COUNCILMEN ENTERTAINED MONDAY NIGHT BY MAYOR

The members of the old and new council of Fulton were delightfully entertained Monday evening by Mayor Paul DeMyer with a fish fry at the Red Wnig Club House on Reelfoot Lake. ## LOYALTY A GREAT COMMUNITY ASSET

Our best citizens are those who are loyal to the community in which they live, to their neighbors, and to their friends, and true to the country which shelters them and gives them liberty.

Our poorest citizens are those who prey upon the weak and unprotected—who betray their community by act or word—who take, but are unwilling to give—who speak ill when a good word would be better.

Fulton welcomes the first and is justly proud of every loyal and faithful community worker. But knockers and destroyers of the efforts of those who seek to build and improve our community, are unwelcome, and deserve very little consideration. Think it over.

LOCAL SPORTSMEN GET OUT THEIR GUNS

The hunting season opened in a big way last Friday, with many local sportsmen taking to the fields and woods with their guns and dogs. Rabbit hunters of Kentucky have prospects of a satisfactory season. Based in a survey of all the 120 counties, the observation is made that hunters in the majority of the counties may count on plenty of game. The best hunting will be in the Western part of the state, in which, with the exception of Ballard and Muhlenberg counties, rabbits are reported plentiful or fairly so. The rabbit hunting season closes January 1.

The quail season is later than usual and the period for bird hunting does not open until Sunday, November 24. Squirrels may be hunted until December 1, and doves until December 15. The duck season opened in Kentucky November 20.

DO IT NOW

Fear of the future is vanishing. Confidence is here.

Normal buying is gradually returning.

Even the farmer, hardest hit of all, is feeling the effect of the upturn in business.

If you are employed and are receiving a reasonable salary—or if you are in business and are keeping your head above the water—you can be of much benefit to your community right now, probably more so than at any other time.

Begin doing your Christmas shopping now, picking out an item here and there—always from the home dealer—and keep it up until Christmas day.

By so doing you will have ample time in which to make wise selection of articles of daily use, and the amount you spend will begin to circulate around in the community, moving from hand to hand, because the people you spend it with will in turn spend it with others, and by the time Old Santa Claus reaches us those dollars will be fingered by many people in this town, and each one will have received benefit from the contact.

CARD OF THANKS

Being unable to see each of you personally I take this means of extending my heartfelt thanks to the voters of Fulton County and we hope each of you will take it as a PERSONAL message, for I feel deeply grateful of your splendid support. I will try to perform my duties on the School Board in such a way as to show our deep appreciation.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Cultural Expansion
SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—
What a war it has been for education.

They were savages, ruthless and very ignorant. But now they know about the armored tank and the screaming shell and the admirable flame-thrower which cooks the flesh on the living bone. They were isolated. But the long-distance gun, she shot 'em and you wherever you're at; all she wants is your home address. They had barbaric pride—'twas the breath in their black nostrils—but poison gas would be the cure for that foolishness. Like foxes, they den in the earth. The scout plane spies on them and the bomber plane comes and makes a scrap of their bodies. Like lions, the naked spearmen advance; the machine gun levels the ranks down flat. Like moles, the fugitives burrow under the mud walls. So, with his high explosives, the white man blasts them out.

Verily, there is no excusing any race, however remote, however backward, for failure to share in the cultural beauties of this modern civilization.

Joe Robinson's Elegance
SENATOR Joe Robinson, somewhere in Arkansas, Dear Sen.—I hear some of the boys are agin you for reelection because you've been guilty of sports in the first degree. If your home-folks predicate fitness for office on ruggedness of feet, Primo Carnora is their man. But if they want brains at the other end to balance the load, I insist you've got the credentials.

I know how you've suffered. You put on spats, and, just about the time you quit being self-conscious, the weather turns warm on you.

Still, a more tolerant day is dawning. Why, the first time I wore spats in Paducah I needed police protection. It was a good thing for me I wasn't a Yankee. And on down in the tall timber my wrist-watch was mistaken for a handcuff with a time-lock on it. I reckon they thought I was a fugitive from a Vassar daisy chain.

Now, just around every corner is a service station, a beauty parlor or a country club. And that, mind you, where once, when a boy came of age, they had to run him down with dogs to put pants on him.

So cheer up, Sen. At least they didn't prove a monocle on you. Yours sympathetically, Cobb.

A Week of Peace
TO THE sentimentalists amongst us, the peril of the moment is that we may run out of these something-or-other weeks. You know, weeks dedicated to bay fever or sanitary plumping or ankle-length union suits or anemic Armenians. You see, we only have 52 weeks to start with.

The surest way to spoil a good thing is to overdo it. That also goes for salad dressings, four-plus pants, rice pudding and the young thing who puts so much make-up on her eye lashes she looks as though she were peeping out through two buttonholes in an old plush vest. Any party could gain a lot of votes by inserting a plank in its platform calling for just one plain, old-fashioned week starting without excitement on a Monday and ending very quietly the following Sunday.

Tugwell and Native Sons
UNTIL he hauled off and made that speech recently, Professor Tugwell was leading the brain trust with the title of Chief Lobe. He may still be that, but just the same, if I were Tugwell, I believe I'd follow the advice which the fire department prints on the theater programs: "Look about you now and choose the nearest exit."

Speaking of vanishing species, whatever became of the pedestrian classes in America—you know, people who went places by the quaint old-fashioned process called walking? Today the population seems exclusively to be made up of two major groups—those with cars who are riding and those with thumbs who crave to do so.

And, speaking of traveling, I've discovered what, in the modern sense of the term, is a true California native son. A native son is a fellow who has been here long enough to sell his trailer.

Two Promising Actors
MY BUDDING ambition to turn actor has had a boost. A young fellow, who, I predict, will yet get somewhere in this business if he keeps on trying, was over here, and, after dinner, this party, whose name is Charles Chaplin, gave an imitation of a buzzard lighting alongside a sick horse. Such judges as Claudette Colbert and Edna May Oliver agreed that, as a buzzard, he would fool any living creature, except possibly another buzzard.

But talk about acting, now. By special request I played the principal supporting role, that of the horse, and the sheer artistry of the performance gave delight to one and all. So now I'm convinced my future is assured, if only we can get somebody to write a show with a part in it for a sick horse.

Lesson for November 24

THE MESSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECCHARIAH

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:3-8; 2:3, 9; Zecchariah 4:6-10.

GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Psalm 122:1.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A New House for God.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Building a House of Worship.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why We Build Churches.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Building Adequate Churches.

After the returned captives had settled down in the towns surrounding Jerusalem, the people were called together for the purpose of establishing the worship of the Lord God. This movement was led by Joshua the priest and Zerubbabel the governor. In view of the fact that the clearing away of the debris of the old city and temple and the erection of the new temple would take a long time, an altar was erected where sacrifices might be offered at once to God.

I. The Laying of the Foundation of the New Temple (Ezra 3:8-13).

This was an auspicious occasion and was celebrated with impressive ceremonies.

1. The priests in their official apparel (v. 10). These garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.

2. The priests with trumpets (v. 10). Trumpets were used in calling the people together.

3. The Levites with cymbals (v. 10). This was according to the arrangements made by David (1 Chron. 15).

4. They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively.

5. Mingled weeping and singing (vv. 12, 13). Some of the older men who had seen the magnificent temple of Solomon wept when they saw how far short the present foundation came of the former temple. Others were glad because of the favor of God which had brought them back.

II. The Building of the Temple Hindered (Ezra 4).

The leading adversaries were the Samaritans, a mongrel people, the offspring of the poor Jews who were left in Palestine and the foreign people who were sent into Palestine after the Jews were taken captive. The three perils which delayed the building of the temple for about fourteen years reveal the persistent methods which the enemies of God use to hinder the building program of God's people in every age.

1. An unintelligent pessimism (3: 12). Because things were not as promising as they should be, some were not disposed to go forward with a constructive program and even hindered those who possessed a hopeful outlook. Under the circumstances, a glorious beginning had been made which had promise of great things in the future.

2. Worldly compromise (4:2, 3). The adversaries said, "Let us build with you: for we seek your God." This is Satan's most common and effective method. The help of the unregenerate in forwarding the Lord's work should not be accepted by the Lord's people.

3. Open opposition by the world (4:4-24). When refused a part in the work, open opposition was resorted to.

III. Assurance of the Completion of the Second Temple (Zech. 4:6-10).

By means of the golden candlestick is represented the restoration of the Jewish nation and the fulfillment of its divine purpose. It was to be a light in the world. There were insuperable difficulties in the way of accomplishing their restoration, represented by the great mountain, but assurance was given that God by his Holy Spirit could easily accomplish their restoration. The mountain would be displaced by a plain. The two olive trees represent Zerubbabel and Joshua. The Holy Spirit was to accomplish this work through them.

IV. The Temple Finished (Ezra 6: 13-15).

Through the ministry of the prophets, Haggai and Zecchariah (Ezra 5:1; Hag. 1, 2), the people were encouraged to resume the work of the building of the temple. When the temple was finished, they solemnly dedicated it to God (Ezra 6:16-22).

