Murder Charge Filed Against Wife-Slayer

Cage Vowell Recovering From Sleeping Tablets Effects

A first degree murder charge was filed Monday against 67-year-old Cage Vowell for the fatal shooting of his wife, Mrs. Lottie Vowell, in a Sharon variety store Saturday night, Sheriff Grooms of Weakley County reports.

Vowell is in Weakley County Hospital recovering from the effects of several sleeping tablets which he swallowed after the shooting. He is being guarded by Deputy Sheriff Ed Hornbeak. Physicians said Monday night his condition is not serious.

Constable Harris Brinkley, who pursued Vowell from the shooting scene and found his asleep in a cotton field a short time later, said Vowell declared he had tried to commit suicide.

"He said he wanted to kill himself and still wants to die," Mr. Brinkley said. "He asked the Sheriff for a gun Sunday night. Then he begged me for my gun before they gave him a shot and put him to sleep at midnight."

Sheriff Grooms who said the Vowells had been separated for two months, reported Vowell drove up to the back of the store where his wife worked as a seamstress, entered, and shot her five times. He then fled in his car, the sheriff said.

Court records show Mrs. Vowell attempted unsuccessfully recently to institute lunacy proceedings against her husband, and the sheriff added that members of the family said he had threatened her several times since.

Services for Mrs. Vowell were held at Haron Monday.

Former Fulton Girl Makes Good As Model

Miss Grace Cavender, 22, formerly of Fulton, after only four months, has established herself as a popular young Chicago model, according to a story appearing in a recent issue of the Detroit Free Press, and sent to The News by Mrs. Byron Boswell of Detroit.

The story of her own rapid success surprised Grace most of all. She went to Chicago from Fulton to take a secretarial position in an advertising agency. Grace's registration in the Estelle Compton Models Institute was not intended to begin a professional modelling career.

Like many girls, she took the course to acquire poise, advice on good grooming, and hints on general self-improvement, factors that she hoped would aid her in continuing her career in advertising. As the training progressed, Grace became catalogued as the "career girl type." She appeared in various fashion shows with other girls from the school as a part of the course.

Miss Compton recognized Grace as exceptional and urged her to participate in interviews, auditions, and tryouts, which resulted in continuous bookings requiring her combination of elegance and sophistication.

Grace, who is aware of the short professional life of a model, is continuing her advertising career although her talent is in regular demand.

Airports Called Centers For Future Commerce

Civic Leaders In Fulton County Urged To Act Now While National Funds Available

A communication this week from Charles Gartrell, director of aeronautics for Kentucky, told Fulton civic leaders that communities not on air lines and without airports would be "by-passed" by the commerce of the future as cities off highways and railways have been in the past.

He suggested that the community from an air board composed of six members. The members may be named by the County Judge and the mayor, three by each, with Fiscal Court approval for a county airport.

After such a board has been formed, funds to match U. S. money may be obtained by issuing bonds by city and county, or by both, by public subscription or insurance of revenue bonds, he said.

He pointed out the $6,230,000 of a $5,000,000 national fund will be available for airport construction in Kentucky, matched by local or state funds.

WHO WANTS TO BE AN OFFICER?

The Congress has decided that soldiers and sailors in the armed forces should receive terminal leave pay, at a cost of two or three billion to the treasury.

We have no quarrel with the Congressmen in their decision. The officers in the service received terminal leave pay and, we suppose, it is nothing but right and proper for enlisted men to be shown the same consideration.

It seems likely, however, that Congress, in its present mood toward "brass hats" will continue to extend benefits to soldiers, sailors and marines until the advantages of the services will be all with the men in the ranks.

Maybe, in the next war, nobody will want to be an officer. Certainly, it will be precarious to be a high-ranking officer or to win the war. The main reward will be, if present examples can be used for a prediction, denunciation as a "brass hat," determination to grab everything and leave nothing for anybody else.

GNDHI WORRIED ABOUT U. S.

Mohandas K. Gandhi, so-called spiritual leader of India, warns that the atomic bomb will incite the world to a "return to violence with renewed zeal."

This evidently means, if it means anything, that the United States, as the sole possessor of the new bomb, might go on an imperialistic spree and attempt to assert itself by force. We do not believe that there is any likelihood of such a policy.

Just how the atomic bomb, in our possession, could incite nations without it to try violence "with renewed zeal" escapes our imagination. Consequently, it appears that Gandhi is concerned about the future attitude of the United States.

