FULTON, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1935.

NUMBER THIRTY-NINE

ROTARY AND LIONS CLUBS IN MEETINGS

Steve Wiley spoke before the Lions Club last Friday regarding the action of the Supreme Court in rendering practically all the New Deal acts of legislation, passed as necessary for emergency sake. He said that in his opinion, neither the Supreme Court nor the Constitution are so sacred that changes could not be made for national government improvements.

Members of the Lions Club took tickets to sell for the Mayfield-Fulton football game to be played here Friday, Nov. 15.

During the regular weekly program of the Rotary Club Tuesday, Gus Bard gave an interesting talk in which he showed the many advantages we as citizens enjoy as members of a community.

He pointed out the various community activities which must necessarily be carried on, and expressed the opinion that every citizen should stand ready to do his part. Other members of the club spoke briefly along the same line.

Dr. Glynn Bushart explained the work that is being done by the Elks Club and the American Legion in the way of supplying free hospital services to indigent persons.

Mayor Paul DeMyer called attention to the fact that the new council goes into office next year, and asked that the community co-operate with city officials in carrying forward a program of general benefit to the city.

Joe Davis, head of Red Cross work in Fulton, told of the drive to start this week to obtain memberships to this organization, and asked that the people respond as the needs are heavy.

J. O. Lewis, superintendent of the Fulton city schools, told of illiteracy in Kentucky and the efforts being made to decrease it.

LEGION BACKS BIG ARMISTICE PROGRAM

The Fulton post of American Legion observed the 17th anniversary of the signing of the Armistice, last Monday, with a parade through the downtown business district at eleven o'clock, which included floats, bands, decorated cars, Boy Scouts, and school children of Fulton High and South Fulton. It was the finest Armistice celebration that has been held in Fulton for many years.

Business firms co-operating in the celebration, with downtown buildings and streets decorated with banners and flags. Monday night members of the Legion post and the Auxiliary enjoyed a banquet at the Legion Cabin.

During the banquet, Commander Jesse Jordan presided. Louis Kasnow recited the preamble of the Legion constitution. Mrs. Montell Manley and little Miss Eileen Ragsdale rendered several vocal numbers. Donna Jean DeMyer and Ruth Knighton, of Mrs. Spears dancing class, gave a doll dance. A tap dance was given by Miss Dorothy Ann Pearce. Paul Hornbeak led in singing a number of songs popular during the World War period. Cecil Weatherspoon announced the formation of a "Sons of the Legion" organization. Mayor Paul DeMyer, Chaplain Robert Lamb, Rev. E. M. Mathis, Rev. Woodrow Fuller, Rev. W. D. Ryan and Rev. J. S. Robinson.

The following winners of prizes in the Legion parade were announced by the judges: Mrs. I. M. Jones, $10 for the best float; J. T. Powell $5 for the best car in the parade; Mrs. A. B. Roberts, Mrs. C. C. Parker and L. Kasnow won prizes for best all round floats; Hartwell Parker, second best all round float prize; H. Rucker, third best all round float; O. K. Laundry best merchant display; Fulton High School band, best marching detail; the Bonus Wagon, most comical apparatus.

May God bless you and send you friends in time of need.

MRS. M. B. BROWN.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Gregory have returned to her home at Princeton, Ky. Mr. and Mrs. Gregory accompanied the latter's aunt, Mrs. Sam Bennett and nurse, Mrs. Ringo, back to Fulton, they having visited two weeks in Princeton and with friends in Hopkinsville.

SATURDAY ANOTHER TRADE DAY EVENT

Last Saturday was another Trade Day in Fulton and hundreds of people gathered here to take advantage of merchandise offered by local merchants and to participate in the special inducements. The following were the lucky persons Saturday: Dorothy Dale Matheny, Leland Adams, Mrs. Dallas Cox, M. C. Moon and Myrtle Kuykendall.

In this issue of THE NEWS appears a half page advertisement announcing Trade Day Events every Saturday between now and Christmas, which is only 33 shopping days off. Local merchants are co-operating to make these weekly trade days possible, and in addition they are offering attractive prices on merchandise for farm and home. Lay your plans now to be in Fulton next Saturday and to do your holiday shopping here.

MARKED IMPROVEMENT ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

Marked improvement of economic conditions in Kentucky is reflected in figures released today by George H. Goodman, Works Progress Administrator. Figures compiled May 31, showed 90,585 families and a total of 134,803 workers had been certified as eligible for employment on Works Progress Administration projects within the state. A survey as of October 31, shows these figures have dropped 9,678 and 19,035 respectively which means literally that 9,678 families and 19,035 individual workers have found employment in regular channels, and are no longer dependent upon the Works Progress Administration for jobs.

As each project in the state starts, Mr. Goodman said, we find the amazing fact that about twenty percent of all those now being called have found gainful employment in other fields, since May.

As of November 1, $15,934,942 worth of Works Progress projects had been approved for Kentucky by Washington officials. On the same date 1,014 projects were under way in the state with from 75 to 100 starting daily since that time. Approximately 28,000 men now are at work at security wages with a marked daily increase in that figure.

Until November 1, the Works Progress Administration in Kentucky had spent $1,133,792 for materials and supplies with which to carry on projects. The bulk of this amount has gone to vendors within the borders of the state. At the rate projects are now being started orders for material and equipment are being placed at the rate of $35,000 daily.

The above facts and figures, Mr. Goodman said, reflect a much healthier condition than prevailed three months ago. It was his opinion the improvements were normal and in no way seasonal and will continue gradually. Continued improvement is to be expected, Mr. Goodman said, and will be assisted materially now that the Works Progress Administration has swung into action and is giving employment and purchasing materials on a large scale over the entire state. Aside from this judicious spread of funds, he said, the net result will be improvements of a permanent nature all of which ultimately will increase the wealth of the state.

Every editor has days when the thoughts come rapidly and news items roll off his pencil in rapid succession. On such days the editorial column fills up quickly and the empty columns are filled with news. On such days he thinks the newspaper business is the greatest business on earth, and he is glad he is in it. On the other days the well springs of inspiration seems frozen up. There is no news and the paragraphs that he would write will not come. On such days the editor wonders why he ever got into the newspaper business and thinks of the other things he might have done.

The depression has brought out the best in good men and weaknesses of others. The industrious man has become more industrious and the lazy man more lazy.

It is better to deal with an honest man without the law, than to deal with a dishonest man and have the law on your side.

The share the wealth movement is not new. It was started years ago by the fellows who made a practice of touching up all their friends for the loan of a five that they never expected to pay back.

A YOUNG PIONEER

When several hundred families were sent to Alaska from the Middle West to settle the Matanuska Valley, the Red Cross sent a nurse, Madeleine de Foras, to remain with them for a year to help protect their health. Among the first friends she made were the little pioneer, Arthur Mack, 4 years old, and "Prince," the pup who went with his young master to Alaska.

GUY SNOW HURT IN MIMIC WARFARE

Re-enactment of a World War battle at Newport, Ark., Monday night brought injuries to two veterans, one of them being Guy Snow, formerly of Fulton. News was received here by his sister, Mrs. C. C. Parker on Central-av., soon after the accident.

Mr. Snow, manager of the Malco Theatre at Newport, and director of a realistic war pageant staged before 3,000 spectators at an Armistice Day feature by the Newport American Legion post, may lose his right eye. Hiram Jones, 40, Jacksonport, Ark., farmer, suffered burns about the face.

Bomb explosions caused both casualties. A spectator interfered with Snow's throwing of a bomb and the missile exploded a few feet from his face. Jones ran upon another bomb which burst tardily. The crowd unaware of the actual injuries suffered, laughed and cheered as stretcher bearers carried the two victims from the amphitheatre in which the mimic battle was staged.

HIT-AND-RUN DRIVER RUNS DOWN WOMAN

Miss Mary Johnston was run down Sunday night about 8:30 by a hit-and-run driver, at the corner of Carr and Second streets, as she and her companion, Mrs. Butler were returning home from church. Miss Johnston was critically injured, and was taken to the Fulton hospital, where it was found she sustained a broken collar bone, fractured ribs, internal injuries and severe lacerations about the head and body.

Mrs. Butler suffered only minor bruises and muscle strains. Investigation has failed to reveal who the driver of the car was, but officers are following every clue in an effort to learn the identity of the hit-and-run driver.

F. D. R. HOLDS LEAD IN POPULARITY VOTE

Shift of One Tied State, Montana, To Roosevelt Would Tie Electoral Vote in This Poll, 261 to 216.

By JOHN THOMAS WILSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—As go the four electoral votes of Montana, so goes the nationwide "Next President" poll, for this week, at least. Those four Montana electors are deadlocked in a tie vote at the end of balloting this week. If the deadlock is broken and those four votes go to Roosevelt, the electoral vote of 45 states for the week will be tied 261 all. If they go to the Republican choices then the G. O. will lead 265 to 257. At this time, a third Roosevelt 257, Republicans 265 and four tied in Montana.

The popular vote to date is 17,979,579. Roosevelt continues to hold the lead with 63,861 to 73,838 for the Republican choices. Other Democratic choices total 8,409, while third party choices garnered 4,687.

TAKE A LESSON FROM RAILROAD AS TO SAFETY

Railroads have done their bit to enforce the pledge, "I will drive safely."

Not a single fatality due to a train accident has occurred in the first half of 1935. Once considered one of the dangerous methods of transportation, modern railroads have seemingly taken the lead in solving the increasing problem of accidental deaths while traveling, according to John L. Downs of Champaign, superintendent of the Illinois division of the Illinois Central System.

"Three times in the last four years the railroads have had records equally as good as this for the first half of the year," the superintendent pointed out.

"The railroads are getting to be so free from casualties, as far as accidents to trains are concerned, that a passenger is actually far safer traveling by train than he is at home in bed."

