LIONS BACK DRIVE FOR 'SANTA' FUND

In the annual drive for the Santa Claus Fund sponsored by the Fulton Lions club, nearly $100.00 has been subscribed, and it is hoped that $150 to $200 will be raised before all subscriptions have been received. The entire proceeds will be used to provide baskets well filled with food, which will be distributed to worthy families in this community on Christmas Eve.

Every year the Lions club back the Santa Claus fund, and raises by public subscription money with which to bring happiness to the homes of needy families. Nothing will be spent for foolishness, but every cent will go to the purchase of baskets of food. Every precaution will be taken to place these baskets only in homes of needy and deserving families.

FULTON DOWNS CLINTON FIVE

In fine condition, displaying mid-season form throughout the entire game the Fulton Bulldogs unleashed a bitter attack on the Clinton five on the court here Tuesday night and trampled them under a 23 to 13 score, never being threatened during the game.

After a somewhat slow game last Friday night when they defeated Shiloh 27 to 23 the Fulton Bulldogs are clicking better now and indications point to another smooth fighting gang of basketballers.

When the sun was setting in the west and everything still with the coming of night, the ghostly death angel entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Grogan and whispered to their darling son, Joe Brown: "Thou life on earth is ended, come thou now and join the angelic band whose builder and maker is God. Joe Brown was a lovable, cheerful child, loved by all who knew him. He made friends with all he met. He will be missed by his classmates and friends, but they can meet him in that beautiful Home. In memory of Joe Brown:

I cannot say, and I will not say
That he is dead—he is just away
With a cherry smile, and a wave of the hand,

He has wandered into an unknown land,

And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you O you, who the wildest yearn
For the old time step and the glad return,

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of there as the love of here,

Think of him still as the same, I say;
He is not dead—he is just away.

The truck belonged to Mr. Cardwell, who was driver stated that he was crowded too far by a truck load of mules.

After going through the railing of the bridge and landing in the field, not completely overturned, and none of the occupants injured, they continued on their way after getting the truck to the highway again.

This was the second car to go through these railings last week.

Lewis who had charge of the program. Mr. Holland stated that prospects are very bright for a winning team this year, and that he is doing everything he can to obtain the regional basketball tournament for Fulton.

Mayor Paul DeMyer spoke briefly, stating that plans for widening Lake street are being carried forward with expectations high for its completion.

H. W. Williams told of the efforts of the Illinois Central System to push through the improvement of both overhead bridges, which are now listed with the WPA projects, and are expected to be built some time during the coming year.

LOCAL PEOPLE ATTEND INAUGURATION AT FRANKFORT

CITY COUNCIL IN CALLED MEETING

Mayor Paul DeMyer and the board of council met Monday night at the city hall in special called session to take up the matter of acceptance of the agreement of the Illinois Central System, whereby that strip of land lying along the railroad right-of-way adjoining Lake street, is released by the railroad for the purpose of widening of Lake street.

Next in order was a discussion of the proposal by which deed to the property is to be secured from Mrs. Kate Carr and children, owners of the land which has been held by the Illinois Central System under lease. It is estimated that the property will cost the city in the neighborhood of $5,000, which consideration is to be allowed the Carrs under an agreement which has been worked out by the city and owners of the property. A vote was taken on the question whether this plan should be pursued, with only one dissenting vote.

After the city has obtained title to the land, it is proposed to widen Lake street twenty feet, which will make it a thoroughfare that has been needed for many years. Instead of having parking on both sides as is now done, it is likely that a parking zone will be created in the center of the street. Better lighting facilities will probably be innovated also.

A committee of citizens residing on Jefferson street appeared before the council to take up the proposal to build curb and gutters on that street through a WPA project. It is estimated that the cost to property owners will be about thirty cents a running foot, and the committee agreed to solicit money needed for this project.

BURGLARS ENTER OWL DRUG STORE

Burglars entered the Owl Drug Store some time Monday night by breaking a plate glass in the front window. A cash register was removed containing change, and a quantity of candy, cigars, cigarettes and pocket knives were also stolen.

When officers investigated they found the front door still locked, and the cash register was discovered back of the O. K. Laundry Tuesday morning, where the thieves had attempted to prize it open before they found how to open it. J. W. Gordon, proprietor of the drug store, estimated the loss to be about $50. Who ever committed the thief must have been watching the police closely, and knew just where they were, for the robbery took place just across the street from the police station.

ROGERS FILM HAS FORTUNE IN HORSES

Horses are horses, say most people, but they never saw a million dollars worth of equines gathered in one place, and not a large place at that!

The million dollar aggregation of horse-flesh is that kept at the Carlton Burke ranch in California and appearing in scenes of Will Rogers' "In Old Kentucky," which comes Christmas Dady to the Orpheum Theatre.

Audiences viewing the horses in the picture, adapted from Charles T. Dazey's famous play, will see many of the nation's future turf champions.

Burke, who is a famous breeder and owner, places this high estimate on the value of his stock because they are bred from outstanding turf champions.

A thrilling romance of the southland "In Old Kentucky" features Dorothy Wilson, Russell Hardie, Charles Selson and Bill Robinson in the stellar cast supporting Will Rogers.

Mrs. Ora Oliver has returned to her home in Cayce after visiting several days in Fulton with Mrs. J. B. Varden.

Behind Closed Doors

We have never been very strong believers in caucuses or private discussions of public matters by servants of the people who have elected them to administer governmental affairs that concern all the people.

What is for the best interests of the general public need not be done behind closed doors. And careful consideration should be given to this point by all governmental bodies.

In these United States we have what is known as the "freedom of the press," unlike the situation in Germany, Italy and other foreign nations, where newspapers are controlled by the edicts of those in power. For this the American people are to be proud. Every editor or individual has the privilege of expressing his or her own opinion, and they should do so in interest of the general good and welfare of their community, state and nation.

The voice of the people should be heard at all times. Caucuses are all right in their place, but too many of them become a nuisance and in the long run serve no real purpose which could not be otherwise served. Caucuses as a rule only create misunderstandings when confidence and cooperation should be sought.

Looking Ahead To 1936

Looking into the future of 1936 is something that every individual, community and state in the United States is doing these days. Many problems will be faced and worked out. Many changes will take place. Here in Fulton, the new council is facing the new year with hopes and vision for definite improvements that will make this a better and finer community in which to live.

A study of the records at the city hall shows that Fulton in many respects is in much better shape than many surrounding towns of this territory. On the other hand, a careful perusal of a recent audit report of city affairs, indicate that many changes can be made for the better. In some departments closer attention needs to be given to record-keeping and administration. The various chairmen and committees composed of councilmen have the problem of ironing out these wrinkles and making necessary adjustments that will better serve the best interests of the city as a whole.

The tasks of the new city council are many, and from time to time they will be faced with difficult and trying problems. Every action must be weighed well, and steps leading toward definite improvements will have to be taken. These men have accepted a job that demands intelligent thinking and action; a job that pays practically nothing. The people should bear with them and lend them every help and cooperation when it is needed.

May another two years see Fulton steadily marching on to greater heights.

SMARTER POLITICIANS

In the days of the Boston Tea Party the Coonists revolted against "Taxation without Representation" and the politicians didn't get away with it.

Today, we taxpayers have representations—in many cases cast our individual ballot.

But how much smarter the politician has become. We are often led to the polls, blinded by fancy theories, to blandly cast a vote to tax somebody else, some special class. And when the tithes are gathered,

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

The unemployment compensation provisions of the Federal Social Security Act will begin to take effect in a few weeks. Beginning Jan. 1, 1936, every employer of eight or more persons must pay a Federal tax of 1 percent of his payroll for next year, 2 percent in 1937 and 3 percent thereafter. The proceeds of these taxes are to be used to pay workers when unemployed. The administration of the unemployment insurance is left to the states, which are expected to set up their own systems. Employers who pay unemployment taxes to their state governments can get credit at Washington, in paying their Federal unemployment taxes, for 90 percent of such payments.

Only eight states and the District of Columbia have set up "job insurance" systems thus far. The states are Alabama, California, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New York, Utah, Washington and Wisconsin.

Unemployment benefits—at least from the Federal fund—are not to begin until 1938. Then persons thrown out of work from no fault of their own will be able to collect half pay, or thereabouts, for a period of thirteen to twenty weeks, varying from state to state.

A maximum of $15 a week for unemployment compensation is provided in most of the states so far; Utah has an $18 maximum. And in all of them, the compensation will not begin until the beneficiary has been out of work for a period which ranges from three to six weeks.

This unemployment insurance will, beyond doubt, become a permanent and general system as soon as the rest of the state legislatures can get around to enacting laws of the same general nature. It does not apply to farm labor, domestic workers, men employed on ships, employees of charitable or non-profit enterprises, nor those who work for national or state governments or their political subdivisions. In the nature of things, we may expect a demand to arise for the inclusion of all of those classes of workers.

GOOD WILL ON THE ROAD

The Holiday season is a peculiarly fitting time to emphasize the obligations of every motorist. It is of more than passive interest that the Yuletide closes that quarter of the year when automobile accidents, deaths and injuries are at an annual peak according to the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. How horrible is the thought that as we approach the days when the sentiment, "Good Will to All," is glorified throughout the land, the carnage of wrecks and broken bodies is strewn more than ever over the face of our country.

A great deal has been said about the necessity of courtesy in driving as an accident preventive measure. Driving at speeds reasonable for conditions, sharing the road, passing properly, using correct hand signals, avoiding all those actions which make driving dangerous and uncomfortable for the other fellow, are the dictates of courtesy and manners. So, too, are they dictates of the principle of the good neighbor. Good driving, with a real desire to safeguard the lives of those exposed to the consequences of that driving, is practical Christianity. It is a kind of practical Christianity that followers of all creeds can subscribe to as they join in the common rejoicing at this Christmas season.

The first concern of the churches of America is the saving of souls. By entering with whole-hearted activity into the automobile safety movement, they can extend their activity to the saving of lives, without violating their first purpose. The blot upon a soul as a result of killing or maiming another through careless or heedless action, is one not easily erased. The churches have the advantage of being able to appeal to a great section of the drivers of the country on occasions when they are most receptive to the idea of good will as a driving maxim. The good neighbor on the road could well serve as a theme for a sermon in every church at this time of the year.

So long as selfishness and stupid recklessness, so long as death and destruction exist on our streets and highways, the ideal of peace on earth, good will toward men, will command little more than lip service.

WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS LAST OPEN MEETING

The Woman's Club of Fulton held its last open meeting of the year Friday afternoon at the Woman's Club building on Walnut Street. Hostesses were Mrs. Mansfield Martin and Mrs. S. C. Smith. Pages were Mrs. Lela Stubblefield and Mrs. Ward McClellan.

The rooms were beautifully decorated with cut flowers and bunches of holly to lend a bit of Christmas cheer. This was the most enthusiastic meeting of this year.