Gandhi also opines that the atomic bomb has "deadened the finest feeling that has sustained mankind for ages." He plugs for non-violence declaring that hatred "can be overcome only by love." The formula is interesting but we wonder if Mr. Gandhi ever thought of trying to stop Hitler or Mussolini or Hirohito and their machines "by love."

The truth of the matter is that the Indian leader, who heads the Congress party, has been able to get by with considerable stirring of ill-feeling in India against the British only because he is dealing with a tolerant people, possessing considerable wisdom in connection with the handling of other races. His theory wouldn't have gotten to first base against the Nazis or the Japanese.

WAR HAS ITS ACCIDENTS

Anybody above the fifth grade in school ought to understand that in war some soldiers are killed accidentally by their own army and that others give up their lives when munitions and explosives fail to behave as expected.

Consequently, there is nothing remarkable about the admission by Maj. Gen. Alden H. Waitt, chief of the chemical warfare service, that defective mortar shells cause the death of some American soldiers. It is not even a point made for the Senate War Investigating committee whose members seem to think they have uncovered a sensation.

The committee should concern itself with a inquiry into the possibility that defective shells were knowingly passed to the Army by contractors callous to the consequences while gobbling profits from war orders. If the investigators can get enough facts to tie such a charge upon a war profiteer, then it would be a sensation.

While on the subject we might as well point out that in warfare, whether between planes, warships or men on the ground, accidents occur and there were, no doubt, many instances where our men were killed by our own weapons. We see no way to avoid this unfortunate result of handling dangerous weapons in battle. The fact of these killings is by no means the same as the suspicion that some manufacturer was deliberately careless in the making of weapons or shells.

FREE PRESS MUST BE TRUTHFUL

There is an admirable appreciation of a "free press" in the United States, but we are afraid that some of those who laud journalistic independence are claiming too much for it when they assert that it can keep the peace of the world.

The proponents of the freedom of the press, as applied to international affairs and relations to every country of the earth, are likewise prone to cover too much ground in their assertions. While the unrestricted acquisition and publication of news is a valuable instrumentality of progress, it is not a miracle-worker.

It is quite true that a free press can expose the facts and call attention to suspicious behavior, either by individuals or nations, and can champion the causes of civilization and peace. It is just as true, however, that a free press can also lend itself to propaganda campaigns that over-emphasize partial truth and thus present to the public an entirely distorted picture of the true situation.

While we join with other journalists in proclaiming the virtues of a free press, and believe that it is a necessity to the progress of peace, we are also conscious of the obligation that such a press must assume. It is not only necessary to have the right to print freely, but it is equally important that what is printed reflects a fair and accurate report. Even with the best intentions of individuals who do the work of the press, this is often hard to accomplish, but it is essential that the ideal be kept in mind along with the freedom demanded.

CAN MAN LIVE 150 YEARS?

Considerable publicity recently emphasized the conclusion of Dr. Alexander A. Bogomolets, Ukrainian scientist, who suggested that "a man should live to the age of 150."

Dr. Bogomolets, one of the great scientists of the Soviet Union, discovered a serum which he thought might tend to prevent the deterioration of connective tissues and thus prolong the life of an individual if the treatment were taken before deterioration set in.

The Russian scientist, however, according to news reports, recently died at the age of 65. Suffering from heart trouble, he was unable to use his own preparation, but, in fairness to him, it should be emphasized that he did not make enthusiastic or exaggerated claims for his serum, although he suggested that it might help to prevent the recurrence of cancer tumors after their surgical removal.

The medical profession in this country recognizes that the biological research of the Soviet scientist may hold promise in the treatment of chronic diseases, such as hardening of the arteries, high blood pressure, arthritis and other serious diseases of later middle age. It was recently revealed that the Soviet Army, during the war, successfully used the serum in the treatment of wounded Russian soldiers, noting that it hastened the healing of many wounds and contributed to the knitting of fractures.

An interpreter of the Bogomolets theory recently reported that the scientist reached the conclusion that "we thrive up like old organs for many reasons that are not well understood. Food, vitamins, hormones, physical activity, blood transfusions, environment, chemistry and electrical forces are all involved in aging, and no one has yet succeeded in straightening out the tangle."

WASTE DENIED

ports that food wastage, under Navy jurisdiction, was "relatively minor, compared with the volume of food handled."