In all kinds of accidents to passengers, there has been an average of one fatality for every 400,000 miles traveled on the railroads, as compared with one fatality for every 20,000,000 miles traveled by automobile. Only 242 passengers were killed in accidents of all kinds on the railroads of the United States during the last 10 years, while more than 290,000 lives were lost in automobile accidents on the highways. This amounts to an average of 84 fatalities per year for railroads, and more than 29,000 for automobiles.

There is rarely a case, Downs pointed out, in which proper care and attention by the automobile driver could not have avoided grade crossing accidents, which were responsible for 17,000 of the 290,000 automobile casualties in the last 10 years. Last year about one automobile grade crossing accident out of every three and about one resulting fatality out of every five were caused by vehicles which actually ran into the sides of trains.

"The railroads are doing everything they can to reduce the toll of death in transportation," the superintendent declared. "Proof of the Illinois Central's intention is apparent in the fact that this railroad is now well into its eighth year without a passenger fatality in a train accident. In common with all railroads, the Illinois Central welcomes the governmental program for cutting down the number of grade crossings, and thereby reducing the railroads' participation in the toll of death on the highways."

Martha Moore is spending this week in Lexington. She attended the University of Kentucky homecoming and is visiting friends.

SOUTH FULTON

Two classes in the High School made a field trip Thursday and went through the Swift Plant. About an hour was spent listening to detailed explanation of equipment and various operations in the processes used in producing butter, ice cream and packed foods. The most interest was found in the department where poultry is killed, picked, packed and frozen for shipment. Some of the party were permitted to pick some of the chickens by the paraffin process. At the end of the tour each member of the party was given refreshments and all returned to school wiser and happier for the trip. BASKETBALL. The teams went to Dixie Friday night to play the Flying Rebels. Both teams gave a good account for themselves. The girls lost to Dixie 41 to 17 while the boys won to even the set 30 to 18. On Saturday night the strong Bradford teams were turned back in the South Fulton gym. The Red Angels took the opener 37 to 29 by pulling away in the last quarter after a hard battle and spectacular plays on both sides. The Cardinals boys flashed a fast passing game to get revenge for a former defeat. Robert Lee McKinney was outstanding on the offense with 18 points. Reliable Johnnie Lancaster was everywhere on the defensive breaking up enemy passes and working the ball to mates down the floor. The final figures were 30 to 12 in favor of South Fulton.

The teams seem destined to go strong this season. The boys have a fighting, alert team and all of them are accurate shots. There were no substitutions made against Bradford as Palgrave, McKinney, Dedmon, Faulkner and Lancaster roared through to win.

There is an abundant supply of experienced material out for the girls team. Margaret Maynard and Hazel Ross are seniors and seem sure to win regular places on the starting line up. Doran, Allen, Todd and Alice Ross are Juniors and will be hard to beat out of places in the line-up. Others who can find their way about on the court are Rosa Bell, Virginia Brooks, Mildred Scott, Helen Maupin, Lillian Vaughan, Dorothy Gafford.

The schedule has been almost completed and is as follows: Nov. 15, Woodland there; Nov. 22, Dixie here; Nov. 23, Kenton there; Dec. 13, Kenton here; Dec. 20, open; Jan. 3, Troy there; Jan. 10, open; Jan. 17, Woodland here; Jan. 24, Greenfield there; Jan. 31, Greenfield here; Feb. 7, Sharon here; Feb. 14, County Tournament (probably); Feb. 21, Girls District Tournament, probably; Feb. 28, Boys District Tournament, probably.

New outfits have been ordered for both teams and they expect to be dressed out in these warm-ups and uniforms before the snow flies.

TEACHERS MEET. The following South Fulton Teachers attended the Teacher's meeting at Union City Saturday. Prof. and Mrs. H. J. Priestley, Prof. Orvin Moore, Prof. A. L. Mathews, Mrs. J. E. Thompson, Mrs. Elbert Lowery, Miss Alice D. Williams, Miss Myrtle Brown, Miss Sarah Pickle.

All the classes above the second grade were in the Armistice Day Parade sponsored by the American Legion.

A new concrete walk has been completed from the front entrance to the gymnasium. This will be a great help to visitors to games and also serve to keep mud from being brought into the buildings on hundreds of feet.

JOAN CRAWFORD AND ACE DIRECTOR TO MAKE HIS HIT IN "I LIVE MY LIFE" AT ORPHEUM

Joan Crawford and W. S. Van Dyke! The star and director who collaborated with such success to make "Forsaking All Others" are united again in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new vehicle for the glamorous actress, "I Live My Life," which comes to the Orpheum Theatre, Sunday and Monday.

Brian Aherne, the English actor who played opposite Helen Hayes in "What Every Woman Knows," is Joan Crawford's leading man in the virile role of a hard-boiled archaeologist who falls in love with a society girl.

The locale of the picture shifts between the exotic Greek island of Naxos, where the lovers meet, New York City and a Connecticut estate. The Orpheum Theatre will run a continuous show starting at 1 p. m. both Sunday and Monday so that everyone may see this outstanding picture.

"SONG OF THE DAMNED," DRAMA OF DEVIL'S ISLAND AT STRAND, NOV. 19-20

A harrowing tale of the French Devil's Island penal colony called "Song of the Damned," featuring Victor Jory, Florence Rice and Norman Foster, will head the new program at the Strand Theatre, next Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 19 and 20.

The inspiration for the film's title springs from the tortured, grievous chant the convicts sing to give vent to their hopeless yearning for France and freedom.

Jory enacts the role of an adventurer-spy condemned to this tropical Hades after a thwarted attempt to steal some military secrets. Together with Stanley Andrews, his compatriot and father of Florence Rice, and young Foster, serving a sentence for a crime he never committed, Jory strikes for freedom across the trackless, marshy jungle unknown to each other, both Jory and Foster fall in love with the lovely Miss Rice. With freedom imminent at last, the romantic triangle engenders a tragic denouement which reverts the scene of action back to the prison camp from which the convicts had just escaped.

Costume of Suede Is Top o' the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

STOP, look and listen for it's most important news we are telling you—all about the latest sensation in fashion—namely the costume done entirely of handsome, colorful suede.

In the perfectly stunning dresses, jackets, swagger coats and many-piece ensembles of all-leather which are stepping out into the limelight this season, an epoch-making chapter is being written into the annals of fashion history.

A significant thing about this intriguing all-leather movement is that designers have discovered that suede adapts itself with equal facility to formal as well as casual sporty styling. Which is a line of thought to which our minds must adjust would we fully appreciate the broad scope covered in the new leather fashions, since hitherto the mention of leather in a style sense meant its use for sturdy sports-wear only. In the new order of affairs suede qualifies as aptly and happily as a medium for the loveliest and daintiest of formal evening apparel as it does for the sturdiest of outdoor garments.

To prove to your satisfaction the truth of the above assertion, we invite you to glimpse the "love of a gown" as pictured to the left in the illustration. The lady of the evening as here portrayed is Bette Davis of cinema fame. She is wearing an exquisite gown of white chevreau suede. Which goes to show that Hollywood agrees with Paris in this all-leather vogue now sweeping throughout the style centers of the world. An adorable gown, you will admit, is this beguiling suede form. It has the sleek, suave lines to which so many of fashion followers aspire. A high neckline in front with low backline outlined with braided suede adds further distinction to this charming gown.

Suede evening wraps are also in high fashion, either of the short jacket styling or in loose swagger lines. Capes, too, if you please, some of which are elegantly collared with white fox.

To the right in the picture, Kathleen Burke, another favorite, is wearing a five-piece ensemble done entirely of handsome suede, in a fascinating tone of rich hunter's green. It is one of the hand-laced types (the skirt is sewn together with leather thongs) such as is foremost in fashion this year. In fact, laced leather is the passport to high style in the thrilling suede outfits that are being turned out for fall and winter. For the seams to be laced together as here shown dates your costume as being unmistakably a "last word" creation.

In the instance of the five-piece "set" here shown, lacing is carried out along the edge of the side-front fastening of the form-fitting skirt, also on the collar and revers of the swagger coat and two-buttoned vest. A saucy youthful suede beret together with a miser's drawing bag completes this perfectly stunning street outfit. As to the cunning outfit below in the group, it tells at a glance that it has gone decidedly "football." It is Maureen O'Sullivan, of film prestige, who in flying colors is scoring her touchdowns in this hand-laced suede suit of devastating chic. Even the buttons are laced as is also the pig-grain leather football hat. Her bag is of the same leather ingeniously shaped like a football. The suit's standup collar is news.

CREPE AND VELVET
By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Velvet enters into every phase of the mode this season. The afternoon dress which combines velvet with wool or silk is a highlighted number on the present style program. In the model pictured the designer has introduced velvet very effectively. The flowers at the shoulder are also of velvet. A high military-type neckline accents the chic of this costume.

COLOR PERVADES
WHOLE ENSEMBLE

Color is not content this season to be a splash or a dab—it pervades the entire ensemble from tip to toe and has finally invaded the field of woman's most conservative color accessory—silk stockings.

The traditional beige and gray tones have made way for red and green stockings. Wine red stockings are smart with all of the wine tones. Suede green silk stockings are worn with greens and browns, with green suede or antelope gloves, shoes, and bags to match. Very sheer, two and three thread hose, in green or red make their debut for dressier wear.

Navy blue hose are high style with a blue town suit collared with raspberry red velvet and worn with a matching hat. With a Venetian green dress accented in brown green silky stockings and brown shoes are news.

Some New Shades Added to Hosiery for Autumn Wear

Hosiery, this fall is here in a variety of new shades. In keeping with a growing feeling of luxury in the evening mode, smart complements will be provided for the gold, silver, and bronze slippers worn with gowns of Eastern influence. For daytime a series of browns will be best liked—golden brown, wine brown, brownish taupe with a rose cast, natural beige and coppery brown—to go with autumn colors.

