Guantanamo video at center of controversy

By The Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) - Videotapes capturing the actions of a U.S. squad assigned to subdue disobedient prisoners at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, could play a role as American lawmakers look

Some 600 men, many captured on the battlefields of Afghanistan, are being held on suspicion of links to al-Qaida terror network or Afghanistan's ousted Taliban rulers. Officials said some have provided useful intelligence while others have not.

A spokesman at the base, Navy Lt. Cmdr. Robert Mulac, said Friday that "there are no beatings on the tapes" and that the squad actually was known as the "Initial Response Force."

It remains unclear what the tapes show, but Mulac said the squad was dispatched in rare circumstances to deal with misbehaving inmates. For instance, he said, the team could be ordered to move a detainee to of urine at guards.

Last week two released British detainees, Shafiq Rasul and Asif Igbal, complained in a letter to U.S. officials that interrogators forced prisoners to strip and used loud music, strobe lights and dogs to extract confessions.

Mulac called their claims "blatant lies," saying squad members were trained to settle confrontations without force and use only "minimal force" if necessary.

Another released British prisoner, 26-year-old Terek Dergoul, told The Observer newspaper of London last week that he was "peppersprayed" by a squad that "forced my head into the toilet pan and flushed."

LSU students welcome Bush at commencement

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) -President Bush drew thunderous applause and scattered boos Friday when he addressed Louisiana State University graduates, joking about his own mediocre college career and admonishing the students to be "men and women of conviction and character.'

The reception was friendly for a 19-minute commencement speech that focused heavily on morality but began lightheartedly with a joke about the President's modest academic attainments.

Bush warmed the huge crowd at the Maravich Assembly Center by referring to his own college past, saying "I've seen how things work out pretty well for a C student," at the same time making a favorable reference to a popular local bar, the

The students appeared largely excited by the President's presence on this conservative campus.

Larry F. Stewart, 46, was charged by federal authorities with two counts of perjury and was suspended as Secret Service laboratory direc-tor. Larry Stewart was called as an expert witness in an effort by the government to show that Bacanovic doctored a worksheet to support his and Martha Stewart's claim that that they had standing agreement to sell the homemaking authority's ImClone Systems stock if the price fell below $60. Larry Stewart testified that Bacanovic's notation "(at)60" on the worksheet had been made in a different ink than other marks on the paper. While on the stand, Larry Stewart testified he had worked on two ink-analysis examinations of the worksheet, in August 2002 and January 2004. Prosecutors, however, said the Secret Service informed them last week that the expert did not work on those tests.

In addition, Larry Stewart falsely testified he was familiar with a proposal for a scientific textbook on ink

Pentagon discloses prisoner death probes

By ROBERT BURNS AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Army has investigated the deaths of 37 prisoners held by U.S. forces in Iraq and Afghanistan since August 2002, Pentagon officials revealed

Among the prisoner deaths, nine are still being investigated as possible homicides, eight by the military and at least one by the Justice Department because it apparently involved only CIA personnel.

In a 10th case, a soldier was punished and dismissed from the Army for using excessive force after shooting to death a man in Iraq who was throwing rocks at him in September 2003.

The rest are attributed to natural causes or considered justifiable homicides, in which a soldier had reason to use deadly force on a dangerously violent prisoner, officials said. Eight deaths, in four incidents in Iraq, were considered justified.

Even as the investigation into the abuse and humiliation of prisoners in Iraq goes forward, similar criminal inquiries are under way into the circumstances of prisoners who

The statistical breakdown was provided by a senior military official, who briefed reporters Friday on condition he not be identified.

Bryan Whitman, a Pentagon spokesman, said members of Congress were given the same information Friday.

The nine prisoner homicides apparently still under investigation:

■ Abdul Jaleel, 46, who died Jan. 9, 2004, at Forward Operating Base Rifles near Al Asad, Iraq. He died of "blunt force injuries and asphyxia."

Maj. Gen. Abed Hamed Mowhoush, a former commander of Saddam Hussein's air defenses, who died Nov. 26, 2003, during interrogation at Qaim, Iraq. His death may have involved a CIA officer who is an interrogator. Doctors attributed his death to "asphyxia due to smothering and chest compression."

Manadel Al-Jamadi, who was being held at Abu Ghraib, the Iraqi prison in which the well-known abuse of prisoners took place. He died Nov. 4, 2003, death of "blunt force injuries complicated by compromised respiration," doctors said. Two CIA personnel, an officer and a contract translator, were present when he died, and the agency and Justice Department are conducting Abdul Wali, a prisoner at Asadabad, Afghanistan, who died June 21, 2003. The CIA's inspector general is conducting an inquiry into this death; it is unclear whether the Army still is.

Dilar Dababa, who was being held near Baghdad. He died June 13, 2003, of what doctors determined was a head injury.

 An Afghan listed only as Dilawar, 22, held at Bagram, who died Dec. 10, 2002. Doctors attributed his death to "blunt force injuries to lower extremities complicating coronary artery disease."

Mullah Habibullah, about 28, Afghan held at Bagram, who died Dec. 3, 2002. Doctors attributed his death to "pulmonary embolism due to blunt force injuries to the legs."