This conclusion will not end the circulation of such reports and, for years, it will be confidently believed by many good Americans upon the basis of whispered revelations by somebody without information, that both the Army and Navy wasted food recklessly and without concern during the war and afterwards.

In this day and age Washington would have been boycotted and silenced by the world-wide do-gooders association for making such treacherous remarks. . . . Washington was the first American firster, first in the hearts of the nation and last in the minds of the present rulers who inhabit government buildings in the mad city along the Potomac. Please take the first door to your left for the latest information about the billion dollar loan to Russia.

Sidney Hillman (I don't know what his name was in Lithuania before he came to this country) was a big shot politician in the New Deal and the one man who was responsible for the rise of Harry Truman to the Presidency. But for "Clear it with Sidney" Hillman, Truman would still be occupying his beloved Senate seat.

Mr. Truman said of him after his death, "He was more than a distinguished labor leader; he was a great humanitarian. His rise to eminence was a tribute to the democratic ideals for which he fought."

That is one man's opinion. Here is another, that of an editorial writer: "The fact is that he was trying to foist upon his adopted country a political ideology as foreign as it is distasteful. He loved the common man for the power that he could bring Hillman, and he used him into his full advantage. He was shrewd, crafty, persistent, and the blot he left on American freedom, thought and action will not be easily removed."

Like that Great Humanitarian, his leader, FDR, he died at the climax of his career; Mr. Roosevelt could not have solved the problems of reconversion, and Sidney Hillman's CIO-PAC is on its way down and out.

Out of Washington has come the past few years a strange philosophy which, in effect, has sought to teach the people that they should lean on the strong arm of government and that it is the duty of the government to support the people, and that the old fashioned idea of WORK and thrift are obsolete and should be abandoned to the New Deal panacea that the Great White Father will look after and minister to the wants of the people from "the cradle to the grave." The old and ancient injunction from High Authority that "Man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow" has been thrown into the discard by our paternalistic government.

ANOTHER ATOMIC EXPLOSION

The second atomic bomb has been exploded under the waters of the Pacific and the reports of destruction are coming in, with the experts again varying in their interpretation of the experiment.

We have no doubt, whatever, of the tremendous destruction power of the bomb used against the Japanese and tested at Bikini but that there is no defense against the weapon seems improbable. Neither does it appear clearly that warfare has been revolutionized.

While we are anxious for the experts who control our defense policies to keep abreast of scientific developments and make use of every new weapon that tends to increase the military power of the United States, we are just as anxious for them to keep their feet on the ground, without becoming too enthusiastic about a new weapon until it has thoroughly established itself.

2,000 ENTER U. S. DAILY

Some 2,000 aliens enter the United States illegally every day, according to U. S. Attorney General Tom Clark who says that the southeast, with its long coastline and proximity to islands of the Caribbean, shows an 800 per cent increase in the number of aliens arrested in the last eight years.

The Mexican border continues to hold first place in the number of arrests. Hundreds attempt to pass the line daily. Not all of them are apprehended but patrols, operating along the border and the coasts, covering 60,000 miles of frontier, catch thousands of criminals, stowaways and smuggled aliens and the riff-raff of many nations.

The immigration laws of the United States restrict the number of foreigners who can enter the country legally for the purpose of becoming citizens. There is, of course, a yearning on the part of many others to make their home in the land of fabulous prosperity, and, consequently, a considerable traffic in smuggling aliens into the United States.

SAYS FARM LAND IS TOO HIGH

A Tennessee banker, speaking recently in North Carolina, said that it is time to discourage the "spiraling of farm land prices," asserting that in a number of states the prices are "now well over their high averages of 1920."

The banker, C. W. Bailey, said that taking 1921-14 as normal, farm lands, all over the nation, are over 140 and warns that "indebtedness incurred now in the purchase of additional land could become very oppressive in future years."

This is a timely warning. It should not be necessary in Fulton county, where many prosperous farmers lost their land after the first World War through the process of buying too much additional high-priced land.

BE PREPARED FOR WAR

There may be differences of opinion among the people of this country as to the advisability of a single defense force, or as to the credit to be given the various services in connection with victory in Europe and Japan, but there should be no present hesitation in insisting that the country be prepared for anything that might happen in the future.

General Jacob L. Revers, Commander of the Army Ground Forces, points out that the forces of lust and greed have lost two wars because the United States was given time to gather strength. In both wars, aggressive attacks failed because we had allies able to withstand the onslaught until we got ready. General Revers warns, however, that "we will not have that advantage in any future war."