The president, Mrs. Jake Huddleston, presided over a rather lengthy business session. During this session reports were made from the different standing officers as follows. A report of the literary department was given by the librarian, Mrs. Wilmon Boyd. The treasurer, Mrs. Ira Little, gave the treasury report. A report was given by Mrs. A. J. Turney, chairman of standing committees. The chairman of the building committee, Mrs. J. E. Fall, gave her report. The chairman of the Garden Department, Mrs. Vellie Hardin, gave a very interesting report. She summarized the three different projects taken up and very successfully worked out during the past year. First, the beautifying of the grounds around the club building. Second, the organizing of garden clubs among the colored folks of Fulton in order to beautify that section of the town, and third, the adopting of the red rose as Fulton's flower. About five hundred of these roses have been planted in and around Fulton.

An announcement was made by Mrs. Boyd, that the play sponsored by the Drama Department of the Woman's Club will be presented Tuesday night, Dec. 12th at the club building. Miss Mary Frances Spear

CORN-HOG CONTRACT FEATURES EXPLAINED

Under provisions of the new two-year corn-hog adjustment contract which became effective December 1, signers will agree to produce for sale next year at least 50 per cent of their market hog bases, but no more than 100 per cent if they are to receive maximum hog adjustment payments, says a statement from the Kentucky College of Agriculture at Lexington.

Signers must plant to corn at least 25 per cent of their bases next year, but not more than a percentage which is within the permitted optional range of 70 to 90 per cent of their corn bases.

The 1936 hog adjustment payment will be $1.25 a head for each hog in the base. Deductions will be made at the rate of $2.50 a head if the producer fails to raise 50 per cent of his hog base numbers and $5 a head if he raises more than his base. According to the AAA announcement, signers will receive their entire hog payments as soon as possible after final compliance has been checked after the close of each year.

Corn adjustment payments next year will be made in two installments, about August 1 and December 1, at the rate of 35 cents a bushel multiplied by the appraised yield and the number of adjusted acres. Payments on the 1937 production will be announced by November 30.

KENTUCKY DIVISION LEADS IN SAFETY CONTEST

The Kentucky Division of the Illinois Central System is leading all other divisions of the railroad in a safety contest by a margin of nine per cent with one month to go according to J. W. Kern, general superintendent of this division.

In the first eleven months of 1934, the Kentucky Division had 94 reportable injuries. During the same period in 1935 the number of injuries had been reduced to 41 or 53 less than in 1934, which is a 56 per cent reduction.

THE FEATHERHEADS

By Osborne

Trunk Mystery

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Our Scotch Neighbor

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.— When I first knew him, he was plain John Buchanan, writing the best Scotch novels since Robert Louis Stevenson. Then, in 1918, he was Colonel John Buchanan of the British wartime press bureau, shrewd, kindly, and deft, handling a bunch of rampaging American correspondents as gently as though they were so many new-laid eggs and he, personally, had laid every last one of them. When he became Sir John Buchanan, a lot of us said: "Well, he earned his honors but no title ever can swell that Scotch head." Now, at Ottawa, the flags fly and the cannons roar for Baron Tweedsmuir, governor general of our noble neighbor nation to the north, but, if his lordship doesn't mind, I'd like, personally, to go on thinking of him as my friend, John Buchanan, a very great gentleman.

They'll like him up there, we're going to like him down here. And, if any of you Canadians has any doubt as to his diversified talents, wait till you see him casting a trout fly across a likely pool.

Casualties in the News

CASUALTIES seem to be almost even as between the New York gang war and the Ethiopian war, but the New York dispatches make spicier reading. They print the names and addresses of the deceased.

Borah's hat is in the ring. It may be distinguished from some of the other hats in the ring by the fact that his is not a size six and five-eighths.

So there's to be another new "em-pire" hatched in the Orient, with China furnishing the eggs and Japan the incubator. This certainly is a great year for weaker nations to wake up of a morning under a strange flag.

At Panama, a deadly serpent bit an army lieutenant. He took serum and went to a party, and the snake died in 20 minutes. Whereas, heretofore, lieutenants have been regarded as comparatively harmless.

Fashions for Men

TRUE to recent promise, we now offer our winter fashion hints for American men:

Lounge effects will be in evidence on park benches.

The morning suit will be used throughout the day. Also every morning.

Unless prosperity returns mighty soon, expect a continuance of the high pulled noted during recent years in connection with the seats of blue serge pants. Elbows also will display a bright sheen or patina.

Trousers may or may not be turned up at the bottoms. It depends on whether wearers are sensitive about fringes or just naturally don't give a darn.

There will be very little change—in many cases, no change whatsoever—in the pockets of business suits.

However, the careful dresser will ask the tailor to install a special receptacle for carrying tax notices in. A favored perfume will be attar of moth balls.

The Family Influence

SIX members of the Virginia-born Lady Astor's family are now in the British parliament. If you include Lady Astor herself—and you'd better. So hereafter her ladyship can rest the voice occasionally and there'll still be an Astor to carry on.

She's not like some equally determined conversationalists, though. When she speaks, she has something to say—And says it.

On the other hand, only three members of the Lloyd-George household won seats at the recent English election.

Maybe it's a good thing to elect a whole family group, by the crate-load, as it were. It saves having to remember a lot of different names.

Now you take our congress, wherein always there are so many names that don't mean a thing on earth except for roll call and salary purposes. Often, toward the end of a congress, the Congressional Record is merely a symposium of the last words of the uninjured dead.

Being an Actor

A MAN spends half a lifetime trying to learn to write, and, if he succeeds, he's lucky; and if he doesn't, he's like a fellow whose wife is being talked about—probably the last man in town to hear the bad news.

But, overnight, you can get to be an actor—at least you can get the actor's viewpoint. For instance, I've just finished a very bitter argument at the studio over the last picture we're going to shoot. There's a director who insists on cluttering up the show with a lot of other people. He's also very tiresome about dragging in a plot.

I still feel I have the right idea about a proper vehicle for the display of one's theatrical talents.

It's a two-hour monologue, interrupted only by (unnecessary) applause.

PIRATE TREASURE

PIECES of eight!

Two million dollars worth! And their finder was a boy, a bare-foot beach-comber, who was scooping a hole in the sand!

The day was clear but cold. The early spring sun shone in a turquoise sky, but the wind across the water was chilly. The boy shivered. He had some driftwood that he had gathered along the beach, and a piece of goat meat from one of the wild goats that lived on the island, Santa Margarita, where the boy also lived. He was hungry. Well, he would dig a little pit, make a fire in it and roast the meat. He was used to that.

The wind sang about him as he began to scoop out the sand. It may have been telling him what lay below, but if it did he could not understand. He worked anxiously. Only the desire for food and warmth urged him to labor, and this urge was not very strong.

And, then—and then his fingers touched something. Perhaps it was a buried log, and if he dug it out and dried it there would be more fuel. He began to try to uncover the thing.

No, it was not wood, but iron. Part of an old ship, perhaps, but at any rate he would dig it out and see what it was.

A box! What could he in it? Curiosity now began to sting him into activity. He managed to clear the top and part of the sides. Now, maybe, he could lift it out.

But he might as well have tried to pull up the center of the earth. The iron chest would not budge, for all his effort. He tugged until he knew that he could not move it.

It was too bad! Here he wanted to see it all by himself, and gaze on whatever it might contain, alone. And if it proved to be empty, there would be no one near to laugh at him. But it was no use; he was compelled to go and get help.

His elder brother came, prepared to show his muscle, but the iron chest seemed rooted in the ground. His father came, and the three tried their best to move the stubborn weight. His uncle came, and the neighbors, and at last nine men stood about the chest, trying to draw it out of the hole in the beach.

At last it moved—it slowly and reluctantly began to leave the place where it had lain so long. Rusty and dirty, it lay on the sand, and the men crowded closer to pry up the cover. The boy pushed near, too. After all, he was the one who had found the long-sought treasure.

Suddenly a great cry frightened the birds—a cry uttered by ten throats at once, as the lid fell back and the contents of the mysterious chest caught the light. Gold! Golden coins, doubloons, piles of pieces of eight—pirate gold!

Pirates? Certainly! Cocos Island lay to the south, and everyone knew that pirates had buried treasure there. Why, expeditions were always sailing to Cocos, and people dug and swayed and cursed and found nothing. And this was why—they had searched the wrong island!

If the story could be ended there, it would be romantic enough. But now comes a second chapter which changes everything about, spoils the romance, but adds an element of mystery.

Under Mexican laws, the government is entitled to 25 per cent of treasure found on its land. Who should know better, then, than the governor of Lower California what treasure was found, and by whom? But he tells a different story entirely, and to the effect that last December lumber and construction steel were found on Santa Margarita. Not treasure in a chest, but the materials for building formed the astonishing find. And just as stories gain and grow by repetition elsewhere in the world, so this one was changed by oral transmission, steel became an iron chest, lumber was transformed into golden coins, and, of course, no pirates' treasure should ever be worth less than a million or so!

So much for the chest of gold. But a mystery remains: who brought the building materials to Santa Margarita? And why? That is the question to which, so far, we do not know the answer.

BLASTED HOPES

NOT many months ago New York state troopers were told of strange sounds coming from Letter Rock mountain, up the Hudson river in Palisades Interstate park. Investigating the source of the sounds, which were said to rumble in the manner of thunder, the troopers found four small men, who had been blasting a large hole in the mountainside.

Everyone who has read Washington Irving's stories recalls his tales of old New York, in which queer little men and buried treasure figured largely. It must have seemed entirely in keeping with these legends when the men confessed that they were hunting for buried treasure. The man who hired them, whose identity was not known, had found an old map in the Morgan library, and he evidently took it so seriously that he was willing to blast away the mountainside in hopes of finding the treasure.

Glamour, Romance in Evening Dress

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IF THE revival of the luxurious, the more elegant, the romantic, the dramatic, the glamorous in fashion indicates a turning of the tide as they say it does, from a season of depression to an era of prosperity and good times, then indeed have we cause to rejoice for the present signs in the matter of opulent dress are most propitious.

The new fashions, especially formal modes, are not only glamorous and elegant beyond anything known for years but they add to their fascination in that they seem to have recaptured the glories, the poetry, the vision and the imagination, the art, as expressed in lovely apparel created throughout the ages.

At a recent style showing given by the Chicago wholesale market council the gowns for formal wear, three of which are herewith illustrated, confirmed the feeling that we are entering a fashion era wherein a new spirit of elegance pervades.

Eloquent of classic beauty and statuesque dignity which carries the grace of sculptural lines are the new evening gowns of Grecian inspiration. Extreme interpretations of modes a la Grecoque are seen in the draped themes of Vinner and other Paris designers. Long flowing scarfs, huge wing sleeves, draped side pleatings are all shown in the new soft quality-kind silk crepes and velvets. Other gowns show skirts-pleated all around of floating billows masses of chiffon, or silken dresses with draperies (often pleated) in long cascades from the shoulder, to form a short train at the side or back.