V. The Blessedness of Dwelling in God's House (Ps. 84:1-4).

1. The longing of the soul for God's house (vv. 1, 2).

2. The sparrow and swallow find protection in the sacred precincts of God's house (v. 3).

3. At home in God's house (v. 4). Those who have a heart for God find their chief delight in dwelling in his house.

Don't estimate your future by the little troubles that confront you now. The black clouds which shut out your sun today will be gone tomorrow. Learn to look at life at long range and put the right value on things in general.

Fur Coats Atop Bright Wool Frocks

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FURS play an increasingly important role in the American woman's wardrobe. It is highly significant that the world of fashion is in this day and age thinking in terms of fur as would not have been considered possible in the past. We have come to sense that whatever can be done with fabric can be as readily achieved via fur as a medium, and so with this thought in mind artists in fur craft are designing and creating fashions as unrestrictedly as if they were manipulating velvets, or silks, cottons, linens or any other known fabric.

There is no end to a recital of the perfectly astonishing things being done in the realm of furs this season. In this brief message only a few highlights can be touched upon. For instance, entire suits are now being fashioned of furs which are as supple and as comfortably wearable as cloth. Enthusiasm for the new costume suit is notable also, the ensemble including a stunning fur coat or cape or jacket (short or hip-length or longer) the same becoming an integral part of the whole in that it is lined and detailed with the gay plaid or novelty fabric of which the dress is made. The fact that fur is playing a big part in the millinery realm should also be taken into account.

Just now the outstanding trend is in the direction of the fur coat, that speaks high style in its every detail, to be worn over bright-colored woolen frocks such as are at this moment at the height of fashion. The coat foremost in the line of action is the jaunty swaggar type styled of the fur you like best. These fur swaggers are given added swank in that they flaunt the newest fastenings in the way of mill-tary frogs done of braid or if not these then metal gadgets that sound a gay note of chic.

For the fashioning of these voguish coats every conceivable type of fur seems to have been called into play—precious mink, sable or Hudson seal, Persian lamb, caracul, fine kidskin, moire pony, moleskin, summer ermine, raccoon, muskrat—to complete the list go to your favorite furrier and see what you will find there to see and covet.

Raccoon, tried and true and ever dear to the heart of the college girl, is featured this year in a full-length double-breasted model as shown to the left in the picture. The Johnny collar with a wide lapel can be buttoned up close to the neck. A double skin cuff and collar add the right tone and shading to the fur.

A black Russian pony skin model, shaded and matched like caracul (center figure), has a semi-princess line, the new raglan sleeve, a two-point collar and sway belt.

You won't have to worry about the cold if you snuggle into the stunning hooded seal swagger to the right in the illustration. It has the new two-point collar that is so flattering to your face. The tapered balloon sleeve is also an important style feature. Slit pockets also add that very desirable chic. This is the sort of fur coat that instantly ranks its wearer among the best dressed.

The fur theme is endless. If you long to see more and more of furs that will fairly dazzle with their sumptuousness, furs that are detailed with fetching style maneuvers that will make you almost gasp in admiration and wonderment that such things can be, keep an eye open for national fur week. During this nation-wide carnival of fur every fashion emporium, be it on Main street or in New York, Chicago, Hollywood or other metropolitan center, will dramatize furs in spectacular display.

OSTRICH BOA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Reports come from Paris that Lucien Lelong and other leading couturiers are sponsoring the feather boa, not only in renaissance colors but also in white and black. In the picture a long boa of dyed ostrich is hung nonchalantly across the shoulders. A large ostrich fan is carried to complete this very formal costume. The white, heavy satin gown with its extremely deep front and back décolletage is beautifully complemented with the rich renaissance-colored feathers of the boa and the fan.

BUSTLE IS TRYING TO STAGE COMEBACK

We've seen timid attempts, in the last few years, to revive the bustle of grandmother's day. But this season there is no doubt about it—the bustle has arrived.

It's all in line with the new tendency to back fullness in the swish evening gowns.

Sometimes the bustle takes the form of a looped back drape, with a trailing panel.

Sometimes it is a peplum-like bit of shirring.

Sometimes it's part of a sash that ties in back, or a flange stitched from the center seam.

But a bustle it is, and there's no argument about it.

The new idea of back fullness has given the designers a lot of new ideas in silhouette.

Usually the front of the evening gown is slim, straight and fitted, with the fullness concentrated at the back, where the gown flares forth in surprising fashion.

Shops in Paris Display Expertly Tailored Undies

Paris shops are showing expertly tailored underwear in a wide range of styles. Crepe de chine and satin creations are trimmed with delicate embroidery, which is considered much smarter and more practical than lace. Taffeta skirts with a design of ruching around the hem are worn as petticoats under evening gowns. The skirt of the evening gown hangs far more gracefully over the stiff taffeta, which is not at all unattractive if it happens to swirl out during a dance.

No Sleeves

Something new in fur wraps is a sleeveless one of seal. Two large fur buttons anchor it down on one shoulder. Worn over a brilliant color dress, it makes an elegant costume.

Your Best Flare Forward in Simple, All-Occasion Frocks

PATTERN 2397

There's many a "flare" in the fashion sky this fall, and no smart skirt will dare sally forth without at least one. This charming all-occasion frock has flares both back and front, thus assuring its wearer plenty of style interest. The drop-shoulder yoke points twice in front, once in back.

to the bodice and puffed sleeves which gather round it. Utterly charming, the tiny round collar which tops the yoke's diagonal closing, and don't you love the young way the sleeves puff about the elbow? There are novelty crepes with plenty of surface interest from which to choose—or if you're out to be very practical, select a sheer wool.

Pattern 2397 is available in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28 and 30. Size 16 takes 3 3/4 yards 36 inch fabric. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS (15c) in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Write plainly name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE.

Toads Were Not Bears

An Arizona ranger naturalist, whose ingenuity led him to employ sirup to attract ants as food for horned toads in an exhibit at Petrified Forest National monument, was obliged to give individual baths to his specimens, for his pains. The horned toads' appetites were restored by the tempting delicacy, as the ranger had planned, but he figured without the Arizona sun and its effects on the sirup. In a short time he found his exhibit held fast in the blue-like solution. A warm water bath, and a well-sanded receptacle where they might remove the sirup by burrowing into the dirt, restored the toads to normal condition.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE THREE WATCHERS

WHEN Paddy the Beaver slapped the water with his broad tail, making a noise like a pistol shot, Lightfoot the Deer understood that this was meant as a warning of danger. He was on his feet instantly with eyes, ears and noses seeking the cause of Paddy's warning. After a moment or two, Lightfoot stole softly up to the top of a little ridge some distance back from Paddy's pond, but from the top of which he could see the whole of the pond. There he hid among some close-growing young hemlock trees. It wasn't long before he saw a hunter with a terrible gun come down to the shore of the pond.

Now the hunter had heard Paddy slap the water with his broad tail. Of course, there would have been something very wrong with his ears had he failed to hear it. "Confound that beaver," muttered the hunter crossly. "If there was a deer anywhere around this pond he probably is on his way now. I'll have a look around and see if there are any signs."

So the hunter kept on to the edge of Paddy's pond and then began to walk around it, studying the ground as he walked. Presently he found the footprints of Lightfoot in the mud where Lightfoot had gone down to the pond to drink.

"I thought as much," muttered the hunter. "Those tracks were made last night. That deer probably was lying down somewhere near here, and I might have got a shot but for that pesky beaver. I'll just look the land over and then I think I'll wait here a while. If that deer isn't too badly scared he may come back."

So the hunter went all around the pond, looking into all likely hiding places. He found where Lightfoot had been lying, and he knew that in all probability Lightfoot had been there when Paddy gave the danger signal. "It's no use for me to try to follow him," thought the hunter. "It is too letting the children see good posture and graceful walking so that they will imitate it.

As I read this it came to me that not enough has been said about the carriage of our women. We hear a good deal about our bad voices, how unfavorably they compare with the voices of women of other countries, how important is a good speaking voice in a woman. But of a woman's walk, which is no less important than her voice in the impression she creates, in any hope she may cherish for that elusive quality of charm—it seems that far too little notice is taken, or expressed.

If we observe the walk of the average woman from the viewpoint of grace and charm, we must be struck with horror; so few women except those who are in some way athletic walk in a way which is satisfying to the eye. So few women have that stride from the hip that means freedom and poise in walking; so few have animation in their walk, so few, so very few, have rhythm.

No woman can have poise with a miming little hop of a walk. No

I HAVE been reading an article about how dating improves posture and carriage.

We are told of the rhythms which many schools are now teaching in the kindergarten, how proper breathing helps, the importance of good physical condition and always that paramount matter of example—

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am president of a debating society, and on next Saturday we are to debate the following subject, "Who Do the Silliest Things, Men or Women?" It would help us considerably if you would tell me the silliest thing you ever saw a man do. Will you tell me?