This is the opinion of the officer, but there is no certainty that he is right. Neither is there certainty that he is wrong. Consequently, it behooves the people of this country to demand a state of preparedness that will take care of this country, whether the United Nations manage to prevent future warfare or not.

While we do not subscribe to the general phobia that Russia is an inevitable enemy of this country and that war will occur, there is nothing wrong with taking note of the continued existence of a huge Red Army and the open efforts of the Soviet regime to inculcate into the Russian people the idea that the Red Army is a bulwark to protect them from international enemies.

WILL PRICES GO UP?

There is hardly any way to tell how the new price control legislation will work out but unless it manages to wipe out some of the increases that have occurred in basic raw materials the price of living will soon reflect an upward jump.

It is natural for every seller to believe that the higher price he can get for his product the bigger his profit will be. Subject to adjustments that inevitably follow, the statement is partially correct. Nevertheless, sellers are also buyers and the increases that occur generally will equalize the temporary gain and, in the end, nobody will be better off but the price level will be higher.

COST RECORDS ON SHIPS

While we are of the opinion that the construction of ships in this country, during the war, should be thoroughly investigated, we take the opportunity to correct an impression erroneously created by earlier press reports.

W. L. Slattery, construction finance director, was quoted as saying that the Maritime Commission had lost its records in regard to the construction of more than $900,000,000 worth of ships and that purchases could not be allocated. However, he makes it plain that he was referring to book-keeping records and that resident auditors, in the various shipyards had control of their records and that the cost of the ships built will be shown in a forthcoming report.

In connection with the charges of "waste and extravagance" that arise in connection with the tremendous production of war materiel, one should remember that the urgent need for haste justified expenditures that, in normal times, would have been absurd. After all, the nation was trying to build "ships faster than they were being sunk" and costs were, of necessity, of secondary importance.

OVERLOOKING IMPORTANT MARKET

It is well known that manufacturers of products sold on a national scale have directed the major part of their selling efforts toward large city markets.

We have often wondered why these sellers organize their advertising campaigns almost exclusively in large cities. Very often they use every daily newspaper in a large city, thus inevitably duplicating their sales effort, without taking into consideration the vast market that offers profits in the small towns and cities throughout the nation.

The importance of this market is emphasized by Arth L. Thiele, who says that a survey sponsored by Partfinder Magazine, revealed that towns of less than 5,000 population, representing only ten per cent of the country's total, do twenty-three per cent of the nation's business.

Mr. Thiele points out that sixty-per cent of the population of this country lives in cities under 25,000 and on farms. He says that forty per cent of the $42,000,000,000 worth of retail sales in 1930 came from towns under this size.

McCRACKEN FARMER BUILDS GOOD SOIL

How Alloy Poat, a farmer of the St. Johns community in McCracken county, made good land from what was a poor farm 31 years ago, is told by E. J. Kilpatrick of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. Mr. Poat started improving his soil when Kilpatrick served as the first county agent in the county. All of his farm has been treated with lime and phosphate and much of it terraced.

"Poat produced 90 bushels of corn to the acre last year on a field from which 20 bushels to the acre would have been a high yield when he moved on the farm," said Kilpatrick, adding that through the use of lime, phosphate, clover and manure, Poat has increased the fertility of the soil. He also has alfalfa and red, sweet and ladino clover growing on his farm.

Poat, who raised a family of six children, has paid for his 80-acre farm, has a herd of Shorthorn cattle and has bought several thousand dollars worth of war bonds.

KEEP ATOMIC SECRET UNTIL—

Declaring that the offer of the United States to give up the atomic bomb, a new and tremendously powerful weapon, is "an act unparalleled in history," Dr. Herbert V. Evatt, Australian Minister of External Affairs, says that insistence by this country of a control system is justified, not only by the interests of the United States itself, but of all peace-loving nations.

We call attention to this observation of the outstanding statesman of Australia because there is a tendency on the part of some scientists to say no peace will last unless the United States immediately releases the full secrets of the atomic bomb. To give away this secret, without establishing beforehand a control system, would be an act of stupidity.

Until the nations of the world are willing to get together and formulate an effective control system, adequate to guarantee the safety of all nations, the United States is completely justified in retaining as long as it can, the secret of the atomic bomb.

TEACHERS AND NURSES

Two professions that should be well paid for their services and which have been underpaid in sections of this country in the past are teaching and nursing. With a rising cost of living underway and salaried workers bearing the worst of its effects, these two professions should be considered.

