Man Struck By Car

Fred Timmons, 45 year old citizen of Mayfield, is suffering serious injuries in the Fuller-Gilliam hospital, having been struck by an automobile driven by H. P. Allen of Fulton, early Sunday night while walking along the highway near the Fulton city limits on the Mayfield highway.

Mr. and Mrs. Timmons and Mr. and Mrs. Holmes Clark were going to their homes in Mayfield when a punctured tire brought them to a stop. Timmons had walked to a nearby service station and was on his way back to the car when he was struck. He was taken to the Fulton Hospital where he was closely examined by Dr. Horace Luten, finding the man suffering from a fractured skull and broken leg. He received many other bruises about the body. Dr. Luten said that Timmons may lose his leg as the result of the accident. Later Sunday night Timmons was removed to the Fuller-Gilliam hospital in Mayfield.

'OUR NEXT PRESIDENT' STRAW VOTE GATHERS MOMENTUM IN FULTON

Months earlier than ever before in this generation, our national pre-convention political pot is boiling.

Even though the national conventions of the major political parties are still some nine or ten months away, citizens of the United States—north, south, east and west—are giving attention to the political outlook for 1936 when presidential candidates will be nominated, party platforms drawn and what promises to be, intensive campaigns waged.

Who those candidates will be and what kind of platform of government they will stand upon is the subject already tantalizing the minds of voters of all political faiths and beliefs. Such discussions are heard at every hand with preferences in candidates and opinions

FULTON FAIR DRAWS CROWD THIS WEEK

The Fulton County Fair started here Wednesday for four days. In addition to agricultural exhibits, night horse shows and turtle races provided a variety program. AMERICAN LEGION

Activity by the local American Legion Post has been at a high pitch in recent months. This post has just completed construction of a new addition to the Legion Cabin, where a kitchen and equipment will be installed. Since the inauguration of free hospital service for those unable to pay, the Legion charity fund has made it possible for many patients to receive hospital treatment.

With the new improvements at the Legion Cabin it is now an ideal meeting hall, and organizations that have no place of assembly may rent the use of the Cabin, it is stated.

Mrs. S. E. Bushart has returned from several days visit with her son, E. S. Bushart, in St. Louis.

POLICE ACTIVE HERE THIS WEEK

The service station of Mrs. Frank Hendon in Riceville was broken into Tuesday night, with some cigarettes, candies and other small items of merchandise and money were stolen. No clue has been uncovered as to who committed the robbery.

Officers here picked up James Hobbs, Paducah youth, who had taken an automobile from the Anderson Motor Company of Paducah. He was driving the car, a 1934 Chevrolet, when apprehended here Thursday morning. Kelly Franklin chief of Paducah detectives and Officer Bryant, came for the youth and the car, and returned them to Paducah.

Officers, investigating the robbery to the Griffin & Walker grocery on West State Line-st., arrested Edward Fall and a Hawks boy, both Fulton youths, after some of the loot had been recovered from where it was hidden under some outbuildings at the home of Hawks boy. Considerable merchandise was taken from the grocery, after entrance had been gained by breaking a window at the side of the store building. Both boys are said to have admitted breaking into the store when questioned by the officers.

Four youths were picked up Thursday morning by local officers on suspicion, and following questioning by police, evidence revealed that a lunch stand had been broken into by the boys at Jack, son, Tenn. Names of youths were: Robert Nevins, 20, of San Francisco Calif.; James Joseph Stevens, 20, of West Brook, Conn.; Joe Mazako, 20, of Ziegler, Ill., and Jack Smith, 19, of Lexington, Tenn. The boys were held pending investigation and checking with the Jackson police department.

BULLDOGS DEFEAT HORNBEAK HERE

The Fulton High School Bulldogs opened the 1935 season here last Friday night, playing against the Hornbeak Greaves. Fulton scored in all but the second period to give the visitors a facing to the tune of 13 to 0 behind the superb playing of Roy Edwards, Fulton's star half-back and also last year's all-conference selection.

Fulton opened the scoring in the first seven minutes of play with a 35 yard march, picking up from two to twenty yards on each play. Scott plunged for the first tally. In the third period, Edwards, in a dazzling plunge through right tackle went over for the second touchdown. Then in the final minute of play Weather skirted over for the last marker to bring the score to 13-0.

The Bulldogs made a total of 13 first downs to 3 for Hornbeak. They were penalized 40 yards while Hornbeak only received 10 yards in penalties.

Old Brick Dated 1780

Is Found Near Fulton

An old clay brick from the chimney of an old colonial farm home, originally the old Buck Thomas place, on the Enon Road—one mile and a half north of Fulton, was found this week by Jake Roberts, local carpenter-contractor. The brick bears an inscription on it reading, "1780" and is believed to have been made that year. The house, composed of two rooms, with a hall running between, in typical colonial style, was recently torn down to make room for a new residence. The brick is believed by old-timers to have been baked by one of the early settlers in West Kentucky in 1780, when families came to this section after George Rogers Clark made his expedition in this territory and established old Fort Jefferson that year on the Mississippi, between the present sites of Columbus and Wickliffe.

Mills Point, Ky., now Hickman, was first settled in 1819 and Columbus a few years earlier to be made the county seat of old Hickman county (comprising all counties now west of the Tennessee river in Kentucky) in 1821, were among the earliest settlements. A land office was established at old Wadesboro a few years prior to that time, where land grants were made to those coming into West Kentucky to establish homes.

The Walnut-st railroad crossing near the old light plant is being repaired, similar to the other two crossings at Walnut and Lake-sts. and Main and Lake-sts. Traffic is being detoured around this crossing into East Fulton via the viaduct and the State Line-st crossing.

LUXURY OR NECESSITY

—WHICH IS IT?

When pork is sixty cents a pound the housewife hesitates, and asks: "Can I afford such a luxury?" Perhaps if she understood the ramifications of killing little pigs, the control of production and the artificial boosting of prices, she would improve her understanding of the politics of economics. Pork is still a necessity despite the fact that twenty to twenty-five cents is found tucked away in the price of a pound.

It really should be blocked off like a checkboard with truthful labels such as "government extravagance" and "taxation." The other ten or twelve ounces could then be labeled, "oh, you pig!"

When is a luxury a necessity—and when is a necessity a luxury? That might be called an anagram, a contradiction, or a corker. But it is none of these, as we shall see.

You are sometimes told that you don't have to have gasoline, but you can't follow your natural processes of making a living, and living according to your natural processes, without gasoline. So, it must be that it's a necessity. Whyfore then does the tax collector get from twenty to forty per cent of the dollar that you pay at the service station—depending upon what State you are in? Is it a hangover from the days when folks bought coal oil and kerosene at the corner grocery and went to the drug store for the refined product of gasoline and kerosene? Are legislators still drug-store minded? By way of apology for the dumbness the officials decided that all gas tax money must be used to build highways, but the same officials proved the old saying that hell is paved with good intentions by converting the tax money into the general funds—to buy coal, pay salaries, etc. So why soak the motorist for every mile he rides—he needs a car! He pays a big tax on it, too, when he buys it—and that's where soaking the automobile and the motorist should end. If an automobile is not a necessity, then brooms and wheelbarrows are luxuries for the poor.

COTTON PRICE ADJUSTMENT TO BE PAID PRODUCERS OF COTTON BY GOVERNMENT

The purpose of this article is to explain to farmers that are raising cotton how they may obtain the price adjustment payment on their cotton or as is commonly called the two cent payment to make the cotton bring twelve cents. However, the government IS NOT guaranteeing the producer to receive twelve cents but is promising to pay the difference between the average price that cotton is selling for and 12 cents on the day that the producer sells his cotton but not more than two (2) cents per pound will be paid. For example, the average price for white middling 7-8 inch cotton in the ten spot markets on Sept. 10th was 10.60 cents per pound. If the producer sold on that day, the government will pay him a difference of 1.40 cents per pound regardless of the price the producer received for his cotton. Producers will be paid this payment on all of the cotton produced in 1935 or on the number of pounds that they received. Barkhead certificates for WHICH EVER IS THE SMALLER, provided the producer agrees to sign a reduction contract for 1936. Non-signers may make application for this payment up to the 1935 Bankhead allotment, but such payments cannot be made until this producer signs a reduction contract for 1936 and compliance is checked in 1936 and shows that this man has not violated his contract by planting more cotton than he is permitted.

Applications for price adjustment payments are to be made in the County Agent's office.

When a producer sells a bale of cotton he must get a receipt from the buyer showing the date of the sale, amount sold, seller's name and buyer's name, these receipts are then to be delivered to the county agent's office in the county where the Bankhead application was made and an application will be made for the price adjustment payment. This payment will be made at three different times, about Dec. 15, 1935 and another about March 15, 1936 and the final payment about August 15, 1936.

In summary, if the producer will bring in receipts of sales showing the information that is requested in this article when enough cotton that was raised in 1935 to use up the Bankhead allotment or has sold enough that he wishes to make application for payment the producer will be assisted in preparing the proper forms.