Smoother Hair Styles

Smoother hair styles are being seen for early fall. Advance styles would indicate that the elaborate rows of curls, popular for many months, are to be laid aside—until we all change our minds again.

Handbag Made of Wood
A smart handbag is large and flat, designed to look like an enormous compact, and it is made of wood in a dark brown natural finish.

United States Consumes
Half of World's Lumber

According to "The Year Book" of the New York Society of Architects, the United States produces and consumes, roughly, half of all the lumber of the world. About 80 per cent of all residences in the United States are wood built; and on the "arms, 98 per cent of all structures. In account of its abundance, prevalence and comparative cheapness, lumber has been crucially associated with the economic history of the country.

"Even today, after the advent of many different competing materials, the lumber industry ranks near the top with some 20,000 mills, $7,000,000,000 of capital investment, employing directly and indirectly more than a million men in good times and a larger producing capacity than it had when the mills were twice as numerous. With the disappearance of the frontier, the industry is changing from a purely extractive to a reproducing industry. The private forests are beginning to be systematically regrown and perpetuated; already about 40 per cent of all lumber comes from renewed forests. Back of this adaptation are the vast public forests containing about one-half the total standing timber, which are on a sustained yield basis."

Baffling Mystery Solved;
Killer Wore Horseshoes

Not long ago France was baffled by an unusual murder mystery. With in a week three friends, two men and a woman, were stabbed to death on the border of a small town. All were armed and no struggle had taken place. The soggy earth around them showed only the hoof-prints of a horse.

Later the murderer, a woman, was discovered. She had disarmed the victims' suspicion by a friendly chat, hence the surprise attack. And she had concealed her sandals, fitted with horseshoes, by a long cloak—Collier's Weekly.

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HOW PADDY WARNED LIGHTFOOT

IT WAS a queer partnership, that partnership between Lightfoot and Paddy, but it was a good partnership. They had been the best of friends for a long time. Paddy had always been glad to have Lightfoot visit his pond. To tell the truth, he was rather fond of handsome Lightfoot. You know, Paddy is himself not at all handsome. On land he is a rather clumsy looking fellow and really homely. So he admired Lightfoot greatly. That is one reason why he proposed that they be partners.

Lightfoot himself thought the idea a splendid one. He spent that night browsing not far from Paddy's pond. With the coming of daylight he lay down under some thick growing hemlock trees near the upper end of Paddy's pond. It was a quiet, peaceful day. It was so quiet and peaceful and beautiful that it was hard to believe that hunters with terrible guns were searching the Green Forest for beautiful Lightfoot. But they were, and Lightfoot knew that sooner or later one of them would be sure to visit Paddy's pond. So, though he rested and took short naps all through that beautiful day, he was anxious. He couldn't help but be.

The next morning found Lightfoot back in the same place. But this morning he took no naps. He rested, but all the time he was watchful and alert. A feeling of uneasiness possessed him. He felt in his bones that danger in the shape of a hunter with a terrible gun was not far distant.

But the hours slipped away and little by little he grew less uneasy. He began to hope that that day would prove as peaceful as the previous day had been. Then suddenly there was a sharp report from the farther end of Paddy's pond. It was almost like a pistol shot. However, it wasn't a pistol shot. It was a shot at all. It was the slap of Paddy's broad tail on the surface of the water. Instantly Lightfoot was on his feet. He knew just what that meant. He knew that Paddy had seen or heard or smelled a hunter.

It was even so. Paddy had heard

That the Constitution, the most famous vessel in the history of the United States navy, earned her popular nickname, "Old Ironsides," from the hardness of her planking and timbers? a dry stick snap. It was a very tiny snap but it was enough to warn Paddy. With only his head above the water he had watched in the direction from which that sound had come. Presently, stealing quietly along towards the pond, a hunter had come in view. Instantly Paddy had brought his broad tail down on the water with all his force. He knew that Lightfoot would know that that meant danger. Then Paddy had dived, and swimming under water, had sought the safety of his house. He had done his part and there was nothing more he could do.

QUESTION BOX
by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have a very dear friend, a Scotchman, who has just gone back to Scotland. I happen to know that he would never spend his own money to go back, yet he has gone. How do you think he got back?

Yours truly,

TOM KATT.

Answer: Your friend most likely heard some one sing "The Blue-bells of Scotland" and it carried him back.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I know a lady who never got married and she is now 42 years old. I asked her why she hadn't married and she said: "Why should I get married as long as I have a parrot and a monkey?" What did she mean by that?

Sincerely,

COMB E. OHE.

Answer: Probably her parrot swears and her monkey chews tobacco and she figures therefore she doesn't need a husband.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My husband was saying that he knows a man who uses "snokeless" tobacco.

I've known of horseless carriages, wireless telegraphy, seedless oranges,

but what in the world is "snokeless tobacco?"

Yours truly,

IMA YAPP.

Answer: Chewing tobacco.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

My father says he washes his eyes out every night before going to bed. If this is true how does he get them back in again?

Sincerely,

I. LIDD.

Answer: He probably wears glasses.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Is it true that everything that goes up must come down?

Sincerely,

D. POSITOR.

Answer: Everything that goes up does come down excepting a bank.

For him there were no tears, but only joy.

He never will be called upon to

The bitter loss that robbed us of our

With such clear eyes to futures bright with bliss.

Will never live to see the hopes he Come tumbling round his head. . .

And we who miss

His boyish laughter ringing through

His happy plans, so confident and

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL
SUNDAY SCHOOL LessonBy REV. P. H. FITZWATER, D. D.,
Member of Faculty, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.
© Western Newspaper Union.Lesson for November 17*THE RETURN FROM CAPTIVITY

LESSON TEXT—Ezra 1:1-6; Psalm

126:1-6.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Psalm 126:3.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A New Song.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Coming Home Rejoicing.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR

TOPIC—Making a Fresh Start.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT

TOPIC—Thanksgiving for God's Care.

1. The Return Predicted (Jer. 29:1-14).

It seems that false prophets were flourishing in Babylon telling the people that they would speedily be restored to their own land. To counteract this the Lord moved Jeremiah to send this letter to the captives in Babylon (vs. 8, 9). In this letter he advised them to settle down and quietly pursue their regular callings of life and not to be led astray by the false prophets (vs. 6, 7).

1. The length of the captivity (v.

10). Their coming back was to be

"after seventy years." From Daniel

9:2 it is clear that seventy years means a definite time. It dates from the time when the first company was taken captive, among which Daniel was found.

2. Recovered by God (vs. 10-14).

God's purpose in the captivity was to cure them of their idolatrous practices.

He assured them that when his purpose was accomplished he would visit them and convince them of his good purpose toward them. Their captivity he would turn away, gather them from all the nations, and bring them into their own land.

II. The Predicted Captivity Fulfilled

(Ezra 1:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus (vs.

1-4).

a. This was not by accident, but that the word of the Lord might be fulfilled (vs. 1). What God has promised he will do; he never forgets.

b. By divine initiation (vs. 1). "The Lord stirred up the spirit of Cyrus."

How this was done we do not know.

Possibly Daniel brought to his attention the prophecy of Isaiah and Jeremiah (Isa. 44:28; Jer. 25:12). Every impulse to do good in all men is caused by the Lord. It may have been that Cyrus only saw his own action as a piece of statecraft—the creation of a buffer nation between his kingdom and that of Egypt.

c. The content of his proclamation

(vs. 2-4).

(1) "The Lord God of heaven hath charged me to build him a house in Jerusalem" (v. 2). This makes clear that he had some impression of God's hand upon him.

(2) Appeal to Jewish patriotism (v.

3). He invokes upon such as possess the national religious feeling, the blessing of God, and commands them to go and build the house of the Lord

God.

(3) Lend assistance (v. 4). Many of the Jews were established in business and therefore were not free to go.

Many, no doubt, had lost their national spirit and therefore did not desire to go. All such were to lend friendly assistance in silver, gold, and beasts.

2. The response to Cyrus' proclamation (vs. 5, 6). The chief of the fathers of Judah and Benjamin and the priests and Levites presented themselves as willing and ready to go.

The company which returned was largely made up of representatives of Judah and Benjamin.

3. The royal favor (vs. 7-11). Cyrus brought forth the vessels of the house of the Lord which Nebuchadnezzar had carried away from Jerusalem and put into the house of his gods. Now to have 5,400 of these vessels returned to their owners and sent back to Jerusalem to be put to their original use, met a hearty response by the Jews.

III. The Gladness and Rejoicing of the Returning Exiles (Ps. 126:1-6).

1. The proclamation of Cyrus as a dream (v. 1). They recognized that their going back was through the favor of the Lord.

2. Their laughter and singing (vs.

2, 3). They not only recognized this as the favor of the Lord upon them but testified thereof in the hearing of the heathen round about them.

3. Their prayer for prosperity in the land (v. 4). They were not only going back with the consciousness of the good hand of the Lord upon them, but were trusting him for fruitfulness of the land.

4. Sowing in tears (vs. 5, 6). The seed which they were to sow in the land was so precious that they seemed to have hesitated as to sowing, and yet they recognized that joy would follow their sorrow as they brought with them the sheaves of the harvest.

Monotony

Whether we are rich or poor, we all have to fight against monotony—doing the same thing over and over until it loses interest.

We can fight monotony with variety, and one way to do this is by making a wise use of leisure. If we wish to avoid the feeling that we are merely machines, we must become interested in many things.

Patience

Patience is bitter, but its fruit sweet.—Rousseau.

FIRST INSTALLMENT

Rose Morris was at once the richest and the prettiest girl in Dover, Michigan. She drove a sleek, fat little pony hitched to a marvelous wicker dogcart, the envy of every child in town, and to Jimmy Rowan she represented all that was both desirable and unattainable.