Probably the educational profession has received more favorable publicity recently. In many states teachers' salaries are being raised and their profession lauded by responsible officials. But too many hospitals remain understaffed and are suffering from a lack of candidates in nursing schools.

Teachers mold the lives of future generations but nurse save those of today—and a poor or over-worked hospital staff is a serious defect in its community. It becomes even more serious when we have an emergency in the family.

Something is wrong with a wage scale allowing taxi drivers to make more than deans of Universities. Something is wrong when unskilled labor makes more money than skilled nurses and teachers. And with inflation possible, and rising costs of living an actuality, both professions need a helping hand from the average citizen of this country.

Even the worker who reaped war profits or those who are making more in a week today than they did in a month formerly, must understand that their children deserve the best opportunity. The best includes an efficient and widespread medical profession. It also includes good teachers and better schools for a generation which is starting out in what we hope will be a peaceful era.

To induce competence in these professions, there must be an adequate living in them. Respect, pride and a good salary should go along with the work. To get these virtues, more money will be needed in the future. Money spent for such purposes should be considered a sound investment.

NEW SUBSIDY PROPOSED

The synthetic rubber industry built to supply war needs apparently needs a fat subsidy from the government if it is to continue operations. This is the conclusion that follows the suggestion of a federal committee that government subsidies and compulsory use of synthetic are the best way to preserve the industry for national defense.

The possibility that the industry may sustain itself without subsidies is admitted but this is uncertain. There seems to be a strong drive for support to private industry to operate the war plants which, it is suggested, should be sold by the government as soon as high enough bids are received for them.

The rubber subsidy, we suppose, could take several forms. A high tariff on the import of natural rubber would be the indirect way. The payment of so much a pound for the use of synthetic, plus some compulsory regulations requiring its use, would be another. A third would be the sale of government-owned plants at much less than cost.

We do not pretend to know whether the nation can depend upon natural rubber for its future war needs or whether production in the rubber areas will be sufficient to permit the government to buy and store a huge surplus. If, however, the government must have the core of a synthetic industry our own suggestion is that the government operate some of its synthetic plants, storing the product for future use. This might prove to be the cheapest plan.

Prompt, Proper Cooling Preserves Quality Vital to High Grade Milk

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau

Top quality in milk, the preservation of which is as important as its initial achievement, depends upon milk being properly and promptly cooled shortly after milking has made most farmers have turned from ice and water to electricity as a more economical, time and labor saving method for solving their milk cooling problem. Electric milk coolers are of two general types—"wet" and "dry." The first type employs electrically chilled water, automatically her contribution to the nation's food welfare.

The advantages of healthy herds, the use of clean, sterilized dairy utensils and sound farm management practices, can slip out of a farmer's grasp as easily as a greased pig at the county fair, unless milk is cooled below 50 degrees within approximately an hour and a half after milking time.

Milk is cooled on farms in one of three ways: by water, ice or mechanical refrigeration. Just as storm cellars cannot function adequately as storage places for perishable farm produce, so water alone cannot perform the job expected of it in cooling milk to a point where bacteria growth is halted. The addition of ice to water, often proves too costly even when a sufficient supply is available. Tests show that from 75 to 175 pounds of ice are needed to cool and store 40 gallons of milk per day in summer weather, bringing the cost of cooling, in some instances, to as much as $40 per month.

Faced with uncertain results on one hand and high costs on the other, kept at the proper cooling temperature by thermostatic control. The "dry" cooler requires an aseptically cooled milk, which is then stored in a refrigerated compartment. Often the refrigerated compartment is large enough to be of the "walk-in" variety, suitable for the cold storage of meat, poultry, eggs, fruit and vegetables, in addition to milk.

In immersion coolers, milk cans are placed in insulated tanks, filled to the proper depth with "refrigerated" water. A number of coolers of this type are equipped with agitators, which circulate the water, thus providing more rapid transfer of heat from the milk. In aerator coolers, milk passes over a corrugated, metal shield, which is cooled by a constant flow of temperature-controlled water, kept in motion by electricity.

The operating cost of electrical milk coolers averages about 1 kilowatt hour of power per 40 quarts. One mid-western farmer figures he spends $1.71 per month for electricity to cool 193 cans of milk in his 6-can immersion cooler.