Sumptuous fabrics, for which the present season is noted, bespeak the rich beauty of Italian influence, especially the magnificent velvets in warm deep purples and reds and greens, such as have lived through the centuries in old master paintings and frescoes.

The versatility of the present mode would make it appear as if Oriental princesses had come to life. In the new style gowns and metal cloth turbans and sari scarfs and head coverings, Persian colorings and patterns, Chinese embroideries carry the spirit of the Far East into the immediate fashion program. Then there is the Russian influence which has an all-important influence on current style trends, as manifest in the smart high-collared blouses and coats and suits.

Of course we must not neglect to make mention of the picturesque robe de style gowns which have and are bringing so much of romance into the modern fashion picture. In these you may be as bouffant and rococo as were lovely ladies in the king's court in olden days of pomp and glory when George the Fourth was king.

Speaking of the bouffant we are minded to call your attention to the charming dress centered in the illustration. It demonstrated at first glance to the audience gathered at the style revue held in Chicago, the fact of high quality emphasized in a superb tailoring of note. To the left, a gown of pearl dot satin bespeaks Grecian inspiration via heavy golden cords and tassels.

AT FOOTBALL GAME

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For the football game, school, shopping or any day-time wear the above outfit is always correct. The coat is French lapin over a Scotch plaid dress in brown and red. The accessories are in brown to match the coat which may be worn with a suit on cold days. The swaggar coat with its youthful lines is one of the tailored woman's highlights this season. Its smart simplicity of line distinguishes her wherever she goes, with no fussiness, but pleasing femininity.

FABRIC KNOWLEDGE AIDS WISE BUYING

Fabric knowledge is part of your fashion education. The smart woman knows that. It isn't the initial cost of a dress, it's the upkeep that counts. When you are confident that your tailors will stay crisp that your satins will hold their luster; that your chiffons will retain their loveliness and never get shabby or sloppy; when you know that your sheers will hold their shape and that your creases won't wilt; when you are under an avalanche of beading or braid, that your cloaks will stay in, and that your drapes will not sag—then, and only then, are you well dressed.

Women are rapidly learning to find out all these things before they buy a dress. They are learning to buy profitable merchandise.

U. S. Designers Following

Glittering Fabric Trend

The French started it, but American designers were quick to follow the new trend of glittering fabrics for afternoon and evening wear. A survey just made of American textiles discloses that every important manufacturer in New York has designed and presented materials to achieve unusual brilliant effects. Cabled reports on the first fall openings of the Paris dressmakers still further indicate the advent of sparkling fabrics.

Tailor-Made Influence Is Shown in Evening Gowns

Paradoxical as it may appear, the tailor-made influence has extended to dinner gowns this year. Worth launches wool-back silk velvet in dinner tailcoats with wrap-around skirts and bloused bodices, and Patou and Schiaparelli also favor evening tailcoats in silk velvet.

Merit Wins The Soul

A Christmas Story By Agnes Myers

IT WAS Christmas eve and Jane Harrison was preparing to close the book and gift shop after a busy day. The door opened and an elderly man wearing spectacles and a white muffer entered hurriedly.

Setting aside his gloves and cane, and hastily scanning the shelves, he said: "I have but a few moments to make a selection; perhaps you could assist me. Something for an elderly lady."

Jane was more than a bookseller; she was reader. And, too, she could quickly sense the literary taste of an individual. Devising into a case she brought forth Mrs. Gaskell's "Life of Charlotte Bronte"; also "Sonnets from the Portuguese" and "Out of Doors in the Holyland," all in new holiday bindings.

"Here are some delightful gift books," she remarked.

The gentleman raised a pair of surprised eyes and wonderfully surveyed the girl, rather than the books. Drawing a wallet from his inner coat he replied:

"My dear young lady, your excellent choice has tempted me to take all three." Handing Jane a card he continued, "please have them sent over to Miss Adelaide Perkins, Burton street, number 78."

Thanking her he dashed out to his cab and was gone.

"Seventy-eight Burton street!" gasped Jane, "and the delivery boy gone for the night on his last round!"

Locking the store and with Miss Adelaide Perkins' gift in the hollow of her arm, the tired girl started off on her errand.

Jane and her widowed mother had lived in Edgemoor on a small income. She attended Miss Edmond's School for girls as a day student and received a very thorough education. In the evenings Jane worked in the town library. Her mother passed away and Jane had come to the city. This was her first Christmas to be alone.

At the Perkins address the door was opened by an elderly lady. "My goodness, child! A package for me! Do step in." But before she could close the door a boy called out:

"Telegram for Perkins."

"Yes, yes," she said, all bewildered. "Mersey me, where are my glasses?" and she fumbled around in her pocket.

"I'll sign for you, if I may," said Jane.

"Yes, please do—dear, dear, where are my glasses? Oh, here they are," and Miss Perkins' fine patient hands trembled as she opened the envelope.

"It is from my niece, the Bosworth girls. They are driving down from Hartland tomorrow afternoon and will be here for tea with me around five."

"Your niece the Bosworth girls?" exclaimed Jane; "not Emilie and Susan? Why, they were my best friends at Miss Edmond's school," and thoughts of Edgemoor dashed through her mind.

The June commencent—Rich and Bosworth, the tall brother, up from the city for the festivities.

"And don't forget, tomorrow at five," called Miss Perkins as Jane was departing.

The next afternoon Jane helped Miss Perkins put the finishing touches to a table set in blue china of willow pattern. There was the sound of a motor, then merry voices in the hall, Emilie, Susan, Richard, Uncle Carroll, the elderly gentleman who had sent the books, were greeting Miss Perkins.

"Why Jane Harrison?" gasped the Bosworth girls in one breath.

Then followed such excited exclamations; the bliss of renewed friendship.

With a rustle of her silken skirts Miss Perkins led the way to the dining room.

Jane sat opposite Richard. She liked the strength in his broad shoulders, his well modulated voice and his clear honest eyes. Emotions of new awakened interest roused her sentiments.

Richard was beaming across the table at the young woman in the blue frock; her quaint charm, rippling laughter, the glance of her brown eyes and the lift of her pretty shoulders.

As the happy gathering moved into the sitting room Jane felt the warmth of a large hand gripping her own slim one. Looking up, she smiled into Richard's firm and understanding face.

Uncle Carroll, with an approving nod, stroked his beard like a prophet, and reflected upon the words of the poet:

CHARMS strike the slight
But merit wins the soul.

NO MARINE ANIMAL IS SAFE FROM THE TERRIBLE SAWFISH

A sawfish is an oceanic shark standing in structure between the true sharks and the rays, as a member of the family Pristidae, in which four or five species are grouped. Some of these strange and terrific creatures grow to a length of 20 feet, and saws six feet long and 12 inches wide are not uncommon in museums. In general form this fish is slender and sharklike with extraordinary swimming power due to a full supply of strong fins, notably that of the tail; and it is armed with a formidable weapon. The head is flat and its jaws are continued forward in a narrow but strong blunt projection of cartilaginous rods (the rostrum), covered with tough hide, which is nearly a third as long as the body, and the edges of which are studded along each side with firmly-fixed bony teeth. Some South sea savages imitated it exactly in making their cruel, flat-bladed spears, set with sharks' teeth. Flesh-hungry and ferocious in its disposition and predatory habits, this brute rushes into a group of fishes, or anything eatable it may meet, and, striking right and left "it cuts and slashes, tearing off pieces of flesh or ripping open the abdomen of its opponent." These bloody fragments are then seized by the mouth on the underside of the head and greedily swallowed whole. No marine animal is too big to be safe from attack, and this fish is by far the worst enemy of whales, which it fearfully lacerates and sometimes kills.

Sawfishes abound in the tropics, but often follow the Gulf stream, the Japanese current, and other relatively warm waters far from the equator. They are most numerous, however, near shores and often ascend large rivers as the lower Mississippi, and one species inhabits Lake Nicaragua. They do not produce eggs, as is the rule among both sharks and rays, but bring forth their young alive. Sawfish are taken by fishermen for the value of their rough skin.

They do not produce eggs, as is the rule among both sharks and rays, but bring forth their young alive. Sawfish are taken by fishermen for the value of their rough skin.

Sawfishes abound in the tropics, but often follow the Gulf stream, the Japanese current, and other relatively warm waters far from the equator. They are most numerous, however, near shores and often ascend large rivers as the lower Mississippi, and one species inhabits Lake Nicaragua. They do not produce eggs, as is the rule among both sharks and rays, but bring forth their young alive. Sawfish are taken by fishermen for the value of their rough skin.

We Trust She Remained a Lady Despite Her Loss

A woman, once a great beauty and the talk of two continents, has fallen on hard times. This autumn, unable to replenish her wardrobe as she would have liked, she spent nearly all her tiny clothes budget on a very handsome pair of gloves, because, according to her credo, gloves make the lady. The first time she wore them was at a luncheon party given by Baron Rothschild. Unfortunately, she lost one of them, and absorbed, it is lost only after she had arrived home. That evening she received a telephone call from one of the guests at luncheon.

"You lost one of your gloves at luncheon today, dear M. . . ." he said. "I picked it up and put it in my pocket. I shall keep it as a token."—June Provines, in Chicago Tribune.

Out and In

William Brown of Los Angeles sneezed so hard while at work in a Pocatello (Idaho) CCC camp, that his shoulder blade flew out of place. He was brought to a hospital. A nurse prepared the ether. A whiff of it struck Brown's nose. He set out a powerful "a-choo." The shoulder blade snapped back into place.

How Calotabs Help Nature To Throw Off a Bad Cold

Millions have found in Calotabs a most valuable aid in the treatment of colds. They take one or two tablets the first night and repeat the third or fifth night if needed.

How do Calotabs help Nature throw off a cold? First, Calotabs is one of the most thorough and dependable of all intestinal eliminators, thus cleansing the intestinal tract of the germ-laden mucus and toxins.

SEEKING HAPPINESS

True happiness is to be free from perturbation; to understand our duties towards God and man; to enjoy the present without any anxious dependence upon the future; not to torment ourselves either with hopes or fears; but to rest satisfied with what we have which is abundantly sufficient, for he that is so, wants nothing.

I'M SOLD

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to act of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senna and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

To Your Gain
If you are not of an exacting nature, you will be at home anywhere.

Take No Liberties
Do not pluck the beard of a stranger. Nor a friend.

For Constipation Troubles

Thousands now take Dr. H. H. H. Laxative Powder for constipation, headache, and upset stomach due to constipation. They find that Dr. H. H. H. Laxative Powder is mild, effective—it acts gently, yet thoroughly and removes that clogged condition of the bowels. Cleanse your intestines of waste matter—don't allow poisons to accumulate and break down your vitality and health. Family size 25c.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with anything less than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble to aid nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

Lesson for December 15

ESRA TEACHING THE LAW OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Esra 7:10; Nehemiah 8:1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy word have I hid in my heart, that I might not sin against thee. Psalm 119:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Giving Thanks for God's Word.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Giving Thanks for God's Word.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Studying the Bible Together.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Bible in National Life.