By the time he was fifteen he was hopelessly in love with her and he carved hearts and arrows on all the trees in his yard and initiated them with interlocking R's and J's. He wrote her passionate missives and told her of his undying devotion. He never sent the notes, of course, and his declarations were only whispered to the empty air, for he still remained "the Rowan kid," his people were desperately poor and he was cursed with a sensitive pride. Jim was surprised one day to hear that Mr. Hiram Morris had "gone out of business" and was leaving for the West. What that meant the boy did not know, but he understood that the Morris fortune was not what it had been. Rose and her mother remained in Dover. They lived on much as usual and they referred vaguely to those large interests which kept Mr. Morris away from home. But the pony and dogcart were gone and so were the high-stepping bays. It was while Jim was working his way through college that they quietly moved away. He Morris house sold for barely enough to pay the mortgage. Some people endure poverty cheerfully, others with a grim stoicism; the majority of people who are born poor accept it with a fatalistic resignation and never look forward to anything else.

Jim Rowan was unlike any of these. He loathed poverty; it was unendurable. It had kept him from knowing Rose Morris. He swore he would make himself rich for her sake. In time this became a fixed idea with him and he quit college and went to work savagely. It took him quite a while, however, to realize that riches are not come by in a hurry and that he was getting nowhere.

He had lost track of the Morris completely—there was no use of keeping in touch with them—but he still had his day-dreams, he still thought of himself as Rose's prince who sooner or later would search her out and seat her upon a throne. Depression seized him occasionally when he saw how hopeless was the task he had set for himself.

At such times he grew desperate and he told himself that no price was too great to pay for success. He longed for some opportunity of becoming suddenly rich and vowed that he would sell his soul for such a chance.

The chance came finally, or it seemed to come, with the news of the Klondike discovery. Jim joined the first rush to the Yukon and he arrived in Dawson City with the firm determination to make a fortune somehow, anyhow. Here again, however, he learned that money was not to be had for the asking.

Placer mining was a hazardous undertaking, with the odds a thousand to one against success. Education counted for little in a country where men were judged on a pick-and-shovel basis and paid for the actual work they did. Jim saw that here was not the place in which to earn a fortune; here was nothing but speculation, a chance, a gamble either with men or with nature.

In order to beat the game one had to risk all, then double his winnings and risk them again and again. To gamble here was not a self to the daily practice of everybody.

Men gambled with their death when they hit the trail; they gambled again when they staked their labor and their time against Nature's bedrock secrets, only they took longer chances than when they heaped their chips on the roulette table or dropped their "pokes" on the high card. There was this difference, too: Nature seldom played fairly, whereas there were many square gambling houses in Dawson.

Jim Rowan fitted himself to his new surroundings and adopted himself to a new code of morals. He played as other men played, except in one respect: he never played for the excitement or for the fun of it, he played only to win. He played for Rose Morris. He tried speculating in claims, but he was unlucky; his only winnings came from the manipulating of Dawson City real estate or at cards, and the time when he found himself the owner of a huge front street saloon and gambling house, together with a nickname of the Alaskan flavor.

Perhaps a score of people knew him as James Rowan, but to the thousands that went in and out of his place he was "The Michigan Kid." That was the way he even signed his checks, for the name had brought him luck, and superstitiously he clung to it.

Life flowered at a furious pace in those early days. Reputations were made in a night, in six months they were hallowed, in a year they had become legendary. Here were many celebrities in the Yukon country the mere mention of whom evoked tales of sensational exploits on the trail, at the mines, or at the gambling tables; the one perhaps best known of all was "The Michigan Kid." He it was who best typified the composure, the steady nerve, the recklessness of his profession.

A hundred stories were told about the Michigan Kid and some were not pleasant for it required a ruthless man to hold down the job that Jim had taken, but most of them had to do with his luck. That luck became a byword, finally; men blessed with some extraordinary and unexpected good fortune were apt to boast that they had "Michigan's luck." "Michigan's luck" became an Alaskan phrase.

More than once Rowan took stock of his winnings and realized that he had nearly attained the goal he had set for himself, but in a variety of ways intervened to prevent him from quite reaching the quitting point. Time crept along. The cycle of life for placer camps is brief.

Dawson grew, flourished, began to die; representatives of big companies appeared and bought up big games of property; they talked of huge dredging and hydraulic projects.

Some of these newcomers were possessed of the gambling fever and they tried their luck against "The Michigan Kid's." Rumors spread of big games in the back rooms of the Kid's place, games where the sky was the limit. One man in particular scoffed at "Michigan's luck" and prophesied that he would "get" the Kid—send him out of the country broke. This was a Colonel Johnson, a great engineer and mining promoter who represented a London syndicate. He and Rowan met finally, much as famous duellists meet, and behind locked doors they played for twenty hours.

What the stakes were nobody knew, but they must have been enormous and luck must have been the Kid's way, as usual, for Colonel Johnson rose finally, stepped out into the hall and killed himself.

That at least was the story which was made public and which the authorities accepted. Certain spiteful-minded persons whispered knowingly that this story was all a fabrication, that "Michigan's luck" had finally deserted him and that the

Thanksgiving

—when the MOST LUSCIOUS DINNERS

will be Electrically Cooked

LET the foreigners brag . . . but no king on earth eats a grander meal than we Americans when we sit down to an old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner!

And nowadays the most luscious Thanksgiving dinner is electrically cooked. Why the most luscious? Because with modern electric cooking meats and vegetables bake or stew in their own juices. This preserves all the flavors, the aromas, the nourishing elements, and assures tenderness without shrinkage.

Clean, fast, economical, safe, time-saving and labor-saving . . . cooking with the modern electric range is far and away the most satisfactory method of preparing food with heat.

Why not cook your Thanksgiving dinner on a new electric range in your own kitchen this year? Thanksgiving Day is only two weeks off, but there is still time to have a range installed. Come in today and let us give you all details . . . or see your local dealer. You'll find prices moderate with easy payment terms.

shot had been fired inside, not outside, the room.

Ugly rumors such as these flew through the streets, but whether they reached the ears of the Kid nobody ever knew. Perhaps they did. Perhaps that was why he said so much as saying good by to anybody he caught the next down-river boat.

When Jim Rowan closed the door of his steamer stationery behind him, he drew from his pocket a wallet, and from this he carefully extracted a blurry, time-yellowed picture of Rose Morris. It was a picture he had clipped from a Dover newspaper on the day Rose graduated from the local high school and it showed her as a girl in white with a floppy hat and a sash of ribbon about her waist. It was perhaps the one and only personal possession that he had never risked losing at some time or other. He gazed at it now for quite a while.

He wondered if Rose were still alive. If so, she must have grown into a beautiful woman, yes, and a good woman—here the gambler was speaking. No doubt she was married. He pondered this thought deliberately and it awakened a feeling of regret too indefinite to be called a pang, for long ago he had realized that it was not the flesh-and-blood Rose Morris that he worshipped, but an idea and an ideal. Of course, he proposed to find her—that was the one thing he had in mind—but what would happen when he had found her was another matter.

When he boarded the steamship at St. Michael he saw no familiar faces, and inasmuch as his name meant nothing to his fellow passengers, he felt a great relief. Already he had begun to realize, as he had not realized in Dawson, that whatever "The Michigan Kid" may have stood for on the upper river, back home that name would stand for something altogether different.

Back home! The words passed a peculiar significance for men who have not been "outside" in more than five years. Nobody but the homeward-bound Alaskan could in the least appreciate them.

At Nome the ship hove to for twenty-four hours, and Rowan went ashore to see what the place looked like. Here again he passed unnoticed, and he was greatly cheered by that fact. If he could walk the streets of an Alaskan gold camp without being recognized, it argued that he would have no difficulty whatever in the big world outside.

His attention was attracted by a poster which advertised an informal rally of all the citizens of Nome who hailed from Michigan. The meeting was to be held that night for the purpose of general good-fellowship and acquaintanceship and with the ultimate view of organizing a Wolverine Society. Jim decided to go.

It turned out to be a pleasant gathering. A glad-hand committee was at the door to introduce strangers around; there was a program of entertainment, with refreshments promised afterward.

Jim Rowan grinned. Here was old home stuff. He wondered what these pleasant-faced men and women would think if they knew that he, the unobtrusive visitor, was "The Michigan Kid," the most notorious "sporting man" in all the north.

He heard his name mentioned during the evening—when a judge from Lansing delivered a speech eulogizing the home state and referred to the Kid as "that unsavory character" of the upper Yukon who has brought odium upon the fair name of our birthplace. Again Jim grinned. Well, he had the money anyhow. One has to pay something for success.

Nowhere did he hear a name or see a face that he knew, with perhaps one exception—the face of an old man who sat in a quiet corner. It was a bearded face and the man was poorly dressed. He wore rubber boots and overalls and a faded threadbare Mackinaw that hung loosely from his stooping shoulders. His hair was thin and gray and he coughed a good deal.

Jim studied the old fellow's profile and decided that he had probably seen the man across the gambling table or the bar—a river of derelicts like this one had flowed in and out of his place during these recent years. He had about put him out of his mind when the man rose to leave. Then Rowan started, leaned forward, his eyes fixed themselves upon the stranger's bearded cheek.

What The Telephone Business Means To Kentucky

THE Southern Bell Company spent more than $36,850,000 during the five years of the depression to operate, maintain and improve Kentucky's telephone service. This was an important contribution to the progress of the State during a time when work was vitally needed and industrial activity was at a low level.

During 1934, which was far from a good year, the telephone company's operating expenses in Kentucky amounted to more than $4,550,000 and $1,050,000 was spent for addition to plant.

