HISTORICAL REVIEW OF SWIFT & COMPANY

The story of Swift & Company is the story of the growth of America's largest industry, meat packing. The history of the industry, and particularly of Swift & Company, its foremost unit, is filled with romance, adversity, struggle against enormous odds, and success in the best American tradition.

It is a tale of pioneering, of the opening up of the west a half a century ago—and as well the already populous but prejudiced east. First a revolution to production and distribution methods in the west, then a complete change of buying habits in the consuming centers of the east.

Gustavus Franklin Swift started in business for himself with a total capital of $20 when he was 16 years old. That was in 1855. He paid $19 for a heifer, dressed it himself and sold the meat in his little home town on Cape Cod.

From that time on he moved in an ever-widening area, investing his money for the next step in the great task of his life—to eliminate waste, which he hated, and solve the problem of feeding America efficiently. In that day refrigerator cars were unknown and meat processing was expensive and unscientific.

By 1875, when he was 36, G. F. Swift had reached Chicago as a cattle buyer for his eastern firm. But his work, at which he so excelled that he was offered the then unheard-of salary of $8,000 a year, did not satisfy him. He could see in it only the waste of shipping live cattle to the Atlantic Coast when only the 55 percent of edible meat would be consumed.

Almost alone in his vision, and entirely alone in his courage to act on his convictions, he saw his future in meat packing at Chicago rather than shipment of live cattle to the east. He began to experiment with winter shipments of dressed beef. His first efforts were successful. Then summer shipments followed. While others scoffed, he put his faith in refrigeration as the element which would one day, sooner than he dreamed, revolutionize the live stock and meat industry of the nation.

Eastern prejudice against western beef and refusal of the railroads to experiment with refrigerator cars were obstacles which would have defeated the plodder, but not this determined young Yankee. He built his own refrigerator cars, 10 of them, and persuaded a railroad which then had none of the live stock business, and hence nothing to lose, to haul them.

He formed eastern business alliances and by persistence finally broke down eastern prejudice. His rapid and varied moves, on every one of which he was forced to stake his entire capital and future, were successful and within three years of his arrival in Chicago this "crazy man Swift," as some termed him, had caused a revolution.

When G. F. Swift sold his $19 heifer he made a profit of $10. That was a common profit in that day. When G. F. Swift had completed a dozen years at the head of the infant Swift & Company a profit of two cents on the dollar of sales was larger than the average. That would be the equivalent of 58 cents total profit on the original heifer deal—scarcely enough to keep him in business beyond that first transaction!

Packer profits, in other words, came down as volume increased, to the benefit of both live stock producers, who received more money for many more cattle, and consumers, who paid less for much better meat and more of it. Producers and consumers benefited in many other ways, also. The lively, healthy competition in the meat packing industry, in which even today the largest unit handles only 15 percent of the total volume, stimulated better merchandising.

Thirty years ago more than 70 percent of the butter manufactured in the United States was made on farms, compared to about 30 percent today. Present methods of handling cream and butter were almost unknown 30 years ago. The product had little uniformity. Not so today with creameries everywhere grading, testing, pasteurizing and churning the farmer's cream into uniform grades of butter.

The Fulton plant of Swift & Co. has been among the most progressive in advancing standards, applying new improved methods developed in Swift's research laboratories, and in working with farmers to improve quality and thereby increase the financial return to the farmer.

Poultry had, for example, always been marketed seasonally. Eggs likewise were gathered infrequently, taken to town only occasionally, and shipped to consuming markets at fairly long intervals. In the old days, eggs were sold as eggs, with no preference shown for size or quality.

SWIFT & COMPANY HISTORY REVIEW

Generally, there was either an over-supply or a scarcity of poultry and eggs.

Establishment of brand names and brand consciousness on the part of consumers was one basis of improvement. Butter, eggs and poultry are now, as a consequence, identified by brands and consumers are assured of uniform, carefully selected products that have had the most rigid care in preparation and handling.