This lesson is a fine illustration of the rightful place of God's Word in the life of a nation. The only cure for national ills is a return to God and obedience to his Word.

I. The Teacher's Spiritual Condition (Esra 7:10).

He prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord, to do it, and to teach Israel the statutes and judgments.

II. The Word of God Read (Neh. 8:1-3).

1. The eager assembly (v. 1). The people gathered together and requested Esra to bring the book of the law. God had touched their hearts, creating within them a yearning for his Word.

2. A representative assembly (v. 2). God's Word should be taught to all classes—men, women, and children. The Spirit of God can speak through his Word to the whole family sitting in the same pew.

3. An appreciative assembly (v. 3). So eager were they to know God's Word that they did not get tired, although the lesson lasted for five or six hours. When people realize that God is speaking through his Word they will give attention.

III. The People's Attitude Toward God's Word (v. 4-6).

1. True reverence shown (v. 4, 5). When Esra opened the law all the people stood up out of respect for God's Word.

2. They joined heartily in prayer (v. 6). As Esra led them in prayer they united in saying, "Amen, Amen," bowing their faces to the ground.

IV. God's Word Being Interpreted (v. 7, 8).

The attitude of the people toward God's Word largely depends upon the minister. Proper dignity and solemnity should be manifested by the minister when reading the Holy Scriptures.

1. He stood up where the people could see him (v. 5).

2. He read distinctly (v. 8). The manner in which many read the Scriptures is greatly to their discredit.

3. He caused the people to understand (v. 8). The supreme business of the minister and teacher is to make the Word of God so plain that old and young can understand. The explanation should be clear and definite.

V. The Effect of Applying God's Word to the Life of the People (vv. 9-18).

1. Conviction of sin (v. 9). The divine method of convicting men of their sin is to have God's Word applied by the Holy Spirit. The Word of God is quick and powerful (Heb. 4:12).

2. Weeping turned into joy (v. 10, 12). When sin has been perceived and confessed there is forgiveness. Continued mourning will not atone for past sins. Furthermore, it dishonors a pardoning God and even unfits the one for present tasks. Joy has a salutary effect upon one's entire being. "The joy of the Lord is your strength."

3. Blessings were shared with others (v. 10, 12). True joy manifests itself in giving to others. Pure religion goes out to minister to the poor (James 1:27). Godliness is not content with having a good time alone.

4. The people obeyed. From the reading of the Scriptures they found that the feast of the tabernacles had long been neglected. They kept this sacred feast in a way that had not been since the days of Joshua.

5. They separated themselves from the ungodly (13:1-3). As soon as they had heard the Word of God they separated themselves from the mixed multitude.

6. The house of worship was cleared and order restored (13:3-14). No nation or people can be strong which neglects the worship of the true God.

7. The Sabbath was restored (13:15-22). Israel had long violated the Sabbath. To ignore the essential law of the Sabbath is national suicide. Unnumbered evils followed in the wake of the desecration of God's holy day.

8. God's law of marriage restored (13:23-31). Some of those who had intermarried with the heathen were brought face to face with their sin. They separated themselves from their ungodly companions. God's favor cannot be enjoyed by those who live in disobedience to his Word.

Bedtime Story for Children

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE HUNTER LOSES HIS TEMPER

THE hunter, hidden near the pond of Paddy the Beaver, chuckled silently. That is to say, he laughed without making any sound. He had watched Mr. and Mrs. Quack feeding along the edge of the pond down towards Paddy's dam, behind the end of which Reddy Fox had been hidden. Reddy had been waiting for those Ducks just as the hunter himself was waiting for Lightfoot the Deer. Then along came Sammy Jay and spied Reddy Fox. At once he had begun to scream at the top of his lungs, "Thief! Thief! Thief!" Mr. and Mrs. Quack had understood him perfectly. They swam out to the middle of the pond while Reddy Fox, knowing that it was useless to stay longer with Sammy Jay about, had snarled angrily and then taken himself off through the Green Forest.

Mr. and Mrs. Quack Called Their Thanks to Sammy.

The hunter thought it a great joke on Reddy. To tell the truth, he was very much pleased. He wanted those Ducks himself. He suspected that they would stay in that little pond for some days, and he planned to return there and shoot them after he had got Lightfoot the Deer. He wanted to get Lightfoot first, and he knew that to shoot at anything else might spoil his chance of getting a shot at Lightfoot.

"Sammy Jay did me a good turn," thought the hunter, "although he doesn't know it. Reddy Fox certainly would have caught one of those Ducks had Sammy not come along just when he did. It would have been a shame to have one of them caught by that fox. I mean to get one and, I hope, both of them myself."

Now when you come to think of it, it would have been a far greater shame for the hunter to have killed Mr. and Mrs. Quack than for Reddy Fox to have done so. Reddy was hunting them because he was hungry. The hunter would have shot them for sport. He didn't need them. He had plenty of other food. Reddy Fox never kills just for the pleasure of killing.

So the hunter continued to sit in his hiding place with very friendly feelings for Sammy Jay. Sammy watched Reddy Fox disappear and then flew over to that side of the pond where the hunter was. Mr. and Mrs. Quack called their thanks to Sammy, to which he replied that he had done no more for them than he would do for anybody, or that they would have done for him.

For some time Sammy sat quietly in the top of the tree, but all the time his sharp eyes were very busy. By and by, he spied the hunter sitting on the log. At first he couldn't make out just what it was he was looking at. It didn't move, nevertheless Sammy was suspicious. Presently, he flew over to a tree where he could see better. Right away he spied the terrible gun and he knew just what it was.

Once more he began to yell, "Thief!"

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK

ARTISTRY IN COOKERY

THE cook who really enjoys mixing ingredients as a painter does his colors will find no limit to the delightful dishes which one may originate or enhance upon with the materials at hand. One must follow a few fundamental principles in cookery, and after that let the imagination soar, for there is no end to inspiration.

After some experience with handling foods, most toothsome dishes may be prepared from bits of leftovers. The cook who wastes nothing, but serves her food in a dainty, appetizing manner, is a real genius and her talents are ever in demand.

It is not always wise to tell all one knows as to the contents of a dish, for some conscientious objectors will refuse to try a made-over dish, or rearranged food.

Now, who will dare to call a steamed pudding a leftover? Yet one may prepare a most tasty one with a few squares of corn bread, a cupful of leftover cocoa, a bit of oatmeal, a few raisins and a couple of egg yolks left from some icing or dessert.

Use the things you have at hand—anyone who knows little about foods can prepare a good meal if the market can be called upon with no regard to expense.

Do you use the half-cupful, more or less, of leftover ice cream in a cake or pudding?

Leftover custard may be used the next day for a pudding sauce.

Accident is often the mother of new things, as the discovery of one woman when making a sponge cake that it was more fetching when the egg yolks were added unbeaten and stirred in to make the cake streaked gold and white in appearance.

MARK THUMB NAIL

MYSTERIOUS CRAYONS

SEVERAL crayons are utilized in this trick. Each crayon is of a different color. The magician distributes the crayons and turns his back. He asks that one crayon be placed in his hand, the others hidden.

This is done. The magician's hands are behind his back; when he faces the spectators, he keeps his hands so he cannot see them. Again turning his back toward the people, he lets them take back the crayon which he is holding. It is hidden with the rest.

Although the wizard has gained no opportunity to glimpse the crayon, he promptly raises his fingertips to his forehead and in a mysterious tone announces the color of the crayon that was used.

The secret is as simple as it is clever. While he turns about, holding the crayon behind him, the magician marks one thumb nail. After the spectators regain the crayon, he raises his hand to his forehead. That action lets him see the color of the mark on the nail.

Thief! Thief!" at the top of his lungs. It was then that the hunter lost his temper. He knew that, now he had been discovered by Sammy Jay, it was useless to remain there. He was angry clear through. He no longer had a friendly feeling for Sammy Jay.

THE FORSAKEN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

"LET me take the grain, Mother, you sit by the fire; I will feed the chickens, and I will milk the cow. I want to get so tired, Mother, and yet I never tire; And nights I am so sleepy, yet cannot sleep somehow."

"I will do the chores, Daughter; you go walk awhile; Trip across the meadows as you used to do; Surely there are roses there to make you smile, That will bring the roses back again to you."

"No, not there, not there, Mother!—here I must abide; Withed are the roses, leaving but the stone. Fields that you have walked, Mother, someone at your side, Now you cannot walk, Mother, walk again alone."

"Yonder in the town, Daughter, on the village green, Men and maids are dancing, men and maids are gay; Hurry to the village—you are yet the queen; Take your share of pleasure, pleasure while you may."

"No, I cannot go, Mother, there I cannot go, For they all remember when we both were there. They would give me pity, pity me, I know—That's the hardest burden sorrow has to bear."

"Listen, foolish daughter; him you must forget— Better lost the lover that a maid can lose. Hope is all before us, all behind regret— Life is joy or sorrow always as we choose."

"Life is joy or sorrow? Mother dear, my joy After all was sorrow, though I didn't know. Now, to give me pleasure, sorrow I employ— I can't keep from laughing—it's so funny—so—"

"Quick! Some wine! The doctor! Now she sleeps at last. Is she only sleeping? Will she ever wake? Has he even killed her? Well, the past is past. He shall be forgiven, for her great love's sake."

NEW COTTON PROGRAM COVERS FOUR YEARS

A statement from the College of Agriculture at Lexington lists some of the important features of the new cotton adjustment contract, which covers the years 1936, 1937, 1938 and 1939.

Signers will agree to reduce their acreage next year between 30 and 45 per cent below their bases. Reductions thereafter will be set each year.

A single adjustment payment of not less than 5 cents a pound on the estimated yield of lint cotton on the land withheld from production will be made for 1936.

The division of payments between landlords and tenants on a farm under contract, as announced by the AAA, will be on the following basis: 37 1-2 per cent of the person furnishing the land; 12 1-2 per cent to the individual furnishing the work stock and equipment, and the remaining 50 per cent in the proportion that the cotton or its proceeds is divided.

In normal cases, payments will be made directly to the persons entitled to share in the crop or its proceeds, it is announced from Washington.

Adjusted acres may be used for the production of food and feed for consumption on the farm but the customary acreage of crops for sale must not be increased.

Signers will agree not to increase the acreage planted for sale of tobacco, peanuts or rice beyond the acreage of those crops in 1934 or 1935, whichever acreage is larger.

COOL WATERS by Rex Beach

First Instalment

The valley was as dry as powder and as hot as the top of a stove. It lay between barren hills, the naked summits of which were lacerated, doubtless by volcanic fires, although one could easily imagine that the ceaseless rays of the vertical sun had burned them brittle. The sandy plain separating the two ranges was covered with desert vegetation—queer misshapen growths, most of which were blunt and limbless. Some of the trees were mere stubs, others were shaped like gullews, still others bore clumsy limbs of a sort and a sparse covering of tiny leaves out of all proportion to the size of the trunks against which they clung.