VOX POP

Under this column appear comments by our readers, and do not necessarily express the opinion of the editor.

A party overheard a conversation in the street Sunday. One was trying to find some Sunday School teachers for the Mission when someone said, "What do you have up there?" The answer was, "We have from 35 to 100 in Sunday School and one class has 26 young people between the ages 16 to 25. There are 30 children in the infant's choir, age 1 to 10. The Bible Class has from 12 to 15 every Sunday. Then there are two other classes that need teachers." And the critic says, "You have no Christians up there, do you?" The other remarked, "Not many left when they organized the Nazarene church most of the Christians joined that denomination. So Mrs. McFerrin got out and worked up a new Sunday School with 127 enrolled. And on an average 75 attend every Sunday."

Some folks who don't know think The Mission has gone down. It has never ceased to grow. So if you don't know anything about The Mission, it would do more good to make a donation and see the good it is doing and quit criticizing.

—A FRIEND OF THE MISSION

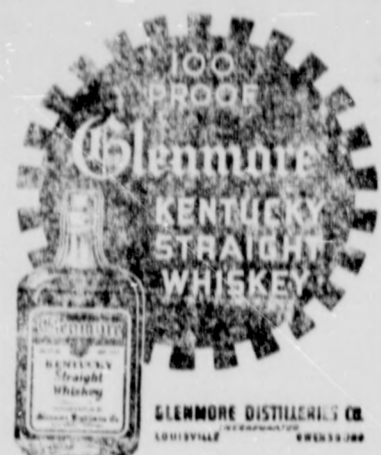

Every preacher, lawyer and doctor in Fulton should make at least one visit to The Mission. For there are big church workers in Fulton who know nothing about The Mission and the work it is doing. Some think it is just a little meeting for the children that can't go any other place—it is, but more. You'd be surprised to see in the Mission from 75 to 100 poor little tots of all sizes, boys and girls, with men and women in the Bible Class—and to think Fulton has this big institution without any support from city churches or clubs.

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD
Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive
Medicine, University of Illinois,
College of Medicine.

WHEN HOUSEHOLD PETS BE- COME PESTS

Man's fondness for pets is sometimes detrimental to his health. Rabies or hydrophobia is a disease communicated to man by the bite of a dog.

Rabies would be rare if man did not tame a member of the wolf family and keep it constantly at his side. Paratuberculosis, or parrot fever, transmitted from a sick parrot to man, is another example of a disease which can be fatal to its master or mistress. But unlike the mad dog, the sick parrot is not aggressive and hence is not so dangerous.

A disease of parrots in which the birds are in a stupor, are weak and have diarrhea is an old observation, but the first recognized instance of this disease being transmitted to man was in Europe.

Professor Nocard of Paris about 1879 found that this disease in parrots was caused by a germ very similar to the germs which cause diarrhea in man. This germ belongs to a family of bacteria which is widespread in nature and causes diarrhea in many animals.

Parrot fever was little known in the United States until the fall of 1929, when several cases appeared along the Atlantic seaboard. The cases grew into a mild epidemic and appeared in 45 different places throughout the country. In all, there were 169 cases reported, of which 33 resulted fatally. The infections were definitely associated with direct contact with birds that had been imported into New York during November and December of 1929, and then shipped to other places.

The time elapsing between contact with the sick parrot and the onset of the disease is given as six to fifteen days. The disease in man runs a course similar to influenza or typhoid fever. Sometimes the disease processes are mainly in the chest as in influenza and sometimes they are in the abdomen and resemble typhoid fever. Of the 169 cases reported 107 were females and 62 were males. This was probably because more women than men take care of birds. The older the individual the more serious is parrot fever. Most of the deaths occurred among persons over forty.

January 24, 1930, an embargo was placed against the importation of parrots. October 21, 1930, this was modified to allow the importation of parrots if they were quarantined for 15 days at the port of entry. In February, 1932, this quarantine period was extended to all birds of the parrot family.

During the year 1931, twelve cases of parrot fever were reported from New York and 45 cases from the Pacific coast states. There were 13 deaths among these 55 cases. Most of these infections were contracted from sick parakeets and love birds. Raising parakeets is an industry in several places along the Pacific coast. Investigations showed that many of these parakeet aviaries were infected with psittacosis. Another very important discovery was made and that is that healthy birds can carry with them the causative agent of parrot fever.

We do not know of any specific vaccine or antiserum with which to treat successfully the human patient suffering from parrot fever. Several bacteriologists who have worked upon parrot fever have become infected, and there have been a few deaths. A very good friend of mine, Doctor Stokes of the Baltimore health department, died of this disease while doing research work during the 1929-1930 epidemic.

Since this disease cannot be controlled by the relatively simple method of embargo and quarantine at the ports of entry, it becomes a menace to persons who desire members of the parrot family for pets. Doctor Hasseltine of the United States health service has made several suggestions as to the control of birds that can infect man with parrot fever. He thinks the local health authorities should have records of the person or firm engaged in breeding, buying and selling birds of the parrot family. These firms should keep records as to their source of supply and the list and addresses of purchasers. The sanitation of aviaries and pet shops should be inspected by the local authorities so as to insure proper housing conditions, to prevent overcrowding of birds, and to see that cleanliness of the premises is carried out.

The disease is more prevalent in birds during cold weather, and recently acquired birds are more dangerous than birds that have been in the family for some time. The practice of allowing birds to feed from the hands is extremely dangerous.

Any sickness in birds of the parrot family in the home should be regarded with suspicion. The cages should be kept clean and the cleaning done out-of-doors to prevent the dust flying about the room. The cages should be left in the sunlight until the moisture has dried. Until we know more about parrot fever it is best to isolate the human cases of this disease and to carry out the ordinary measures of bedside nursing that are pursued in all infectious diseases.

SUCH IS LIFE—No Mourners

By Charles Sughrue

Gains in Highway Safety Are Noted

Many States Have Adopted Constructive Measures.

Washington.—Sweeping efforts by the state legislatures to curb motor fatalities through enactment of approved legislation was reported in a survey made public by the American Automobile association.

"Scores of constructive safety measures enacted should prove of material help in what must be a continuing drive to improve the safety record of the country as a whole," Thomas P. Henry, of Detroit, Mich., president of the national motoring body, declared.

Among the safety gains, Mr. Henry cited the rapid progress of the AAA safety responsibility law; extension and strengthening of highway patrols; safety glass requirements; compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment, and drivers' license laws.

Amendments and Law.
"There is reason for particular gratification over the forward march of the safety responsibility bill sponsored by this association," he said. "Five new states enacted the Model bill in 1935, namely, Arizona, Colorado, Ohio, Oregon and West Virginia. It was enacted by congress for the District of Columbia. Strengthening amendments were adopted in several states. The law is now in effect in 26 states and the District of Columbia."

"State highway patrols received much attention at the hands of the legislatures. Four states, namely Colorado, Montana, North Dakota and Oklahoma, established patrols for the first time. Seven states increased the strength of the patrol force, namely, Connecticut, Missouri, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Washington and West Virginia. The patrol system is now in operation throughout the Union, except in Georgia. There is no doubt, however, that the strength of the patrol force in most instances is below requirements, more particularly so in view of the rising ratio of motor fatalities on rural highways."

States Added to Safety Parade.

"Fifteen states enacted legislation providing that motor vehicles be equipped with safety glass. This brings the total of 'safety glass' states up to 23."

"Five states passed laws providing for compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment. These are: Connecticut, Colorado, Oregon, Utah, and Vermont. This brings the total of compulsory inspection states up to 14. This movement had its inception along the Atlantic seaboard, but it is now apparently spreading to mountain and Pacific coast states, indicating a more general trend toward national acceptance."

"A drivers' license law was adopted this year by Idaho, Montana, North Carolina, North Dakota, and Utah, bringing the list up to 34. There is little doubt that drivers' license law, coupled with a safety-responsibility law, are proving the most effective measure from the standpoint of control of the reckless and irresponsible driver, and states which lack this legislation are at a decided disadvantage."

Buffalo Bull Invades Barnyard in Washington

Kennebec, Wash.—Shades of Deadwood Bill. Farmers in the Hattiesburg hills region west of here rubbed their eyes when a buffalo bull appeared in the barnyard of James Mann. Apparently quite tame, the animal stayed long enough to have a meal of hay then wandered to the next farm. Ranchers believe the buffalo escaped from a farm at Yakima, 100 miles away, where the beasts are reared commercially.