The growth of Swift & Company to its present position in the industrial world reveals how great was the need and opportunity and how effectively the young man from Cape Cod met it.

The company was incorporated in Illinois in 1885 with six shareholders and a capital of $300,000. Its only packing plant was at Chicago but it had several eastern allies with distributing firms.

Today, just a half century later, it has 50 packing plants, in every section of America and Canada, 100 produce plants, 16 oil mills, eight refineries and around 400 branch selling houses. In addition, thousands of refrigerator cars operate over more than 600 car routes, serving smaller cities and helping to bridge the 900-mile average gap between live stock producers in the west and consumers in the east.

The six original shareholders are now nearly 55,000, of whom more than 20,000 are women, and the capitalization is $150,000,000. More than 60,000 men and women are employed in plants and offices. Total sales last year were $619,000,000, on which the net profit from all sources was only a small fraction of a cent per pound of product sold. Economics of the meat packing industry, under which Swift & Co. operates, differ from a great many other industries in that daily competition with more than 900 other packing companies in all parts of the United States forces each company to buy at the market and sell its finished product at the market. No packing company can figure its costs and then add a certain amount for profit. Profits are derived by reducing expenses to a point where the market prices paid and received will leave a profit. Over a long period of years this has averaged less than two cents per dollar of sales—one of the lowest profit margins in all industry.

In this group of figures lies the real tribute to G. F. Swift, the founder. He died in 1903 at the age of 64, a champion performer in a hard working pioneer era. But he had, before his death, the infinite satisfaction of achieving through his company his ideal of service.

He had established a business with all the advantages of national organization, yet primarily local in character. Wherever the company has established a branch plant or selling agency it has brought to the farmers of the district a world-wide market for quality products at prices determined by the broadest possible demand.

Because of the character of its distributive system the company has been able to pay better prices, employ more persons, contribute more in taxes and sell at lower prices possible.

Swift & Company, in summation, was founded on American ideals, developed an efficiency known only to American business, and stands today as a typical example of American industry at its best.

The business continues to be operated by members of the immediate Swift family. Seven sons of the founder all entered the company. Of these, one has retired, two have died. The four remaining include Charles H., chairman of the board; Gustavus F., president; George H., director; and Harold H., director and vice-president. Two sons of L. F. Swift, retired president and board chairman, are Alden B., director and vice-president, and Louis F., Jr., manager of the Fort Worth packing plant.

"Divorce Court Murder"

EIGHTH INSTALMENT

SYNOPSIS . . . Six persons are in an inner office of the law firm of Dawson, McQuire and Locke at Philadelphia. A master hearing in the divorce case of Rowland vs. Rowland is under way. Mrs. Rowland, represented by her lawyer brother, Mr. Willard; Mr. Rowland, the defendant, and his attorney, Mr. Trumbull, the court clerk and Mr. Dawson, the master, are the six persons. There is a new development in the case. After failing to defend himself against the charge of adultery in earlier hearings, Mr. Rowland digs up evidence and asks the court's permission to produce witnesses and resist the suit. Judge Dawson overrules the heated objections of Mr. Willard, and orders the witnesses brought in. Rowland's lawyer goes to get the witness but finds her dead—chloroformed. She is Mrs. Barbara Keith, wife of a prominent Philadelphia business man. Judge Dawson phones for the police. Detective Tommy Rankin is assigned to the case. He is now questioning all of the parties involved in the case. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Rankin nodded, in appreciation of the diabolical effectiveness of the late Tom Marshall's measures.

"So, with the divorce goes the management of the estate," he summarized. "But I thought Harvey Willard had means. Both he and your wife inherited from Peter Willard's estate. Why should he need the trusteeship?"

The young man shook his head. "He's not rich any more, and anyhow Adele was willed most of it. Willard's share all disappeared in poor investments and the stock market. And Marshall's will permitted him to spend for his own benefit the thirty percent he didn't need to transfer to his sister—about fifty thousand annually. I happen to know he is hard pressed by creditors. Unless he can obtain plenty of funds before July first, he's a ruined man; they will close in and force him into bankruptcy. Adele is too smart to throw good money after bad and won't lend it to him. Only a prompt divorce decree can save him."