Yours truly,

OPHELIA SORESPOT.
Answer: The silliest thing I ever saw a man do was one day in the post office. I saw this man wait around for two hours and the minute he saw the postal clerk turn his back, he pushed four letters into the box, without stamps, thinking he was saving the postage.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A friend of mine was invited to a party at a young lady's apartment, and he went. During the evening he told the young lady, quite frankly, that he did not like her apartment. The young lady had my friend arrested and he was charged with assault. How did the judge figure out an assault charge?

Yours truly,

Y. SHOODIE.
Answer: The judge probably figured as long as your friend had said nasty things about the young lady's apartment he was guilty of "knocking her flat."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I go with a crowd of boys and girls and once a week we meet and those who can sing do so, while others just tell jokes and stories. I tell jokes. There is one girl in the crowd who doesn't like me and every time I tell a joke she always says: "That joke is 40 years old." How can I cure her?

Truly yours,

JOE KING.
Answer: The next time you tell a woman can have charm who waddles from side to side, no woman can have beauty who seems to be dragging one foot after another.

And this is one thing, this matter of a woman's walk, which anyone can learn without a teacher, which has no mysterious technique, and requires absolutely no expense. Any woman can walk well by just thinking about it! You can see the difference between a fine beautiful walk and a bad walk. And any child has sufficient initiative faculty to reproduce the good one.

Some of the paths toward charm are straight and narrow and difficult of attainment. But there is one path to charm which is accessible to all of us who have normal physical build. The attainment of good carriage, of a graceful walk, is comparatively easy—and cheap. You need only think, when you are standing or walking, of how you are standing or walking, think about it until the carriage improved by your own sensitiveness has become natural!

Something About Billions Earthquakes Marvelous New Cars News From Ethiopia

Stas H. Strawn, once head of the American Bar association and president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, says the country is spending $7,000 a minute, and thinks it is too much. Your small boy will tell you how much $7,000 a minute makes in one year. Once "all the world wondered," or at least we did, when there was talk of spending one-quarter of a billion on the Panama canal. Now, any professor could spend that, after three minutes' thinking, and news that the nation's deficit has increased fifteen hundred millions in the past few weeks startles nobody.

The world has passed through earthquake week. Earthquakes in Montana, greatest sufferer on this continent. Severe shocks are reported in Siam. Earthquakes in Buffalo, N. Y.; Ottawa, Toronto, Guayaquil, Ecuador; a busy seismographic week.

And the moon is partly to blame. Its power of gravitation exercises a strong pull on the earth, as it shows in lifting the ocean tides. Dr. Hachan T. Stetson, of Harvard, says the moon causes "sub-surface adjustments of the earth."

The new cars of 1933, now on exhibition, are so extraordinarily beautiful that every American should see them, regardless of intention to buy a new car. Most encouraging is the determined energy that business men and engineers of the automobile industry have shown in fighting the depression, while improving that which seemed beyond improvement.

Rome gives confirmation of the slaughter of six thousand women and children by Ethiopian warriors taking vengeance on the fathers of the children who deserted to Italy. Rome also reports the killing of five hundred Ethiopians by Italian bombing planes, and "an attempt to assassinate Haile Selassie by an unnamed American negro."

Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has "flung the last available man into the battle line," relying on old men, young boys and women to run his government, reminding you of the late czar's announcement that he was going to send "his last moujik." He did not live to do that.

The national effort to "buy ourselves out of the hole" encounters difficulties. The President, to make his four billions cash spread as far as possible, announced top wages of $32 a month. But union labor says, "No; you must pay us full union wages," and New York may have a state-wide strike to back the demand. President Roosevelt, it is said, refuses to concede that public relief is a branch of union labor, and, even with 1933 looming ahead, ray insists that two governments in the country are one too many.

Heavy windstorms in Florida so late in the season are disturbing. Inhabitants are moved away from the keys. There is no danger, however, to those that occupy houses properly constructed and know enough to stay in them during the short time that the storm lasts.

Greece is ready to take back her king and many Greeks are growing "spike" mustaches like his. Many Germans grew mustaches, curling upward, to imitate their former kaiser. There is not much in imitating mustaches.

You wonder why the Greeks cannot and a Greek for king. If they must have a king, in days of "the glory that was Greece" it wasn't necessary to go outside among "barbarians" to find a ruler.

You may want to know that in England, where good times have really come back, the Tories have made heavy gains at the present election and the Labor party sustains heavy losses. Ramsay MacDonald, head of Britain's first Labor government, rejoices openly at Labor's downfall. His work as prime minister seems to have changed his opinions. Experience often changes our minds.

"It is a very great rebuff for labor," says MacDonald. "The people are not being taken in by wild and reckless promises which they know cannot be carried out, in municipal or national government."

Ed Howe, an able writer of Kansas, is expected to "put aside his pencil and pen forever," because his doctor warns him that blindness is approaching.

Perhaps Mr. Howe will tell his doctor: "Milton did much of his important writing after he was totally blind, and I can do the same." Mr. Howe can use a dictating machine, whereas Milton dictated to his daughter, who, unfortunately, found it difficult to write down his Latin dictation.

The setting of the program is a real community, Monticello, Illinois—the home town of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sponsor of the show.—Adv.

Stop Chills and Fever!

Rid Your System of Malaria!

Shivering with chills one moment and burning with fever the next—that's one of the effects of Malaria. Unless checked, the disease will do serious harm to your health. Malaria, a blood infection, calls for two things. First, destroying the infection in the blood. Second, building up the blood to overcome the effects of the disease and to fortify against further attack.

Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic supplies both these effects. It contains tannin, quinine, which kills the infection in the blood, and iron, which enriches and builds up the blood. Chills and fever soon stop and you are restored to health and comfort. For half a century, Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic has been sure relief for Malaria. It is just as useful, too, as a general tonic for old and young. Pleasant to take and absolutely harmless. Safe to give children. Get a bottle at any drug store. Now two sizes—50c and $1. The $1 size contains 2½ times as much as the 50c size and gives you 25% more for your money.

The MICHIGAN KID.

by Rex Beach

In Four Instalments
SYNOPSIS . . . Jimmy Rowan was hopelessly in love with Rose Morris, the prettiest girl in Dover, Michigan. Of course, that was years ago, in early school days . . . but it was hopeless for Jimmy because he was just "that Rowan kid," desperately poor, while Rose's family was rich. While Jimmy was working his way through college, Rose Morris moved away and the home was sold for barely enough to pay the mortgage. Jimmy vowed to himself he'd get rich . . . and find Rose. Easier vowed than done and years passed before Jim Rowan finally landed in the Klondike . . . there to gain wide reputation as a gambler, known as "The Michigan Kid." . . . An ugly story of a 20 hour card game with Col. Campbell, engineer, with stakes no limit . . . and suicide of Campbell at the end . . . caused The Michigan

Kid to sell his saloon and start "out." . . . At Nome, Rowan came upon a meeting of Michigan folks scheduled so he attended. As an old man was leaving the meeting Jim started, leaned forward, his eyes fixed upon the stranger's bearded cheek . . . NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Second Instalment

Jim rose and followed the man out of the building. Hiram Morris here! In Alaska! It was incredible. More incredible still was it to recognize in this bent figure of discouragement the once mighty man of Michigan, the colossus of Jim's youth.

pies, and spicy cakes he paused, lifted his face, and breathed deeply. He halted again before a restaurant inside the show window of which were displayed raw steaks and chops and cold-storage chickens upon a bed of cracked ice.

Jim recognized the expression in that thin, eager face and he experienced a shock. Good God! the man was hungry! Hungry in Alaska! Nobody had ever gone hungry on the Yukon. What kind of camp was this?

Holding his voice to a casual tone, he said: "Excuse me, but I'm looking for a clean cafe. Can you tell me where the gamblers eat?"

"Right here, I believe. It is the most expensive place in town." The speaker's gaze remained fixed upon the window.

"I'm a strange rhere and I don't know a soul. Won't you join me?"

Mr. Morris looked up now, swiftly, in his eyes was a glitter that Rowan had seen in the eyes of famished trail dogs. "Why, you don't know me! Besides—I'm not dressed for a place like this. I thank you."

"Come on. You'll be doing me a favor." Jim held the door open and waited for the ragged figure to precede him, then he selected a table in one of the booths and ordered a meal for two which caused his guest to say:

"My dear sir, you can't be familiar with Nome prices. A T-bone steak is seven dollars and—those fresh vegetables! Why, you've ordered a millionaire's banquet."

"Well, it's a sort of banquet with me. It celebrates an occasion."

"I met an old friend to-night: a man from my home town."

Mr. Morris was ready and willing to talk about Nome. He had failed greatly and he was at a garrulous age, but about himself he had little to say and it was some time before Jim managed to discover that he had been here for two years, mining, but without success.

"You know how it is," he explained with a tremulous smile; "it takes time to develop a placer property when you have no capital. But I have a splendid claim and one of these days I'll land in the pay."

The two men chatted on until their food was served, and, inasmuch as the host had not seen fit to introduce himself, the guest did not make himself known. It was not until the latter had eaten ravenously, to his complete satisfaction, and had lighted an expensive cigar of Jim's selection, that the younger man said:

"Perhaps you'd like to hear about that old friend I met. He was a big man in our town and was a poor kid, but he gave me some advice that I've tried to live up to. It came about like this: one morning we were having a snowball fight in front of the school-house when he drove past in his cutter."