Leather Lungs Won

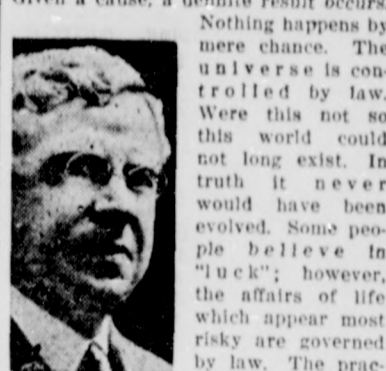

Johnny Meyers, known as "Leather Lungs," isn't a large person; indeed, he is a member of the midsize colony at the San Diego exposition. Nevertheless, he won first place in the barkers' contest, out-yelping the Chicago World's fair champion. So Johnny captured the cup he is holding in this photograph, and from it he gave a long drink to each of the losers.

AN OLD MOTTO

By
LEONARD A. BARRETT

Life is a series of consequences. Given a cause, a definite result occurs.

Nothing happens by mere chance. The universe is controlled by law. Were this not so this world could not long exist. In truth it never would have been evolved. Some people believe in "luck"; however, the affairs of life which appear most risky are governed by law. The practice of gambling is controlled, so we are informed, by the law of averages. Any person who thoroughly understands this law may win at any game. We frequently hear the remark: "I was lucky today." Perhaps the remark "I was fortunate" would have better expressed the truth. One is very fortunate, indeed, if, upon all occasions, he competes successfully with all the workings of nature's laws. "Let mercy be seasoned with justice" is not written into the universe of nature. Obedience is not easy at any time, and yet obedience is always liberty, and disobedience is slavery.

Fortunately we are not ignorant of these laws. We should know what they are and especially how they operate. Nowhere is this knowledge more important than in the world of moral and spiritual values. One of these laws was recently found by the writer upon the wall of an old priory and which read as follows: "If we would gaze on the star of our destiny, we must look for it in our own hearts." This priory is located on the ground of the Lafayette Inn, one of the authenticated historic places of the state of New York. The inn is at Geneva, N. Y., and overlooks the beautiful Seneca lake. This old motto, upon which many people have gazed, is important in the development of human character. Obedience to this law means happiness and friends. Disobedience will doubtless result in a miserable and friendless world. The star of destiny must first be in our own heart.

Life is what we make it but the power which makes it comes not so much from without as from within. Thoughts, mold character and ideals develop destiny, for, "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he."

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

The grape vine leaf of the damask weave was delicately outlined in green silk.

RESTORING and ornamenting fine old linens is both interesting and practical. It does not signify returning the articles to their original uses, but to others, equally good, and making the designs woven in the damask serve as needlecraft patterns. In almost every home there are tablecloths which have worn places in them which render the damask unfit for this use, although most, or at least a good proportion of the linen is firm and good. It is these strong portions that are excellent for napkins, centerpieces, doilies, cocktail napkins, etc. By ornamenting the articles with embroidery in outline stitches of any preferred sort, they become distinctive, especially when the work follows the pattern motifs of the damask.

This damask pattern decoration is unique, and gives a certain charm and point to the embroidery. The articles should be so cut that one complete design unit comes at one of the corners of each napkin. Use fine embroidery medium, and fine outline stitches and work the outline of the unit, being very careful to follow each smallest curve and angle of the pattern. The medium should be in contrast to the whiteness of the linen, so that the tracery of the design is well defined, and delicate. For centerpieces and runners, select one of the chief pattern units and outline each one over the entire surface wherever it appears.

A Smart Set.
Floral designs lend themselves delightfully to this work, so also do leaf and foliage designs. Geometric patterns are not quite so attractive in this style of decoration but even they are good.

One of the decided advantages of this work that is sure to appeal to the material itself supplies the embroidery design. It is all ready without any transferring or stamping of the design. Moreover, in damasks the weave in background and design differs, and the embroidered outline accents by its inclosure this inherent beauty of the material.

A grape leaf design was effectively

Car With Eight Wheels Makes Debut

Herr Gotthardt Kimmek, Berlin automobile engineer, is shown here with the new eight-wheeled passenger car which he has designed. He claims that the car offers greater security and is better equipped to take bumps. He explains this by the fact that the wheels of the car do not go through the depressions, but pass over them. Furthermore, a breaking of the axle or a blow-out of a tire will have no serious effect since the car will continue on seven wheels.

Lesson for September 22

JAMES (A GREAT CHRISTIAN LEADER)

LESSON TEXT—Acts 15:1-21; James 1:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he hath been approved, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord promised to them that love him—James 1:12.
PRIMARY TOPIC—What James Tells Us to Do.
JUNIOR TOPIC—James' Motto for Juniors.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Meet Life's Tests.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message of James for Today.

Three individuals by the name of James are mentioned in the New Testament. In all probability this James was the brother of the Lord and the writer of the Epistle which bears his name.

1. James Presiding at a Church Council (Acts 15:1-21).

The controversy in the church at Antioch (vv. 1-5). A most difficult problem confronted the church, threatening its disruption into a Jewish and Gentile division. It was not a question of the admission of the Gentiles into the church. That had been settled some years before when Peter received Cornelius and his household. The question now was, on what ground could they be received? Should Gentile believers be required to keep the Mosaic law as a condition of salvation? In order to settle the matter, Paul and Barnabas were sent to Jerusalem for the decision of the mother church.

4. The Deliberation of the Council (vv. 6-21).

1. Peter speaks (vv. 6-11). He argued that God had borne witness to the acceptance of the Gentiles by giving the Holy Spirit to them as unto the Jews. Since God had not put a difference, it would be folly for them to do so.

2. Paul and Barnabas rehearsed their experience (v. 12). They told how that God had set his seal of approval on the preaching of salvation by grace through faith.

3. The argument of James (vv. 14-21). He took the fact declared by Peter and showed how it harmonized with prophecy (Amos 9:11-15). He showed that the reception of the Gentiles was not in conflict, but in harmony with God's plan. He made clear God's plan as follows:

a. To take out from among the Gentiles a people for his name (v. 14). This is what is now being done by the calling out of the church.

b. After the church is completed, Israel will be converted and restored to their land by the Lord himself at his return (vv. 16, 17).

c. This will be followed by the conversion of the world through the agency of converted Israel (v. 17; cf. Rom. 11:15). Having shown that there was no conflict with the Scriptures rightly divided, he gave his judgment that the Gentiles should not be troubled with the things that are Jewish, but should be warned against the perils of heathenism, such as meat offered to idols, fornication and blood.

4. The decision (vv. 22-29). The mother church unanimously endorsed James' recommendation. They sent a letter stating the decision of the conference. This decision was duly delivered to the church at Antioch and was received with rejoicing.

11. James Giving Counsel to Christians (James 1:1-17).

1. Concerning trials (vv. 2-17). a. The Christian's attitude toward them (vv. 2-4). They were to meet them joyfully because of their beneficial effects. Trials reveal fidelity, and by their effects develop the grace of patience.

b. The Christian's supreme need in these trials (vv. 5-8). It is wisdom to meet them intelligently. He makes clear that the source of this wisdom is in God and that the means of gaining it is asking in faith, and the very liberality of God is the guarantee that the needed supply will be provided.

c. The rich and the poor are sharers alike in affliction (vv. 9-11). Frequently the poor man thinks that the rich are free from testings, whereas they are usually more severely tested.

d. The blessed reward of enduring the testing (v. 12). The one who faithfully endures the temptation shall be awarded the crown of life.

e. The source of temptation (vv. 13-17). Temptations spring out of human desire. They do not come from God. Sin is not necessarily the desire, but the gratifying of it improperly. When one is thus led away by his natural desires, sin is conceived which brings forth death. In such case, sin is the gratification of a right desire in a wrong way.

Life

Life is not so complex if we do not persist in making it so. We need faith; we need to be brave, to keep the corners of the mouth turned up and not down. And after all it is only a step at a time.—Ralph Waldo Trine.

Affliction

Much of what a man tells you in the hour of affliction, in sudden anger, or in any outpouring of his heart, should be sacred. In his craving for sympathy he has spoken to you as to his own soul.

More Velvet Than Ever in Fall Mode Popular Handbag Easy to Crochet

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WE ARE going to be more elegant in dress this fall and winter than ever. All the pre-showings of advance fashions declare for greater luxury in jewels, in furs, in fabrics, in costume design. Where there is luxury and elegance in apparel there is velvet. Which leads to the message we would convey—the outstanding importance of velvet in the mode.

There is simply no limit to the enthusiasm which style creators are expressing for velvet this fall. It's velvet everywhere this season.

Appropos of the craze for velvet which is sweeping throughout the world of fashions Paris cables the news of tailored cloth suits which are styled with velvet collars and revers. Several suits shown in early contour showings have velvet skirts with cloth jackets often of rough surfaced, bright colored novelty woolen.

The girl planning her going-away-to-school wardrobe will adore the new velvet-plus-woolen outfits. Consider, for instance, the cunning ensemble shown to the right in the picture. It is a style-elet when it comes to assembling the college girl's wardrobe. The dress is of stiff deep red (red of the Italian master paintings) velvet. The bodice is designfully stitched in squares. The cloth cape in matching red has velvet buttons and velvet flowers at the throat.