There were cacti of many varieties, of course, huge ribbed ones forty feet tall that resembled tremendous candelabra, others that were smaller and more grotesque in shape with hundreds of fleshy upright ears or with melon-like knobs and protuberances upon their extremities. An occasional shrub or clump of bushes upthrust itself between the larger trees, but every growing thing was somehow distorted; all were twisted by the heat, or bent by discouragement, perhaps; likewise every growing thing, from the tiny cucumber cactus, half buried in the sand, up to the tallest gallows tree, was covered with spikes and spines, with dagger points and talons. All these thorns were poisonous, all made festering wounds when flesh came in contact with them. Virus tipped their points.

It was in truth a place of many poisons, a valley of pain, for what discomfort the cat-claws and the dagger points failed to inflict, the blistering sun and the irritating dust accomplished.

At night when the weedless, grassless surface had flung off most of the heat stored up during the day, it was possible to breathe without gasping and to move about without streaming sweat; but this relief was short and it merely served to intensify the suffering that came with the ardent rays of the morning sun. The days were hideously long.

It was not a fit dwelling place for man, and why nature had gone to such lengths of devilish ingenuity in devising means to discourage him was hard to understand. Gloria Fisk often asked herself that question. Probably it was because of the oil, she decided. Oil was precious; the getting of it always entailed hardships and suffering. It seemed to her, however, that Nature had outdone herself here; that she had been more cruel than necessary. She could have economized on at least half of her discomforts and still have left the place a Gehenna. The heat and the glare alone were intolerable; why add the dust and the drought and the poisons and the maddening isolation? Why pour out all her hatred upon this place?

Other oil fields were not utterly impossible to live in—the coastal fields, for instance, were more livable than this. One could endure damp heat or tropic fevers and stinging insects—even the depredations of bandits—more easily than this eternal, dry, blood-thinning heat. Bandits, however, blood-thirsty, were better than dust and night, dust borne on every breeze, dust kicked up by hoofs and wagon wheels and truck tires, dust that got into one's food, one's clothing, one's eyes and ears and lungs, ever-present dust from which there was no escape. Insects, fevers—almost anything was better than the maddening monotony of these rainless days during which nothing, absolutely nothing, happened to divert one's thoughts from one's misery.

There were still other oil countries, of course, where one could live in actual comfort, where one could meet white people and speak English and hear running water and see green grass.

Green grass! Cool waters! Mrs. Fisk with a languid sigh went to the open window, parted the dusty curtains and peered out. The glare was blinding, heat waves caused the distant derricks to dance and to waver. There was a dryness in the air that caused her throat to contract so that it seemed to rustle when she swallowed. It was a wretched street—a roadway, almost incandescent at this hour of the day—and it ran through a sprawling village of flimsy, unpainted houses all hastily slapped together out of boards and corrugated iron hauled in from the coast by rail. Sun lighted this demanded thick dobe walls, of course, but there was neither clay here at El Centro nor water with which to mix it. No, the water, too, came by rail in hot steel tank cars, most of which were foul.

Not a yard, not a fence, not a vine, not a bush, not a patch of green. Mrs. Fisk's weary eyes—nothing but the melancholy buildings, the road ankle-deep in a choking gray powder that coated roofs and walls and even the scattering desert vegetation round about the town itself.

Where the road came into view over a low knoll, there appeared a rolling cloud created by the wheels of an approaching car. Roads around El Centro were so rough that seldom could a car beat the dust unless favored by a breeze; it must perforce rock and jolt slowly through a suffocating smother that coated a driver's lungs as thickly as his skin. Like a trail of smoke ignited by some invisible brand, this dust streamer wound closer until Gloria made out her husband at the wheel of his rattle-trap flivver.

All cars were rattle-traps six weeks after they were put over these roads; this one complained loudly, its limber fenders clashed, a jet of vapor rose from its radiator cap. Its tonneau was piled full of rope and tackle. All automobiles at El Centro carried similar cargoes. Veering drunkenly around the corner of the house, it coughed once or twice as if clearing its one lung, then with a long-drawn sigh of escaping steam it came to rest.

"Hello, honey!" Donald Fisk smeared the sweat and the dust from his face and kissed his wife. He was a robust young giant, but the desert had fried the fat out of his frame and left it spare. His skin was burned almost black, and when he grinned his teeth gleamed forth as white as dominoes. Like the other men of El Centro, he smelled always of perspiration.

"My, but you're dirty!" Gloria told him. "You look too funny—"

She laughed outright at the expression lent by the muddy streaks of sweat.

"You're feeling better, aren't you?" he demanded, quickly. "Jove, Gloria! That's the first time you've laughed in ages."

"I'm feeling wonderful! I'm well!" "Seems like a month at least since you laughed. What is it?" "Come! I'll show you." Playfully Gloria took the thumb of his right hand in her fingers and led him across the floor. She fairly danced ahead of him to the door of the bedroom, where she bade him look. "There! I've been bubbling ever since I heard about our reservation."

Donald peered into the chamber; what he saw was an open steamer trunk and a half-filled suitcase upon the bed. The room itself was strewn with articles of clothing. "Why, kid! You've begun to pack!" Gloria nodded. "Good Lord! And it's ten days yet before we go!"

"I know—but I couldn't wait. Oh, Don, you don't know how I hate this place! You just haven't the faintest conception how I absolutely hate it!" Mrs. Fisk was still laughing, but there was an hysterical catch in her voice. "That's all that ails me—this desert! Now I'm going home. I'm going home—I'm going home!" She sang the words and her eyes sparkled.

"Well, you're not going to take all that trash when you go. Not if I can help it," her husband declared; but she interrupted her vigorous protest by saying:

"Maybe not, but it's such fun to get ready—and I haven't anything else to pack. I can't sit still and merely wait! I ain't! I've packed and unpacked a half dozen times. When I get it all in, I pretend I've forgotten something important and there's barely time to throw it out and repack. Oh, Don, little shivers and tickles run over me every time I think of it! Home! I'm going to pack every day. That telegram about the stateroom has done more to cure me than—than anything. I am well! Don't you think I am?" Gloria's voice quavered, broke; her voice quavered, broke; her face was briefly contorted and tears appeared upon her lashes.

"Sure, you're well. Just played out with the heat and the confounded monotony, that's all. Wait till you begin to breathe the good salt air."

And our stateroom is on the shady side of the ship!"

"I made sure of that. What's more, those fruiters pump cool air into the cabins. Oh, it won't take you long to pick up! I want you to have your old pep and your old color back when we land. You've got to have it or—well, the family will make it deuced unpleasant for me." A furrow appeared between Fisk's dusty brows. He stared about the sparsely furnished room, then he said, earnestly: "You've been a game kid to put up with this. It was worse than I expected; yes, worse than your people said it would be. If I'd realized just what it was like here, I'd never have brought you. But say"—his face lighted again—"Won't it be great to put it over on them?"

Gloria nodded. Her brief enthusiasm had left her limp, so she sat down on the edge of the bed. She managed to summon enough animation to agree. "Yes. They were so smart—they knew it all, didn't they? It will be nice to crow."

"Mighty nice for me, anyhow. You just go ahead playing at packing and unpacking your clothes, but when we leave we'll throw 'em all away. I'll buy you new ones—the most expensive ones on Fifth Avenue. I'll buy you more than you ever had—twice as many as your dad gave you! Yes, and we'll drive out to the island in our own limousine. I'll get you a couple of 'em."

"It will be too late for the peonies when we get there," Gloria said, musingly, "but the roses will be coming in. The ramblers on our place are wonderful. Think of it, Don, roses, green grass, running water! That brook and the trout pond! Won't it seem heavenly to be cool and clean again? I'm going to roll in the grass and bury my face in

"Same here! And the first time it rains I'm going to stand out and take every drop of it. It seems to me that every last pore in my body is thirsty."

"How is the new driller getting along?" Mrs. Fisk inquired. "McKay? Oh, fine! All I'm afraid of is that he may work too fast. These hustlers are apt to be careless, you know. He's at twenty-six hundred and fifty—right on top of the structure. We'll be ready to shoot day after tomorrow. I've ordered 'em nitro and it will be out tomorrow. Believe me, I'm not going to lose a minute."

"If it comes in big—" Gloria began.

"It will. That well is going to live up to its name. Homestead Number One!" Fisk made the assertion positively. "It's bound to be a five-thousand-barrel well—or better. Can't help it, in that location."

"I wish I had your confidence," his wife said doubtfully. "I guess I'm too tired to be enthusiastic any more. I meant to ask if it will mean delay. Will you have to stay and see to it?"

"No, no! Everything's arranged. Once I bring it in, Nolan can take charge."

"I'd die if we missed that boat. The well should have been in a month ago, but"—Gloria sighed—"something always seems to go wrong in this business. Just at the last moment. Disappointment, heart-break—oh, I hate it! Hate it! I'm so nervous I could scream—"

"She's just a tired, sick little kid," Fisk spoke comfortingly and stroked his wife's hair with a mother's touch. "This horrid old desert has worn her out, but it's going to make her well and happy and—rich. We've made a hard fight, honey, but it's nearly over. A little more courage, a little more patience!"

Roosevelt's Speech at Georgia Homecoming

ONE hundred thousand Democrats, mostly Georgians, gathered in the stadium of Georgia Tech at Atlanta for a homecoming and heard President

President Roosevelt

Roosevelt deliver a characteristic speech, full of confidence, assurance of prosperity and praise for what the New Deal has accomplished. And he did not neglect to attack warmly the critics of his administration. In reviewing the economic and social advances since his inauguration he gave out what was considered the keynote for his campaign for re-election, and definitely announced his candidacy—unnecessarily—by asserting that life in the United States has improved in the last two and a half years and will continue to improve "if I have anything to do with it."

Mr. Roosevelt promised that lavish government spending was over and that the nation could look forward with assurance to a decreasing deficit, and asserted that the government credit is higher than that of any other great nation. He bitterly criticized the treasury policies prior to his entrance into the White House, traced the relief policies as opposed to doles and declared that the peak of appropriations has passed.

The President said farm income in the United States has risen since 1932 a total of nearly three billions and this additional farm income "has meant the rebirth of city business, the reopening of closed factories, the doubling of automobile production, the improvement of transportation and the giving of new employment to millions of people."

"The word 'progress,' concluded Mr. Roosevelt, 'is a better word than 'recovery,' for it means not only a sound business and a sound agriculture from the material point of view, but it means, with equal importance, a sound improvement in American life as a result of continuing and forceful effort on the part of our people, and, through them, on the part of their government. I am certain that that is your purpose; and that is why I continue my confidence, my faith in the people of America."

In those phrases and in his high praise of the New Deal experiments, the President made clear his intention of carrying on his program for altering and bettering the social and economic life of the American people regardless of the return of material prosperity.

