An Eye-witness to the Hasting of Miller at Bardwell.

Observe an Account of the Thrilling Scene at Bardwell, where Miller Was Hanged.

On the last Wednesday evening a scene of fright and horror was witnessed at Bardwell, in which three persons were killed and two others were mortally wounded.

On the evening of the murder, Mrs. Ray and two daughters were out for a walk near the railroad fence, which runs along the west side of the town. Suddenly, they heard a noise and turned around to see a man approaching them. The man was carrying a large knife and began to speak to them. Mrs. Ray tried to run away, but the man caught her and began to stab her. Her daughters tried to help her, but they were also attacked.

They managed to escape and ran to the house of a neighbor, who called the police. The police arrived and found the body of Mrs. Ray and her daughters mortally wounded. The man who had attacked them was captured and taken to the county jail.

The man who killed Mrs. Ray and her daughters was later tried and found guilty of the crime. He was sentenced to death and hanged on the same day. The people of Bardwell were shocked and horrified by the crime and the hanging of the murderer.

And if we never break that tie, we will disturb and hard feelings in our land today? I would say there are many causes, but I think the greatest destroyers of peace are the ones we love, or believe that they love us. We cannot hold the love of another while we keep it locked in our hearts. We must tell them about it and judge for ourselves, and then let the law of nature govern our actions. We cannot win or keep love in something that we would never lose if we were wise and gentle in our treatment of others. Not many lives have we. One! Only one. How sacred should that life be, that narrow span! How miserable and desolate would it be, if we had not the right to offer to others, and be offered to others, this one life! Any of it to yourself, just read between the lines.

The earth can boast no purer tie, no more beautiful bond, than that of friendship. Of Freeport, Ill., began to fail rapidly, lost all her strength, and died. In a week after taking Mrs. Milian Lehr's wonder drug, she could eat vegetables, and was no longer the same. She could not eat vegetables generally, but when she took the drug she could eat them without difficulty. They assist digestion and cure headache.