Black velorganza, which is a thin velvet pile on an organdie base, fashions the handsome costume to the left in the group. Note that the daring jacket is lined with the same gray print ed organdie as makes the blouse. Linings which correlate the ensemble into an harmonious unit is a pet theme with fashion this season.

There is a boldly picturesque note about the so-named "pirate" dress centered in the trio. The unique bodice is of green mat velvet. The skirt is of non-crushable heavy white linen strikingly printed in green.

Velvet has become almost inseparable with black when it comes to talking from the viewpoint of daytime fashions. However, it is a little newer this year to introduce color—any of the dark warm colors that are booming for fall, particularly the wine purple and rich green range reflecting the Italian renaissance influence.

The favorite velvet suit for all-around wear during the daytime activities is linked with fitted lines. The very short jacket is apt to have almost a basque trimness, with its neatly buttoned-up-the-front closing, and intricate seaming and gores for the skirt.

The shirtwaist in velvet, begun by Mainbocher, is contributing a subject of exciting interest to the new style program. Speaking of color in velvet this trend is particularly noticeable in many of the early fall hats which are of velvet in delectable warm autumn hues. The little chapeau in the inset here shown is an ultra smart plaid velvet toque with a green feather curled to the left. The new heroines of deep wine green or purple velvet are decidedly picturesque, some of them big floppy affairs dipping down over one eye, others with the new triangular and squared contours which are decidedly smart and effective.

READY FOR SCHOOL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Coat fashions for the junior miss should be considered as "first aid" to preparedness in the matter of school girl wardrobe needs for fall. The model pictured is highly significant as to certain style trends that are outstanding in the new autumn and winter modes. Note a slight Pare from the neckline. Double-breasted in some what of a coachman style this coat takes on a new note of chic. The fur-bordered collar carries a capelike air. The material for this attractive coat is a checked velour woolen. The hat is included in the ensemble, being made of the same smart wool weave.

Style Trend

Bows of ermine are being worn instead of buckles on evening shoes in London.

DRAPE BRIDAL VEIL IN MANY NEW WAYS

New ways of draping the bridal veil are offered the girl who is planning an early fall wedding. While in general these may be said to derive from the Russian tiara effects, they should more properly be credited to the Renaissance period. This includes the Italian, the Russian, and the Hungarian periods of corresponding dates.

One of the most charming of these diadem effects was recently constructed by Worth. Of tulle and old lace, over a stiffened wire foundation, it gains in width clear to the ears and is softened by increased draperies at the top in crenellated fashion.

Chanel has made a bridal head-dress which starts with a cap of tulle, embroidered in crosslines of dull silver. This silver note is recalled in the torse which divides the upturning and downturned sections of the slightly circular-cut aureole, diminishing to nothing at the back of the head and giving full sweep to the simple tulle veil.

Knitted Evening Gown of Cellophane Is the Latest

A knitted evening gown of cellophane yarn is one of the sensations of the current mode.

We have seen knitted evening gowns before, introduced first at Palm Beach and taken up by New York and Paris. But the idea of using cellophane yarn is new.

The glittering cellophane, in black, follows the dictates of the season as to brilliance and glitter, and fits the figure like a mermaid's scales.

Knitted suits are blossoming forth in faultlessly tailored models, with contrasting linings and a distinct swag.

Glossy Lace for Gowns

Glossy, transparent lace is used for gowns in black, navy and dark red. A pale shaded flower trims the corsage, and mittens of the lace go with the dress.

Mold Defies Research

The tobacco raiser of the South is forced to carry on a survival of the fittest battle against a disease which appears to have obtained a firm foothold. The disease, designated by the rather poetic names of blue mold or downy mildew, attacks the plants in the seed bed. Despite years of research, no effective method of direct attack on the disease have been perfected. The only method left to the tobacco grower is to plant so much of the seed that enough survivors for transplanting may be obtained despite the disease.

FLAWS IN BEAUTY ARE NOT ALWAYS FAULT OF MAKE-UP

There are two totally different types of blemishes for which persons themselves are responsible, and which disturb them according to their points of view. No reference is made to physical defects or mental maladies over which persons have no apparent control, but to flaws in beauty either of appearance or of character.

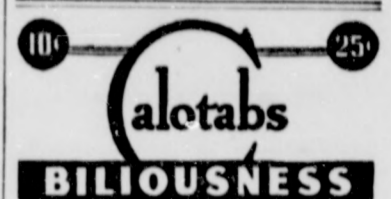

Some persons are absorbed in making themselves physically handsome, and are distraught if any slightest blemishes occur in their make-ups, their coiffures, or their costumes. They are blind to blemishes in their actions, seeming to believe that what pleases the eye diverts attention from lack of breeding, which may be a glaring fault. As a matter of fact unless good looks and good manners go together, appearances strike a false note, merely accenting blemishes that they believe are of no importance to others, since they evidently are not to themselves. An unwise conclusion.

Another group of persons give precedent to words and acts. Blemishes of character are their concern, whether they are in themselves or discerned in others. Occasionally one finds a disregard of personal beauty noticeable in individuals in the group, but more often a normal attention is paid to attire, although it occupies a secondary place. Fortunately the faces of persons who are seeking to instill beauty of character into thoughts and actions reflect these mental and spiritual traits. Lovely expressions surpass beauty treatments in transforming faces, and making them fair to look upon.

There are pretty faces that are repellant because they betray blemishes of character such as petulance, jealousy, avarice, etc. There are homely faces that are so radiant with a glow of inner beauty that nothing but loveliness is noticed. In each instance the persons have in a way attained what they wanted—artifice has done what it could in the first instance, to eradicate blemishes, and to beautify. Fineness of character, in the second instance, has wrought its marvelous power and transmuted a homely face into a thing of beauty.

CHANDLER THE CHAMPION

The acrimonious Democratic primary has terminated in the nomination of a ticket headed by J. B. Chandler as the candidate for governor. His is an amazing triumph, without parallel in Kentucky politics.

Happy Chandler waged a remarkable campaign, forged into the position of a contender early in the contest and raced to the finish in the first primary well up toward the front in second place. His courageous campaign caught the popular fancy, drew wide-spread support.

Chandler's spectacular challenge in the first heat of the contest resulted in creation of a victory psychologically which was intensified by the support of eliminated candidates for governor and the powerful influence of W. F. Klair, of Lexington.

The unprecedented vote in the first primary was expected by political analysis to wane in the second primary. But contrary to the anticipated trend the high record vote was exceeded as close to half a million participated in the runoff primary. Chandler forged ahead to win by a comfortable margin.

The campaign is now history. Differences and antagonisms it engendered should be quickly forgotten. Warring Democratic factions should close ranks. Reconciliations should be immediately effected, as we anticipate will be the aftermath.

Every Democrat who realizes that it is for the best interests of Kentucky that its government remain in the hands of the party should be good enough sportsman to accept the verdict of the people and volunteer for service in the campaign which culminates in November.

Let us cut short the post-mortems. Let us graciously accept the verdict of the Democratic primary regardless of whom we supported in the contest. A militant and audacious young leader has been chosen to lead the fight in the final election. Let us enlist with enthusiasm under his banner. Victory is certain and we all should have a part in the triumph.

THE ONCE OVER

We are glad to see the interest in being manifested in sports in Fulton. The invitational golf tournament here last week was quite successful, and provided much pleasure for the participants.

Business is looking up in Fulton. Many improvements are being made on various business buildings.

while several new businesses have opened or will open soon.

The Bulldogs played a good game against the Hornbeak team the other night, both offensively and defensively. Keep up the good work boys, and may every game display fine sportsmanship and determination to do your best, whether you are on the big end of the score or not.

News that is good news! Plans for widening Lake-st are being pushed by the city officials. If this improvement can be carried out, it will help in relieving the traffic congestion on our main thoroughfare. Lake street has long needed to be wider, with a parking zone in the middle.

One of our good citizens, who has always looked upon community improvement as of prime importance to every citizen, has offered a suggestion for ridding Fulton of floods. His plan seems to have considerable merit, if it could just be carried out. He believes that sufficient land could be obtained above Fulton and a project worked out for formation of a lake with a dam to restrain surplus waters pouring into Fulton from above down the Harris Fork Creek. In his opinion federal aid could be obtained for taking Fulton out of the flood district under the works program now being pushed by the government. He further believes that this lake could be turned into a resort center. If stocked with fish, and by erection of club houses, introduction of boating, fishing, swimming, and other sports, the idea seems feasible. Such an improvement would have a two-fold benefit—it would relieve Fulton of floods and provide a resort close to home. We imagine, if a federal project could be worked out, private interests might be induced to purchase land for the lake, if they were given the privilege to operate it as investment.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE YIELDS TO CHIROPRACTIC ADJUSTINGS

Bogta, Tenn.—When I went to a Chiropractor for high blood pressure, I also had a bad kidney trouble, but the high blood pressure was the thing that was worrying me. I had dizzy, staggering spells like a drunk man; then I would have sinking spells and get perfectly stiff and become unconscious. This was an extreme situation. A hypodermic would relax me, but would give only temporary relief. I think it is so wonderful that when the demand is so great that we have Chiropractic adjustments to fall back upon. Here is a system of healing that gave me relief after all others failed, and I am so happy to state that I got well under this drugless method, and I hope others will see the beauty of Chiropractic and go get well as I did. I have the interest of this new science at heart and want to see others cured.—Mrs. S. O. Drake.