"Still," the detective pointed out, "if your wife intends to marry Campbell shortly, what good will that do him? As her husband, he then becomes the Marshall executor and Willard's situation isn't bettered at all."

"Even with temporary control of the estate," Rowland returned, "he might manage to slide out from under." He extinguished his cigarette. "Besides, he has no more idea of Adele's intentions in that direction than I had until my spying brought results."

He paused, and after a brief moment for reflection, Rankin acquiesced.

"Yes, I can understand that. Now what did you discover by watching Mrs. Rowland?"

"Two weeks ago I obtained the evidence I needed," Rowland resumed his narrative. "It was on the Wednesday evening after the last hearing. I had learned several days before from the chauffeur that Campbell was back in town; and for some evenings I continued my usual watch and trailed them. Then that Wednesday, May twenty-fourth, Finley reported he had been dismissed for the evening and also added this significant item: Adele's maid had casually informed him that she was instructed to pack an overnight bag for her."

"Well, right after supper I took up my watch by the entrance of the Willard estate. Campbell, driving a Cadillac coupe, arrived at eight o'clock, and Adele joined him with her overnight bag. But for the early part of the evening, they did nothing more censorable than on other occasions. First, they went to the Forrest Theatre. At eleven o'clock, they visited the Organdy Club on Broad Street but I didn't dare follow them in. Instead, I parked near Campbell's car, looked into it and saw that he too had brought an overnight bag. He and my wife remained in the night club until midnight. And perhaps twenty minutes before they appeared, Mrs. Keith came out of the place by herself and—"

Rankin's interruption was abrupt. "All alone?" he demanded sharply. "She was at the Organdy unescorted?"

"Yes, and it puzzled me too," Rowland replied. "I called her and she explained that she had been to the opera for which Mr. Keith did not care. Because the club was so close by, she went in to see the floor show. I realized, for a married woman in her position, the story didn't ring true. I didn't question her, as it was none of my business and beside the point. I was too thankful for her appearance just when I needed a witness to worry about it." "You were well enough acquainted with Mrs. Keith to enlist her aid in such a personal matter?"

The young man made an apologetic gesture. "I'm afraid I wasn't fair to her and took advantage of her lucky appearance," he explained persuasively. "You see, I asked her to join me, but didn't tell her why I wanted her; I only said it would be an important service to me and urgent. I was excited and that made her curious and desire to help me. It wasn't until we were already trailing my wife and Campbell away from the club, toward city limits, that she fully realized the predicament I placed her in. But it was (Continued on Page 8) samine county.

THE BOOK

... the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," ...
... which contains Four Great Treasures ...

by BRUCE BARTON

As these chapters have appeared in serial form a surgeon of national reputation sent this request: "Before you finish the story of 'The Book,' please be sure to give us the answer to these two questions:

"1. How were the books of the Bible gathered into a collection? Who selected them and how do we know that the right ones were selected?"

"2. By what means were these chosen books preserved and handed down? Who decided that they ought to be translated into modern languages and who did the translating?"

Let us deal first with the Old Testament. It would be very pleasant if we could say that some one group of men, meeting in Jerusalem about 400 B. C., selected the books which we now have and certified for all time that these and no others should be the Old Testament. But such is not the case. As the writing of these books was an evolution, so was their selection. Largely, they have been preserved to us by the process known as the survival of the fittest.

The ancient Hebrews held many of their books in high regard, and which nearly thirty are referred to in the Old Testament. Twenty-four of these are sunk beyond all knowledge. The story about the surviving still for Joshua is quoted from an old book of war songs known as the Book of Jasher or the Book of the Just (Joshua 10:13). David's "Song of the Bow" (II Samuel 1:18) is from the same book, but except for these fragments the Book of the Just has perished. So Book of the Wars of the Lord, of also has another old song book, The twenty-first chapter of Numbers, which we have a fragment in the fourteenth verse.