A New Era in Railroading

Picture shows one of the new GM Diesel locomotives placed in operation by the Atlantic & East Carolina Railway, which thereby becomes the first American short line railroad to use mainline Diesel locomotives. Three Diesels will replace seven steam locomotives of ancient vintage.

NEW BERN, N. C.—A new era in railroading became a reality here when the Atlantic & East Carolina Railway, only 94 miles in length, became the first American short line railroad to use mainline Diesel locomotives.

Railroad executives attending inaugural ceremonies both here and at Morehead City, the other terminus of the railway, predicted the ultimate extension of main line Diesel operation to scores of other American short line railroads throughout the country.

They pointed out that hundreds of small farming and manufacturing communities would be benefited and made to prosper, because cheaper operating costs with Diesel power would enable many short line railroads to better their services to shippers and passengers and show profits instead of losses.

The two 1,350 horsepower mainline General Motors Diesel locomotives placed in service plus another 1,000 h.p. GM mainline locomotive to be delivered later in the year, will completely Dieselize the freight and passenger operations of the Atlantic & East Carolina Railway, and will replace seven steam locomotives of ancient vintage. The new Diesels are versatile enough to handle trains in regular service and also do all necessary switching at terminals and at stops en route. Additional passenger coaches will soon augment the new motive power equipment.

Inauguration of the new Atlantic & East Carolina Diesel service began here with the acceptance of the new locomotives by H. P. Edwards, Chairman of the Board and directing head of the railroad which is owned by the State of North Carolina and leased to the operating company.

Before leaving for an initial run both locomotives were christened with champagne and later were placed on exhibition both here and at other cities along the line.

Guests invited on the premiere trip included Governor E. Gregg Cherry of North Carolina; J. H. Hood, president of the American Short Line Railroad Association, mayors of cities along the railroad, officials of the Electro-Motive Division of General Motors, which built the locomotives; and newspapermen, members of the legislature shippers and railroad officials.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

When meat is scarce and is too high in price for thrifty buyers, the family can still be supplied with proteins through the plentiful use of cheese, milk and egg dishes, according to Miss Florence Imlay, nutrition specialist at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Tomatoes with Cottage Cheese

6 large tomatoes

1/2 cup diced cucumber
3 tablespoons chopped onion
3/4 teaspoon salt
6 rings green pepper

Cream dressing
Peel chilled tomatoes, then make a fan wheel by cutting each one in six or eight sections to it holds together. Fill center with a mound of cottage cheese mixed with cucumber, onion and salt. Top with green pepper ring. Arrange on bed of shredded cabbage mixed with cream dressing.

Sour Cream Dressing: Add slowly 4 tablespoons of lemon juice or vinegar to 1-2 cup sour cream, beating constantly. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon celery seed and 1 tablespoon sugar. Add to cabbage and toss lightly to mix thoroughly.

Menu: Stuffed tomatoes with cottage cheese, butter beans, corn on the cob, Swiss chard, corn muffins, butter and frozen custard with sliced peaches.

VEGA TURNS ON THE LIGHT

In Cleveland, Ohio, a thirty-four-inch incandescent light bulb, of 160,000 candle power was lighted recently by a ray that came from the star Vega, 176 trillion miles from the earth.

Just how the scientific experts managed to pick up the light ray from Vega and transmit it through a photo-electric cell through telephone wires and then to the hugh globe is something that we do not understand. For that matter, who knows exactly how the scientists ascertained that Vega is twenty-years from the earth or that it is several times brighter than the sun?

While we cannot explain the technical details by which the scientist manages to discover the secrets of the tremendous universe, of which this earth is such an infinitesimal fragment, there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of their information. By study, by test and by experiment, the scientist reveals the full truth of nature and nothing is to be gained by deriding the truth, even if it shatters some of our prejudices.

The work of the scientists is not understood by many American but, then, for that matter, the work of some average American citizen is not understood by many scientists. An expert astronomer, for example, might have difficulty in cultivating a field and producing a crop, but he is too smart to dispute the fact that farmers have the know-how and that harvests inevitably follow proper method is and proper conditions.

READING PROVOKES THINKING

Among the 1946 resolutions that you probably forgot to make ought to have been one that you would read a sensible book, on a sensible subject, at least every month.

When a man or woman takes a year to write a book on any subject, those interested in the topic ought to be able to stand the work for several hours, without brainfag.

There are entirely too many people in Fulton county who take it for granted that they can learn everything that is worth knowing from current comment related to gossiping friends.