Mr. Morris peered curiously at the speaker.

"I don't know what possessed me, but I threw a ball at him. It was ice. It hit him, hurt him like the devil. I'd have been fired from school only for him. He—"

"Where was this?"

"It was in Dover. You took me to the principal and—"

"Why, this is extraordinary! Then your name is—Rowan. You're Jim Rowan's boy. And you recognized me, after all these years!" Mr. Morris was deeply moved.

"I couldn't fail to recognize that scar on your cheek, sir, inasmuch as I put it there."

"My dear boy!" The old man took Jim's hand in both of his. "How strange that I should meet like this! And how you fooled me! You had your little joke, didn't you?"

"Merely because I wasn't sure you'd accept my invitation to dine if you knew who I was."

Mr. Morris confessed reluctantly: "I'm not sure that I would have accepted, Jim. You see, times have changed; things haven't gone well with me and it hurts a man's pride to acknowledge failure to his friends. I have some pride left. That's why I'm not going back until I land in the pay. Now that you know everything, I'm going to make a confession: I was—actually hungry when you invited me in."

"Hell of a cnap, to let a man go hungry!" Rowan exclaimed, harshly.

"You see, I'm pretty old and I'm not very strong. It's hard for me to get work. However, a little pay—to get work. However, a little pay—" erty, a little hardship, doesn't hurt anybody. It makes one enjoy good fortune when it comes. But, Jim, my boy, tell me about yourself. How did I ever help you? You must have struck it rich to be able to afford an extravagance like this—this banquet?"

Rowan shrugged. "I've made a little and I've spent a little. You made me promise to fight fair and never hit a fellow when he wasn't looking. I could have made more if I hadn't lived up to that promise, but—"

"Never mind. Crooked money isn't worth having and money of any sort isn't worth too high a price. This is a cruel country and it's hard to get ahead. But you're young and you've taken good care of yourself." Mr. Morris's failing eyes did not see that Jim's flesh was flabby and that the bleach on his cheeks came from lack of sunlight. "That's your early training. I've no sympathy for these wasters who squander their money over bars and gambling tables."

Rowan nodded gravely; he spoke the literal truth when he said: "Neither have I."

"I'm out of date, perhaps, but I still retain my old-fashioned ideas. I daresay I don't belong here."

"Why don't you leave?"

"How can I?" The question was accompanied by a crooked smile and a regretful shake of the gray head.

"But your family—" With a gambler's caution Jim was leading up to the question that had trembled upon his lips from the moment he had first recognized Rose's father.

"Mrs. Morris died several years ago."

"I'm sorry. I haven't heard from home in ages." There was a moment of silence, then with averted eyes and in a tone of indifference the younger man said: "Your daughter Rose must be a woman now."

Hiram Morris looked up eagerly. "Yes. Yes, indeed! A lovely, sweet girl."

"Married, no doubt?"

"No. But some day I hope her Prince Charming will come along. Poor Rose, she deserves a prince! She'd love to see you, I know, but— I'm afraid her pride is stiffer than mine. You understand. She feels our situation keenly."

"You don't mean she's—here?"

"Why, yes! Where else would she be? She's all I have."

Rowan felt himself grow dizzy, ill. Rose here! Dependent upon this poor, feeble old man whom he had surprised staring at a cafe window like a famished wolf! It was a moment before he could trust himself to inquire: "Where is she? What is she doing?"

"She's out on the creek. I came in to look for a man, a helper, but I can't pay wages and nobody cares to prospect a claim for an interest in it when there are so many claims to be had for the staking, or to be jumped. We've about reached the end of our rope. I saw the notice of that Michigan meeting and I thought I might find somebody there."

"You did," said Rowan. When

Morris looked at him uncomprehendingly, he explained. "You found me."

"Oh, my boy! You don't understand."

"I understand perfectly. You want a working partner and you'll give him an interest. All right, how much of an interest do I get?"

"Why, I was going to offer a half."

"That's too much, just for a pick and shovel stiff I'll put up the grub and outfit for all hands."

"Nonsense! You've done well—"

"Not well enough so that I can afford to turn down a good offer like this. You've been here two years and you haven't struck pay; I spent five years on the Yukon and never made a dollar out of mining. I left to look for something. Well, I've found it."

The next morning Jim Rowan put a pack on his back and hit the trail. It was the first time in nearly five years that he had felt pack straps, for The Michigan Kid had taken his exercise by proxy, and he was dismayed to discover how soft and how short of breath he had become. He felt a pang when he heard the siren of his steamer giving the signal to weigh anchor, for he was heartily sick of the north-bound and hungry for the world outside. He had worked long for this hour; he felt now as if some one had offered him a drink then snatched it away.

And the worst of it was that he had no doubt made a fool of himself. Rose would not—could not be the girl he had known; nor could the faint spark of a boyhood infatuation be fanned into the flame of a real man's love, for men's tastes change without their knowing it. He knew without asking that Rose shared all of her father's scruples and prejudices. Lucky for him that he had buried The Michigan Kid.

Rose had bloomed into exactly the sort of woman that Jim had expected, thereby disproving the cynical statement that our realizations never equal our anticipations. She was a little more fragile than he had pictured her, but the reason for that was evident and it wrung his heart.

Ten minutes after he saw her, heard her voice, looked into her eyes, he had ceased all regrets about that departed manhood.

She was delighted to see the boy she had known, and with her own hands she prepared the simple supper for three. Later she sought out Jim as he was strolling about the claim.

"Father tells me that you have bought a complete outfit of supplies, and lumber for another cabin."

"Yes. They'll be out to-morrow."

The girl lowered her eyes and said with some difficulty: "Of course you realize that they came just in time. It's almost easy to take charity from strangers than from old friends. I'm sorry you made the sacrifice."

"Charity?" "Sacrifice?" What sacrifice?"

"Father says you were on your way 'outside'—after five years. I know what that means."

Armistice Day Celebrated Throughout Nation

ARMISTICE day was celebrated in the United States more generally and elaborately than it had been since the first of those occasions seventeen years ago. Chief of all the ceremonies, naturally, was that at Arlington National cemetery in Washington, where many thousands gathered to hear an address by President Roosevelt. Standing before the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Chief Executive paid a brief but eloquent tribute to the gallantry of America's fighting men in the World war, especially those who gave their lives in that conflict. Then, as the bugles sounded taps at 11 o'clock, he bowed his head and stood silent for a minute, as did millions of his fellow citizens all over the land. The President next placed a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb. For six hours, afterward, uniformed organizations marched on the hill in Arlington and laid their wreaths at the tomb.

The celebration in the national capital was culminated by a ball arranged by the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Congressional Medal of Honor men headed the list of guests, others being cabinet officers, diplomats and high officials of the army, navy and marine corps. Mrs. Woodrow Wilson was one of the guests.

Roosevelt Birthday Balls Will Be Repeated

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will be fifty-four years old on January 30 next, and once more the day will be marked in many cities and towns by balls, the receipts from which will be devoted to the war on infant paralysis. Mr. Roosevelt announced his approval of the plan, which is fathered by Henry L. Doherty.

Doherty wrote to the President urging him to lend his name to a third series of birthday balls. He pointed out that the proceeds of the first ball enabled the Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia to carry on its program and the second financed and organized a major attack on the disease by research and provided funds for communities in which the balls were held.

Corn Husking Champion Sets World Record

NOT of vast importance, but interesting enough to command the presence of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and 100,000 other persons, was the twelfth annual national corn husking contest held on a farm at the village of Newton, Ind.

The winner was Elmer Carlsen, twenty-six years old, of Audubon county, who was competing against 17 opponents, the winners and runners-up of nine midwestern states' contests. Carlsen husked 41.52 bushels of the golden corn in 80 minutes, which means that he ripped the husks from the stalks, tore the flimsy husks from them and pitched a gross weight of 2,965 pounds into his wagon. He lost $8.43 pounds deducted for gleanings left in the field and husks left on the corn.

Carlsen set a new world's record, the old one being 39.9 bushels, which mark was beaten also by four others of the contestants. The first prize was a check for $100 given by the Prairie Farmer. Mr. Wallace said the contest was "the best I've ever seen."

Italian King Celebrates His 66th Birthday

VICTOR EMMANUEL, king of Italy, celebrated his sixty-sixth birthday rather quietly because of the war in which his people are engaged in Africa. He reviewed a parade of armed forces, and with him was the real ruler of the country, Benito Mussolini. He dined then appeared on the balcony of his Venetian palace to address a great throng of cheering citizens in the plaza. He spoke just these two sentences:

"The forces you have seen this morning with all their weapons, and especially in their spirit, are ready to defend Italy's interests in Europe, Africa or anywhere."

"In one month we have regulated two old accounts (apparently the Italian debts at Addis and Makale, Ethiopia, in 1896) and the remainder will be settled later."

Mussolini that same evening sent to the nations participating in the sanctions against Italy a formal protest against their action, and warned them that Italy would be forced into reprisals with serious consequences to the economic world.