The books of Kings are largely compiled from more extended records, which sometimes are referred to by name. This is not the book of Chronicles that we have, which was written long after the book of Kings.

We see, then, that the Old Testament is the surviving portion of a much larger number of books. It does not comprise sacred as opposed to secular books but is the whole body of ancient Hebrew literature now extant. Philo, an Alexandrian Jew, who lived in the second century before the Christian era, gives a list of books nearly identical with those we have but omits seventeen that are in our list. Jesus, the son of Sirach, closely parallels our list but not stop with it. He recognizes the work of a contemporary, Simon as worthy to be included and, what is rather remarkable, he thinks his own book good enough to be a part of the Bible.

Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Galloway of Mayfield spent Sunday with friends and relatives in Fulton. Richard Williams and Ralph Cantrell spent Sunday at Reelfoot Lake.

Or Do
Gas on Stomach

Sour Stomach
make you Miserable?

Too much food, or the wrong kind of food, too much smoking, too much beer, make your body over-acid. Then you have distress after eating, gas on stomach, heartburn, sour stomach.

ALKA-SELTZER relieves these troubles promptly, effectively, harmlessly.

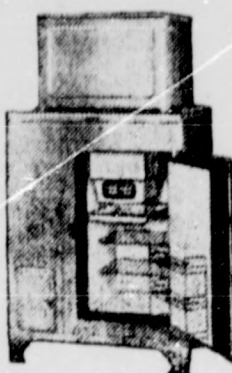

Use Alka-Seltzer for Headache, Colds, Fatigue, "Morning After Feeling," Muscular, Sciatic and Rheumatic Pains.

Alka-Seltzer makes a sparkling alkaline drink. As it contains an analgesic (Acetyl-Salicylate) it first relieves the pain of everyday ailments and then by restoring the alkaline balance corrects the cause when due to excess acid.

Alka-Seltzer tastes like carbonated mineral spring water—works like magic. Contains no dangerous drugs... does not depress the heart... is not laxative.

Get a drink at your Drug Store Soda Fountain. Keep a package in your home medicine cabinet.

THE CONSTITUTION

THIRTEEN FREE AND INDEPENDENT NATIONS

When we start to study anything we must begin at the beginning. The Constitution of the United States begins with a Preamble. A Preamble is intended to explain the purpose of what follows. The Preamble to our Constitution does that in 52 words.

"We, the people of the United States, do hereby establish this Constitution for the United States of America."

That explains what the Constitution was expected to do. It does not, however, explain why it was necessary to draw up a Constitution, 11 years after the English Colonies of America had declared their independence of Great Britain. The Declaration of Independence was signed in 1776. The Constitution was adopted in 1787. Before we can understand the why of the Constitution, we must understand what kind of a government we had in America before there was any Constitution.

The very first phrase of the Constitution raises questions. "We, the people of the United States." How were the States united before there was any Constitution? What had kept them together throughout the War of the Revolution? What had held them together after the Revolution and before they adopted the Constitution? For, as they expressly stated in the Declaration of Independence, they were not only free states, but independent states.

For that matter, what did they mean by the word "states," in the Declaration of Independence and in the Constitution itself? When the Founding Fathers of the Republic said "state" they meant exactly what we mean today when we say "nation." In the 18th century the word "nation" was seldom used; the word "state" was always understood as meaning a nation. The Declaration of Independence, after declaring that "these" United Colonies are and of right ought to be, free and independent States," continues: "and that all political connection between them and the STATE of Great Britain is, and ought to be, dissolved."

"United States," then, meant "United Nations."

Thirteen independent "nations," seeking to free themselves from the domination of another nation, fought the War of the Revolution. They called their union a "Confederation to States." Exactly the same meaning would have been conveyed if they had called it a "League of Nations."

In the beginning, this union of independent states was nothing more than a mutual alliance to carry on the war. It was almost exactly the same sort of a "union" as that between the allied but independent nations of Europe, for the conduct of the World War from 1914 to 1919. The American States had the common background of having all been subject to the same domination by another nation. But the utmost their leaders had in mind in the way of a union, at the beginning of the Revolution, was an alliance of independent nations in what they explicitly termed a "League of Friendship."