 Two additional deaths of unidentified prisoners, at least one of which occurred in Iraq.

Military death certificates released Friday by the Pentagon also attribute two more deaths to "medical homicide," which means that the person died in connection with the actions or influence of another person. It does not necessarily mean a crime occurred. It was unclear whether these deaths are being criminally investigated.

- Fahin Ali Gumaa, 44, who died in Baghdad on April 28, 2004, several days after suffering multiple gunshot wounds.

 Abdul Wahid, who died Nov. 6, 2003, in Helmand province, Afghanistan. His death is attributed to multiple blunt force injuries that were complicated by a muscle con-

The military also released the death certificate of prisoner Nagem Sadoon Hatab, a 52-year-old former Baath Party official, who was killed on June 6, 2003, when a Marine grabbed him by the neck, snapping a bone and mortally injuring him. Investigators believed the death was accidental, but two of the Marine's superiors face charges in connection with Hatab's treatment.

The 37 deaths under Army investigation are from 33 incidents, two of which involved more than one death. That is eight more cases than the Pentagon had publicly reported two weeks ago.

Of the 33 cases, 30 involve detainees who died inside U.S.-run detention facilities. Of the others, one involved a soldier who shot and killed an Afghani who had lunged toward a weapon, the senior military officer said.

Another was an Iraqi who drowned after he was forced off a bridge by a U.S. soldier. In the third case, a U.S. soldier shot and killed an Iraqi when he lunged at another U.S. soldier, the official said. It is unclear whether any of these three cases have been resolved.

Also, for the first time Friday, the Justice Department acknowledged that it has opened a criminal investigation into allegations of prisoner abuse in Iraq. Justice spokesman Mark Corallo said the probe involved an unidentified civilian contractor working for the Defense Department. It was unclear if the case being investigated by the Justice Department involved a

The Justice Department can prosecute such contractors for crimes committed overseas, including torture, if they are not already under military jurisdiction.

"We remain committed to taking all appropriate action within our jurisdiction regarding allegations of mistreatment of Iraqi prisoners," Corallo said.

No further details were provided. The Justice Department has also received at least three referrals for possible prosecution from the CIA related to prisoner abuse allegations, but has not announced a full criminal investigation into those cases.

Whitman, the Pentagon spokesman, said records are still be examined, and that the number of cases could rise.

Easing Fears

WASHINGTON (AP) — A day after President Bush sought to quell Republican fears over the beleaguered Iraq campaign, Pentagon leaders are delivering a progress report to lawmakers.

The president made a rare visit to Capitol Hill on Thursday to talk about Iraq, which is plagued by violence a year after the invasion and costing more than expected in American lives and money.

To exchange ideas about the way forward in Iraq, some three dozen diplomats from coalition nations met at the State Department, where Secretary of State Colin Powell told them, "We have a lot of work to do in the next 42 days," He referred to the June 30 deadline for U.S.-led occupation authorities to hand political power to an as-yet unchosen Iraqi government.

The subject of how things are progressing in Iraq will be taken up again Friday in a hearing before the House Armed Services Committee. Witnesses include Gen. Richard Myers, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Army Chief of Staff Peter Schoomaker and Marine Commandant Gen. Michael Hagee.

More details of Iraqi prisoner abuse became public Friday as The Washington Post published more photos and previously secret statements of prisoners at the now infamous Abu Ghraib prison.

In that secret testimony, prisoners said they were ridden like animals, fondled by female soldiers and forced to retrieve their food from toilets.

The Post reported it has obtained hundreds more pictures and several digital videos of the abuse. In one photo, a cornered inmate is cowering as a soldier tries to restrain a large black dog with both hands. In another photo, a naked prisoner covered with a brown substance is ordered to walk in a straight line with his ankles cuffed.

Briefing anxious Republican lawmakers Thursday, Bush warned of more difficult days in Iraq even after the transfer of sovereignty.

This has been a rough couple of months for the president, particularly on the issues of Iraq, and I think he was here to remind folks that we do have a policy and this policy is going to be tough," said Sen. Rick Santorum, R-Pa. "Things, as I think when the popular vote changes.

he commented, are very likely to get worse before they get better."

Colleges facing free speech debate

By BRETT BARROUQUERE Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) -University of Louisville professor Ede Warner has a unique plan to keep the Ku Klux Klan off his campus: He wants the school to ban the group, then argue in court that it's a terrorist organization.

"Nobody has ever done that," Warner said.

Klan members started posting fliers on campus early in the spring semester to protest diversity programs sponsored by the school. That stirred debate among faculty and administrators that has taken place on campuses around the country: how far the university can go to keep some groups off campus and how to best deal with unpopular ideas in the academic setting.

What makes the Louisville situation so unusual is the presence of the KKK, said Mark Potok of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., which tracks the Klan and other hate groups.

"I cannot think of another situation when the Klan has appeared on campus," Potok said. "The Klan is quite small, even within the contemporary radical right."