To build, operate and maintain this extensive plant requires the services of more than 1,800 skilled workers. Their annual pay roll is more than $2,000,000, most of which is spent in the State for food, clothing, housing and other needs.

Many of these telephone men and women are home-owners. They and their families compose an army of more than 7,000 people, who are dependent upon the telephone business for their livelihood.

The steady and constant flow of millions of dollars from the telephone industry in the form of wages, taxes, purchases of raw materials and other expenses, is an important factor in the industrial progress and welfare of the State.

But of even greater importance to the business and social welfare of Kentucky, is the continuation of the adequate, dependable, telephone service to which you are accustomed. Yet the price you pay for this all-important service averages only a few cents a day for all classes of local service.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS AFFECTING DINNER PAIRS

No depression year has seen such sustained improvement in business as 1935. In other years since 1929, there were substantial advances, but these were followed by recessions that took us back to extreme lows. This year practically every branch of commerce and trade has made big gains and has held them. One of the most authoritative magazines forecasts that during November the industrial barometer will pass the comparable period of 1931 when conditions were much better than in 1932, 1933 or 1934.

Here is a digest of business changes taken from a Business Week chart. Comparisons are for the first nine months of 1935 with the first nine months of 1934.

Steel Production	17
Auto Production	23
Construction		1
Lumber Production	1
Electric Power	3
Factory Employment	3

The cost of living, still quoting business week, was 4 per cent higher in the first nine months of 1935 than in the same period last year. Food was up an average of 12 per cent, a 32 per cent jump in meat prices marking the largest advance. Housing was up 8 per cent and clothing 3 per cent. Sole item in this bracket to show drop was fuel and light which declined by 2 per cent.

The wholesale price structure, including 784 items, rose 7 per cent. Major changes were as follows: Farm products, up 25 per cent; food products, up 20 per cent; building materials, down 2 per cent; metals down 1 per cent; chemicals, up 6 per cent.

Farm income improved by 7 per cent. Small change was shown in stock values, a drop of 2 per cent being registered, while bond prices rose 4 per cent.

As noted before, the rise is continuing, and 1936 should, in the light of "normal years," such as 1926, be a good period for business.

Bay of Fundy Power
Religion Aids Mussolini
Cheap Eggs for Soldiers Government Railroads?

Governor Brann of Maine is unwilling to share expenses, and President Roosevelt may drop the Passamaquoddy power project. That would be a national misfortune. While spending billions so freely, it would seem worth while to spend thirty-six little millions to harness the gigantic tide power in the Bay of Fundy.

Development of that project would supply the whole state of Maine with power and industrial prosperity and pay for itself.

To allow the vast power of one of the highest tides on earth to continue going to waste would be as foolish as it would be to cease using the power of Niagara.

In Milan, Cardinal Schuster, celebrating mass for those that died in the Fascist march on Rome, Indonesia recently Mussolini's invasion of Ethiopia, praising "the valiant army which, in intrepid obedience to the command of their fatherland at the price of their blood, open the doors of Ethiopia to the Catholic faith and the civilization of Rome."

Also, according to Associated Press, the cardinal praised Fascism as "promising the national morality wished by the Catholic church."

Italian soldiers in Ethiopia, much surprised, can buy as many fresh eggs as they want at ridiculously low prices.

Ethiopian soldiers will not eat eggs—their religion forbids them to devour "that which might have life in the future," but they are willing to sell the eggs to the Italian soldiers and let them imperil their immortal souls by "devouring future life" if they choose.

Ethiopian tribesmen have no scruples about eating the chicken, once it is hatched, which shows that religious scruples take interesting forms. What about the "future life" that the hen might have produced?

Railway labor unions plan a Washington lobby, to promote government purchase and operation of railroads. Owners of some railroads would gladly share the expense of that lobby, if they could sell their railroads at a fair price.

Running a railroad in competition with automobiles, motor buses and trucks is like running a legitimate hotel in competition with night clubs and other former speakeasies.

Russia is a successful spy hunter, having convicted on the average one every six hours, according to "Colliers."

If, in Russia, you are convicted of spying, no second conviction is ever necessary, or possible.

These 100,000 spies, to earn their money, must keep international suspicion alive, and that helps to keep war alive.

Rejoicing in the fact that "the 13 years of the Fascist regime have not passed in vain, and the world of plutocratic and conservative egotisms is obliged to take note of this," Mussolini denounces League of Nations sanctions aimed at him as "a preposterous crime destined to increase disorder and distress in every country."

Pan-American Air Lines asks air travelers: "Shall we serve cocktails to passengers?"

The answer should be emphatically "no." First, the average cocktail is unfit for any stomach, except perhaps that of a carrion-eating hyena; second, it has been proved more than once that alcohol and flying do not mix well.

The President inspected "fortifications" of the Panama canal, returning from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Unfortunately there are no fortifications on the Panama canal. The canal depends on its locks and they, open to the attack from the air, could easily be destroyed. No engineer will deny that.

The way to have a "fortified" canal is to build one at sea level. In these spending days that might be done now, through Nicaragua.

Uncle Sam would have something to show for his money more substantial than groups of weary gentlemen "raking leaves."

There is encouragement in the fact that "regular jobs" not the artificial made-to-order kind, are increasing. Three hundred and fifty thousand men were hired in September, and payrolls for September are $12,000,000 a week above August.

Warner Brothers' successful production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," under the direction of Max Reinhardt, proves courage and sound judgment. The picture is a financial as well as an artistic success, greater by far than any recent Shakespearean stage production with living actors.

Mr. Burton, of Cosmopolitan Magazine, asks various neighbors and towns of middling height to answer: "Will world peace ever be possible?"

The answer is "Yes," but paid spies may postpone the happy day.

Among other parasites, the world now supports 100,000 spies—men and women. Forty thousand have been caught and convicted in Europe during the past 15 years.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
by William Bruckart
National Press Building Washington, D. C.

Washington.—In days not so far in the distant past, an argument could be developed in any community where there were more than a handful of Democrats if one took the position that the rights of the federal government were predominant over states' rights. States' rights constituted an issue that never died politically until the New Deal arrived on the scene at Washington. Through some two years or more now, we have heard very little about states' rights. Yet, within the last few days we have found that the states' rights issue was not dead. It was only sleeping, and it has come to life in a really big way.

New Deal policies have been consistently policies of centralization of power in the hands of the federal government. New Dealers have enacted much legislation and have carried out many programs that appear to be contrary to the views which used to be held by advocates of states' rights. These things have been accomplished with almost no complaint from the Democratic side and with only a minimum of squawking from New Deal opposition from whom some complaints about regimentation and extension of government functions into the field of private enterprise in competition with the government's citizens.

Lately, however, some thirty or thirty-five cities have awakened with a shock and have rendered one New Deal program a severe jolt by that awakening. I refer to the plans for government construction of the so-called low cost housing projects. These were and are intended to provide apartments or small homes for families in the very low income brackets and to provide work for labor in their construction. Eventually, it was hoped, the program would use up a good many hundred million dollars of work-relief funds. Some have already been spent; some projects have been completed, and these results coincided with the arrival of tax paying time in certain localities. That was the crux.

To show what has happened in those cities and areas wherein the low cost housing projects have been planned or completed, let us take a particular case, namely, the housing project in Atlanta, Georgia. It is of no use to cite the facts in all of them, because the Atlanta case is typical.

Secretary Ickes and his Public Works administration had spent approximately three million dollars in the construction of the Atlanta housing layout. No sooner had this been accomplished, however, than the city of Atlanta awakened to the fact that it would get no taxes nor will the state of Georgia get taxes from this great investment. The project was ruled by Comptroller General J. R. McCarl to be federally owned. As such, it was not subject to state or municipal taxation. The city of Atlanta and the state of Georgia had been deriving taxes from the real estate now owned by Uncle Sam.

It was Atlanta's turn to move. It announced through its properly constituted city authorities that if there were no taxes, then Atlanta could not furnish fire and police protection for the property nor could it supply water for the tenants nor would it permit children of those tenants to attend the Atlanta schools as free students. Atlanta contended that it bears the burden of these expenses and it was not going to add to that burden without reimbursement.

Secretary Ickes sought then to offset the Atlanta ultimatum by tendering funds, taxpayer's money, to the city of Atlanta equal to the amount he thought the city would receive in taxes. Again, Mr. McCarl stepped in. He said that since the property was owned by the federal government it was not subject to taxes and therefore a payment to the city of Atlanta out of federal funds constituted a gratuity. In other words, it was an illegal proposition.

The comptroller general's ruling was so definite and positive that those who have been boosting and boasting about low cost housing projects have been stunned. Frankly, they do not know which way to turn. Thus far, they have not discovered a ray of light to lead them. The housing projects are held in abeyance.

The housing project situation brings to the fore a condition which apparently had not been generally recognized. It relates, of course, to the general subject of taxation but it has a bearing upon many policies now operative and which, it is fair to say, have been described by President Roosevelt as experimental. Since they are experimental, it seems to me they ought to be examined from this taxation phase.

One can understand readily the basis of the objection. There is hardly a city or town or even any other kind of taxing district in the United States where the tax rates are not at the very peak which the people can carry. That was shown most vividly a year ago when Congress thought it necessary to enact legislation permitting municipalities the privilege of declaring themselves virtually bankrupts and according them the right of compromising with their bondholders under a decree of a United States court. So, when we think of taking away taxable property in any city and making it non-taxable by conversion from private to federal government ownership, we see how it adds a further burden of taxes to the remaining private-owned property. That is the reason why many municipalities are fearful of government ownership of railroads, for example, since the railroads are heavy taxpayers in every community they serve. Laying aside the question of merit or lack of merit in the proposition of government ownership of railroads, no municipality can afford to overlook the loss of tax receipts that would follow government acquisition of those carrier properties. They pay real estate taxes in the United States annually of more than three hundred million dollars. Of course it is distributed in thousands of places but whatever the amount may be in your community or any other, it represents a tax source which the local government can ill afford to lose.