The only central government that existed in America for the first five years of the war with Great Britain was the Continental Congress, composed of delegates from the thirteen states. It had so little power or authority that it could hardly be called a government at all. The Continental Congress could borrow money, if anyone would lend it, but could not levy taxes to repay such loans. It could issue requisitions to the separate states for supplies and troops, but it could not make its acts effective.

BANANAS

When the Portuguese first brought the banana to America they never dreamed what would happen to it, which isn't strange for it took nearly 300 years for America to become banana conscious. We are now, for every city and village in the country gets its regular supply—from where? And who raises them? And do they make any money—when bananas are sometimes peddled at a cent each? Ask the United Fruit Company, or better yet ask them to reverse one of their new reels. It would show everything from the corner banana peddler to a plantation in Central America.

The trouble with the banana is that it likes to live where most men find living pretty difficult. So difficult that many have died there. Bananas love to grow in moist, hot, tropical lowland where it rains every day and the thermometer stays around 90 degrees. That is ideal for the plant, but what about the thousands of men who tend the plants, cut the fruit, load it into trucks, and cart it miles to the steamer? And what about the men who work on the docks, and the girls in the office, and the big boss in a white helmet?

It takes all those thousands—a regular city in the jungle—to finally bring the banana peddler to your door. But he wouldn't come any more and there wouldn't be any bananas, if it were not for the community hospital and its doctors, trained to fight the one thing that would stop the show—malaria. Not the kind we get up here. Chills and fevers are bad enough, but malaria in banana countries kills people, sometimes pretty quickly, unless they can get quinine. The company doctor sees that they do get it—30 grains a day until the fever is gone. Only those little white pills keep bananas coming to your door, and also keep you from chills and fever.

MANY GOOD HERDS
ON KENTUCKY FARMS

There are many good dairy herds on Kentucky farms, according to reports of improvement associations to the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

C. H. Jones of the Purchase Dairy Herd Improvement Association owns seven Jerseys that averaged 53 1-2 pounds of butterfat in May. Sixteen Jerseys owned by M. D. Harrison of the same association averaged nearly 48 pounds, with two of the cows dry.

Other high production records were: Joel Gray, Shelby-Boone-Carroll association, 46 1-2 pounds; Walter Ballard, Dix River association, and O. R. Russ, Shelby-Boone-Carroll association, 46 pounds; J. C. Ballard, Dix River association, 45 pounds; and Walnut Hall Farm, Blue Grass association, 41 pounds. Many others averaged between 30 and 40 pounds of butterfat per cow for the month.

'The Divorce Court Murder'

By Milton Propper

too late then and she was sporty enough to see it through; for my sake, she agreed to risk the publicity and gossip and give evidence. If I had ever dreamed it would end like this.

He left the sentence unfinished, compressing his lips with a sigh, shaking his head dolefully. An awkward silence followed until Rankin asked:

"Then you and Mrs. Keith were good friends, Rowland. How long have you known her?"

"I met her two winters ago, at Palm Beach, though, like all Philadelphia society, I had heard of Mortimer Keith. She stayed at the Royal Arms Hotel, where Adele and I were; and because he was too busy to join her, she was a grass widow and needed company. That her social position and her attractiveness made her welcome with all the young men at the resort. I did my share to entertain her; I rode and visited the casino with her, and several times attended the dog races. Even Adele acted fairly cordially toward her."

"Well, what happened the night here you followed your wife and Campbell?" the detective prompted. "Where did they lead you?"

"Out the Park Drive and left on the Ridge Pike," Rowland said. "We passed through Roxborough and Norristown. At Collegeville we had caught up and followed them off to the right, along the narrow country road paralleling Perkiomen Creek. At the end of five miles, they halted finally at a substantial stucco bungalow along the creek. It was then one-thirty.