Thinking is what makes men amount to something. The more the people of a community think the better and the more prosperous that community is. You needn't ask us to prove that statement. We haven't the time and doubt if we have the brains, but it is the truth just the same.

THE "FLEET" AT TRIESTE

The strength of the U. S. Navy in the Mediterranean is two cruisers and two destroyers, but we believe that the "fleet" has been concentrated at Trieste.

The rivalry of Yugoslavia and Italy over this port has resulted in an international tug-of-war that carries certain dangerous possibilities. The fact that Russia has backed the claim of Yugoslavia makes the problem more serious. Undoubtedly, the Yugoslavian forces in the area far outnumber those of the United States, and Great Britain, which, it seems to us, make an explosive situation.

The fact that the United States has dispatched cruisers into the harbor of Trieste is what the diplomats would call a "demonstration of strength." It tends to emphasize the interest of this country in the peaceable settlement of the Trieste question but, in our opinion, the nation should immediately dispatch additional warships into the Mediterranean in order to let Russia know very clearly that we are interested in any attempt to settle war questions in that area by force.

STATE FINANCES IMPROVE

While the Federal government has been piling up a huge debt, the financial condition of State has improved until State finances generally are in better shape than they have been in for many years.

Overall State debt has been reduced more than 25 per cent. State and local governments have accumulated an undivided, mostly in government bonds, more than $5,000,000,000 in surplus funds.

Unemployment compensation reserves by the end of the war totaled more than $6,000,000,000.

The improvement of state finances, however, affords only minor relief for taxpayers compared with the overshadowing size of the Federal debt and prospect Federal tax rates will be maintained at high levels in an effort to balance the national budget.

TAXES TAKE LARGEST SLICE OF TOP SALARIES

Uncle Sam is getting by far the largest cut out of those top corporate salaries the Treasury has brought back into the news.

Commenting on Treasury reports of salaries and bonuses ranging upwards of $75,000 annually, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States notes:

The Federal tax collector takes about $64,000 out of a $100,000 net income. Surtaxes rise steadily until the Treasury gets about 85.5 per cent of a $1,000,000 income.

The man in the $100,000 bracket whose incomes doubles to $200,000 has only about $15,000 left out of his "raise" after the Federal tax.

"A company has found," says the Chamber, "that it has to pay one of its executives a $300,000 salary in order that he might net about $60,000 after paying Uncle Sam $240,000. And he has other taxes to pay in addition to the Federal income levy!"

BUDGET BALANCE IN DOUBT

A balanced Federal budget for the current fiscal year, which began July 1, is the nation's biggest financial question.

Weighing government estimates against business trends and congressional appropriations, fiscal experts say a balanced budget for the 1946-47 bookkeeping year may or may not be achieved, depending on whether Treasury receipts are greater than now expected.

Budget estimates pointing to a balance in the current year, after more than a decade of record-breaking deficits, have been upset by appropriations greater than anticipated early in 1946. Meanwhile receipts also have held up better than expected and further gains in revenue may result from business improvement.

Economists are watching the budget with particular interest now because a balanced Federal budget is regarded as one of the most effective means of checking the inflationary trend in prices.

TIDBITS

Since I have taught in college for more than thirty years, I do not need to be told that the bringing together of boys and girls under the same roofs day by day will cause permanent interest to develop. In fact, I hold it as one of the joys of my profession that I can see, year after year, the acting out of "love's old seew song," or whatever poetic name you may give to the perennial romance of boy meets girl. Some of my friends accuse me, probably with some degree of truth, of being a born match-maker in my college. What do you expect of a teacher of normal, healthy young people it not an interest in their future? And isn't love a very big part of their future, or anybody's?