Meanwhile the Italian armies in Ethiopia were advancing steadily toward the interior from both the north and south. The strategic towns of Makale and Gorrahele were occupied practically without resistance. Harrar and Jijiga in the south and Dessie in the north were apparently the next major objectives. The Ethiopians, it was believed, would try to concentrate behind the invading columns to cut their communications.

Plot to Kill Ambassador Caffery Is Foiled

ONCE more Jefferson Caffery, American ambassador to Cuba, has been saved from assassination, the intelligence operatives of the Cuban army having discovered and thwarted the plot on the eve of its execution. Dispatches from Havana said the army officials believed the plot was nipped by the arrest of Cesar Villar, leader of the Confederation of Labor; that the assassination was to have taken place when Mr. Caffery left the embassy for home on November 1, and that six automobiles were ready to carry the assassins to a place of refuge. They believed the plot was inspired by radicals who seek to provoke American intervention in Cuba and hope this would bring on a revolution. It was said 29 men had been sworn to kill Mr. Caffery and certain others.

New Crisis in China Created by Japan

JAPAN'S apparent determination to dominate northern China has created another crisis in that oriental country, and Shanghai is involved for the Japanese have taken advantage of the slaying of a Japanese sailor there and landed a naval unit 2,000 strong which occupied the Hongkew section of the city.

As the Japanese force began patrolling with fixed bayonets and full war equipment, international settlement authorities mobilized a White Russian regiment of Cossacks under Col. F. H. W. Graham, British army officer detailed as commander of the local volunteer units. The Cossacks, paid by the international settlement, constitute a small standing army for the foreign quarter.

The Chinese were terrified and thousands of them fled from the native quarter to the international settlement, believing the Japanese intended military action in retribution for the murder of the sailor. This the Japanese government denied, but it declared the situation was "serious."

In Tokyo officials of the navy and foreign office met to discuss their policy, and it was reported that development plans for northern China were decided upon. Meanwhile Japanese military authorities at Tientsin invited to their headquarters Gen. Hsiao Chen-yin, chairman of the Chahar provincial government; Gen. Sung Che-yuan, head of the Peiping-Tientsin defense corps; Mayor Chin Teh-ching of Peiping, and Mayor Chen Ko of Tientsin to explain the army's new policy.

According to information from Japanese sources these Chinese leaders "have come to a strong determination that North China cannot exist unless it co-operates with Japan and Manchukuo by cutting away from Nanking."

Army Balloonists Soar to Record Height

CAPTS. ALBERT W. STEVENS and Orvil A. Anderson of the army made their long delayed balloon voyage into the stratosphere, and if their barometric computations are sustained they reached the record altitude of 71,000 feet. Their balloon rose from near Rapid City, S. D., and landed safely near White Lake, S. D., eight hours and thirteen minutes later.

Steel Helmets Dissolved by Hitler's Order

BY ORDER of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, the Steel Helmet association of war veterans has been dissolved. The League insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the League, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate relief if present un-sound spending policies are abandoned." But it is emphasized by the league that even "if unsound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.

So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

In Huddle on Budget

WASHINGTON.—About this time every fall, the President calls the director of the budget to the White House and they go into a huddle about the finances of the government, about the needs for money of the various governmental agencies who must pay their employees and the other expenses to which they are put and in addition they discuss general questions of policy. It is, as I said, an annual affair that presages a new tempo in the movement of activities in Washington because it occurs some weeks in advance of the reconvening of congress. Congress, under the Constitution, must appropriate the money which is spent by all branches of government.

Well, the annual huddle has just been held by President Roosevelt and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the bureau of the budget, and Mr. Bell has gone back to his office in the treasury with instructions to begin formulation of budget estimates for submission to congress.

Of course, budget making goes on throughout the year. The huge staff of experts and accountants who work under Mr. Bell's direction are busy the year round examining the proposed requirements of the various agencies and arriving at conclusions as to what their needs reasonably should be. The White House conference, therefore, represents the second step because those were the figures that formed the basis of the discussion between the President and his budget director.

Problems to Solve

In drafting the budget for submission to the next session of congress, the administration is confronted with a variety of problems, not the least of which is the political phase. It is to be remembered that the budget now under consideration covers money that will be appropriated for use after July 1, 1936, and the succeeding 12 month period. Therefore, half of the Presidential campaign next year, indeed, the heated part of that campaign, will take place after governmental agencies have begun to use the new appropriations. It is easy to see, therefore, that politics can hardly be kept out of the forthcoming budget in some form or other even though every President says politics does not influence budget making. Nevertheless, New Deal spending and future taxation constitute questions which the President cannot overlook and is not overlooking because those things are vital to every man, woman and child in the nation.

It seems to be pretty well settled now that the Republicans are going to make spending and taxation their major ammunition against Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal. In fact, it seems reasonably sure that the Republican slogan will be "Throw the Spendthrifts Out." That being the case, Mr. Roosevelt obviously must have in the back of his head considerable concern over the current budget making.

Knowing "Danny" Bell as I have known him for nearly 29 years, during which time he has grown up in the treasury service, I think it ought to be said in his favor that politics is farthest from his thoughts. He is as nearly a human fluting machine as any man I have known in my Washington career except possibly the man under whom he was trained, namely, the late Robert Hand. His chief concern is and always has been a determination to have accurate statistics, accurate conclusions and recommendations based as nearly as may be upon sound judgment.

But in saying these things about Mr. Bell I am not saying that budgetary plans are not subject to manipulation. It has been true in previous administrations and it is true in this one. The vast totals of figures with their minima of explanations are never easy to understand. This is one way of saying that they can be made to conceal a great deal more than they reveal.

Spending, Taxation

I mentioned the issues of spending and taxation. The American Liberty League, which has consistently warned about the possibility of future heavy taxation, has not been silent since the President some weeks ago made public a pre-budgetary summation. The League insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the League, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate relief if present un-sound spending policies are abandoned." But it is emphasized by the league that even "if unsound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.

So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

My experience as an observer of politics and government prompts me to say that there is nothing that strikes the heart of the average taxpayer quite so fundamentally as displays of waste with the accompaniment of forecasts of greater taxation. Thus, if the New Deal opposition goes ahead on the course that appears to be charted for them—actually it is made to order for them—they can cause the administration many anxious moments. I say this, knowing full well, that the administration has much argument on its side and that it is equipped with the finest layout of machinery for influencing public opinion that any administration ever has had. It has at its command all of the machinery used in crop production control, the thousands of persons on the federal payroll and the millions who believe Mr. Roosevelt is earnestly seeking to make this a better country in which to live. It is, therefore, no small task for the New Deal opposition if it is to succeed even in turning the New Deal strength in the house of representatives to anything near an even distribution of the seats.

New Deal Opposition

Apparently, New Deal opposition will be concentrated as much in the congressional districts as against the President himself. The reasons are simple. First, the senate is going to remain Democratic whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected or defeated. Only one-third of the 96 senators come up for re-election next year and the bulk of these are from normally Democratic states. Unless a cataclysm follows the Democratic party, the senate majority for the Democrats will continue to be ample.

Such is not the case in the house of representatives where the entire membership must seek election every two years. There are in the house membership probably as many as 75 Democrats who can be called pure political accidents. That is, they were elected from districts which are normally Republican during the landslide that swept Mr. Roosevelt into office. A considerable number of these naturally will be retired by the voters just as a considerable number of Republicans were retired after they had held house seats in the early 1920's by virtue of election in the Harding landslide. Consequently, changes may be expected in the house New Deal strength. In concentrating the fight in congressional districts, the New Deal opposition is battling for position. If the New Deal majority in the house can be whittled down, it will then become impossible for the President to drive through his program of legislation as he has done in the last three sessions. From the Republican standpoint, this would be important since it would place Mr. Roosevelt in much the same position that President Hoover found himself in the last half of his administration when he had an adverse congress on his hands. No political leader likes that situation.

When the New Deal opposition jumps onto the questions of spending and taxation, therefore, and when it goes back to the grass roots of congressional districts, it takes no stretch of the imagination to see that a real political fight lies ahead. Developments between now and the nominating conventions next June may change the general perspective.

Washington on Rights

While several of the federal courts, including the Supreme court of the United States, are considering questions revolving around President Roosevelt's program for development of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee river as an electrical power project, government owned, a newly discovered letter written by President George Washington takes on unusual interest. It seems that even in 1791, there was argument about the development of Muscle Shoals. The letter, which was addressed to the attorney general of the United States at that time, called attention to the efforts being made by individuals to effect trades with Indians and suggested the necessity for federal laws that would afford some protection for the Indians in their dealings with the white men. It will be remembered, of course, that the Tennessee river valley in those days was populated by Indians but the problem that existed then exists today, namely, protection of the rights of the individual.

HONOR DEAD BY BURNING MONEY

Village in Indo-China Does Thriving Business Supplying Funerals.

The world depression has not dimmed in the slightest degree the prosperity of the little village of Langbuol, in French Indo-China, the inhabitants of which continue to turn out paper money by the ton to be burned at funerals so the deceased will have plenty of money in the next world.

