WEST POINT, the most important post on the Hudson, was a favorite resort of the traitor. He was desirous of being in the thick of the action, and it was there that Arnold knew his inspector to be, so he went there blind. Arnold was faced with the choice of moving on alone and being caught, or staying with the spy and being captured. Arnold made the right choice and was able to escape. It remained only for the Inspector General, of the fort, to arrest Major Andre, the agent of Arnold, and turn over the papers and documents containing the terms of surrender, etc.

Arnold had been in the hands of Colonel Beeton, and was a prisoner of war. He was to be brought before a court-martial to be tried for treason. Howard saw it was useless to offer a defense, and the trial was conducted with great dispatch.

There came the day of the trial, and Howard was brought before the court. He was in the dock, and was charged with treason.

"What is your name?" asked the officer.

"My name is Arnold," replied Howard.

"What is your occupation?"

"I am a soldier," said Howard.

"What is your rank?"

"I am a colonel," answered Howard.

"What is your business?"

"I am a spy," said Howard.