Having the Klan banned as a terrorist organization based on its past would be legally difficult, especially given the Klan's inaction in recent years, and probably unnecessary, said Potok, whose organization has beat the Klan in court over other issues.

"You would run into issues of free speech," he said.

University officials banned two members of the KKK from campus this month, saying they violated university policy about where fliers can be posted.

That could give Warner his fight, if the Klan challenges the school over access to a public university and its students. Jim Kennedy, the self-described point man for the KKK in the Louisville area, said the Klan is preparing to contest the

"They don't like us too much er there." Kennedy told The Associated Press. "They're trying to get around that freedom of speech any way they can."

The Klan started appearing on campus in the fall after black activist and rapper Sister Souljah gave a speech that some students said was derogatory to whites and received $11,000 for the talk. Others said the main theme was black empowerment.

Afterward, Kennedy demanded that the Klan be given equal time and compensation or the school end the diversity program, which he considers racist.

The appearance by the KKK prompted protests on and off campus. A state representative has asked the FBI to investigate the University spokeswoman Rae Goldsmith said the school is cooperating with the FBI, which was tapped after Klan members accused the university of violating their civil rights.

The FBI would not confirm a complaint being filed.

Dave King, one of the banned Klansmen, said he's not a terrorist and that the ban is an attempt by the school to shut down an unpopular point of view.

'They don't like what I'm saying, so they're trying to make it so I can't speak," King said.

Goldsmith said the Klan can still distribute fliers and appear on campus in one of two designated "free speech zones," but to speak at a campus function, it would need sponsorship from a campus organi-

Some schools, such as the University of Texas in Austin, bar all non-campus groups from making presentations on campus unless they are invited and sponsored by a campus organization. At Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, where former Klan grand wizard David Duke makes the occasional on-campus appearance, anyone may speak as long as they do not disrupt classes or university business, said LSU spokeswoman Kristine Calogne.

Murray minister looks at 'Army of the Cumberland' detailed narrative. The Army of the Cumberland got its name because it operated within the arc of Kentucky and northern Tennessee that the Cumberland River makes as it flows south out of eastern Kentucky mountains, passes Nashville, and turns north to the Ohio River. West of it were Henry Halleck and Ulysses Grant.

The Army of the Cumberland was slow in getting organized, first under General Robert Anderson, a Kentuckian who has surrendered Fort Sumter, and then under William Tecumseh Sherman, both of whom suffered from military paranoia and grossly over-estimated the number of troops and threats to Kentucky from Albert Sidney Johnson's over-extended western army. (Sherman later got fame and infamy, largely because of Grant. He said Grant befriended him when he was insane and that he befriended Grant when he was drunk.)

Don Carlos Buell took over. He was a northerner of the old McClellan type-unwilling to fight battles when territory could be won by maneuvers, and unwilling to turn the War into an abolitionist crusade. Asked to aid Grant at Donelson, Buell vacillated and then did not, although he did occupy Nashville afterward. Begged to come to Grant's aid at Shiloh, Buell arrived after the first day's fight and near-defeat. He and his men claimed ever afterward that they had rescued Grant, but Grant and Sherman and their supporters argued the opposite, and that battle of words continues even today among his-

Buell's big independent opportunity came in 1862 when he raced Bragg's invading southern army for control of the railroad from Louisville to Nashville and to preserve Union control of Kentucky. At the Battle of Perryville, Buell's personal performance was poor (he wasn't even aware there was a battle going on), and he was criticized as well for not pursuing and destroying Bragg's fleeing forces.

General William S. Rosecrans replaced Buell. Rosecrans was very popular with the troops, a marvelous supplier of arms and food, but, like Buell, slow to move and determined to win without having to fight, and reluctant to follow Lincoln's personal orders to take and hold East Tennessee. Trying to push Bragg back into Georgia, he stumbled into Bragg's army at Stones River southeast of Nashville, a battle that ended in a draw with Bragg retreating to Chattanooga, and then Rosecrans stumbled into Bragg again south of Chattanooga at Chickamauga, a Union defeat that cost Rosecrans his job.

He was followed in command by General George Thomas, a Virginian Unionist. Thomas had been offered Buell's command before Perryville and had turned it down, asking that Buell be given a chance. He should have been offered the post when Buell did leave, but Rosecrans got it instead.

Thomas recently has been shown to have been a great general, unfairly underrated in most Civil War histories and by Grant and Sherman. Daniel shows that he had weaknesses, but overall was indeed a fine warrior. He earned the title of "The Rock of Chickamauga" when he refused to retreat with Rosecrans and the rest of the army at Chickamauga, and he earned further laurels when his men, without his orders, stormed and took Missionary Ridge and forced Bragg into Georgia. Later on, Thomas would defend Franklin and Nashville, decimating Hood's Army of Tennessee in the last Confederate major charges in the west.