It is the same, although to a lesser degree, with respect to the housing project. In this statement I mean only as to the local tax phase. It has, however, another very important tax angle. Property, or the income from property, everywhere is subjected to three tax assessments. First, the county or city in which the property is located takes a tax toll; second, the state gets a share, and thirdly, the federal government either by income or some other tax gets its hand into the pocket of a property owner.

In the case of the low cost housing project, it was necessary to calculate the rental rate on a base so low that it would be impossible for the total investment to pay off the government investment. This had to be done if the low cost housing was to be supplied at a rate the poorer classes could pay. It is seen, therefore, that there was a deficit staring the project in the face. To meet this deficit certain federal funds were to be set aside regularly which, coupled with the receipts from the tenants, would serve to amortize the original cost. From the standpoint of liquidating the cost of the building, this is fine but it does not impress one as being so wholesome when it is shown that the government's contribution comes out of the general fund of the Treasury which in turn comes out of the general taxpayers of the nation.

And so it is with a great many other of the experiments where such programs place government-owned agencies or industries in competition with citizens. Take the Tennessee Valley hydro-electric project for another example. The federal government has placed more than $131,000,000 in this venture. The present Tennessee Valley Corporation has taken over these properties at about one-third of the amount—a net loss to the government. But that is not all. The vast project that has been developed in the Tennessee valley and through the adjoining counties and cities is not subject to state taxation nor do the cities that are being served by Tennessee river electricity get any taxes from this source. It may be sound in the theory but I am fearful that the inbred opposition to federal government encroachment on local affairs sooner or later will cause a new explosion. It will come from the original feeling that state's rights ought to be superior to federal rights except where states have delegated that authority to the federal government in the national Constitution.

Earlier in this discussion I mentioned the ruling by Comptroller General McCarl who acted, of course, as the head of the general accounting office. This agency was created with a very definite purpose in mind. Congress wanted some independent group or authority to watch all federal expenditures to make certain that they were made in accordance with law. A good many years ago when this job was done by the comptroller of the treasury, it was not infrequently that an adverse ruling by the comptroller put the comptroller in a tough spot.

Mr. McCarl is not popular. Privately and publicly, he has been criticized, sometimes in language hardly printable. These complaints always have come from someone whose idea of spending money was found by Mr. McCarl not to be in accordance with the law. Always, he was the goat.

He has been the goat much more under the New Deal than ever before. Every time he kicks over a New Deal plan, the sponsors of that plan brand him as a Tory or a Reactionary or as being just plain dumb. He has engaged in controversy with none of them. He has contended that his decisions were rendered in accordance with the law which he was directed by congress to construe. But it is true of all humans. When a pet plan is destroyed, one tries to find somebody upon whom the blame can be pinned.

Talks About

How to Increase Weight

UNDERWEIGHT men and women are frequently the slaves of disordered "nerves." They are restless, active and over-conscientious people who usually work beyond their strength because their strength is not up to the average. They worry and expect the worst possible outcome of everything. They are possessed with the fear for their health, fear for failure in business, fear for safety of family and friends. Most of them have digestive disturbances and are afraid to eat certain common foods because they do not agree with them—at least at some time in the past they have felt some discomfort after eating one of these foods. It is not uncommon for physicians treating this class of patients to overcome much of their difficulty by convincing them that they are mistaken, and as soon as this is done they find that the foods which they feared cause no distress whatever.

I am quoting the words of Prof. E. V. McCollum, Johns Hopkins University, on "How to Increase Weight."

These "nervous" cases of underweight need three things: (1) a better state of nutrition which means more fat on their bodies, good digestion and increased strength; (2) the ability to rest sufficiently so that they can recover from the effects of accumulated fatigue—these people have been overworked a long time. Rest gives the circulation a chance to rid the blood of the waste products;

(3) they must learn healthy and wholesome habits of thought—get away from their worries and fears. This will improve their outlook on life.

From the food standpoint these individuals must follow the opposite course to those who are trying to reduce weight. Overweights eat plenty of meat and eggs but cut down on fats and starch foods. Underweights while cutting down slightly on meats, must greatly increase their fat and starch foods. The fat foods are butter, cream, fat meat. The starch foods are bread, potatoes, sugars, pasty.

Doctor McCollum points out that the all-round diet is necessary—as more than fat on the body is needed for health.

Another point emphasized is rest. Rest is equal to food in maintaining and increasing weight. Sometimes rest alone is sufficient to bring on a satisfactory increase in weight. These thin nervous individuals are usually so active that unless they are actually lying down, they seem to be always moving about.

Thus the thin individual who would store more fat must include in his program a resolution to keep himself calm, and cut down his physical activity to the lowest possible point. If he can get to the place where he is willing to let others do some of his work and take on some of his responsibility—that is if he can become carefree—he is well on his way toward an increase in weight.

However, all underweight is not due to nervousness, or to a family tendency to thinness, but may be due to what is called focal infection; that is where an infection in one part of the body may affect some other organ or may affect the body as a whole. Thus infected tonsils, infected teeth, infected sinuses, infected bladder may be so undermining the system that loss of weight naturally follows. This means then that an examination by the doctor and dentist should be the first thought when there is tiredness and underweight.

"When one wants to increase weight it is wise to plan the menus so that both salads and leafy vegetables find a prominent place in them. About one-quarter to one-fifth more food than usual should be eaten so that if rest is also taken this extra amount of food may be stored in the body in the form of fat."

The appetite is also a great factor in increasing weight. The meals should be spread well apart so that there is real hunger which induces appetite. "One should strive to have a well organized life and to have the appetite and the emotions under control. The daily life should be so planned that eating is done at regular times and with suitable rest of the digestive organs between meals."

Steps in Curing Underweight

1. The removal of any infection which may mean examination by physician and dentist.

2. The building up of the body by the use of rich nourishing foods such as butter, cream, bacon, milk, eggs, meat, sugar, cocoa.

3. The use of an abdominal support at the beginning of the building up process as this not only holds the organs up in position, but gives the thin individual some general support, thus enabling him to be up and about more. This being able to be about more is helpful to the mind also.

4. Rest. Sometimes this means a complete rest for a few weeks, but for the majority where possible a half-hour's rest morning and afternoon may be sufficient.

FASCINATING TALES OF LOST MINES
By Edith L. Watson

PILLARS OF GOLD

WHEN the Spanish conquerors were following the northward windings of the Rio Grande, they went as far as the northern part of what is now New Mexico. Here, Spanish legend relates, some of the padres, with soldiers at their command, turned to the westward. In the midst of some extremely rough mountains they came across a small valley, and here they saw two great pillars made of large stones.

What these pillars were they did not know, but with the curiosity to which we owe so much of our information about the early southwest, the padres halted to examine these monuments. To their surprise and delight, they found that some of the stones were pieces of rich gold ore, which argued that their source must be somewhere in the vicinity.

So it proved; the lode was rich beyond all dreams, and the party immediately set to work, the soldiers laying down their arms to become miners. They remained in the hidden valley long enough to take out all the gold they could carry with them.

After this time, others who passed that way hunting wealth saw the lonely pillars in the center of the valley, but for a long time no one thought to examine them, and consequently passed on without knowing that their opportunity lay near by, and that a few hours searching might disclose that mine that the padres saw.

At last an old miner by the name of Mike O'Leary, rambling about through this region on a prospecting trip, found the ancient workings, and appeared in Pecos City some time later with enough ore to finance an expensive spree for several weeks. After sobering up he disappeared, only to come into Animas City several months later with more ore.

The old prospector of the western mountains was a wily creature. He preferred hunting alone or with one partner, and if he did strike gold he could be "as mum as a clam" about its location, even though he loved to boast about his good fortune. Knowing the pills as he did the streets of his home town, he usually eluded all those who tried to follow him. He knew only too well that the discovery of his mine would mean a lot of unpleasant neighbors, the theft of his ore, and possibly death to himself. The silence of the old prospectors on the subject of their finds is one of the large factors in the losing of mines.

O'Leary was just such a man. He might show up every now and then with enough gold to pay for a celebration, but he always drifted out of sight before anyone could see where he went. Finally he disappeared for good—nothing more was seen of him, and it is supposed that either he went to some distant city to spend his money, or else the mountains claimed him for his final sacrifice.

With O'Leary's passing, however, the secret of his mine did not remain a secret. Once in a while some miner comes to the front with ore which he claims came from that little valley in the mountains, and there are even said to be maps, made by others who came into sight of the two rock pillars. However, as far as anyone knows, the location of the mine has never been disclosed as a claim.

SECRET OF THE PRAIRIE

COUNCIL of war! A party of freighters camped under an old lightning killed cottonwood, talking earnestly. The year was 1856; the place was Kearney county, Kansas, on the Santa Fe trail. There was $70,000 in Spanish gold in that wagon train, being carried from Mexico to Leavenworth. Would it ever reach its destination?

Indians had begun to follow the wagons in New Mexico. They hung on, making no move to attack, but drawing a little closer day by day. Now, as the freighters consulted with each other around the campfire, the Indians lurked out yonder in the darkness, waiting—waiting—

It was decided to bury the gold. Here, where the great dead tree formed a landmark on the trail, was as good a place as any, and there was no time to lose. There was no telling when the Indians might make up their minds to attack.

It was midnight. The full moon shone brightly on the camp and on the cottonwood, and cast a shadow along the ground. Here, where the shadow fell, they buried the Spanish gold. Next day they moved on. The Indians followed as usual, drawing a little closer. Three days later they attacked, when the train had reached Pawnee Rock. Only one man survived; he reached Fort Leavenworth, told his story, and died.

