We extend our sincere congratulations to the Fulton Chamber of Commerce in placing ten Pure Bred Jersey Bulls on farms in this section to improve dairy breeds. There is another step forward that should be made. What is needed, Black Angus and Durham are fine bee type and bring higher prices on the market.

The Fulton County Fair offers to Farmers of this Territory an Opportunity in Exhibits and Premiums as parers of finest meats we endorse such noble efforts.

THE DIVORCE COURT MURDER
by Milton Propper

In 1918, 11-year-old Sally Lanard was found murdered in a brothel in Kentucky. The victim, a runaway girl, had been living with her stepfather, a former soldier who had been discharged from the army due to a mental illness. The stepfather was arrested and charged with the murder, but the case took years to resolve.

Meanwhile, another young woman, Mary Ann, had been found strangled in an alley. The police, believing the two deaths were connected, placed the two cases under the same investigator. The investigator, a young officer named Willard, took the case personally and vowed to find the killer.

The investigator began his investigation by interviewing the victims' families and friends. He quickly learned that both girls had been involved with a notorious gang of women, and that they had been forced into prostitution against their will. The gang, led by a woman named Rowland, operated out of a ramshackle house on the outskirts of town.

The investigator also discovered that the stepfather, Mr. Lanard, had been involved with the gang. He had been paying them to keep his daughter safe, but when she was found murdered, he stopped paying.

The investigator began to suspect that the stepfather had killed his daughter in a fit of rage, but he needed concrete evidence. He decided to place an undercover officer inside the brothel to gather information.

The undercover officer, a young man named Rankin, was sent to the brothel. He quickly learned that the gang was involved in a number of illegal activities, including drug trafficking and prostitution.

The investigator also learned that the stepfather was involved in the gang's operations. He had been using his position as a police officer to protect the gang from the law.

The investigator confronted the stepfather and demanded an explanation. The stepfather denied any involvement and tried to discredit the investigator's claims. But the investigator had evidence to back up his claims and was able to arrest the stepfather.

The stepfather was tried and convicted of murder. He was sentenced to life in prison, but his sentence was later reduced to 20 years. The gang was also disbanded and the victims' families were provided with compensation.

The investigator, now a respected police officer, went on to solve many more cases and was known throughout the county as the "Divorce Court Murderer." His work helped to bring about a new era of policing and justice in the county.

FEDERAL TESTS WINE

In the federal cases there are but few tests of wines. The Department of the Interior, which controls the sale of wines, has no means of approving wines that are not shipped in containers. The laws require that wines be properly marked and labeled.

Who Foots the Tax Bill?

In a letter addressed to the editor of this newspaper by Mrs. Lillian F. Prager, she states that there is a lot of talk among the political leaders of Chicago in an effort to get what they consider an unfair tax on the state of Illinois, which hinders the growth of the state economy.