In retrospect, Daniel finds, the Army of the Cumberland enjoyed little of the attention that Grant and Sherman got on the Mississippi at Vicksburg, or that the Army of the Potomac and other eastern armies received in opposing Lee, but the army did succeed in taking and holding Kentucky, Middle Tennessee, and eventually East Tennessee, mostly by just being there. In recounting the saga, Daniel makes liberal use of diaries and reports of officers and recruits, but his focus remains on the primary generals for whom the army was an extension of their quirks and personalities and happenstances. Readers hoping to find the northern army's story matched with stories of the opposing southern armies led by Albert Sidney Johnston, Beauregard, Bragg, Joe Johnston, and John Hood may be disappointed, but Daniel nonetheless has produced precise and sometimes exciting prose.

St. Louis Cardinals' Jim Edmonds grins as he watches his ball fly out of the park for a home run during the fifth inning against the Chicago Cubs, Friday.

Cardinals crash Cubs' comeback

CHICAGO (AP) - Early or late, the St. Louis Cardinals are managing to get enough offense to win.

Albert Pujols and Jim Edmonds hit consecutive home runs, and the Cardinals hung on for a 7-6 victory over their division rival Chicago Cubs on Friday.

Ray Lankford had three hits with an RBI, a run scored and a steal, and Tony Womack and Mike Matheny also drove in runs.

"We know how it is with the Cubs," said closer Jason Isringhausen, who pitched a perfect ninth to seal the victory.

"We always want to beat the Cubs, they always want to beat us. It's just fun to get a win. We can go out to dinner tonight, have a good time, and come back in the morning and do it all over Moises Alou almost spoiled those plans, though. The Cardinals didn't get a hit after the fifth inning, and Alou cut their lead to one with a three-run homer in the seventh.

It's the third straight day he's gone deep late in the game. He homered to win the game in the 10th inning Wednesday night, and tied Thursday's game with a home run in the seventh.

"It's not a beach ball, I only got one hit today," Alou said. "I'm just trying to be aggressive and try to hit the ball hard. I got some good wood. They happen

MSU fails to sweep Samford 'Breds find bump in the road

Murray State catcher Bo Baxter takes a swing at the ball during the opening game of Friday's doubleheader against Samford. Baxter had two of the 'Breds' 11 hits in the contest, including an RBI single in the second inning.

Murray Ledger & Times

Junior right-hander Craig Kraus of today's double-header against visiting Samford, 3-0, but the Bulldogs clinched its first spot in the Ohio Valley Conference Championship Tournament in Game 2, winning that game 6-2.

With the first-game win, Murray State (17-34, 11-15 OVC) halted a 13-game conference win streak by Samford, begun after the Bulldogs lost their first 11 OVC games.

With the loss, Murray State, the defending tournament champion, was eliminated from OVC Championship contention. Coming into the weekend series, MSU had to win all three games to earn a spot in the OVC Championship, while Samford needed to win one to clinch a berth.

In the first game, Kraus (5-6, 5-3 OVC) allowed a two-ball count only three times through the first seven innings (six times in the game), reaching a three-ball count only once, in the eighth inning. The Louisville junior threw 91 pitches in nine innings, with 68 strikes and only 23 balls.

Murray State opened the scoring in the first inning when center fielder Tyler Pittman slapped a one-out double, then scored on a single by shortstop. Alex Stewart to put the 'Breds ahead 1-0.

In the second inning, designated hitter James Akin hit a oneout single, then moved to second on a single by left fielder Austin Swain. Catcher Bo Baxter singled to right field to score Akin and put MSU ahead 2-0.

In the fifth inning, second base-

With runners on second and third in the third inning, Hollis pounded a fly ball to deep leftcenter field. Pittman made the catch at the fence, and Joe Denson scored easily from third base, but Alling hustled from second base to score on the play, giving Samford a 3-0 lead.

Murray State scored in the bottom half of the inning, when Newton hit a one-out single, then Pittman hit a two-out double to score Newton and cut the Samford lead to 3-1.

Samford scored an unearned run in the sixth inning to go ahead 4-1, then plated two in the seventh inning to push out to a 6-1 lead.

The 'Breds tried to rally in the any more runs, falling in Game

Newton had two hits, while Swain had a triple and Pittman and Stewart each doubled.

For Samford, Garrett Rice had two hits, including a home run and a double to go with two runs and two runs batted in. Alling also had two hits for the Bulldogs.

On the mound, Billy Fares (4-6, 2-5 OVC) took the loss, allowing six runs (five earned) on eight hits, striking out four and walking none in 6-1/3 innings. West Harris came on in the seventh, allowing no hits in two-thirds of an inning.

For Samford, Joseph Edens (7-5) got the win, allowing two runs on six hits, striking out six and walking one in 6-2/3 innings. Stephen Artz came on in teh seventh and got his only batter out.

"That is twice in a row that Craig Kraus came out and threw an outstanding game with our backs really to the wall," said MSU head coach Rob McDonald. "Billy fares threw great, but Samford got to him with runners on base. Our problem in the second game was in our not swinging the bats, not in our pitching.

"I can't fault anybody's effort today. In the last inning, we are still in there fighting and battling. Sometimes the hits fall in, and sometimes they don't. The big difference between Game 1 and Game 2 was that in Game 1, the hits would go between the fielders or find the line. In Game 2, they face second trial on reckless manslaughter charge Former

SOMERVILLE, N.J. (AP) - Former NBA star Jayson Williams will be retried on reckless manslaughter charges in the death of a limousine driver two years ago, prosecutors said Friday.