There was no chance, just then, to send out after the gold. It was safe; it must wait until the opportunity presented. And so a year passed before a party set out on the Santa Fe trail to recover the hidden coin.

But during that year lightning had struck the old cottonwood again, and this time had destroyed it completely. There was nothing left to show where it stood. Only the tall buffalo grass rippled in the wind—grass which had grown closely over all the countryside.

CHAPTER I

The Chechahcos.

Garth knelt upon the planks of the small floating wharf to fasten a pitch-smeared patch on the bottom of his upturned birchbark canoe. In the midst of his work he paused to listen. A faraway drone was just audible above the ting and hum of insects. He turned to peer at the southerly sky above the vast flood of the Mackenzie. The drone became more distinct.

A plane was coming downriver towards the emergency refueling station at the old abandoned trading post. Yet the regular schedule of the line did not call for the northbound Belanca for several days. In all probability, the Commercial Airways had sent out its emergency plane from Fort McMurray, Alberta.

Though his thoughts lingered on the approaching plane, his eyes and hands returned to the patching of the canoe. The craft must be made ready for the weeks of upriver paddling. There would be none too much time for the thousand mile trip out before the winter freeze-up.

As he finished the patch the loud drone of the motor swelled into a staccato roar. He turned to watch the white monoplane sweep down and take the water like a squattering duck. The pilot started to slant shoreward. Garth again set about patching the small leak. A sudden silence told that the motor had been stilled. Across the hush came a curt order:

"Ho, Jack, fend off and snub her."

Garth lazily twisted around to eye the incoming craft. She was a beautiful medium-sized plane with a swung around and lay nosing the current. Neither the man or the woman made a movement until Garth drove his canoe ashore and lifted it atop the stony bank.

As he climbed to the front of the old post store, above the base of the wharf, he saw the pilot at last swing down to haul on the line. Inside the big log cabin he crossed to one of the rear rooms and put a light hand on the forehead of the snoring man in the nearest bunk.

"Turn out, Tobin, Visitors."

The grizzled bearded station tender roused up to blink and peer.

"Visitors? You're not stringin' me, Mr. Garth?"

"No, Rover plane."

Tobin slipped on his moccasins and hobbled out into the storeroom. The pilot had moored his plane head and tail to the lower side of the landing stage. He was handling his woman companion down from the cockpit.

Both had replaced their leather flying helmets with hats and mosquito nets.

They went in under the overhanging wing to the screened door of the cabin. It opened to the outthrust of a portly man in city clothes. Assisted by the pilot, he managed to get down upon the wharf by means of steps lowered from inside the cabin. After hurriedly putting on a headnet and gloves, he started inshore between his two companions. He limped as if slightly crippled. But the lameness might have been due to cramp from long sitting.

Garth spoke to the supply tender: "I'm only a stray prospector, Tobin. Understand?"

"Aye, sir," grunted Tobin. Without a word of greeting, he hobbled back a few steps as the pilot and his passengers stepped in over the rough threshold.

The portly man opened a gold-mounted cigar case. The young woman produced a long amber-stemmed cigarette holder. This was promptly filled by the pilot, who paused only to slap a mosquito on his clean-shaven cheek before striking a match.

Out went Garth's hand in a swift clutch that caught the flaming match in his calloused palm. The pilot, who was as tall as Garth and heavier built, turned to stare down at him with cold anger.

"You insolent roughneck! Clear out of here."

Garth smiled. Tobin did the answering: "Huh, crazy loon—lighting matches in here. Can't you read the sign? No smoking! Bounce him, lad."

The pilot thrust a hand inside his leather jacket. "Try it. I'll drill both of you."

"How frightful," said Garth. "You must imagine this is a Wild West show. Please don't shoot until the lady can get outside. Shots are even more apt than matches to explode all this gasoline."

The portly man snapped shut his cigar case.

"That's so! You have no cause to be ruffled, Vivian. The fellow seems to have acted on a well-intentioned impulse."

The pilot's hand came out empty from inside the jacket. "Why couldn't the fool have spoken a warning?"

Garth had sized up the man. He expected neither an apology for the abuse nor thanks for saving the visitors from possible annihilation. With an indifferent smile, he shifted the gaze of his gray eyes to examine the woman member of the party.

A first glance had led him to think her older than the pilot. Under her roue and powder her face was thin and drawn. Its lines might have belonged to a woman in the mid-thirties. Her eyes looked more than bored and cynical. Their tiredness matched the lined face. Her body was thin almost to boniness.

Yet, upon examination, Garth saw she could not be even in the mid-twenties. Traces of girlish freshness still lingered in her painted face, under the blishments of dissipation and disillusionment.

At that the smaller person cried out in a sharp, almost shrill voice: "Quick, you gawping dummy!"

The fact that one of the pair was a woman made a vast difference. Garth caught the end of the mooring line thug by the pilot, and snatched up a long pickpole. Its outthrust point met the tip of the nearer pontoon.

Bent low, Garth put all of his weight and strength into his angling shove with the pole. The momentum of the ingliding plane forced him back one step after another. Then his moccasins found a holding grip against the upturned edge of a plank.

Instead of driving in against the wharf at the blunt angle with which it had approached, the head of the plane began to swing off. With another output of strength, Garth swung it parallel with the upstream side of the wharf. Aided by a slight swerve in the current, he was able to walk the plane to the outer end of the wharf before the nearer pontoon could hit the boat logs. As the aircraft glided clear, he made the line fast to a ringbolt and returned to his canoe.

"What the devil!" snapped the pilot. "Come back, you fool. Take in the slack—moor us."

Garth swung his canoe into the water and stepped aboard to test the last patch. The airplane, having drifted downstream to the end of the line,

As she faced away from him, the pilot spoke to Tobin:

"Get busy. Truck down sixty gallons of gas and five of oil—and be quick about it. While your helper is refueling the plane, you'll cook us the best meal you can throw together."

Down came Tobin's shaggy eyebrows. "Who d'you think you're bossin'? Shove along to a tradin' post for yer grub an' gas. This here cache is the company's emergency depository."

The portly visitor took a billfold from his coat and drew out a paper. "Take a look at this order, my man. It authorizes me to requisition any of the Airways' stations for whatever supplies I wish."

Tobin read the order, and thrust it back, with no lessening of his dourness. "So you're Burton Ramill, are you? Looks like a straight order. All the same, you'll sign the book before you'll get a drop."

He turned about to open an oily account book on one of the stacks of gasoline cases. Mr. Ramill drew a fountain pen from his vest pocket with plump white fingers, and limped forward to write.

"There's your receipt," said the pilot. "Now have this dumb helper of yours rush on our gas, and get your pains on the fire. We want service."

"Yuh? Well, you're welcome to want it till doomsday. That company order calls for supplies. Don't say nothin' about cookin' no service."

Mr. Ramill interposed: "All right, man. I see you're stiff from rheumatism. I will test it while you get your sleep."

The girl spoke to Mr. Ramill: "I shall take a nap myself, Dad. Ten hours of flying, with no chance to dance off the Scotch, is enough to kill a horse."

In the act of handing a nodule to Huxby, Garth paused to stare at the girl. So that was the answer—liquor, tobacco, paint, and all the rest of the flapper-jazz rot.

She stiffened and stared back at him haughtily. He dropped the nodule into Huxby's cupped palm and crossed into the rear room to stretch out on one of the bunks.

A tug at his shoulder roused Garth from his six-hour sleep. Tobin's hoarse voice croaked in his ear:

"Roll out, sir. Sun's up. The pair of 'em are keen to be a-wing. Looks like their test of your noggin' livened 'em up. Grub's on."

Garth pulled on his buckskins and moccasins and stepped into the storeroom. Miss Ramill was coming in at the front door. She paused to remove her headnet. Huxby and Mr. Ramill were already putting down a hearty breakfast of bacon, sourdough bread and oatmeal porridge. Garth crowded past them and Tobin to the end of the little shelf table.

LEVELING TIMES? YES, BUT NOT ALL OF US ARE POOR

"This depression is having a leveling influence anyway," a woman said the other day. "Everybody's broke; so there are no longer rich and poor—we're all poor!"

But is that true? Everybody may be "broke"—but not broken. Finances may be leveled down, but there are some people who will always be rich in a way that cannot be leveled down.

They are the people who talk least about the "depression"—who don't seem to mind it very much. That leaves them more energy for doing things—perhaps for lending a helping hand to a "poor" relation. By that I mean the relations who do mind the state of things so much that they need a helping hand to get their bearings.

These people who are rich don't talk about the "depression"—but they don't hesitate in the least to mention that they have no money. Women who never before talked "prices" will point to a new dress and say, "Look—two ninety-eight!"

And the men say, laughing, "Well, I still have my health."

They are the people who are able to give up the golf club and take to fishing—"In the river," as one of them put it, "where it's free"; to give up servants and summer home—for a bungalow somewhere—where it's cheap; and like it. That's the point. And they are the people who still have something to give—to those who stalk the real tragedy of want. Can it be denied that while we have something to give we are rich?

These may in a sense be leveling times—but more important, they are illuminating times—and the illumination is on a true sense of values—it shows up the really rich—in wealth that cannot be taken from them.

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

BEFORE you take any preparation you don't know all about, for the relief of headaches; or the pains of rheumatism, neuralgia or neuralgia, ask your doctor what he thinks about it—in comparison with Genuine Bayer Aspirin.

We say this because, before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin, most so-called "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as being bad for the stomach; or, often, for the heart. And the discovery of Bayer Aspirin largely changed medical practice.

Countless thousands of people who have taken Bayer Aspirin year in and out without ill effect, have proved that the medical findings about its safety were correct.

Remember this: Genuine Bayer Aspirin is rated among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and all common pains... and safe for the average person to take regularly.