Governor Talmadge of Georgia, who though a Democrat is a severe critic of the President and many of his policies, pointedly absented himself from the meeting in Atlanta, spending the day on his farm. Several days later he replied to Mr. Roosevelt's speech in a radio address.

Republican opinion of the President's address might be summarized in the remark of Harrison E. Spangler, director of the Chicago G. O. P. headquarters: "Gulliver has started his travels again and we'll all be hearing some more tall stories."

Situation in Europe Is Becoming Tenser

EUROPEAN diplomats, especially the British and Premier Laval of France, are exceedingly clever and resourceful, but if they are to extricate their nations from the present threatening state of affairs they will need all their smartness. Though decision as to the imposition of an oil embargo against Italy was postponed until December 9 to give Laval a chance to conciliate Mussolini, the dice refused to make any gesture toward peace. Italians were authoritatively warned not to mistake diplomatic exchanges between their premier and the representatives of Great Britain and France as "peace talk," and were told there was no reason to believe Mussolini had modified his minimum terms already presented to Sir Eric Drummond and Laval's representative. Also he has declined further to conciliate Britain by removing more troops from Libya and has repeated his warning that he will consider an oil embargo an unfriendly gesture. He and all Italians are especially resentful against Great Britain, which apparently intends to insist on the oil ban. And now they are getting very sore at France, despite Laval's efforts to maintain friendly relations between the two countries. There were reports that Italian troops were being massed along the French frontier.

The British government was engaged with the troublesome situation, Sir Samuel Hoare, foreign secretary, received timely orders from his physician to take a rest in Switzerland, and it was announced he would stop in Paris for a conference with Premier Laval. The admiralty was preparing for eventualities and ordered officers of the royal navy reserve to report at once for duty at Plymouth. These men have been serving as officers and engineers in the merchant marine.

All members of the League of Nations, including Italy, are exceedingly anxious to know what will be the course of the United States concerning the oil embargo.

End of Federal Relief Shifts Millions to WPA Rolls

WITH the end of November direct federal relief came to an end, and it was officially announced that 3,500,000 persons had been shifted from relief rolls to the WPA pay rolls and put to work. Other millions of employables who have been receiving the federal dole but who cannot be hired by the Works Progress administration because state quotas have been filled must be cared for by the states which will be helped by the final allotments made by the FEHA before it went out of existence. As for the "unemployables," numbering perhaps 4,000,000, Aubrey Williams, assistant administrator, said the problem of their care would be solved satisfactorily.

Statistical charts on the relief situation, prepared by the research section of the FEHA, were issued in pamphlet form and show that unemployment decreased about 3,000,000 in the first two years of the Roosevelt administration.

New Corn-Hog Program Announced by Wallace

WALLACE announced the corn-hog program for 1936-37. Designed to maintain a balance between the interests of the producer and the consumer, this new plan will permit a 20 per cent increase in hog production next year over 1935, thus preparing the way for possible reductions in pork prices to the housewife; and to restrict corn acreage to about 35,000,000 acres, an increase of about 1,000,000 acres, over the amount harvested this year.

After appraisal by community committees and review by county allotment committees, a corn acreage base and a market hog base will be fixed. Co-operating producers must agree to plant corn next year on at least 25 per cent of their base acreages. They will be permitted to retire from 10 to 20 per cent of their base acreage for soil-improving or erosion-preventing purposes. Hog growers must agree to produce between 50 and 100 per cent of the base market production.

The 1936 corn adjustment payment will be 35 cents a bushel on the approved yield times the adjusted acreage, less the pro rata share of local administrative expenses.

Corn adjustment payments will be made in two installments. The first, at the rate of 20 a bushel, is to be made about August 1. The second will come due about December 31, 1936, at the rate of 15 cents per bushel.

A payment of $1.25 per head will be made on each hog in the base. Deductions will be made at the rate of $2.50 per head if a producer fails to raise 50 per cent of his base numbers. The total payment to a producer will be the same for a production ranging from 50 per cent to 100 per cent of his base.

The 1937 rates will be announced by November 20, 1936, but the rate on corn will not be less than 30 cents per bushel and the rate on hogs will not be less than $1.25 per head.

President May Attend National Convention

THERE is a possibility that President Roosevelt will attend the national Democratic convention which will re-nominate him. It was reported in a Baltimore paper that he wished the convention to be held in an eastern city, and some one at the White House, when asked about this, replied:

"Maybe. The President might want to go, and he would not want to travel too far."

Philadelphia has been under consideration by Democratic leaders. It was feared, but the question of money remains a prime consideration in the choice of the host city.

Death of Dr. J. H. Breasted, Noted Orientalist

DR. JAMES HENRY BREASTED of the University of Chicago, one of the world's leading orientalist, died in New York of an illness contracted on shipboard as he was returning from a visit to research expeditions in the Near East which were under his direction. He was seventy years old. His expeditions to Egypt and eastern Asia and his excavations there added vastly to the history of civilization.

Princess Victoria, favorite sister of King George of England, died at her home in Buckinghamshire at the age of sixty-seven. She suffered from ill health through most of her life and never was married.

Amnesty for Greek Rebels Decried by King

KING GEORGE II of Greece has decried amnesty for the participants in the abortive revolt of last March, but he specified that "persons considered dangerous" may be confined, if necessary, to certain localities. The confiscated fortunes of the leaders were returned. The king succeeded in forming a neutral cabinet with Constantine Demerzilis, a law professor, as premier, though the friends of General Kondylis, leader in the restoration coup, were displaced.

German Pastors Rebel Against Censorship

HANS KERRI, German church dictator, has stirred up another great row by placing a censorship on the Confessional synd to prevent the pastors from sending out communications which have not received his approval. The pastors resented this hotly and adopted the course of making all announcements from their pulpits rather than in pastoral letters first submitted to Kerr. The preachers also told their congregations frankly just what they thought of Kerr and his orders.

War Between Japan and China Draws Nearer

DOWNRIGHT war between the Chinese armies of Dictator Chiang Kai-shek and the Japanese appeared almost certain when the autonomy movement in north China was revived in eastern Hopei and Chahar provinces by Yin Ju-keng, the administrative commissioner and friend of Japan. Leaders of the rest of the region were undecided on this course, but Japanese troops began to pour in by the train load. Three thousand of them with full war equipment arrived in Tientsin, and the garrison at Peiping was more than doubled. The Fengtai railway junction a few miles from Peiping was seized, Colonel Takasashi, military attaché, asserting this was necessary because the rolling stock was being moved south, threatening the isolation of the Japanese forces.

In Nanking officials said the National government was determined to meet with force any attempt to force autonomy on the territory south of Hopei and Chahar provinces, and the executive Yuan proclaimed five sweeping reforms designed to stop the spread of the movement. Chiang was hurrying large bodies of troops to the northward.

Mississippi Valley Body Adopts Resolutions

MEETING in St. Louis, the Mississippi Valley association adopted resolutions opposing any attempt to limit the "right of territory south of Hopei and Chahar provinces, and the executive Yuan proclaimed five sweeping reforms designed to stop the spread of the movement. Chiang was hurrying large bodies of troops to the northward.

The convention, which again went on record as opposing the co-ordination of transportation agencies under the interstate commerce commission, criticized I. C. C. rulings "which have the effect of permitting railroads to cut rates . . . for the purpose of killing out waterway transportation."

The delegates representing mid-continent agricultural, shipping, and industrial interests of 25 states, again opposed ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty.

Col. Robert Isham Randolph of Chicago was elected president of the association.

New Evidence Reported in Hauptmann Case

BRUNO RICHARD HAUPTMANN'S attorneys assert that some of the Lindbergh ransom money has been found in Massachusetts and that their investigators also have discovered some pieces of evidence that are of great importance to the defense. The defendant himself issued a statement calling on Dr. John F. Condon ("Jafie") to "make a full confession" of what he knows concerning the kidnapping and murder of Colonel Lindbergh's little son.

Ikkes Revives Dispute Over Steel Prices

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR SIKES has revived the controversy between the New Dealers and the big steel corporations concerning steel prices. Mr. Ikkes said there was "prima facie evidence of collusion" in identical bids on a Florida public works project. The IWA administrator said the four companies bidding $185,000 each on 3,300 tons of steel for a Miami dock—Inland, Carnegie, Jones & Laughlin, and Kalman (a Bethlehem subsidiary)—were the same that submitted identical bids on an ocean terminal at Morehead City, N. C., and the Triborough bridge in New York city.

In the two earlier instances German concerns underbid and were awarded the contracts. Amid protests from industry and labor Ikkes then halted all additional foreign purchases and raised the differential in favor of domestic materials from 15 to 25 per cent.

There was no foreign bidder on the Miami project and Mr. Ikkes said the contract would be awarded to the concern "that is farthest away and has to pay the highest freight bill—the object is to spread prosperity around."

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted By WILLIAM BRUCKART

NATIONAL PRESS BLDG., WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—Through some months past, Cordell Hull, secretary of state, has been proceeding cautiously and quietly in the negotiation of trade agreements with foreign nations. His work has attracted comparatively little public attention although throughout the negotiations individual economic interests who stood to gain or lose depending upon their lines of business have made known their feelings quite emphatically. Six of these trade agreements, now called trade treaties, had been consummated in this manner. When the seventh agreement came along, however, the story was different. That was the treaty with our northern neighbor, Canada.

Canadian Trade Pact

It is impossible here to set forth the list of commercial products encompassed in the new trade agreement with Canada. I doubt if most of the people of this country ever will know details of this treaty. By the nature of things, few persons can be interested in all of the items. But, I do not believe that it is the question of individual interest in the entire list that ought to concern us. Aside from the policy involved in the negotiation and agreement on tariff concessions, the importance of the Canadian treaty to the average individual lies in the one or two, or half a dozen at most, items that affect each one personally.

I do not mean to say that the policy involved is unimportant. The contrary is decidedly true. From a political standpoint, of course, it is general policy that will be debated; from an individual standpoint it will be the direct effect that execution of that policy has on each of us that will determine our ultimate views and to that extent determine whether we will be for or against the general policy of reducing tariffs enacted against certain kinds of imports.

The new agreement with Canada takes effect January 1—provided the Canadian parliament ratifies it. No such ratification is necessary in this country. The treaty was negotiated by Mr. Hull and President Roosevelt under the authority granted by congress in legislation passed a year ago which gave to the President the privilege of working out trade treaties without further congressional sanction. That law restricted the President in only one way, namely, the requirement that an increase or reduction of tariff rates included in these trade treaties may not exceed 50 per cent of the rate fixed in the present tariff laws. So it is seen that Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hull had virtually complete authority. It will operate for three years and, as far as I have been able to discover, it will be effective after Canadian ratification and there will be nothing anybody can do about it, be it good or bad.