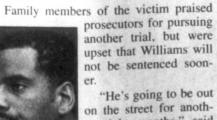

The widely expected announcement came three weeks after a jury delivered a mixed verdict in Williams' trial. The judge set a tentative date for the new trial on Jan. 10, 2005.

Williams was acquitted of the most serious charge last month, aggravated manslaughter, but the jury was deadlocked 8-4 on reckless manslaughter. The charge carries up to 10 years in prison.

The former NBA All-Star also was cleared of aggravated assault and a weapons charge, but convicted on four counts stemming from a failed effort to conceal the shotgun shooting of Costas "Gus" Christofi.

Williams' defense maintained the shooting was an accident, and that the weapon

Testimony in the 12-week trial showed that Williams took a loaded shotgun from a cabinet in his bedroom, cracked it open, turned, uttered an obscenity at Christofi and snapped the weapon closed. It fired once, sending 12 pellets into Christofi's chest. He died within minutes.

Several witnesses testified that Williams then wiped down the shotgun and placed it in the victim's hands.

The houseguests also testified that Williams persuaded them to tell authorities that they were downstairs at the time of the shooting, and that Christofi shot

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) -Justin Leonard looked as if he was on his way to another record round at the Colonial. Then he stumbled and had to settle for a share of the lead.

With a 6-under 64 Friday, Leonard ended the second round at 6-under 134 and as co-leader with fellow Texan J.L. Lewis.

Leonard, who had a closing 61 in last year's Colonial, was 7 under through 11 holes in the second round Friday. Then he had consecutive bogeys.

Still, he managed to complete his lowest round of the season on a day when wind gusts of up to 25 mph made for more Coloniallike conditions.

"I've been struggling the last few months and showing signs of playing well at times," Leonard said. "So to go out and shoot a round like I did today, it feels pretty good. Hopefully, this is the beginning of some good play.

"I gained a lot more confidence playing the way I did coming back," said Perks, whose only PGA win was at the 2002 Players Championship. "Yesterday, it was neartoo easy. Everything kind of fell into place. Today, it was just a grind, every shot, every hole."

Perks was tied with Robert Gamez (64), Jeff Maggert (69) and Steve Flesch (69). Zach Johnson, Lee Janzen and Stewart Cink were

■ Golden Ticket Warriors hire Montgomery

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) -Mike Montgomery admitted to Chris Mullin right away that he doesn't know all the inner workings of the NBA, and that honesty impressed Mullin.

Montgomery left Stanford after 18 seasons as head coach to become the new coach of the Golden State Warriors on Friday.

Montgomery, 57, replaces Eric Musselman, who was fired Wednesday night after two seasons. Montgomery's deal is reportedly a fouryear, $10 million contract, which was completed late Tuesday.

"I guess it never really hit me until they just announced it that I'm the new head coach of the Golden State Warriors, Montgomery said when formally introduced Friday with his wife and daughter looking on. "I got a little

It was the first major hire by Mullin, who became the Warriors executive vice president of basketball operations a month ago. Mullin appreciated Montgomery's openness about learning the league.

"This is a huge day for the Warriors. I'm elated this is happening," Mullin said. "We're thrilled to bring a coach the caliber of Mike Montgomery into the fold. He's had a tremendous amount of success throughout his career and we think he'll be a very good fit for our organiza-

The announcement came a day after Mullin announced Rod Higgins would be the team's new general manager.

Letter carriers lead successful food drive

Local letter carriers collected a record amount of food this year in the annual drive.

Tonia Casey, director of the Murray-Calloway County Need Line, reported 15,000 pounds of food collected by local letter carriers while making their rounds on May 8, in the National Association of Letter Carriers (NALC) annual food

George Oliver, a local letter carrier who has served as the NALC Branch 2156 food drive coordinator since the beginning, said this year was "the most successful food drive ever, with this year's total being almost 6,000 pounds more than last

Gerald Mills, NALC Branch 2156 president, said cooperation was the key to the drive's success.

"The food donations from postal customers in Murray and Calloway County are always two and three times larger than areas with similar

Follow guidelines for better postal delivery

For businesses and others, getting mail to the resident of an apartment building could be as chancy as matching a sock in the dark. But by following the U.S. Postal Service's convenient guidelines for addressing an envelope, mailers can achieve faster and more accurate results.

Perhaps the single most important advice is to include the apartment number, preferably just after the street address and on the same line. If that line is too long, the

 When writing to an individual's attention, put the attention line above all other lines in the address.

These guidelines may look basic, but they go a long way to help avoid delays.

A mistake in only one digit of the ZIP Code could result in a letter being misdirected halfway across the country. That's because addresses are first scanned by computers that make the initial decision about destination based on ZIP Code. When mailers leave off apartment numbers, that can also cause delivery delays.

Our job is to get the mail to its destination as quickly and reliably as we can. With your assistance, we can be both efficient and economical. And that's bound to make everyone happy.