"Again I drove my car past, about two hundred feet, and parked where a clump of trees fringed the road and hid us from the cottage. Campbell produced his key and unlocked the door; then he turned on the lights. I have inquired about it since and learned it belongs to Nick Alberti, the manager to the Organdy Club, a friend of Campbell's. Adele was then cautious enough to pull down all the blinds. Still watching silently in the darkness, Mrs. Keith and I could make out they were drinking in the living room. At two-thirty they started to retire and a half hour later Campbell turned out the lights. I considered I had gathered enough evidence against Adele to enter a defense to her suit; so I retraced the trail with Mrs. Keith back to the city."

The speaker concluded his narrative and fell silent until Rankin asked:

"And at no time did your wife or Campbell see you or become suspicious of your presence?"

"I'm practically certain they never realized they were being followed."

"Then they and Mr. Willard had no idea in advance with whom they had to reckon? Mr. Trumbull felt reasonably sure they hadn't identified Mrs. Keith as your chief witness this afternoon."

Allen Rowland pondered a moment. "That's right, unless Adele noticed her at the night club," he offered at length, "and she probably didn't; her arrival there that night must have been one of the reasons Mrs. Keith left without waiting for her date."

"Yes, I suppose that's possible," Rankin frowned uncertainly. "And you have no other proofs of your wife's infidelity? Your entire case depended on her?"

"Mrs. Keith's death doesn't leave me a leg to stand on," Rowland replied, a harsh note in his voice.

Abruptly, the detective shifted the subject. "Now, just one more point, Mr. Rowland," he said. "About the night of Wednesday, February first, when Mrs. Rowland caught you and Miss Edmond together at the Sunset Inn, I've found out that immediately after the interruption, Mrs. Keith's husband arrived there. Can you tell me how he came to be there or what his connection was with . . . ?" he paused delicately. "your intrigue?"

But as Jill Edmond had done, the young man professed to be unable to account for the manufacturer's appearance. He had never met Mortimer Keith, he said; though having seen him several times, he had recognized him when he entered the room. He could add no explanation or detail to the secretary's description of the incident.

Concluding his questions on this circumstance, Rankin thanked Rowland and dismissed him.

His next step was to examine the dead woman's checkbook. Except for two stubs, her accounts seemed in perfect order; her expenditures with the date, purpose or name of payee and amount, were carefully audited. The sums she spent were comparatively small and far from commensurate. Rankin wondered at her low balance, which never exceeded five thousand dollars, and at present came to less than one.

The two check-stubs which were not identifiable as to purpose, however, indicated exceptionally large sums. One check had been drawn about three months ago, and the past Thursday—for two thousand and three hundred dollars, respectively. The only clue to the reason for these withdrawals was the word "personal" written on each stub.

Before the detective could ponder the significance of these entries, a knock interrupted him. At his command, the policeman had sent to locate Mortimer Keith opened it and entered the room.

"Yes, Cottman?" Rankin greeted him. "You've been gone a long time. Is Mr. Keith with you?"

The officer shook his head. "No, I haven't found him; he isn't in town at all," he replied. "It was too late to visit his offices, so I called at the Aldrich Apartments and learned from his butler, Stanley, that he had gone away—on business, he thought, to Washington."

Rankin pursed his lips in disappointment. "Washington? I suppose you discovered what business took him there and communicated with the people he went to see, Cottman?" the detective inquired.

"No, I didn't, although I tried to; that's what took me so long. The secretary said it had something to do with the New Ray Silk Company. Neither he nor the butler had any idea at what hotel Mr. Keith might stop, tonight."

"Hotel? Then he isn't expected back today?"

The policeman shook his head. "No, not until tomorrow," he answered, "when he's completed his business."