Dard Hunter, one of the leading authorities in this country on the art of papermaking, would not however, recommend the same panacea for the United States prosperity, he said on his return after a four months' journey to the Far East. Mr. Hunter, whose contributions to the art of papermaking have won him the title of "the modern Gutenberg" and the gold medal of the American Institute of Graphic Arts, went to Langbuol because he had heard that its inhabitants were operating the oldest paper mill in the world. He reported that the Langbuol villagers were carrying on the craft of papermaking which their ancestors first began on the same site about 700 years ago.

"Their papermaking methods are very primitive and crude," Mr. Hunter explained. "Apparently, they have not changed in any marked degree since the invention of paper turned back in 150 A. D. The product away from the villagers of Langbuol is pretty terrible stuff. However, they are satisfied with it and don't seem to be able to turn out enough of the spirit money, for which there is a great demand all through Indo-China."

About 400 men, women and children live in Langbuol, which is a thatched-roof settlement along a mud trail on the edge of the jungle fifteen miles north of Hanoi. All the inhabitants work on some phase of papermaking. But the best craftsmen and the chief energies of the villagers are devoted to the production of spirit money.

There are two principal varieties of this money. One kind consists of ordinary perforated paper; this is used at the funerals of ordinary citizens, who, it is believed, will have no great need of large funds in heaven. A special brand of spirit money, artfully decorated with lavish illustrations of gods, is burned at the funeral of the "aristocrats" of Indo-China. The "aristocratic" brand of spirit money is in high denominations. It burns with a heavy, acrid smoke, which floats lazily toward the blue skies, but eventually manages to reach the departed aristocrat in heaven, according to the firm belief of the Indo-Chinese priests.

The paper mills of Langbuol are probably the most remote and inaccessible in the world, Mr. Hunter said. In spite of this, Langbuol is the chief source of paper for all Indo-China. The daily output averages about 100 reams of 500 sheets each—almost all of which consists of spirit money.

Bamboo fibers, plentiful in the near-by jungles, are the source of Langbuol's paper. The bamboo is cut and then boiled in lime. Then it is washed in a stream meandering through the village and beaten by hand until it becomes pulp. The pulp is placed next in a wooden vat containing water. When a screen of bamboo reeds is dipped in this vat the bamboo fibers cling to the screen. These fibers are removed and made into the famous Langbuol paper.

Two cases filled with Langbuol spirit money were among Mr. Hunter's luggage. Some of this money will be used to illustrate a book—his fifteenth—which Mr. Hunter will write on the origin and history of papermaking. The rest will go to the Smithsonian Institution and other museums.

Coddling Sick Child

May Cramp Personality

The lasting scars of children's sickness are often not the encephalitis or the poor eyesight that may have resulted from an acute illness but the cramping of the child's personality. An unhealthy personality frequently represents the cost of coddling the convalescent, according to Katherine Brownell Oettinger, who warns of such dangers in her article, "How to Spoil a Child," which appears in Hygeia.

Illness is the time for reaping the results of character traits already sown. Then it is that the mother who has resorted to bribery or to threat, who has failed to build up confidence in her word, or who has pampered her child into a state of utter dependence will realize the error of her ways. The old threat of calling the doctor or the nurse or some other "bribe" in order to frighten the child into obedience now becomes a boomerang. Parents who build up an attitude of friendliness and confidence in the physician when the child is well will find their burdens lightened when the child is ill.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the always emergency station. In it are Burton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the jazz age, plainly shows her contempt for Garth.

CHAPTER I—Continued

The girl stopped in the entrance to peer around the cubbyhole kitchen, her scarlet-smeared lips curled with disgust. Though soap-clean, everything in the place looked crude. The air was choky from the smell of cheap bacon.

Huxby sprang up to place the chair at the near end of the table. He lifted the boiling teapot from the stove and started to fill a tin cup with the black brew.

"Pardon our not waiting, Lilith," he apologized. "I did not wish to wake you with the refueling. Planned to do it while you breakfasted."

"Quite thoughtful of you, darling. But you need not think I'll drink this buty or eat any of these heavily messes. Not for me. You can have your steering-garbage. I'll keep to cabin fare."

She faced about and went back through the passage. Huxby stood hesitating. Mr. Ramill motioned him to sit down.

"You stocked the cabin with enough wines and delicatessen to last several days. Finish your meal."

The mining engineer shot a glance at Garth. "I've had enough osts to founder a Scotch cow. May as well see to the refueling."

Tobin rose stiffly and followed Huxby into the storeroom. Mr. Ramill took a last sip of the boiled tea, favored Garth with a patronizing smile, and opened his gold-mounted cigar case to offer one of the choice Havanas.

Garth declined. "I never smoke. It deadens the nose."

"Deadens—What's that?"

"Chough man has the sense of smell, compared with dogs he lacks the ability to scent. Yet even a trace of it may be of use in the bush."

The investor's portly body quivered at his chuckle. "I've heard of nosing out prospects! First time, though, it's been done to my knowledge." He caught himself up. "At least, Mr. Huxby considers it possible your discovery may be worth an examination. That leaves only the question of terms, in case we find the mine promising enough for me to make an offer."

Garth spared an inquiring glance. The portly gentleman gave him a bland smile.

"I believe in encouraging prospectors. They find new districts. With that in view, I buy numbers of undeveloped prospects, taking the risk of heavy losses. Though I drop thousands on some mines, I have made a fortune from others. But the average prospector, like yourself, stakes his all. Ninety-nine times in a hundred, he is cleaned out by total failure. If your lode looks at all possible, I'll pay you up to a thousand dollars cash for it."

"I'm not selling," Garth said. "I like to play a game through to the end, win or lose."

The investor's eyes hardened. "What's your idea?"

"One year's lease, and sixty per cent of the gross returns to me."

Mr. Ramill blinked. "Sixty per cent of gross? You're crazy!"

"Like a fox. Same kind of nose."

It was Garth's turn to smile. "Not so keen, though, for galena. Better for scenting out alloys of gold, iridium and—platinum."

The last word knocked the benevolent encourager of prospectors speechless. Yet, after a moment of blank staring, he managed a half-pitying look.

"Dart!" he muttered. "That must be it. These prospectors, alone in the wilds for months at a time! He raised his voice. "Too bad, young man. If you'd make it gold and silver, I might have been able to swallow the bait. But platinum! That's a bit too thick. Platinum is found in quantity only in Russia. Very little anywhere else. Only a minute quantity in North America."

He rose as if to go. Garth gave him a regretful look.

"Yes—too bad, sir. Now I'll have to go outside. I may even have to wait until the ice goes out next year before I can dupe a gull into taking that lease."

Mr. Ramill left the kitchen without seeming to heed this plaint. When Garth followed him into the storeroom, he was quieting some dispute between Huxby and Tobin. The visitors put on their headsets and walked down to the wharf.

Garth went into the bunkroom. Before long Tobin came to open the door a handbreadth. He chuckled.

When he came out, his cartridge belt was buckled about his waist. It held his sheath-knife and belt-ax. In one hand he carried his rifle. In the other the rest of his small outfit, strapped on his pack board.

Down on the wharf Mr. Ramill puffed cigar smoke through his head-net while he watched Huxby's examination of the motor and propeller. Miss Ramill was not in sight.

"Right-o, Tobin," said Garth. "Shaming it is. When that bus came down, you never heard a sweeter motor—every cylinder hitting true. Wish I felt as sure of that southbound Bel-lanca."

"Don't fash yourself, Mr. Garth. She'll make Fort Smith on schedule."

"Then here goes for my next play."

He went down the slope to lay his pack and rifle a little way out from the base of the wharf. After that he fetched his canoe from the bank. He swung it down into the shallow water within close reach of the pack.

Mr. Ramill came forward rather hurriedly for so dignified a gentleman. "One moment, Garth. I've consulted with my engineer partner. He still thinks it may be worth our while to investigate your prospect."

"What! In view of my terms?"

"They're outrageous! Still, it is just possible the—er—mine might jus—"

He Lifted His Pack Up Again on the Wharf, and Swung the Canoe Over His Head.

They them. The least we can do is to inspect the lode. I make no deals sight unseen."

Garth spoke as if to himself: "An air ride, free, and only a few hours' delay. Time enough to make the trip out before the freeze-up."

He lifted his pack up again on the wharf, and swung the canoe over his head to take it back to its previous position, bottom up, on the bank. When he returned he carried his pack and rifle out to the airplane. From the cabin came the rhythmic dissonance of a jazz-dance tune. The plane evidently was equipped with a long-distance radio receiver.

Through the wire gauze of the big rear window he saw Miss Ramill reclining on the heated pilloves of an uncomfortable berth. The shelf at her elbow held tinned and package foods and a wine bottle. Garth hid down his rifle and pack on the wharf near the steps.

Asiote, at the storeroom, he found Huxby trying to boss Tobin into helping tote the gasoline. Annoyed by the old man's refusal, and still more by the indignity of mechanic's labor, the pilot engineer took up a case of twin five-gallon gasoline tins in his arms and started cautiously down the slope to the wharf.