DEAR READER: Drinking from a communion cup, as is common in many church services, is certainly unhygienic - at least in theory. Many types of viruses can be spread in this manner, as can a variety of bacteria. Wiping the lip of the chalice pays little more than lip service in terms of eradicating harmful microorganisms.

Although I am unaware of any definitive medical studies showing that a common communion cup has been the cause of infections, some clergy are concerned enough about the practice to alter the tradition and use small individual cups, much as some congregations employ.

Your question is a good one and your concerns are reasonable.

I want to remind my readers that I am not addressing this issue on theological grounds. Rather, I choose to emphasize the potential physical hazards of a tradition that predated, by hundreds of years, the discovery of infectious microorganisms. Given today's medical knowledge, churches would be prudent, responsible and reasonable to revise this ancient tradition to protect the health of their congregations.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm in my late 40s, two years after a hysterectomy, and have begun suffering debilitating once-a-month cramps that last as long as two hours per session. Could this be a hormone imbalance?

DEAR READER: I doubt it. A hormone imbalance could certainly lead to symptoms of menopause (moodiness, hot flashes and so forth), but not to abdominal cramps. Such monthly cramps in menstruating women are ordinarily the result of uterine spasms. Inasmuch as your uterus was removed, such contractions are impossible.

You may be experiencing pain from muscle contractions in other organs, such as the intestine. Ask your family physician and your gynecologist to put their heads together and suggest a strategy whereby your problem can be diagnosed and treated.

Dear Abby

TENNESSEE DEAR STEP-By Abigail GRANNY: To Van Buren

skimp on gifts for the new addition to your family would be a false economy. Welcome her, get to know her, and treat her like family because that is what she is now. If you discriminate on special occasions, the child will be hurt, her father will feel resentful, and you will put your daughter into an awkward situation. I strongly advise against it.

DEAR ABBY: Although I'm a junior in high school, I'm not old enough to handle all the problems in my family. I think a counselor might help me feel better, but Mother won't hear of it. When I find the courage to try to talk to her, she just says, "Later, honey, I'm busy now!" She doesn't really hear what I'm saying. She's always on the computer and looks like she's hypnotized or something. I would call my dad, but we don't have the money for longdistance calls.

I used to be able to talk to my uncle, but he's in jail now, and I'm not even allowed to mention his name. My friends dismiss my problems when I try to talk to them, so I stopped telling them. My aunt and my grandma hate each other, so I can't talk to them. My aunt has even threatened to kill Grandma.

Last week, I went to the home of a new friend, but it made me very sad. They aren't like my family at

DEAR LOST AND ALONE: Before I answer your question, let me point out that you are an intelligent and sensitive girl. You may think you are alone in having this problem, but I have received letters from many other girls in exactly your situation -- with mothers who are preoccupied or absent entirely.

It's time to put on your thinking cap. Is there any adult in your life whom you can confide in -- a teacher, a neighbor, a school counselor, the mother of one of your friends? Are there activities you can join (school clubs, Girl Scouts, etc.) that will put you in contact with nurturing female role models? Perhaps one of them could e-mail your mother to shut down her computer and live up to the responsibility she assumed when she gave birth to Whatever you do, DON'T GIVE UP. Although your mother, aunt and grandmother may not be the pictureperfect family you wish for, that doesn't mean you will never have one. The lessons you are learning today can one day make you a much more effective parent than the one you have, and you can create the family you yearn for.

The study of card combinations is a project that yields dividends time and time again. For example, consider the North-South diamond holding in today's deal, and let's say that in a given case — not necessarily this one - your aim is to avoid losing

One method of play is to lead low to the ace and return the ten. If East follows low, you can let the ten ride or go up with the queen. If East has the jack, playing low on the ten wins, but if he has the king, the queen is the winning play. Whether you are successful depends on how good a guesser you are.

Another approach is to lead a low diamond from the closed hand and finesse dummy's eight. If the eight loses to the jack, you later try another finesse, hoping your right-hand opponent was not dealt the king and The second method of play is much better than the first because there is about a 75 percent chance that East does not hold both honors, while if you play the ace followed by the ten, your chances will not be nearly as good as that. Even so, you shouldn't blindly choose the second line of play, for there might be other factors to consider. In the present case, for nstance, you can improve your prospects even further by adopting a third line of play.

Accordingly, you win the spade lead with the ace, draw trumps, cash the king of spades and ruff a spade. Next you cash the A-K-Q of clubs and lead a low diamond to the eight.

East takes the jack, but even if he has the king, the slam is home. Because you have taken the precaution of eliminating the side suits before tackling diamonds, there is nothing he can do to stop you from scoring the rest of the tricks.

pulling several ounces of lead and a hook through the boiling discharge waters, that's work!

I did that type of fishing many years ago with some good friends of mine - Bob Craven, Jerry Atkins, Pearly McClure and Bobby Atkins. My younger brother, Dale Maupin, was also in that group.

We would close the old Varsity Theatre at midnight and head for the dam to snag fish until 8 or 9 o'clock the next morning. If the river elevation was falling, we would catch fish that would sometimes total a couple hundred pounds!

is still the big spoonbill. It isn't a catfish, but many anglers call it of the lake.