THE BOOK

the first line of which reads, "The Holy Bible," and which contains Four Great Treasures

by BRUCE BARTON

THE INFLUENCE OF THE BOOK

The longest telegraphic message that ever had gone over the wires up to that time was sent from New York to Chicago, May 20, 1881. Its one hundred and eighty thousand words were addressed to The Chicago Times. The Tribune had a message almost as long. The following morning both papers printed the 4 Gospels complete, with the book of acts, while The Times had Romans also. The next day they printed rest of the New Testament from copies sent by mail, proclaiming that they had performed the greatest journalistic achievement of all time. They were right.

The typesetting machine was not yet in use. The Tribune employed ninety-two compositors and five correctors, and completed the work of taking, transcribing, correcting and setting up the text in twelve hours.

On the same day this Revised Version of the New Testament was put on sale simultaneously in New York and London. In New York thirty-three thousand copies were sold locally and at retail in twenty-four hours. Two million copies were sold in Oxford and Cambridge before the edition was off the press. In the United States, from May 20th until the end of the year 1881, thirty huge editions, mounting into millions of copies, were sold. Nothing comparable has ever occurred in publishing history.

The New Testament has four short biographies of Jesus, each containing some material which is not in any of the others. It has often been asked, "Since we have four, why not more?" Several of the apostles are supposed to have journeyed far and to have made converts in distant places.

There is nothing inherently improbable in the thought that one or more of them might have written for his own converts in a distant region a little sketch of Jesus as he remembered Him, and that this sketch, however inferior as a whole to any one of four gospels, might contain a few authentic incidents, one or two parables, or a report of some discourse with Jesus hitherto unknown. It has been conjectured that such books were in actual existence.

Such conjectures are probably without foundation. But suppose that such a book, a gospel by Thomas or Andrew were to be found in a far corner of Asia or Africa, and that some scholar of a reputation as well established as that of Tischendorf, the discover of the Sinaitic manuscript, were to see it and pronounce it genuine. Suppose the authorities of the library or convention where it was found should say that scholars were free to examine and photograph and translate it, but that it must not be removed. What would happen?

"THE WORLD FOR GOD"

"So God created man in His own image."—Genesis 1:27

A world in which God is not the supreme Ruler is a world not fit for human habitation. Man cannot live without God, for as Jesus said, "man lives by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

In consciously establishing God as the Head, by making a "world for God," mankind is following a natural tendency.

In this period of world-wide distress, the present holds that which draws mankind into a common fellowship.

This is not a new thought, or a new condition. Mankind confronted with some strange and disquieting situation, tends to break down the false alignments which in more pleasant circumstances divide him.

This was true in the great World War, and in every other war. It is true in famine, plague, flood and quake, and wherever on earth these things occur.

There is a oneness about humanity when in danger or suffering, that draws all classes into a sympathetic understanding and appreciation for the other fellow's welfare.

Happier times tend to separate the race. There are divisions of wealth and of position, of learning and ignorance, of good and bad, or "what have you?"

But the fact that Man is one, sprung from a common Father, destined to a common future, is one of the lessons of the present depression.

The first step in making a "World for God" is to make our own private world for Him. We must give ourselves, freely and entirely, relying on the Christ to make straight our way.

You can learn more about this by writing a personal letter to this newspaper or to the nearest Minister of the Gospel.

'The Divorce Court Murder'

by Milton Propper

SIXTEENTH INSTALLMENT
SYNOPSIS—Barbara Keith, wife of a prominent Philadelphia business man, is murdered as she waits alone in a side room to testify in the divorce case of Rowland vs. Rowland. She was to have testified for the husband, a friend, who was defendant in the action. Detective Tommy Rankin is assigned to the case from police headquarters. His preliminary investigation disclosed that both Mr. and Mrs. Rowland had gathered evidence against the other of infidelity. The will of Mrs. Rowland's first husband directed her lawyer brother, Mr. Willard, to handle the estate until she remarried when the new husband was to come into control. Detective Rankin finds motives and the evidence Keith, leading to the doors of vir- tually all of the principals involved. These principals are the two Rowlands, Mr. Willard, Mr. Keith, husband of the murdered woman, Hugh Campbell, paramour of Mrs. Rowland, and his underworld confederates—NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Rankin's eyes widened in surprise. "Deserting?" he repeated. "Of course, that would explain his secrecy about his past and why he destroyed the evidence that he was ever in the service. He wasn't caught, was he?"

"No, he evidently escaped successfully."

"I suppose that's his picture, on the next page," the detective observed.

"Yes, the one that was taken at San Diego," Mr. Roche held out the pamphlet.

Rankin reached for it eagerly enough, but without anticipating the shock that followed. Suddenly at the sight of the features staring at him from the portrait, he gasped. Experienced as he was in extraordinary developments in his investigation of crime, he could not control his astonishment. The passage of eight years was insufficient to prevent his recognition of the face in the picture.

Such was his overwhelming amazement that Mr. Roche eyed him wonderingly.

"What in the world is the matter Mr. Rankin?" he demanded hurriedly. "You're not ill, I hope? You act as if you're acquainted with the man."

The detective wiped his brow. "That's just it, I am. But it's absolutely incredible; for the life of me I can't understand how it can be possible. You see—" In time, he recalled how little Mr. Roche knew of the true reason he sought the ex-soldier. "He's a notorious secondstory man, and wanted badly in many cities."

With this revelation, he grasped in one fell swoop all the elaborate mechanism of the murder. At one moment he was blindly following his nose; the next, every piece of a complicated and ingenious puzzle, the sheer originality of which he had not even dreamed, fell into place. He needed no more information from the marine records. Now he knew how the crime had been engineered and when it was committed. He perceived all the subtle safeguards by which the murderer prevented suspicion from lighting on him, the daring that revealed his perverted mind. All ways ready to allow his opponent plot, as brilliant and audacious as any he had ever encountered. The measure of its success was the completeness with which it had baffled him until this very moment. With the solution confronting him at every turn, he had been a victim throughout the case, of a cunning with which he could not cope.

His only consolation lay in the fact that back in Philadelphia he already possessed the quarry's fingerprints. Hence, even without the photograph, he would eventually have discovered Dennis' identity at Headquarters, when he compared his prints with those he took early in the investigation.

Yet, despite his information and certainty, he lacked positive proof of the criminal's guilt. Not one iota of his evidence was more than circumstantial nor could it be established directly. Though he could show the man's motives and opportunity, and a dozen suspicious moves, they had only the force of suppositions. Dennis had not eye-witnesses to positive acts that linked him inescapably to Barbara Keith's death. So incriminating were the circumstances that Rankin depended on them alone to convict him; but he was not satisfied. He wanted to leave no loophole by which the man might escape and this he could accomplish only with some testimony that brought the deed straight home to him.

While he continued his conversation with Mr. Roche, Rankin's mind raced in search of some fact that would close his net. Step by step he reviewed every transaction of the criminal, his preparations, precautions and final act; and each detail of the plot he discarded as being incapable of direct proof. That is, until he considered Dennis' purchase of the chloroform.

In obtaining that, he committed a distinctly incriminating act, which lent overwhelming significance to the purely circumstantial evidence. The difficulty was that, despite a thorough canvassing of all city druggists, Rankin's assistants had thus far been unable to trace it.

Unless his quarry had never bought the drug at all. The idea that occurred to the detective at that instant caused him to break off his conversation with Mr. Roche. Suddenly he had recalled an item of information Mortimer Keith had casually dropped early in the case. At the time he could attach no importance to it, and quickly forgot it; now it suggested a startling possibility that made him stiffen and breathe excitedly, as he pondered it. He did not believe some one else thought the chloroform for Dennis; that was too great a risk.

And if he figured wrongly, he could fall back on the canvass of the city, though that would delay the final arrest. In one conclusion he had faith. Sooner or later, if he followed the man's movements during it, or stop him, or inform me of it."

"She was in no position to prevent anything," Rankin explained. "She didn't dare interfere—You had better look, doctor, to find out on Friday, May 26th."

"Of course, doctor, that fits in perfectly after all," declared Rankin. "She couldn't have visited you Wednesday. She was accompanied wasn't she Dr. Brantman?"

At the physician's reply, his face lighted with a half smile of confidence. After that more eagerly and rapidly he began to put his question insistently pressing upon Dr. Brantman his startling inspiration.

Finally, the doctor could no longer contain his uneasiness. "I don't doubt, Mr. Rankin, that what you suggest is possible," he admitted. "My nurse, Miss Vickers, wasn't here to watch, and I had no other patients, and my drug shelves are quite open. If I happened to be occupied at this desk, I might not notice what went on behind the screen. Only it's so difficult to believe."