"Well, I imagine we can wait and give him a chance to turn up according to schedule," Rankin said, dismissing Cottman. Johnson entered as Cottman left. "Finished Johnson?" asked Rankin. Johnson did not reply until the officer had gone. "I've taken everybody's fingerprints, Tommy," he said, "but I can't make a detailed report until I've had time to study them—say tomorrow morning." (TO BE CONTINUED)

SALES TAX HAS SOLVED NO MAJOR GOVERNMENTAL PROBLEMS; JUST ANOTHER BURDEN ON TAXPAYERS OF KENTUCKY THAT SHOULD BE REMOVED IN INTEREST OF PEOPLE, CHANDLER SAYS

SALES TAX BLENDS THOSE LEAST ABLE TO PAY; TAKES BREAD FROM POOR.

There is quite a bit of misunderstanding in this section about the Sales Tax, which has pestered people in every walk of life since its enactment over the protest of thousands of people throughout the State.

The Sales Tax is now being played with by politicians seeking election at the hands of the people; especially in this true in the governor's race. Some candidates are coming out flat-footed against the sales tax, while others are pussy-footing around it and diverting the attention of voters to other tempting offers.

But the fact remains that the sales tax is just another means of wheeling more money out of Kentucky taxpayers, with the avowed purpose of restoring the State's credit and reducing its indebtedness—but somehow the State is always in debt and extravagance goes on.

The Sales Tax has placed a heavier burden upon the people—especially that great mass of people who earn barely enough to buy their daily bread. This tax is taking food from the mouths of the poor, and taxing the necessities of life.

The Sales Tax has enabled Laffoon and his bi-partisan machine to obtain an obnoxious strangle hold upon the government at Frankfort, by creating more offices, enlarging payrolls, fattening the pockets of political crammers and cantankerous leeches who live off the taxpayers' money.

Fulton and Fulton county have suffered from the sales tax. Because we are located on the Kentucky-Tennessee state line, thousands of dollars pour into our neighboring state of Tennessee through channels of trade at the hands of Kentuckians who seek to avoid the sales tax.

Politicians favoring the sales tax are using every means at their disposal to predict what will happen to the State if the sales tax is not continued. To hear them tell it, the State would just "close up shop and quit business." Such talk is an insult to public decency and intelligence.

What this State needs is sane, sound, business-like methods in government. We need to get at the bottom of the trouble—stop unnecessary leaks in the State's various departments, and end down-right stealing through graft and suicidal expenditures that waste the taxpayers' money and do the State no good.

The Laffoon administration came along, hood-winked the farmers to vote for the sales tax on the plea that they could take off the property taxes, when in the long run the sales tax collected more than the property taxes only it does it in broken doses, as has been definitely shown by carefully recorded figures.

A. B. Chandler, our Lieutenant Governor, and a candidate for Governor, who gave us the right to vote in a Democratic primary, would exempt from taxation real estate of all small property owners, repeal the sales tax, re-organize the state departments, abolish useless state jobs and agencies, inaugurate strict budgetary control, and give dollar for dollar value of taxes paid into the treasury. He has fought the bi-partisan combine at Frankfort all along, and he is waging war against the corruption in our government.

Do you want a new deal at Frankfort under Chandler? Do you want to continue the old bi-partisan rule under Rhea?

Whoever you are for, go to the polls on August 3rd and vote your choice. Don't stay at home and then kick about the kind of government you have.

EDGAR WALLACE STORY ON SCREEN AT ORPHEUM

"Sanders of the River," Alexander Korda's production of the famous Edgar Wallace story of the Congo is brought to the screen of the Orpheum Theatre Tuesday for a two-day run.