We all know how lousy the a catfish because of its smooth

The spoonbill can be found in just about all of our major rivers and streams throughout the nation. They are excellent fish to eat. There are ways to clean and prepare the meat that does not apply to other species.

The most important way to clean a spoonbill is to bleed it by cutbelow Kentucky ting off its tail. For this to be done properly, the fish should still be alive. The meat washes clean and white after the skin has been cut away. It should be cut into two-inch strips for frying.

Many of our elder residents grew up on these spoonbill and Tennessee River catfish.

Last year, a huge spoonbill was caught below Barkley Dam. The fish had been tagged and released seven years earlier in a river in South Dakota.

Another large speices that is snagged quite often is the white perch. They are also excellent white meat fish to eat. They should be prepared the same was as the pad-

The species that live and thrive below the dams are more muscular than the open-water fish because of the strong currents that they experience on a daily basis.

Their food supply is more plentiful. The result is a larger fish that provides great sport and food for anglers.

The spoonbill thrive below the dams because the water is mostly coming in under the dam as a discharge from the generators. Some One of the most popular species of the water is also excess, which is spilled to control the elevation

When they are in impoundments such as Kentucky and Barkley lakes, the spoonbill will have to work harder for their food by using a long, wide bill to dig rapidly in the bottom soil.

All of that raking in the sediment will stir up the plant and animal organisms - generally microscopic — that live and float in the waters.

After stirring the sediment for several yards, the spoonbill will open its giant mouth and swim back through the mixture. It will take in the food it filters through

Once in a while, some anglers casting a lure - a crankbait, for example - will accidentally snag a big spoonbill. At that point, the fight is on!

Many anglers never see the fish because they are generally so large. But they know they had a crankbait tied on for a bass, and that the big fish just has to be a bass!

Soon the stripers and the largemouth and smallmouth bass will become more active. They will offer anglers some great action!

Whenever you're fishing below any of the dams, you should be prepared to deal with strong currents that will be coming in from all directions. Have good fullycharged batteries, a well-tuned engine and gas to run it. Side bumpers wouldn't be a bad idea, just in case you get too close to a wall or the rocks.

Stay alert and know the signals when the gates are being opened so you can stay out of the way! In general, be a smart boater and obey the rules.

The catfish are biting on just about everything around the upper part of the lake. The nightcrawler is always a good choice. Whether you bounce it along the bottom or on a bobber is up to you.

One thing that has caught my attention is the peanut butter mixture, which is put on a plastic ribcovered hook and fished any way you choose. It has been the most effective odor bait I have ever for use when baiting a hook. Of course, the big blue channel catfish seem to prefer a minnow (large) or shad that has been freshly caught. They could be conned into taking other bait, but I don't know about the choice of scents.

A company in Iowa named Sonny's makes the peanut butter bait. There is another type of bait that has the scent of blood. Those are the most potent catfish baits that I have ever seen.

The bluegill and shellcrackers have been put under more pressure than last year since the crappie season was so poor. They are numerous, and they will eat any species of worm or grub. They tend to use the same types of bottom structures. You may be able to catch both species in the same

Of course, they prey on each other's nest sites and devour the eggs rather quickly. This sometimes tends to eradicate a species from that particular area for a

The crappie are back out on the deeper ledges, trying to recover from the rigors of spawning and to replenish their own body

They still take roadrunners and other jigs and minnows when the major feeding time is on. Some crappie, however, will stay in the shallows to feed on the young shad minnows, which hatch early and provide a great source of ener-

Occaisionally, we will find a decent school of crappie that are feeding on the surface much the same way that the white stripers do. They are on the hunt, and they will strike a roadrunner or a small crankbait as quickly as a

They spook easily, however. You should keep noise to a minimum and stay back a certain distance where you can still cast into them without spooking the entire school.

It is possible to take a limit in this manner. The older, larger crappie know and remember where the shad were hatched last year. They will come back to check on a new hatch.

Keep your fingers croossed for the return of our white stripers. They area a major source of fun and excitement. They provide good food for the whole family. We sure look forward to their return in great numbers!

Happy Fishing!

Between April 15 and May 5, the Commonwealth's camo-clad army reduced the state's turkey population by at least 26,405 birds - all but 181 of which were male.

I said "at least" because no one really knows how many big birds are killed legally or illegally and not reported. But still, that number doesn't appear too shabby when most of the turkey hunters in Kentucky can remember when there were no turkeys in Kentucky. Talk about a success story in wildlife restoration — the proliferation of wild turkeys in this and other states has been nothing short of phenomenal. Too phenomenal, perhaps, which has led this and other state's agencies to target more exotic and far more problematic species for restoration.

Alas, spotting a whitetail deer or a flock of turkeys in a place where neither had been seen for decades just doesn't grab the headlines like a relocated Canadian elk standing on a smoothed-over strip mine.

We all know the wild turkey story by heart these days - how the stock of truly wild birds had dwindled to nearly nothing before staging a dramatic comeback.