"Not if you knew the person we're dealing with as well as I do," Rankin returned.

"But wouldn't Mrs. Keith be curious about the theft? She'd question it, or stop him, or inform me of it."

"She was in no position to prevent anything," Rankin explained. "She didn't dare interfere—You had better look, doctor, to find out whether I'm mistaken. But just point out the drug; we must be careful not to destroy any clues or prints."

"I hope to God you are wrong," Dr. Brantman murmured fervently. More pallid than usual, he stepped behind the screen. The detective located the bottle.

"I fear that you are right after all, Mr. Rankin," he announced gravely. "The amounts don't check at all. I should have seven ounces left. Even if my judgment is only roughly correct, at least four ounces are missing."

Delighted by the substantiation of his theory, Rankin lifted the vial with extreme caution.

"And that means there should be fingerprints," he commented, "if this hasn't been disturbed since. He probably brought along a small container instead of taking this."

Fifteen minutes later, with the evidence upon which he relied and Dr. Brantman as a witness, the detective left the house on Pine street. On the warrant in his pocket he had filled in the criminal's name. His eyes glistened with excitement as he summoned a taxi. Experienced though he was in the pursuit of wrongdoers, he would have been less than human not to be stirred by this momentous occasion.

He gave the cabman directions as he climbed in. "And on the way," he directed, "if you notice a cop, stop so I can pick him up."

The taximeter obeyed. Near 44th Street two uniformed men stood on the corner, conversing and the taxi drew up to them. Rankin beckoned them in, and by the time he had identified himself and explained what he expected of them, they reached their destination.

It was an exclusive, somewhat elegant red-brick apartment house, U-shaped, each of its three wings having a separate entrance. The detective dismissed the cab and selected the entrance into the left wing, in the vestibule of which, he paused at the letter boxes.

He indicated one "That's the one we want, boys—three-C, third floor," he declared. "Now remember your orders—to stay out of sight while I enter." He drew out a whistle, borrowed from one of the officers. "Don't interfere unless I blow this," he continued. "I expect I can manage him by myself; but he'll be desperate, so stand by ready in case he is troublesome."

Senator Long Assassinated by Political Opponent

HUEY P. LONG, United States senator and political dictator of Louisiana, is dead, the victim of an assassin's bullet. As he passed through a corridor of the state-house in Baton Rouge, where the legislature was passing more laws to solidify his control over the state, he was shot once through the body by Dr. Carl A. Weiss, Jr., of Baton Rouge, one of the "Kingfish" political opponents. The assassin was immediately shot to death by the senator's ever-present bodyguards.

Long was hurriedly taken to a hospital and eminent surgeons were summoned. They found the bullet had gone through the base of the right lung and passed out of the back, puncturing the colon and causing internal hemorrhage. After the wound had been cleaned, two blood transfusions were given, the blood being supplied by Lieut. Gov. James A. Noe. Mrs. Long and her daughter Rose were brought from New Orleans and sat at the senator's bedside.

The surgeons and physicians worked unceasingly to save Long, but his strength steadily waned and shortly after 4 o'clock Tuesday morning, about thirty hours after the shooting, he passed away.

The motive of Doctor Weiss, an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist, apparently grew out of the high-handed political methods of Senator Long in Louisiana. The position of his father-in-law, District Judge B. H. Pavy of Opelousas parish, an anti-Long leader, is jeopardized by a law introduced in the present special session to gerrymander his district. The law would put the home of Judge Pavy in Landry parish.

In August, Senator Long told the senate that at a conference in the Hotel De Soto in New Orleans last July 21 his foes had discussed a plot to kill him. He presented excerpts from what claimed was a record of a sound recording device revealing the plot.

Long's opponents laughed at this story, just as they always have ridiculed his practice of having an armed guard accompany him everywhere. Political leaders of all parties expressed their deep regret for the assassination of Senator Long. His devoted followers in Louisiana and elsewhere mourned his death. He had been one of the picturesque figures in America's political life, creating innumerable enemies but persistent in advocating his ideas which appeared fantastic to most citizens. A Democrat, he had broken with the administration and often bitterly attacked President Roosevelt and the New Dealers. It was the belief of many that he intended to become the Presidential nominee of a third party comprising his own "share the wealth" crowd and various other groups dissatisfied with the policies of the old parties.

Efforts of Statesmen to Prevent War in Africa

MUSSOLINI tacitly consented to the appointment of a committee of five nations by the League of Nations council to handle the Italo-Ethiopian imbroglio, and after protest agreed that Great Britain and France should be among the members of that body. The other members are Spain, Turkey and Poland. Senor Salvador de Madariaga of Spain is the chairman, and he and his associates at once began the task assigned them. Each country is represented by its chief delegate, being besides Madariaga, Rosten of England, Laval of France, Rustu Aras of Turkey and Josef Beck of Poland.

The assembly of the league began its sessions in Geneva, bringing to that city many of Europe's foremost statesmen, and it was a certainty that the assembly would be definitely hostile to Italy and ready to consider the imposing of penalties on Italy the moment any overt act occurs. The Italians hoped to prolong the inquiry by the committee of five until after the adjournment of the assembly, and their opponents were building up a solid front, preparing for the application of sanctions against an aggressor as provided for in article 16 of the league covenant. Baron Aloisi told Captain Eden that the African campaign would not begin while the assembly was in session.

In two speeches in Rome Mussolini gave indication that he would not be diverted from his purpose to conquer Ethiopia. Though in one he said "the Italian people want peace provided it is accompanied by justice," in the other he declared "we shall march straight on." The Ethiopian government announced that "telegrams from the northern frontier show that the Italians are making important troop movements on the Ethiopian and Eritrean frontier, indicating an early offensive against Ethiopia."

Accepting the advice of his "brain trust," which includes Everett A. Colson of the United States, Emperor Haile Selassie instructed his representatives in Geneva to reject all solutions thus far offered by the powers for settling the quarrel with Italy. These are a tripartite mandate over Ethiopia, as suggested by France, with the League of Nations guaranteeing Ethiopia's independence and territorial integrity; France's proposal for an Italian protectorate similar to that of the British in Iraq, and an international police force similar to the one that occupied the Saar before its restoration to Germany.

Aloisi Presents Italy's Case Against Ethiopia

BARON POMPEI ALOISI, cold and sardonic, stood up before the League of Nations council in Geneva and presented Italy's case against Ethiopia, denouncing that empire as utterly unworthy to be classed with civilized countries. In addition to his speech, he laid before the council a long memorandum detailing the alleged conditions of slavery that still prevail in Ethiopia and the participation of its government in the slave trade. This memorandum was elaborately documented.

Addressing the council, Aloisi said in part: "The Ethiopian government does nothing to make itself worthy of belonging to the community of civilized nations. Even today that country has to be represented by European advisers in order to make its voice heard in the League of Nations."

"The Italian government considers, in these circumstances, that a state such as Ethiopia cannot have either equality of right or equality of duties as compared with civilized states. To claim that members of the league are required to observe rules of the covenant in their relations with members who have always and constantly been outside those rules is contrary to all the principles of right and justice."

To the press correspondents the baron was even more explicit. "You have heard the Italian thesis," he said. "That is final. Italy has asked nothing, not even the withdrawal of Ethiopia from the league. From now on Italy will play a passive role here. We are not going to discuss anything with Ethiopia, but we will discuss Ethiopia with the league."

"It is up to the members of the league council to decide whether they want to expel Ethiopia or expel Italy."

Reactions to President's Letter Are Various

REACTION of American business and financial men to President Roosevelt's latest public statement that his basic program has reached substantial completion and industry will have a breathing spell ran the gamut between mild hope and downright unbelief. Those who permitted themselves to be quoted were generally extremely cautious in their expressions, but there was usually a vein of skepticism in their remarks. Wall Street brokers were gladdened by a report of trading at higher prices, but bankers were more than doubtful, and economists insisted that a balanced budget, which wasn't mentioned in the President's letter to Roy Howard, publisher, was a prime requisite.

Silas Strawn, former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, said: "Business men generally will say that the improvement in some lines of business has been in spite of, rather than because of, the activities of the administration."

Politicians regarded the letter as Mr. Roosevelt's opening of his campaign for re-election, and praised or decried it according to their party affiliations. Frank Knox of the Chicago Daily News, a potential candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, called it "just another promise" and set forth the many campaign promises which Mr. Roosevelt has failed to keep. Senator Black of Alabama said the statement was "a wonderfully clear explanation of his program, its original aims and its execution. It should be a call to those engaged in business to co-operate in further national progress."

Howard had written the President that many business men had become convinced that there could be no real recovery "until the fears of business have been allayed through the granting of a breathing spell to industry and a recess from further experimentation until the country can recover its losses."