Had Garth taken the same load, either he or Huxby would have had to return for the other two cases. He roped three cases together and tipped the thirty-gallon load upon his back. As if the pack had been a feather-weight, he went down the stony slope with the smooth gliding step of a moccasin wearer.

Out at the end of the wharf, a heavy stoop and twist lowered his deft pack upon the planks without a jar. As he straightened up he saw Miss Ramill step down from the cabin. She had donned her leather pilot trousers and jacket but held the helmet in her hand.

Through the mesh of her headnet he saw that her eyes were lustrous from wine. They gazed out at him with a look of reluctant admiration. No man of her acquaintance had ever toted such a back-breaking pack, either lightly or at all. But her forced respect gave place to a show of disdain when he ventured a friendly smile.

"How gallant!" she jeered. "He has sacrificed his whiskers. Can he be he hopes to cravish the fair sex?"

"Was that why I shaved?" Garth inquired. "Feminine intuition is wonderful. I thought I did it to make doping easier."

"Oh, you mean what they call fly dope. But I see none of the sticky or smelly mess they tell about. Your face looks clean."

"Thanks for the compliment. But I'll soon have to take to the usual grease and spruce pitch. Just used the last of my frogite."

The girl flushed with resentment. "Frogite! Don't lie to me. I know how you westerners tell fantastic falsehoods to tenderfeet."

"You do? By the way, in the North we say chechacos, not tenderfeet. As for the frogite, it's no fancy. Years ago, Seton remarked the fact that mosquitoes never sting frogs. I—er—I know a man who experimented and who finally obtained chemically the substance exuded by the skin of frogs. Too bad I've run out of the dope. There are plenty of pests where we are going. You'll have to keep behind your nets—or take to grease and pitch."

Before the girl could reply, Huxby called down for more gasoline. He had managed to get one tin of his case up to the cockpit and had emptied it into a wing tank.

Garth swung up to him with a whole case balanced on his shoulder. It was far easier than toting a deer over broken country. After hoisting aboard the other cases and Huxby's second tin, he ducked under the front strut of the wing. His rifle and pack lay where he had left them.

The radio had been tuned in on what probably was the Edmonton relay of the London metal market report. The announcer started to give the last quoted price on platinum: "Refined platinum, per troy ounce, twelve pounds, seven shillings and—"

A white and shriek-like static cut across the voice. The loudspeaker blared into jazz.

Smelly mess they tell about. Your face looks clean."

"Thanks for the compliment. But I'll soon have to take to the usual grease and spruce pitch. Just used the last of my frogite."

The girl flushed with resentment. "Frogite! Don't lie to me. I know how you westerners tell fantastic falsehoods to tenderfeet."

The radio had been tuned in on what probably was the Edmonton relay of the London metal market report. The announcer started to give the last quoted price on platinum: "Refined platinum, per troy ounce, twelve pounds, seven shillings and—"

A white and shriek-like static cut across the voice. The loudspeaker blared into jazz.

Splashes told that Huxby was tossing the empty cans and cases into the river, instead of down on the wharf. That small yet wanton waste proved that the mining engineer was a stranger in the North.

Garth stooped forward under the wing strut with his rifle. Miss Ramill stood with her very artificially waved semi-bobbed hair bared to the breeze. Upon taking off her aviator's net to put on the leather flying helmet, a swarm of insects had at once attacked her. She was trying to flit them off in order to replace the protecting gauze.

"D—n your North country!" she exploded.

"Wait till you reach one of our muskeg swamps, Miss Ramill. You'll call this heaven. But why the flying suit? Going to pilot the bus?"

"Is that any of your business?"

"None whatever. Pardon my impertinent curiosity. Only, as there are not three seats in the cockpit, I was moved to wonder if you, instead of your fiance, are to be my riding mate."

"Yours?"

"How else? Or does the gentleman imagine he can find my prospect without a guide?"

"Dad will make you give Vivian your route map. I'll not let you have my seat."

This time Garth did not smile. The girl was due for a lesson. "Suit yourself—and tell Huxby he can head for the North pole."

"Dad?"

"Quite so. He and your father can go there, or to the other place—and you with them. You're not only a selfish snob. You're a brainless fool to fancy a southern pilot can back-trail a canoe-route through unmappped forest and muskeg country."

The girl's blue eyes flared with outraged pride and vanity. Garth smiled. He had paid her back in full for her arrogance. It was worth waiting over until another season for his fortune, up in that hidden valley of the Rockies.

But before he could stoop under the strut to recover his pack from the cabin, the girl called out to him: "Wait. I did not understand. If it's really necessary for you to act as Vivian's guide—but you had no call to be so rude."

Though he turned back, it was with no intention of humbling himself. He was not doped by her seeming change to amiability. It had been too sudden for sincerity.

"A woman has no more right to be rude than has a man," he replied. "When I hear you apologize, I'll consider whether an apology is due from me."

The smile left her rouge-smeared lips. He had never before seen so disagreeable a look on any woman's face. But before she could find words to vent her feelings, Huxby peered down over the side of the cockpit, flushed from exertion and annoyance.

"Don't be silly, Garth. Cast off the lines—Sorry, Lilith, that I'm not to have your company."

"Don't worry, old dear," she said. "This woolly pest will soon be a thing of the past. Only a few hours of the affliction, and we'll be rid of him."

CHAPTER II

Treachery.

Garth followed Miss Ramill in under the monoplane's wing. He did not offer to hand the girl up into the cabin or help ship the steps. Women's rights did not include courtesies in return for insults.

He cast off the tail mooring line and swung aboard, with the coiled rope and his rifle. As the plane drifted clear, the breech-screwed it head off from shore. Huxby paused a moment to jerk out a question: "Route?"

For answer, Garth pointed westerly. Huxby set the propeller whirling with the self-starter. With rapidly increasing headway, the plane skimmed out on the smooth river.

Rifle between knees, Garth settled down upon the cockpit seat at the pilot's elbow. Huxby was first to speak. When the plane soared above the west bank of the great river, he leaned close to shout a repetition of his question: "Route?"

Garth looked overside before pointing. The plane had climbed nearly a thousand feet.

Even to a man who had spent years in the North, this view of the sub-arctic landscape was a puzzling maze. On the ground, Garth would have had slight trouble retracing the course he had followed in and out of the wilderness. From the air, everything looked different. For all his flying experience, Garth could not, as he had expected, strike a baseline. Though he knew the general direction of his find, he was unable to guide the plane as the crow flies.

At his sign to bank, Huxby frowned but brought the plane around in a wide curve. Very soon, upriver from the refueling station, Garth sighted the small swamp stream on which he had begun and ended his trip into the unknown. This was a familiar point of departure. From it he again directed the pilot to the westward.

Somewhat under an hour later, the swamps and low ridges ended at the upheave of an eastward thrust mountain range. A near view of the barren peaks caused Garth to twist the course about on a sharp angle to the southwest. Those mountains had not appeared any too familiar. The difficulty of finding landmarks recognizable from the air had not lessened. For days on his trip in and out, he had traveled through dense forests of spruce that shut off almost all wide views, even of the mountains.

The westward rise of the country had by now forced the plane up another thousand feet. Higher slopes ahead called for still more altitude. The jagged skyline reared a thousand feet or more higher than the plane. Huxby started to climb. Until within a mile of the savage cliffs he ignored Garth's advice to lessen the angle. Then, as the plane swept past an out-jutting peak on the right, Garth signed towards the gap between it and the main mass.

The highest point of the pass was more than half a thousand feet lower than the plane. Huxby pushed the stick forward and shot down for the gap on a long slant. The monoplane soon drove in between the towering precipices and steeply pitched side slopes of the immense cleft. A little more, and the cleft crooked to the north. The plane banked around the turn. Below the bend the cleft widened in the neve of a glacier. Farther down the expanse of snow-ice pinched into a narrow gulch. The gulch ran down into a deep mountain-rimmed valley. Down the rough led tumbled a stream of milky glacier water.

Garth noted moving dots on the tundra and white specks up on the rocky slopes above them. But Huxby saw neither the caribou nor the mountain sheep. He had at once spotted the lake in the valley bottom. He angled on down as if to plunge into the silvery sparkling ripples of the lake. The monoplane swooped above the upper shore and drove on towards the foot of the lake at full speed. Garth pointed to the intake from the glacier stream, and signed for a descent.

Snail, a Mollusk, Belongs to Land, Water Variety

A snail is a mollusk and properly belongs only to mollusks living on land or in fresh water, which says a writer in the Montreal Herald, are classified as Pulmonates because they have lungs (Latin, pulmo) and breathe air instead of extracting oxygen from water by means of gills as do the sea-mollusks. These pulmonates are of three kinds: 1, those living on land; 2, those living in fresh water; 3, slugs. Both of the first two are protected by shells to which they are permanently attached, yet may extend the body to some distance outside of them. The third kind (slugs) have no visible shell, only a small plate beneath the skin, and are wholly terrestrial. All these are virtually alike in internal structure, subsist mainly on vegetable food, are of two sexes, and reproduce by means of eggs.

As a snail, carrying its shell up right on its back, crawls slowly along all we see of it is the squarish head at the forward end of a soft but muscular, tapering body called the "foot," the under surface of which is a tough, elastic sole by slight movement of which the animal hitches itself forward.