In making public the agreement negotiated by Mr. Hull with Prime Minister Mackenzie King, the President asserted his belief that the agreement will initiate or revive a flow of commerce back and forth across our northern frontier in a manner that will be most helpful. He considered that the agreement would mean additional markets for some of our products and therefore additional work for some of our unemployed. The Canadian prime minister was of the opinion that in this agreement a long step had been taken toward healing a breach that has existed between the two countries for 63 years. He was hopeful, like President Roosevelt, that the channels of trade again will be filled, perhaps not to the levels of the boom days of 1928 and 1929, but would again carry satisfactory volume.

It will be recalled that our shipments to Canada in 1929 amounted to about $200,000,000. The depression cut those shipments to approximately $30,000,000 last year. So, if the predictions of the President and Mr. Mackenzie King are in any way fulfilled, a considerable trade is due to begin upon the operation of this new treaty.

Any discussion of the treaty, however, that failed to call attention to basic conditions, in my opinion, would be short of its goal. So, it seems to me that while the President and the Canadian prime minister hold such high hope for trade revival, one ought not forget that trade will not flow if no market, no demand, exists for the goods. It may well be that by reducing the tariff duties that must be paid at the frontier on goods enumerated in the treaty that a reduction in prices will follow. It may then follow that the consequent reduction in prices will stir up a demand for the products. But that is not certain.

Now from the political standpoint, examination of the treaty must take into consideration individual items. And how those individual items affect communities and economic interests in this country. Already, we here in Washington have been deluged with the complaints of certain communities against provisions of the treaty. Likewise, we have heard those provisions praised

"I wanted to ask the gentleman a question along the line of universal peace," said Mr. Norris. "As I understand it, the gentleman favors the bill for at least one reason—that it will have a tendency to bring Canada into the Union."

"Yes," Mr. Clark replied, "I have no doubt about that. I do not have any doubt whatever that day is not far distant when Great Britain will joyfully see all of her North American possessions become a part of this republic. That is the way things are now tending."

So, if the controversy over the present Canadian tariff agreement becomes violent, I think it is fair to expect that again we will hear the question discussed whether the United States is seeking to annex Canada—to make Canada part and parcel of the United States. Of course, as far as anyone can see today, annexation of Canada is inconceivable but the incident is related here simply to show how far-reaching such controversies may become.

from other sections. Thus, from the political standpoint we see developing a fine old fight over the tariff.

Tariff questions are and always have been sectional questions. Industrial communities want to be protected against inroads of foreign competition where labor is cheaper. Agriculture wants to be protected against imports from bountiful producing lands in those countries where vast open spaces and high productivity exist at the minimum of cost. Importers and consumers of imported products always have fought and always will fight to have low tariff rates so that the things they buy may enter this country at the lowest possible price. With reference to the Canadian treaty, these same conditions exist.

Early outbursts indicate that cattle raising communities and dairy producing sections are up in arms because the treaty reduced a tariff protection accorded against imports of cattle and cattle products and the products of the dairy.

Lumber interests are upset. It is true that the lumber market in the United States has been in the doldrums for several years and naturally the lumber people do not want to have Canadian shipments absorb what little market they have.

These are just a few of the complaints. They are offset partially at least by the praise and the hopes of some other phases of agriculture such as fruit and vegetable growers who feel that they can now market their products in Canada. Without even a careful analysis of the more than seven hundred items involved in the treaty, it is to be seen that there will be possible markets available after January 1 to a number of agricultural lines and to some industrial interests. Yet it remains, as I said earlier, for the passage of time to disclose exactly whether the net result will be favorable to us commercially or whether the Canadians have put over a fine bargain from their standpoint.

All of the discussion about the Canadian treaty, however, brings back memory. As a result of these recollections, I dug back the other day into the congressional debates of 1911 when a Canadian reciprocity agreement was under consideration, backed by the late William Howard Taft. After reading those debates, particularly the observations of the late and distinguished Champ Clark of Missouri and Representative George Norris, now a senator from Nebraska, I could not fail to realize the political dynamite embodied in the new course of international trade relations adopted by President Roosevelt. It was the Canadian reciprocity proposal that defeated Mr. Taft for re-election to the Presidency. It was, indeed, that controversial issue that caused the organization of the Bull Moose party and that sent Mr. Taft into political oblivion.

I am not predicting here that the same consequences are in store for President Roosevelt but it is fair to recall, it seems to me, that the reciprocity proposal of 1911 burned the fingers of every political leader who touched it. The cases are not exactly comparable nor analogous. Mr. Roosevelt has retained a number of tariff duties which were swept aside in the proposed Taft reciprocity arrangement. He is therefore fortified to that extent. But you may be sure that those who sponsor the present Canadian agreement are going to meet the same sort of fight that was made against the Taft proposal.

Then there is in the current treaty circumstances another factor to be considered. It links back to the Champ Clark observations which were made on February 14, 1911. At that time, Mr. Clark was expressing the view that the reciprocity agreement constituted a step at least in the direction of universal peace. In the debate just mentioned, Mr. Norris asked Mr. Clark to elaborate on his view concerning the value of the agreement as an instrument of peace.

"I wanted to ask the gentleman a question along the line of universal peace," said Mr. Norris. "As I understand it, the gentleman favors the bill for at least one reason—that it will have a tendency to bring Canada into the Union."

"Yes," Mr. Clark replied, "I have no doubt about that. I do not have any doubt whatever that day is not far distant when Great Britain will joyfully see all of her North American possessions become a part of this republic. That is the way things are now tending."

So, if the controversy over the present Canadian tariff agreement becomes violent, I think it is fair to expect that again we will hear the question discussed whether the United States is seeking to annex Canada—to make Canada part and parcel of the United States. Of course, as far as anyone can see today, annexation of Canada is inconceivable but the incident is related here simply to show how far-reaching such controversies may become.

Paging Japan
Black Gold Best for War
The Mighty Airplane
Two Kinds of Treasure

When the Japanese plan to absorb a section of northern China with population of 95,000,000 seemed to have been abandoned, chaos broke loose in northern China. Industrious bandits, without fear of Japan's efficiency, began looting stores and Chinese merchants begged Japan to restore order. Eleven Japanese divisions quartered outside the Great Wall are ready to move in.

Arthur Brisbane and Japan will hardly have the heart to stay out under such circumstances. Later Japan will not have the heart to stay out of the Philippines. Japanese confidence in the sun goddess seems justified. The drift is Japan's way, with westerners busy planning to kill each other.

There are, California tells you, several kinds of gold: yellow gold that took crowds to California in 1849; another yellow gold that grows on orange, lemon and grapefruit trees; the white gold water power rolling from the mountains, to produce black gold, power and fertility, and the oil in the ground.

Mussolini's determination to keep oil flowing into Italy, even at risk of European war, shows that oil is more important in war now than yellow gold. It moves great tanks, keeps the planes in the air; it means motion, and successful motion means victory.

Mighty is the airplane in northern Brazil, where the "elbow" sticks out into the Atlantic. Soldiers said by the Associated Press to be guided by Communists decided to run the government and make it better. They looked up their officers and were just starting the new "better" government when official airplanes came along with bombs. "Bang" went one or two bombs, aerial machine guns said "rat-tat-tat" a few times.

The revolutionary soldiers said, "That will do," and scattered in the interior. It is hard to "rise and throw off your chains" while capitalism is dropping bombs.

In Jacksonville, Fla., gentlemen firing out an expedition to hunt for pirate treasure think they know where the gold is. They may find it; probably will not.

Other gentlemen are figuring out similar treasure expeditions in Wall street, regardless of what happened when they did that in 1929.

Men hunting pirate treasure and Wall street treasure will have plenty of excitement, and that probably is well worth the effort. "A dull life is no life."

The great Jonker diamond, biggest uncut stone on earth, is to be cut into smaller pieces, since no one rich enough to buy it now would wear so big a diamond.

It might have been sold to a Russian czar, Turkish sultan or Ethiopian emperor for use in a crown. "To increase majesty." But czars and sultans have vanished, Ethiopia's ruler is short of cash.

The big diamond will be cut into small pieces and sold for about $1,500,000. The largest "piece" will weigh 163 carats, the rest from 10 to 50 carats. Interesting opportunity for deserving Hollywood stars.

John S. Clements, sixteen, sentenced to die next January in the electric chair, helped George H. Hildebrand, twenty-six, to rob and murder an old poultry farmer.

Sixteen seems rather young for an electric chair candidate, but the judge and jury felt that by disposing of the young murderer now they would avoid robberies and murders in the future. Recent history of youthful criminals makes that probable.

"Foreign observers" in Ethiopia believe that Ethiopia is fighting a lost cause; also that, as the number of wounded increases and the cause looks more and more hopeless, there might be a general massacre of whites. If this should happen the "30 to 1" gentlemen of the League of Nations would have themselves to blame.

The "sanctions" and boycott will not prevent Italy defeating Ethiopia, but they do make the Ethiopian ruler overconfident, persuading him to sacrifice lives unnecessarily.

The order for steel made in Germany, to be used in New York's Triborough bridge, which would use taxpayers' money to make jobs abroad, has been canceled definitely.

So all is well that ends well, there. The response to that piece of foolishness in the way of publicity was emphatic.

Bishops of England's Anglican church, the archbishop of Canterbury leading, denounce Chancellor Hitler's persecution of German Jews as they well may, and they hope that Christians in Great Britain and elsewhere will "revert their influence."

HOW ARE YOU TODAY?

DR. JAMES W. BARTON
Talks About

Nose Bleed

IT IS not uncommon for growing boys and girls at the age of puberty (14 to 16 years) to be troubled with nose bleed. The bleeding is at the front part of the nose at lowest portion of the cartilage which divides the nose into the two parts or nostrils. This is rather fortunate, as it is not hard to reach the bleeding point with absorbent cotton, or when necessary with a cautery such as a red-hot needle when it is difficult to stop the bleeding. While nose bleed may be due to a number of causes, pinching at, scratching, or blows are the commonest. There are, of course, certain ailments which cause nose bleed, such as diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, worms, typhoid fever, high blood pressure, inflammation of the kidneys, anemia (thin blood), influenza, catarrh, tuberculosis and some forms of heart trouble.

Dr. Barton

Has Varied Portent.

Thus, as some one has well said, "Nose bleed may be a warning, a remedy, or a disease."

There seems to be a tendency or predisposition to nose bleed in some individuals just as others have a predisposition to hay fever, rheumatism, eczema, tuberculosis and other ailments. Naturally, these individuals should avoid those things which cause the nose bleed—pinching at the nose, blowing it too hard, violent sneezing, tight collar, bending the head over when working or playing.

Now a little bleeding from the nose cannot do any harm; in fact, in cases of high blood pressure, or heart disease nose bleeding is really a measure of safety to the system.

Try "Home Remedies."