In a long letter the President replied that the legislative program of his administration had reached substantial completion and "the breathing spell of which you speak is here—decidedly so."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Through more years than most of us can remember, the U. S. senate has been the object of caustic criticism, jibe and jest because of its rule permitting unlimited debates.

Obsolete Senate Rules

Time after time long senate speeches have been the object of editorial attack in one segment or another of American metropolitan newspapers. Its slow, tortoise-like methods have been held up to ridicule in spoken and written word innumerable times, and its procedure remains unchanged.

It was no occasion for surprise, therefore, when a new outburst of criticism of senate rules of procedure was launched upon us immediately after the last session of congress adjourned. Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana, the self-styled Kingfish, broke loose as he has so many times broken loose and effectively tied senate plans in a knot. He did the very thing that has precipitated criticism of the senate through all of the years mentioned above and succeeded in a one-man filibuster in blocking passage of an appropriation bill. Indeed, he was so effective in his job that he brought down on his head the wrath of President Roosevelt and all of the New Dealers who were about to realize culmination of some of their most cherished dreams.

While the Long filibuster probably should be criticized because undoubtedly there was some unfairness about it, the reason it takes on more importance at this time is because it placed so many of the New Dealers in a state of mind, dug deep mentally and because it again centered attention upon these same senate rules.

By way of preliminary explanation, I believe it ought to be said that no organized body can operate effectively or orderly without first binding itself to adhere to rules of procedure that will give each an opportunity. These rules, in the case of the senate, are very old. It may be said they are antiquated and obsolete; surely some will take that view of them. But nevertheless those are the rules and the senate has been able for a good many years to produce satisfactory legislative results under them.

I do not propose here to say that the rules should be revised or that the present rules should be retained. But I do believe that before changes are made and before those who propose changes spread too much ballyhoo, the country should understand some of the reasons which actuate the present urge.

The Kingfish spoke for nearly six hours on the closing night of the session. He could not be prevented from speaking after he was once recognized by the presiding officer. He told the senate he was battling for a government loan rate on cotton of 12 cents per pound whereas the administration was proposing to make the rate either nine or ten cents per pound. The senate had placed an amendment on an appropriation bill to carry out the idea of twelve cents a pound and had put up the proposition to the house of representatives which showed no signs of agreeing at all until Mr. Roosevelt took a hand and suggested the compromise of ten cents a pound. All that remained was a formal vote of the senate to put the administration plan into effect. Senator Long decided it should not be and he proceeded to link the administration single-handedly by continuing his filibuster until the midnight hour when the congress was to adjourn finally.

In blocking the administration compromise, Senator Long also defeated appropriation of something like $100,000,000 which the administration was going to use in setting up machinery under its so-called security laws, the Guffey bill for regulation of the soft coal industry and the bond created theoretically to settle labor disputes. All of these bills were pressed hard by the administration, if one had not had its antagonists in congress. They were and are strictly New Deal measures. As a result of the Long filibuster none of them can be made fully operative until congress convenes again next January and appropriates the money. So, it can be seen how the pride of the New Deal professors was wounded. It can be seen likewise why they, along with the President, did so much squawking about the Long filibuster. Senator Long was an ideal goat for the situation.

It is not my privilege nor is it within my power to say whether the legislation which Senator Long virtually nullified is so important that five months of delay is the difference between life and death in this country. Indeed, I cannot see any reason for all of the haste that is exemplified by the shouts and the criticisms suddenly brought forth because of that filibuster. The bills which were brought to final passage only a few days before adjournment had been languishing in congress since last January.

So, without defending a filibuster in any wise, it occurs to me that we ought to look back into history and see the benefits accruing from unlimited debate in the senate, a procedure which the New Dealers now want to change. Through all of the years that congress has existed the senate has moved in a deliberative way. It has been slow, to be sure; yet, records of the past make it appear that this slow procedure has resulted inevitably in better legislation. Many are the schemes that surged forward on the ballyhoo of a minority to passage in the house of representatives only to be blocked and properly examined in the senate. Many are the times as well when the deliberative character of senate debate gave time for expression of a majority sentiment in the country and saved it from being precipitated into policies of national legislation that would have worked untold harm. I cannot but believe that the privilege of unlimited debate in the senate has more good features than bad.

Time after time in years past, demands have been made for liberalization of rules in the house of representatives so that individual members might voice their views at length. The house never has yielded from the position it has taken that its members were too great to permit free-for-all discussion such as takes place in the senate. The house does its work in committees and those committees are generally under the guidance of the political party in control of the government. The house, therefore, invariably votes the will of the administration. In consequence of this, it is hard to believe that the senate ought to bind and gag its members and prevent their free expression. If there is a minority, that minority ought to be heard. The senate is the forum. As a personal expression, I do not see where any good at all can come from the proposed restrictions for senate debate and I do not believe it will eventually.

For the first time since the Civil war, a federal government bond issue failed the other day to attract enough subscribers to absorb the offering. It was a small offering at that. The amount was only $100,000,000. The United States government bonds, they were being issued by the Federal Farm Mortgage corporation but they bore the guarantee of the United States treasury that they would be paid both as to interest and principal and to all intents and purposes may not be distinguished from government bonds.

When the treasury received offers of only $85,500,000, Secretary Morgenthau was both surprised and chagrined. He laid the failure of the issue to the fact that the bonds were to carry only 1 1/2 per cent interest, a very low rate.

It was a part of the treasury policy to sell government securities at interest rates as low as possible to reduce the burden of the interest charge which the government must carry on its gigantic public debt. Nevertheless, "it ain't so good."

The national debt now outstanding is something like $30,000,000,000. It is approximately $10,000,000,000 higher than when Mr. Roosevelt took office. It is due to go still higher because additional money must be borrowed to carry out the works-relief plans of the New Deal. Some authorities predict that before Mr. Roosevelt's present term expires as President the public debt will aggregate something like $35,000,000,000, the highest in all history for our nation.

Long experience as a student of financial affairs prompts my conclusion that failure of the $100,000,000 issue to be fully subscribed does not mean that government bonds are a bad investment. I am inclined to the opinion that the treasury tried to drive down the interest rate too low and that most investors figured they could obtain a better return than that which Mr. Morgenthau offered them. But, after all, there is something of a warning in this circumstance. I believe the warning is that if the Roosevelt administration continues to spend and spend and borrow and borrow, it must pay higher and higher interest rates for the money it borrows. Again, that "ain't so good."

How Will Mussolini Fight?
Airfields and Live Wires
A Teapot Tempest
Will Eugenists Explain?

Mussolini fought in the big war as a simple soldier in the trenches, saw the horrors of war from the bottom.

Now, in command, he will see war from the top. How will he manage it? Dispatches say he must do something in a "quick drive and make big gains" before the rainy season returns, seven months hence.

Mussolini's driving power and efficiency, that have transformed the fever-breeding Pontine marshes into homes for Italian families, should need no "seven months" to produce results in Abyssinia. The thing to do is to concentrate on the "Conquering Lion of Judah," otherwise the Negus, or "Power of Trinity."

Make it clear that modern war means "the ruler of the country first, the little people afterward," and war will not last long. The "Conquering Lion" has expressed willingness, at most eagerness, to die for his country, but that must not be taken too literally.

Near Burbank, Calif., a plane crashes. Three occupants, two pilots and a stewardess burn to death, after striking a live wire.

It has been said, "Alcohol and gasoline do not mix well," meaning that men should not drive when drunk.

Air fields and live wires do not mix well either. The Department of Commerce, ruling aviation and exercising admirable rules, might include among the latter a rule against exposed live wires near air fields.

There is an unnecessary fuss about American business men having secured in Abyssinia rights to develop oil and mineral wealth. An American should be able to go shopping at his own risk and on his own responsibility, wherever he chooses, as Englishmen do, without having the State department indulge in "fits."

If one of the great American organizations, Standard Oil, Du Pont or another, undertakes to do business in Ethiopia, it will not ask Uncle Sam to send over any of "our boys" to shed their blood.

Strange sight in a New York court—one boy, nine years old, accused of killing a girl by hitting her on the head with a stone because she denied his assertion that he could eat more peaches than she could. Another little boy of twelve, also a killer of a playmate, appeared in the same court.

The nine-year-old boy seemed quite unconcerned, except that he thought his dog, "Lucky," would be lonesome without him.

Prosecuting authorities accuse the nine-year-old boy of murder, but hanging or drawing and quartering for children are part of the past.

Will stipendiary eugenists explain these youthful crime phenomena?

The sad death of the queen of Belgium proves that the open car is the dangerous car. The queen was thrown from the car, struck her head against a tree, and was instantly killed. Had she been in a closed car, she could not have been thrown violently, and probably would have escaped death as did her husband, who was holding the wheel.

The open car is the ideal car to see the country and the sky, but a dangerous car for those who drive too fast.

San Francisco, as old in the minds of Americans as the word "California" itself, is cheerful. The great bridge that will unite San Francisco to Oakland across the bay is progressing rapidly. And the suspension bridge is already stretching its spiderweb cables across the Golden Gate, where the Pacific ocean comes rushing in to the bay.