"Clermont," Fulton's Steamboat was the steamboat built by Robert Fulton was called the "Clermont."

Don't Guess But Know

Whether the "Pain" Remedy You Use is SAFE?

Don't Entrust Your Own or Your Family's Well-Being to Unknown Preparations

THE person to ask whether the preparation you or your family are taking for the relief of headaches is SAFE to use regularly is your family doctor. Ask him particularly about Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN.

He will tell you that before the discovery of Bayer Aspirin most "pain" remedies were advised against by physicians as bad for the stomach and, often, for the heart. Which is food for thought if you seek quick, safe relief.

Scientists rate Bayer Aspirin among the fastest methods yet discovered for the relief of headaches and the pains of rheumatism, neuritis and neuralgia. And the experience of millions of users has proved it safe for the average person to use regularly. In your own interest remember this.

You can get Genuine Bayer Aspirin at any drug store—simply by asking for it by its full name, BAYER ASPIRIN. Make it a point to do this—see that you get what you want.

7 SURVIVE OCEAN SHIPWRECK; TELL OF FIVE WHO DIED

Motorship Hurry On Swept to Doom in Storm on Atlantic Coast.

Jidique, Nova Scotia.—Seven half-dead seamen were washed ashore near here with the crews that five other companions on the Halifax motor vessel Hurry On had died in a storm, which capsize their little ship 12 hours earlier.

Six of the survivors reached shore in a battered and earless lifeboat after a night that had seen death pick off their five companions one by one. One of the dead was still in the boat.

A seventh living but unconscious member of the crew was cast ashore by the rollers. They abandoned ship off Henry Island, 23 miles from here. Five of the six men alive in the boat were unconscious when it beached, and only one was able to crawl to a fisherman's home to bring help.

Captain a Victim.

Hours before they landed Capt. A. H. Gardner, fifty-four-year-old York-shireman, died.

The Hurry On, owned by the Unus Shipping company, was bound for Montreal from Halifax when the storm swept down. As she heeled before the northeaster her cargo of corn shifted, forcing her down on one side. Oil poured on the water failed to help, and finally the men had to take to the boat.

Through the long night, then, the shivering seamen watched as one after another died of exposure.

Seaman G. Carmichael of St. Ann, N. S., told how his shipmates died.

"The lifeboat capsize," he said.

"We all crawled back aboard, but we had lost everything."

"Shortly after that the boat upset again. First Mate Alex Mackenzie never came back. He was drowned."

"Alex Wait died two hours later of exposure. Before long he was washed overboard. Those still alive had all they could do to keep in the boat themselves."

Drifts Alive to Shore.

"In another two hours Captain Gardner died. He died of exposure like Wait. His body was washed over, too."

"Mackenzie died soon after the captain, and we couldn't keep his body in the boat either."

"We were just an hour away from land when Fraser Maclean died. His body was brought ashore."

Chief Engineer Herman Scade of Hamburg, Germany, said: "The waves were mountainous and it was absolutely impossible to keep the bodies of the dead men in the boat."

"It was filled with water. There was nothing to ball with, and, even if there had been, we wouldn't have been able to use it."

"When we left the ship the boat was fully equipped, but we lost everything the first time it turned over."

Somewhere in the long drift to land Second Engineer Albert Bonfleur of Halifax was washed overboard with the dead men. But he kept afloat and, unconscious, drifted ashore down the beach from the lifeboat.

American Indians' War Whoop Startles Chinese

Hong Kong.—A band of full-blooded American Indians invaded Hong Kong on a "round-the-world" tour, startling the Chinese with one of their native warwhoops, rendered by request.

There were seven in the party, all from the Osage reservation in Oklahoma. Their boat, the President Polk, gave them a thrill by buckling its bow in landing at the Kowloon docks, slightly damaging the wharf.

"The object of our tour," Paul Bear track, spokesman for the party, said, "is to help educate our children. By showing them some of the geography they will study about after on, they ought to have more of an interest in their work."

At home, Beartrack makes his fortune by raising cattle and horing for oil.

"I'm a lot better off, I know, than most other Indians in America, and I realize that my children are going to have an even greater opportunity to progress than I have had, but even so, we have taken long strides since the white man first occupied our country. Some of us are still pretty backward, but there are such types among all races of people and the whole should not be judged by a few."

His Bride Sleeps Under Blankets; She's Missing

Moree, Mich.—Returning from a Niagara falls honeymoon, John Weisberg, twenty-two, discovered at a Monroe tourist camp that his bride was missing. She had been sleeping under blankets in the rear of his car. Later he found her at a gas station near the Michigan-Ohio line where unknown to him she had got out of the car and gone into a wash room.

THIRD DEGREE TOO STRONG FOR TOUGH TONY THE STINGER

Found He Knew Too Much for Own Good So He Bumps Himself Off.

New York.—When any of Tony the Stinger's pals knew too much and were liable to talk, the rumor was, he bumped them off. When Tony found he, too, knew too much for his own good, he bumped himself off.

The third degree did it. After a former companion, probably a girl, put the finger on him so that New York police could pick him up on Broadway, detectives strapped Tony in a chair and gave him a rubber hosing. Such torture was not unusual to Tony the Stinger, properly called Anthony Cugino, Philadelphia's thirty-eight-year-old candidate for the infamy of Dillinger, Vincent Coll, and the like.

Before Tony killed dangerous enemies in his pack he often slit their tongues, pulled out their fingernails or pushed burning cigarettes into their skin.

But Tony snarled back at the bulking circle of police pelted him with questions and then blows. He would admit only one of the eleven murders they were sure he had committed.

Wife Brought In.

Soon after they threw Tony sobbing and bruised into his cell, police brought his pretty wife, the former Frances Uilo of Philadelphia, in. They had caught her at a bungalow at Midland beach, the Cuginos' home for several months. They wanted her to tell what she knew about Tony's trail of blood.

She laughed and posed for photographers. Meanwhile, in the cell Tony was writing a note:

"My dear wife Frances: Please do not worry and just try to do your best to be happy. I'm going to end this life of hell. I will meet you in the next world. Your husband, Jim."

"P. S.: Forgive Sally."

"Sally" was supposedly a flit sweetieheart who had a lover's revenge by tipping the police off.

The police had been most careful to see that Tony did not escape dead or alive. But they forgot their caution after he took the third degree without breaking. They had taken his belt and shoe laces but neglected to remove his tie. He hung himself with his tie and strips torn from his shirt. Neither he nor his wife was aware of the other's nearness. Frances believed it was a ruse when chagrined police discovered the body and told her.

Underworld Rejoices.

The underworld rejoiced to know that its worst enemy had taken the "easy way." Tony became a criminal at the age of twelve, and when he was twenty-two, killed a cellmate in Maryland state prison. Believing it was self-defense, a prison board paroled him in 1939. Then he joined the Little Agule gang in Brooklyn, but it could not stomach his cruelty and drove him out. He ran with the Purple gang in Detroit. The Purples didn't like his friendliness any better and put him on the spot. Then he went to Chicago in Chicago and teamed with Al Capone's men. They found out he was a double-crosser and Tony moved on to Philadelphia.

He became known as the real leader of the tri-state gang there, ostensibly led by Robert Mais and Walter Legenza. They were both electrocuted. The one slaying that Tony admitted was the killing of a policeman during a Philadelphia pay roll holdup.

Walks 30 Miles Every Day to Keep His Vow

New York.—Yezzo Sabagian, seventy-eight, paused in the midst of his daily constitutional and, after turning a few cartwheels and somersaults, explained to reporters why he walks 30 miles a day.

Sabagian, a retired Armenian rug weaver, walks daily from Yonkers, N. Y., to lower Manhattan, where he indulges in a few callisthenics before starting home again. The round trip takes nine hours and a half.

It was in his father's house in Ain-Tah, Turkey, in 1885, that his mother drew a rug over him and left him for dead—a supposed victim of frequent Turkish massacres.

He was unconscious from bullet and saber wounds. Three days later he regained consciousness and managed to get to the American hospital, where he vowed to devote his life to walking and praying if he lived.

Subsequent misfortunes destroyed his family and in 1900 he came to New York to live with his one remaining brother.

From 1917 until his retirement four years ago he walked 30 miles to work daily. Now he walks it each day to keep his vow to the Lord.

A Heraphill, joint hostesses.

The president, Miss Annie Lee
Cochran, called the meeting to order and presided over the lengthy business session. Twenty-five regular members were present with one new member, Mrs. Leon Riley, and one visitor, Mrs. Wiley Stevenson.

During the business session plans were made for the Thanksgiving baskets. The nominating committee made a report and officers for the coming year were elected. Miss Annie Lee Cochran was re-elected as president. Mrs. Hugh Rushon was elected secretary. Other officers were elected also.

At the close of the business the program was turned over to Miss Myra Seance who had prepared a very interesting one. Those who participated were Mesdames Clifton Hamlett, Jimmie Cochran, J. A.
Hemphill, and Miss Mary Moss
Hales.

At the conclusion of the program the hostess served delicious cream bars.