I wince at stories of people incubating wild turkey eggs in their basement and turning poults loose in the woods to jump-start a restored flock — it doesn't happen that way.

Truckloads of money were wasted on pen-raised birds that — to everyone's surprise back then - failed dramatically. Turkey restoration did not work at all until agencies learned to use cannon nets to capture wild birds for relocation.

Nowadays, state agencies are old hands at the wild turkey game. They even know which birds from what state are the hardiest reproducers. (I refer to the oft touted original LBL flock of wild turkeys as the "Shaker" birds - so named because, like the infamous Shaker religious sects that appeared briefly in Kentucky history, the original LBL birds found the whole process of reproduction to be tedious and unnecessary. Like their human counterparts, they too dwindled toward oblivion, as a result.).

That's why the 2004 spring harvest of 26,405 birds in Kentucky looks pretty good on the surface. But this year's number represents the second year of declining harvest since the high-water mark of 28,292 birds taken during the 2002 spring

Two years of decline probably doesn't signal an alarming trend, but there are some underlying concerns that didn't appear to be much of a factor while the population and the harvest were locked into a growth mode.

Spring turkey hunters in Missouri took 54,761 birds in 2003 — double Kentucky's harvest. Like Kentucky, Missouri has a 21 day season with a two-bird limit. And like Kentucky, the Show-Me State has implemented a fall season that allows the taking of hens. Missouri's advantage in size accounts for part of the difference in spring harvest. But when broken down into birds harvested per square mile, Missouri still leads with 0.79 birds to Kentucky's 0.65

What's even more amazing is that biologist Larry D. Vangilder, Missouri hunters are removing less than 25 per cent of the adult male birds during the spring season.

Vangilder's studies have suggested that up to 35 percent of adult males turkeys can be removed during the spring season without having a negative impact on the total population and hunter success.

By contrast, Kentucky hunters are removing upward of 60 percent of the adult male turkey population each spring, according to a study conducted by Kentucky Wildlife Biologist George Wright.

From 1995 through 1999, Wright monitored 366 male wild turkeys in Caldwell, Hopkins and Christian counties. The birds were fitted with radio transmitters to determine actual survival rates and the principle causes of mortality to male birds.

In a paper presented at the 2001 National Wild Turkey Symposium, Wright speculated that the high level of adult male harvest is being sustained only by the still exploding wild turkey population.

When population growth stabilizes and annual reproduction begins to fluctuate, Wright believes the current level of harvest to be unsustainable.

Vangilder makes many of the same arguments in a report submitted to the Missouri Department of Conservation in 1997. So what are the glaring differences in wild turkey management between Missouri and Kentucky?

Missouri has been at the game longer than Kentucky and is considered one of the pioneering states in wild turkey restoration. Missouri appears to have a much stronger focus on the success of the spring season, however, to the point of incoraccording to studies by wildlife research porating language to the same in their mission statement.

They have also tak ate and conservative approach to managing the wild turkey resource. In short, they held the line on the expansion of seasons and bag limits (hunting hours still end at 1 p.m.) until the resource was fully developed.

By doing this, they started with a higher baseline population before caving-in to the demands for liberalized seasons. Kentucky, on the other hand, leans toward the maximization of hunting opportunities as soon as possible while a resource is being developed.

Both philosophies attract ardent supporters and equally ardent opponents. The wild card that has been thrown into wild turkey management is the proliferation of fall seasons.

Spring seasons don't have the potential to effect the overall populations because 99 percent of the birds taken are male. But fall seasons invariably promote the taking of hens and juvenile males. Hens make up over 50 percent of the total fall harvest while juvenile males (jakes) account for half of the total male turkey harvest during the fall, as opposed to 25 percent during the spring season.

Vangilder suggests that fall seasons can remove up to 10 percent of the total population without having a serious impact on that population.

Missouri hunters are currently taking around 5 percent that is believed to be insignificant. Kentucky hunters have steadily increased the fall harvest as the fall seasons have been continually expanded. Last year's fall harvest was a record

2,805 birds and has been over 2,000 birds since 2001. Consider the possibility that two years of declining spring harvest is in some-way the result of the expansion of the fall seasons. Adding the number of males taken during the fall 2003 seasons (approximately 50 percent) to the 2004 spring total puts the harvest back in the 28,000 bird territory of the record 2002 season. Maybe 2,805 fall-taken birds is an insignificant number. Maybe the resource can absorb the loss of 1,400 brood-producing hens each year. And what happens if the fall harvest continues to grow? Wildlife managers are on one hand counting on minimal participation in the fall seasons while expanding and liberalizing the seasons on the other hand to promote participation. It appears to me to be a give-and-take situation at best - whatever the fall season gives to turkey hunters will be taken away from the spring season. And that's only while Kentucky's turkey flock is enjoying a period of explosive growth. Once the population stabilizes, both Wright and Vangilder agree that further liberalization of the spring season by increasing the limit to three birds or by adding days to the season would result in a serious degradation in the quality of the spring hunt.

So will someone please tell me why it makes sense to jumble an already crowded fall hunting season with increased opportunities to kill hens, jakes and ultimately gobblers?
