equal chance for all cars in each class regardless of size and weight. Top miles per gallon equals the car weight (including passengers) in tons, multiplied by number of miles traveled, divided by number of gallons consumed."