Thanks to good management and an excellent engineer, Mr. Strauss, this Golden Gate bridge, with its magnificent span of more than 4,000 feet, will be finished on time and for less than the $35,000,000 guaranteed as maximum price.

England wants no war, with prosperity returning and spoils of the big war not yet digested. But the wing feathers of the peace angel must tremble at sight of British and Italian fleets in the Mediterranean, near the mouth of the Suez canal.

If Britain tries to close that canal to Italy, leaving thousands of Italian soldiers cut off from their base and from food supplies, there will probably be some heavy gunfire.

It seems unlikely that devotion to Ethiopia, even though her government be a member of the League of Nations, could persuade the British to force war at this moment.

BARBARA AND HER COUNT DEFY GHOSTS OF HAUNTED CASTLE

Tragic Love Story of a Queen Revealed as Couple Take Up Residence.

Copenhagen.—Count and Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow, the latter the former Barbara Hutton, Woolworth heiress, are defying a century-old superstition, "The Curse of Struensee," by taking the Castle of Hardenberg, on the beautiful island of Lalla, on Denmark's south coast, as their European home.

More than that, despite advice of friends, they are carrying out in at least one particular a strange parallel that, many believe, must drive them soon from the haunted castle back to the modern surroundings of New York's Park avenue.

Story of Tragic Love.

The story of the Castle of Hardenberg is that of a tragic love that ended in the beheading of Count John Frederik von Struensee, and in the imprisonment in Hanover, Germany, of the woman he adored, Queen Carolyn Matilda of Denmark, sister of King George II of England.

Count Haugwitz-Reventlow is not related to Count Struensee. The castle, where Struensee planned his idyllic improvements of Danish laws, which left him a hero to many, reverted on his death to the crown, and in 1774, two years later, came into the possession of the ancestors of Barbara's husband.

For many years the old castle has been spoken of as "haunted," and although it has been occupied continuously, the people of the neighborhood have waited patiently for the "curse of Struensee" to work. The "curse" was his dying wish that, since the queen he loved had been punished although he had taken all the blame, that those responsible for it come to an evil end.

An ancestor of Barbara's husband, Count Dimitiev Reventlow had been King Christian's tutor during his childhood, and there again the castle seemed to exert its spell. For Count Dimitiev was accused of teaching the young king things a king shouldn't know, and so making him easy for Count Struensee to persuade.

Queen Falls in Love.

When Struensee came into power he went to Carolyn Matilda and told her that with her help he could "raise the people of the country from their serfdom."

The queen listened to him, and came, according to the legend, to love him more than she loved King Christian. They met frequently, sometimes in the Castle of Hardenberg.

The nobles hated Struensee, and sought constantly for some weapon against him. His love for the queen gave them that weapon.

Eventually the queen and her lover, Struensee, were brought to trial. Struensee denied everything.

And then, when it seemed as if he might win his case, he learned that the queen had been imprisoned. He immediately confessed, and absolved her of all blame, on condition that she be freed.

He was shortly afterward beheaded in a public square. The queen was not executed, out of respect for her brother, King George of England. She was taken to a castle in Hanover, Germany, where she was held prisoner until she died.

What local residents are asking is this: Does tragedy lie ahead for Barbara, as it did for the other foreign-born lady, whose love led her to the Castle of Hardenberg?

White Rat Can Whip His Weight in Rattlesnakes

Provo, Utah.—Rattlesnake Pete, just an ordinary looking white rat, is just about as tough as his name indicates. In fact, the little rat can whip his weight in rattlesnakes, lizards, or what-have-you?

Dr. D. Eldon Beck, head of the biology department at Dixie Junior College of Utah, is the proud owner of the fighting rodent. He discovered the hardness of his pet when the rat, after being bitten several times by two rattlesnakes, proceeded to vanquish and kill both snakes.

Doctor Beck pitted his rat against a red racer snake, a bull lizard, one of the largest scaly lizards of southern Utah, and a chuckwalla. Pete licked them all and came back for more. That about exhausted the list of challengers in Doctor Beck's acquaintance.

To see if the immunity of rattlesnake Pete can be passed on to offspring, Doctor Beck plans to mate the animal. In the meantime, snakes are giving the Beck homestead a wide berth.

Christmas Card Takes 35 Years for Delivery

Philadelphia.—Madeline Adler posted a Christmas card to her sister Althea Rider back in December, 1909. The card was delivered in April, 1934, but Althea Rider is now Mrs. Althea Hagen, wife of the traveling secretary of the Philadelphia National league baseball team.

Cancellation marks on the card show it was stamped at 9 p. m. December 23, 1909, but post office officials had no explanation of where it had been for 25 years and four months.

Neither could they explain the delay of 25 years in the delivery of an Easter card to Miss Margaret K. Loos, twenty-nine, who barely remembers the girlhood friend who lived just three doors away when she posted the card.

The postmark on the yellowed card, with the bunny picture almost worn away, was March 26, 1910. The signature on the card was "Dorothy Smith" who is now Mrs. Robert Miller and has two children of her own.

Montana May Boast Gold-Plated Road

Malta, Mont.—Recent news stories telling of the vast amount of gold that is contained in the dirt used in construction of Fort Peck Dam leaves Phillips county residents unmoved.

Because, it present plans are consummated, there is a strong possibility that the county will have a gold-plated highway that will put the dam to shame.

Estimates are that about $5,000,000 in gold will be contained in the dam—about 5 cents per cubic yard. But the contemplated highway in Phillips county would contain an estimated 30 cents per yard.

Science Standardizes Cooing Birds' Sex Life

Minneapolis.—A University of Iowa zoologist reported that after years of experiments the love life of birds has been put on a year-around basis.

Emil Witschi told the American Association for the Advancement of Science it always has been a mystery why birds exhibited sex emotion only during the mating season.

Now, he said, they can be made to bill and coo for month on month.

It's done by injecting gonadotropic hormones, or serums obtained from pregnant horses and sheep.

Female sparrows, Witschi also said, are likely to lay four or five eggs and then quit. If the eggs are removed as he lays them, however, she will go on laying up to fifty or more.

Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes

The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes is the name given to the region near Mt. Katmai, on the southern shore of Alaska, opposite Kodiak island. It is now a national monument. In June, 1912, one of the greatest explosive volcanic eruptions of recent times blew several cubic miles of material out of this volcano, leaving a great gulf where the summit had been and in the bottom a crater lake of great depth. A few miles away across the divide lies a group of valleys from which burst many thousands of vents of superheated vapors. The region is described as a land of wonders.

The Downy Woodpecker

The Downy Woodpecker is black and white. On the napes there is a small patch of red on the back of the head. His dark, gray feet have sharp claws for clinging to the bark of trees. The piece of decaying tree trunk on which Downy perches is, usually, a variation of dark, gray patches of bark and weathered wood, with some rich, red-brown color where there is much decay.

Executed but Not Dead

In Abyssinia a man who has been duly executed is not always dead and possibly not even injured. The "execution" consists of the firing of one bullet from a stationary rifle—projecting through the wall of a large room—after which the man is either buried or set free. Often tall or short men are not hit in a vital spot. Sometimes those clever enough to move slightly are missed entirely. In any case the state is satisfied.—Collier's Weekly.

Vessels of the Great Lakes

The vessels of the Great Lakes fleets are of distinctive type and represent an effort to produce maximum efficiency in the trades and under the conditions of special lake operation. Peak ore and grain movements have helped some giant carriers that have set world records.

Overruling Supreme Court

The only way to overturn a decision of the Supreme court, whether it is reached by a divided vote or by unanimity, is to amend the Constitution in that particular which the court finds to be prohibitive of legislation.

GEORGE BRENT AND BETTE DAVIS COME TO ORPHEUM

Bette Davis and George Brent, again paired as screen lovers in the new Cosmopolitan production, "Special Agent," a Warner Bros. picture, will come to the Orpheum Thursday of next week.

The picture is said to reveal the inner workings of the U. S. Treasury Department, showing an entirely new angle of the Government's activities in wiping out the nation's public enemies.

The story is crisscrossed with tense dramatic situations in which secret service operatives face death in order to run down criminals and get evidence to convict them. Thrilling adventure and daring exploits follow every step of the secret operatives in their battle with the "killers."

Brent, in the role of a newspaper reporter on a New York daily, also allied with the Government as an undercover man, is trying to get evidence against the crooks and at the same time prevent the murder of Miss Davis, his sweetheart, who unwittingly has taken a job as a personal secretary to the head of the band.

The polished but ruthless killer is played by Ricardo Cortez. Others in the cast include Jack Lyle, Henry O'Neill, Robert Strange, Joseph Crehan, J. Carroll Nash and Robert Barrat.

The picture was directed by William Keighley from the screen play by Laird Doyle and Allen Finkel, based on the story idea by Martin Mooney.