You can get real Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by never asking for it by the name "aspirin" alone, but always saving BAYER ASPIRIN when you buy.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs the most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed. How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs are one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

Second, Calotabs are diuretic to the kidneys, promoting the elimination of cold poisons from the system. Thus Calotabs serve the double purpose of a purgative and diuretic, both of which are needed in the treatment of colds.

Calotabs are quite economical: only twenty-five cents for the family package, ten cents for the trial package. (Adv.)

5 p.m. is a test of how you FEEL

'How do I feel.... Swell!—why do you ask?'

It is all so simple, too! That tired, run-down, exhausted feeling quite often is due to lack of a sufficiency of those precious red-blood-cells. Just build up these oxygen-carrying cells and the whole body takes on new life... food is really turned into energy and strength... you can't help but feel and look better. S.S.S. Tonic restores deficient red-blood-cells... it also improves the appetite and digestion. It has been the nation's standby for over 100 years... and unless your case is exceptional it should help you, too. © S.S.S. Co.

Cat Chooses to Die in Burial Parlor

Columbus, Ind.—A cat at Edinburg evidently had a sense of the fitness of things. It walked in at the rear door of an undertaking establishment, looked about for a moment, then stretched itself on the floor and died.

SCIENCE BAFFLED; LAD TREADS ON FIRE

None Can Offer Explanation of How Feet Were Done.

London.—A demonstration of fire walking as practiced by natives at religious ceremonies in India and elsewhere was given without any one's being able to offer any explanation of how the feat was performed.

Kuda Bux, a young Indian weighing about 120 pounds, asserted his ability to perform the fire walking ceremony on the strength of his faith that the fire would not harm him.

Without suffering any injury that could be detected by the doctors and scientists present, he walked barefooted twice over a fire in two trenches 12 feet long and 6 feet wide, the surface heat of which was found to be 800 degrees Fahrenheit.

Two medical students who attempted to emulate Bux's feat were severely burned after a couple of steps and had to jump to safety.

The materials used in preparing the fire included seven tons of oak logs, one ton of firewood, one load of forest burnt oak and charcoal and ten gallons of kerosene. When the demonstration was given the fire had been burning for eight hours.

Bux's feet made contact with the burning embers for five seconds on each step. Before and after each walk his feet were examined by Prof. C. A. Pannet, director of the surgical unit at St. Mary's hospital, London, who found no scorching or other trace of injury.

Under the arch of Bux's right foot Professor Pannet had placed a piece of court plaster, but even that was not scorched, while the recorded temperature of the feet was the same as before the experiment.

Bux declared that he was not conscious of the heat as he walked over the fire, although he appeared to be as susceptible to heat as others when standing near it. Professor Pannet said that there was no unusual toughness or thickening of the soles of Bux's feet.

"Pauper" Dies; Find Wad Hidden in His Clothing

Chicago.—Dead, a supposed pauper in the County hospital. Yet he had $14,000 sewed in the lining of his cloth- ing.

Charles Sweeney, of 6144 South California avenue, retired policeman, recently identified the body of the supposed pauper as that of his brother, John Sweeney.

The money was a mystery to Charles and when he was told that a bank book indicated that he may have had $14,000 more in a bank, the brother was dumfounded, saying:

"I don't think he ever had a good job. He would wash windows or clean el cars. But he never held a job long. He preferred to hang around Madison street 'phonies.' I hadn't seen him for a long time. He told me when we met last that he had money, but I didn't believe him."

The brother was found by Police Officer Thomas Brennan after a search of the police record list disclosed a Charles Sweeney.

John Sweeney had told hospital officers that he had such a brother, but he had told so many other bogus stories that they did not believe him. He died of pneumonia.

Dog Locked in Office Barks Into Telephone

Martins Ferry, Ohio.—Locked in a mine office, a police dog knocked over a telephone, shook the receiver back with his paw and barked until he was released. The telephone operator at the Wheeling Steel corporation switchboard saw a light flash from the company's coal mine office and heard the dog bark.

Shortly thereafter word came from the mine office that a strange dog had been locked in by mistake. It was released.

Ghost Tale Proves to Be Tramp's Shirttail!

Sandusky, Ohio.—"Doesn't that look like a ghost to you? Capt. Henry V. Ringholz asked his companion officer Patrolman Grathwohl as they were cruising past Oakland cemetery at dawn. A chase and subsequent capture revealed the "ghost" to be Jim Grady, an itinerant—clad only in a shirt. "Somebody stole everything but my shirt," Grady told the officers who took him to headquarters and re-outfitted him.

Unknowningly Buys Own Burial Shroud

Harrisburg, Pa.—Mrs. Elizabeth Malley Fehl, forty-eight, of nearby New Market, bought her burial shroud while on a shopping tour in this city but she was unaware of it at the time. The woman died three days after she purchased a new dress and shoes and her body was clothed for burial in these articles.

MUTE GIVEN VOICE; BELIEVED MIRACLE

Once Unable to Talk, Shepherd Preaches Sermon.

Cabafat, Roumania.—Peter Lupu previously known as a mute, deaf, illiterate, semisavage shepherd, is today the most notable man in Roumania, revered by thousands of persons as a saint.

Several weeks ago, Peter attended Sunday service in the village of Maglavit and created an extraordinary sensation by mounting the pulpit and delivering an impressive sermon in a clear, powerful voice.

The action of the supposed deaf-mute in suddenly talking and addressing the congregation in lucid words was in itself deemed a miracle. The story he told made it an even more awe-inspiring event.

He related that while he was out with his sheep on the Danube plain, an old man with a huge, silver-white beard appeared before him and ordered him to go and tell the people that "there will be hell on earth if they lose their faith."

Then, he said, the mysterious figure vanished into the air. The peasants of Maglavit, believing the shepherd to have talked with God, now kneel before him and believe him to possess miraculous powers. Thousands flocked to Maglavit to be blessed. Bucharest newspapers devote considerable space to him and Roumania's new Lourdes.

Every Sunday, when he preaches, his sermon are attended by huge crowds. There was nearly a riot when police sought to prevent the shepherd from holding services. Since then there has been no official opposition.

Seized by Huge Python —Says He "Saw Heaven"

New York.—Otis Lloyd, animal handler of Herrin, Ill., who knows the deadly squeeze of a 24-foot python, will recover from his injuries, but it is doubtful if he ever will handle snakes again.

"For the first time in my life I'm afraid of snakes," said Lloyd as he told of his "death 10 seconds away" and how visions of the python coiled around his body haunt his waking and sleeping moments.

Lloyd felt the crushing hug of the python when it wriggled out of the grasp of eight employees at Frank Buck's zoo in Audubonville, L. I. Only quick action of fellow-workers, who pried him loose, saved Lloyd from certain death, for the serpent already had applied the squeeze with which it brings quick death to its prey.

Visibly pained by the thought, Lloyd said he saw visions of another land, a sort of hereafter, as the gigantic reptile wrapped its bone-crushing loop about him. He said:

"I felt him paralyze my breathing. My head felt as though it were bursting. Then I went blind, and in my semi-conscious condition I swear I saw another land."

Foundry Hand Does Not Mind Racket in Tavern

St. Louis, Mo.—A witness for a tavern keeper, called before Excise Commissioner Anderson here recently on complaints from neighbors that the tavern was too "noisy," didn't aid the proprietor's cause very much.

"The music didn't bother me," asserted the witness, who also lived nearby. "Lots of times I slept right through it."

"Where do you work?" inquired the commissioner, who must have had a hunch.

"In a foundry," replied the friendly neighbor innocently.

The tavern was ordered closed for two days.

Postman Refutes Theory, He Really Quits Walking

San Jose, Calif.—Will H. "Bill" Lake has conclusively refuted the old theory that "the postman goes walking on his day off."

The other day Bill closed 42 years of service with the San Jose post office, during which period he had walked 131,040 miles and toted a total of roughly 650 tons of mail, including a mere 2,000,000 letters.

And as celebration of the fact, Bill (who never was at the wheel in his life before) went downtown, bought himself a new automobile and started on a 1,000-mile motor journey.

TWO MINUTE SERMON

KEEP THE ENEMY OUT. In the story of the siege of ancient Troy by the Romans it is told that the walls of the city proved too strong for the invading army and repeatedly the well trained, well equipped besiegers were turned back. Finally strategy was resorted to. A huge wooden horse was built in which was concealed a number of Roman warriors. The horse was moved up to the city gates. During the night the Trojans opened the gate and took the horse into the city. The Roman warriors escaped from the body of the horse and opened the city gates and let the enemy into the city thus ending a long siege. The city was invincible to foes without, but fell quickly once the foe got within. I've seen men like that. I was talking to one the other day. He was out of employment. He has searched for employment but could find none. I suggested several things. To each one he had a host of objections and doubts. Instead of trying to find reasons why he could do the things suggested he searched to prove they could not be done. He had developed a defeated attitude. Many men whip themselves by this habit. Instead of developing the attitude of mind that believes it can do a thing, that is not defeated until the best effort it is possible to make has been made, they whip themselves. They throw down their defense and let the enemy of fear and doubt get inside. Every man is whipped first in his heart. It is his inner fortress. When he permits this to fall he is whipped. Every man must learn to keep the enemy outside.

NEURITIS RELIEVED

Completely Years Ago—Still Well.

A lady who had a severe case of neuritis, causing terrific pain in the upper part of her back and neck, to the shoulders down one arm, and who was rapidly losing the use of that arm, came to me for treatment three years ago. There was also great pain in the lower part of the back. She had been in this condition continuously for over a year.

My examination showed clearly spinal misalignment, causing pressure upon nerves leading to the effected parts. Chiropractic treatments were given to properly place the crooked parts of the spine. The lady was entirely relieved of all pain, and tell me there has been no return in three years.