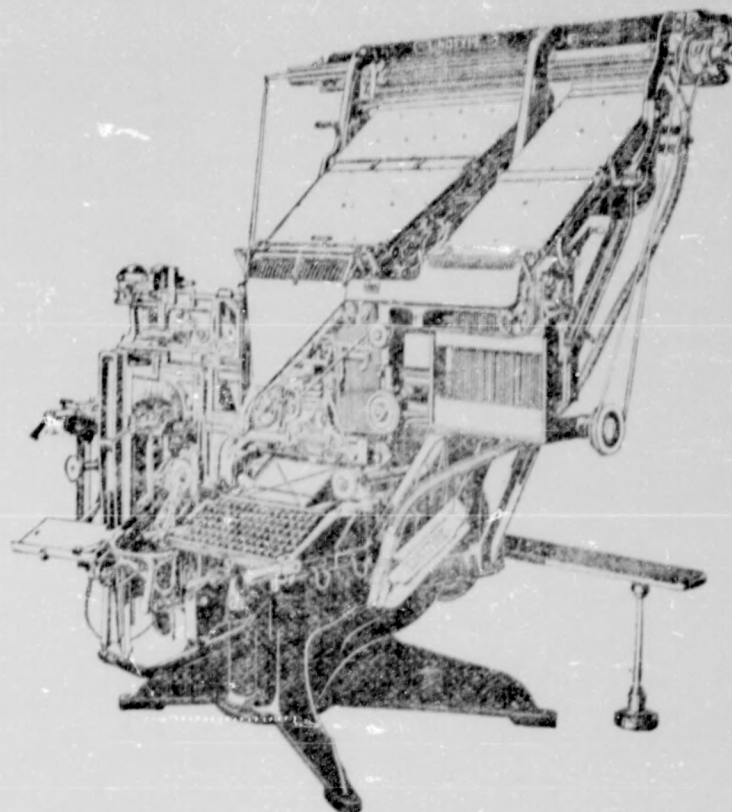

The cast of the film, which was almost entirely filmed in the heart of Africa, is headed by Paul Robeson, last seen in Eugene O'Neill's "Emperor Jones." Leslie Banks, distinguished stage and screen star, who recently scored in "The Man Who Knew Too Much," and Nina Mae McKinney, beautiful star of King Vidor's all-negro film, "Hallelujah."

The story, which Lajos Biro and Jeffrey Dell adapted to the screen, follows the thrilling adventures of the miracle-working British District Commissioner Sanders, who by his personal courage and deep understanding of the native mind and heart maintains peace among the savage Congo tribe under his charge.

Robeson is seen as Bosambo, a big, handsome, intelligent and lovable Negro whom Sanders makes chief on probation. Banks has the title role, and Nina Mae McKinney is seen as the beautiful slave girl, Lilongo, whom Bosambo makes his bride.

WHICH IS BLEEDING THE TAXPAYERS OF KENTUCKY

CHANDLER FAVORS

1. CHANDLER believes in the New Deal policies of President Roosevelt and shall use all of his power to bring Kentucky policies in line with the policies of the New Deal of social and economic justice for all.

2. CHANDLER favors organized labor—the right of labor to a living wage and collective bargaining.

3. CHANDLER favors an old age pension and unemployment insurance.

4. CHANDLER favors the levying of taxes only in proportion with the ability of people to pay.

5. CHANDLER favors the maintenance of a high standard of education, and taking off the Sales Tax will not affect the State's educational program under a sensible budget plan.

6. CHANDLER favors a complete re-organization of the administrative and fiscal affairs of the State Government in order that it may function on a business-like basis, sanely, soundly and economically.

7. CHANDLER favors abolition of unnecessary governmental expense, advocates immediate changes to cut down State expenditures and place the State on a strict budgetary plan of operation.

CHANDLER OPPOSES

1. CHANDLER opposes the so-called retail Sales Tax, because it has placed an unjust burden upon the people who must pay it. The Sales Tax is not a square deal in taxation because it lays taxes on the great mass of people beyond their ability to pay. This tax takes food and necessities of life from the poor and the under-nourished children, because there is hardly enough for the necessary things, much less "blood money" for the Sales Tax.

2. CHANDLER OPPOSES the bi-partisan combine which dominates the government of Kentucky, and creates new political offices, payrolls and unnecessary expenses to gain power by which to control the government for their own selfish interests.

3. CHANDLER opposes the "political manipulators" now in office, favors their immediate release, and the restoration of efficiency and honesty in government.

4. CHANDLER opposes the "old deal" policies of the bi-partisan combine headed by Laffoon and Rhea, and favors a return to the good, old Democratic policy of "GOVERNMENT OF, FOR AND BY THE PEOPLE."