You see, I early got interested in school sweethearts. Fidelity was, as I have often said, just a small slice of the whole big world. That means that there were boys, usually huddled together on one side of the schoolhouse over in the woods, and girls, not too far away on the other side. In spite of dire punishments promised and sometimes carried out, rudimentary love-making went on, right under the teacher's nose. I hate to think that the teacher was as dumb as we thought her to be, for I would accuse myself along with the teachers I have had. After all, what is a teacher to do, anyway. If every look in the direction of the girls' side of the house had met instant and cruel punishment, only about one day would have sufficed to kill off all the prospective men and women of Fidelity. Very flagrant violations of the rigid code of the school met punishment that ranged from dawn-dimmed cruelty to sheer fun. Sometime the teacher actually whipped a boy for writing a note; sometimes the culprit was made to read his poetic and romantic effusion to the whole school; sometimes, and I had my doubts about the propriety of this, the teacher made the boy sit by the girl to whom he was writing such sugary notes. I do not recall having ever seen any boy sickened and die from this punishment; sometimes I believed that he had planned the punishment long in advance, probably aided by the little girl. But not all notes were intercepted. Some got across by subtle help from disinterested parties and were received with outward gravity but inward exultation. This not, at Fidelity, promptly found its way into a crack in the wall, between the ceiling and the weatherboarding. It was a generation's accumulation of these successful notes that were finally revealed to the world when the old building was wrecked, and cheap-paper tablets of the long ago could have been assembled from the trash that strewn the old school grounds for weeks. Probably a few of these precious ones may have found lodgment in collections at home, in one's very own box or drawer or tin box. And no amount of watchfulness on the part of the teacher ever stopped the steady stream of underground correspondence.

On the playground and on the way to and from school the youthful love-making went on, even though it may have changed often from one girl to another. He would tote her books and dinner basket or bucket, that is, unless the bigger and more hardened boys made too much fun. Sometimes he would have to thrash a rival or two, but that was only the basic savagery that crops up as much in civilization as in the jungle or in Fidelity. Even after risking one's live for the charmer, she might prove fickle and let some other boy carry her books. And then, after a few days of sulking like a Homeric hero, eyes opened again and saw other feminine charms that formerly lay hidden. And the world wagged on, with probably a dozen or two remances in the five months of the free school, with several more at Sunday school and at picnics. And to complete the story, there has been no appreciable change since then, for college is quite like Fidelity.

THE VOTERS RESPONSIBILITY

The best assurance Americans can have of a democratic and efficient form of government—local, state and national—is that brought about by intelligent citizens who take pride in the right of the ballot and who select the candidate who represents their views.

That good government is a benefit resulting proportionally with the amount of intelligent voting has been proved. Too many officials are elected by voters who fail to take time to learn anything about the issues.

Too many voters can be swayed by one strong sentence from the tongue of a political henchman. Too many can be swayed by various other means. A voter who has kept himself informed and knows the records of past years will have opinions, and will vote his conviction on election day.

However, thousands tramp to the polls never knowing the issues, never knowing the candidate's platform or his past record. Eliminate that element of voters and many politicians would find it harder to fool most of the people, even some of the time.

The best method to correct the problem of the uninformed voter is to convince that voter he is failing, in his civic responsibility as an American. The best weapon to convince him with is the newspaper. He should understand that intelligent voting is the yardstick of American achievement. He should be given a free, unbiased press to read. He should read from both sides of every issue. To get both sides he must have access to impartial news stories and reports.

Editorials should remain opinion. That in itself is freedom. But the remainder of the newspaper should be a truthful description of events, and opinion has no place in news reporting. If that much is done; that will be half. The voters must learn to read that kind of newspaper, and that will be the other half.

You do not have to compliment everybody but you can afford, in all truth and sincerity, to pass deserved compliments to those who are entitled to praise.

THIRTY YEARS OF WAR AND PEACE

On August 1st, thirty-two years ago, the Kaiser started his legions marching to begin the First World War which finally engulfed the United States.

We were woefully unprepared for the conflict that we entered but, thanks to Allied nations, which had been fighting the foe for nearly three years, we managed to get the necessary equipment and American soldiers, under Gen. John J. Pershing, made known to the world that Americans could fight.

After the close of the struggle the United States, together with Great Britain and France, succumbed to the dangerous delusion that war would be no more. We put into effect a disarmament program that heavily penalized the victorious nations that had no restrictive effect upon former enemy nations or upon Japan.

While the people of the democracies lulled themselves to sleep in a delirious dream of pacifism, believing that they were safely ensconced behind a non-belligerent nationalism, the enemies of mankind, under the leadership of dictators, plotted to conquer the earth, enslave free peoples and master all mankind.

Once more, when the great storm broke in 1939, we were inadequately prepared for warfare. In fact up to the very eve of the attack upon Pearl Harbor, and the resulting declarations of war against us that issued from Berlin and Rome, we were ill-prepared to defend our own soil from modern attacks.

Let us not make the same mistake a second time, now that something like peace exists. Let this nation resolutely resolve to turn a deaf ear to selfish nationalism and to improve pacifism. Let us keep armed forces strong enough for any possible task because in preparedness there is security, if there is no guarantee of peace.