However, when it does not stop soon the usual "home remedies" should be used. Head and shoulders should be held erect, and breathing should be done entirely through the mouth. Apply ice to back of neck or over the nose and hold both hands above the head. Pressing the bleeding side of the nose against the central cartilage or septum for ten minutes is often sufficient to stop the bleeding. Pressing some absorbent cotton up the nostril is usually a successful method of treatment; in fact, it is sometimes necessary to pack the absorbent cotton to the very back part of the nose, almost into the throat. If the absorbent is dipped in adrenalin it will be more effective.

If these home measures do not stop the bleeding it may be necessary to call a physician who will apply a styptic or completely plug the nose.

Iodine in Goiter

IT HAS been definitely proven that the use of iodine in the ordinary table salt prevents goitre among the inhabitants of districts where there is a lack of iodine in the soil. This is known as the simple form of goitre which although embarrassing need not cause the more severe symptoms of nervousness, indigestion, rapid heart action or pressure symptoms which interfere with breathing.

There has been some difference of opinion among physicians as to the use of iodine in those cases of goitre where the great amount of thyroid juice being manufactured was actually poisoning the system (toxic goitre).

As you know the thyroid juice acts like the draft of the furnace—making the tissues and organs work fast and free. Doctor Cline, the eminent Cleveland surgeon, speaks of this juice as the oil that lubricates everything and keeps us going.

Growth of Gland.

However when the thyroid gland pours out too much of this iodine juice—allows it to leak out—then the gland must keep manufacturing more and more of the juice to make up for this leakage, and so it grows larger and larger.

Drs. J. H. Means and Jacob Lerman, Boston, in the Journal of the American Medical Association state that during the past eleven years iodine has been given as a routine in the thyroid clinic of the Massachusetts General hospital, and in some 575 cases its action has been made a matter of careful study.

Effect of Iodine.

Their experience is "that iodine brings about a rapid lessening of the symptoms of toxic goitre, and with it a slowing up of the too rapid action of the various processes of the body. Further, iodine is just as effective in cases of many years standing as in more recent cases."

Doctors Means and Lerman do not speak of iodine as a "cure" for toxic goitre but as a means of holding the symptoms within control until such time as operation can be safely performed. "Iodine sets up a temporary obstacle to the excessive outflow of thyroid juice; it checks the 'leakage' of this juice from the gland." It acts as a sort of dam.

This experience with such a large number of cases in a clinic devoted entirely to thyroid cases, would indicate that giving of iodine in toxic goitre is good treatment.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the airway emergency station. In it are Horton Ramill, millionaire mining magnate; his daughter, Lilith; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to be only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly "worthless." Lilith Ramill, product of the past age, plainly shows contempt for Garth. Through Garth's guidance the plane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim is nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are willing to take a chance in investing a small amount. Sensing treachery ahead, Garth secretly removes a part from the motor of the plane. Huxby and Lilith taunt Garth, but their tone soon changes when they try to start the plane. Returning to shore they try to force Garth to give up the missing part. Garth manages to set the monoplane adrift and the current carries it over the falls. He points out that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness.

"Don't voyage!" said Garth. "You may reach the top of the glacier with the soles still on your golf-course boots. Your father, I fancy, will prefer to wait here a while. For one thing, he knows that in his present condition, he never could climb the pass. In the second place, he has no desire to go down the other side on his uppers."

Huxby looked from Mr. Ramill's flimsy oxfords to the girl's fashionable sport boots, and then at Garth's worn moccasins.

"Well, Jack, what's the answer?" "That it's not well," Garth replied. "In the first place, you'll drop that name and tone in speaking to me. Am I understood?"

Huxby stood silent, his eyes cold and lips tight drawn. But Mr. Ramill spoke for him, with decisiveness: "That is understood, Garth. We are all now in the same boat, and you are skipper. How about the shoe problem?"

"Moosehide. We'll first shift along-side to the mouth of the placer mill. It's the best place to camp. I'll then go on around to the musk and collect some hides."

"Don't be too sure of that," Huxby differed. "Keep hold of the rifle, chief. He'd streak out and leave us to hold the sack."

"Haven't you realized yet that the joke is on you?" Garth inquired. "It's a question of trusting me absolutely, or not at all. Take your choice."

Mr. Ramill handed over the rifle. Huxby's hand tightened on the butt of his lowered pistol. Garth gazed past him down the lake.

"The plane seems to be edging over towards the east shore. There's a ford up here, Huxby. You're welcome to try for the plane. If you save her, I'll call it a break of the game in your favor, and we'll all ride out on the air."

"Lay off, Vivian," Mr. Ramill interposed. "The plane has veered out again. He has us nipped fast."

Without any reply, Huxby thrust his pistol inside his leather jacket and started up the stream bank. Garth came astern to his pack. He slung it on his back.

"Come on. Let's head for camp."

"Why not follow Vivian?" Mr. Ramill inquired. "It is still possible the plane may drift ashore."

"A hundred to one chance it will not, sir. We'll go out on moosehide. If at all. I've decided not to make it alone. A trip through the muskings may lead you to realize that even lone woodsy prospectors should be entitled to the fruits of their discoveries."

The girl's smoldering rage flared out at him: "You scoundrel! Deceit us into this beastly hole, and then turn our plane adrift. You cowardly sneak!" Everything drifting away in it—and all the while and wine. Oh, don't! What am I going to do? I'll starve!"

Her father looked at Garth with the first sign of concern that he had shown. "Yes, that's it. You might have thought of her. A girl so delicately reared! I say nothing as to myself; it's all in the game. But a lady to drag her down into the raw like this! Marooning her to starve in the bogs!"

Garth looked from father to daughter. "A lady, did you say? Oh, yes, to be sure—a dainty, refined lady, who curses and drinks and holds in schemes to balk a supposedly simple bush vagabond out of his fortune."

"Bah!" she scoffed. "Whining because we would not let you fast your self on us as a gentleman. As for your tyrannical about that claim, mines are treasure trove. They belong to whoever is clever enough to get hold of them."

"Right-o, my lady," Garth approved. "Which leaves only the small matter of food and drink to be considered. I fancy, after you've fasted off some of your fastidiousness."

Indifferent whether or not the girl and her father followed him, Garth started to back-trail through the lower growth of spruce trees.

Where the spring rill came bubbling over ledges down to the rocky shore, he halted in a small clearing. Here had been his camp on his previous visit to the valley. Ten feet up the branch-trimmed trunks of four closely grouped birch trees, a tattered moose hide hung over the edge of a pole platform.

Garth glanced up at the platform. "Wolverines have robbed the food cache. But there's plenty more meat on the hoof. While I go for some, you two will start gathering wood."

Miss Ramill's nerves were on edge. She snatched at him hysterically: "You insolent bully! Don't you dare to try to give me orders!"

Her father had squatted down on the warm rock, fired out by his day's exertions. Garth spoke to him: "Too much is enough. The condition that all three of you would do as I thought best. Huxby promptly tried again to bluff me. Now your daughter balks."

Mr. Ramill raised his down-sagged head. "You'll not be able to say that of me, young man. I stand by your terms. I always play to win. But no one can truthfully claim I ever welen or revoke. I will take your orders, and so will Vivian, now that he has had time to realize the situation."

"How about your daughter?" "I'll leave that to you. If you can control her, you'll be doing more than I have ever been able to do."

Garth met the disdainful gaze of the girl with a smile. "So your father turns you over to me, my lady. Let me hasten to assure you, I beg to decline the honor."

"Ah, indeed!" "Yes, I'll let old Mother Nature spank you till you come to your senses."

Her blue eyes flared with scorn. "Oh, you—you! D—n!"

"Better save your energy," he advised. "You'll need it all, unless your pride stoops to the squalid work of campfire tending. Smoke drives off insects. For another thing, no wolf, wolverine or lynx, or even a grizzly, will venture close to a fire. Think that over, Mr. Ramill, you have your patent lighter."

He swung away between the spruces without waiting for any reply. Left alone with her exhausted father, the girl might come to realize how utterly she had crashed out of her soft and luxurious civilized environment.

A girl whom even her father had been unable to control! That had been evident from the first. She was a badly spoiled product of the jazz-age—willful, arrogant, utterly selfish. Forunately she had shown herself no less hardy physically than mentally. Otherwise he would have played the game in a different way. No weak-muscled woman could make that travels to the Mackenzie.

As for her father, he had only himself to thank. A pirate should expect to take his chances. He might be gotten out to the river, and he might not. That depended upon his heart. Soft muscles could be hardened. Not so a weak heart.

No question as to the girl and Huxby, if they obeyed orders. They could make it.

A crash in the alders broke in upon Garth's thoughts. The splash that followed told him a moose had caught his scent and taken to the lake. To have run to the bank and shot the swimming beast would have been easy. Only, he had no canoe or raft, and the water here was rather deep offshore.

He stalked down through the timber. For the first hundred feet or so out from the shore thickets, willows grew along both sides of the low ledge. A peer through the foliage showed the immense palmate antlers of an old bull moose.

Garth flattened down on the moss covered dyke and crawled away from the bank. Shoreside, on the other side, he caught sight of a slight movement among the willows. He rose on his knees and swung up his rifle. Though he was still screened by the brush alongside the ledge, his quick movements sent a strong whiff of man-scent downward.

With loud snorts of alarm, two cow moose, a calf, and a young bull heaved up among the willows less than a dozen yards apart. They started to plunge forward out of the thicket. Garth's first shot dropped the callous cow with a bullet through the head. His second bullet glanced off the base of the bull's antler. Parly stunned by the shock, the bull swerved sideways, only to drop in his tracks, shot through the heart.

Silently as he had stalked out the ledge, Garth returned to solid ground. He knew that the snorting, bawling moose in the pools would soon quiet down and return to their lily-pond feeding. The only requirement was for him to keep out of sight and either across or down wind from the stupid beasts. They had not learned to fear human hunters.

A few steps along the bank brought him to a game trail through the thickets. He laid down his rifle and waded out to the dead bull. The body lay on a down-beaten mat of willow stems. Garth at once set to work with his knife.

To dress out a thousand-pound animal is no light task, even under the best of conditions. Garth thought nothing of it. All the hide within reach slid free to the quick draw of his curved knife blade. With belt-ax and knife he cut off the antlered head, then the upper foreleg and hindquarter. After that he was able to heave the carcass over by the leverage of the other legs.

When he had finished with the bull, he went to the cow. She weighed perhaps 200 pounds less, and was therefore easier to dress out.

With the two skins and all the meat ashore, he took a dip in a clear pool and washed his buckskins. As he sloshed out of the willows in the wet garments, he saw Miss Ramill staring through her headnet at the eight big legs. He had looked them on the stubs of spruce limbs. Her gaze lowered from the other raw moose products that were piled on one of the hides. She turned from them loathingly.

"Fugh! What a sickening mess! Have you started a packing plant?" "The packing is just about to start," he replied. "Are you too feeble to carry this rolled skin? It's the lighter one."

"That filthy thing? You may be sure I'm not so feeble-minded as to touch any of your butcher mess."

"Very well. Only remember, it's your own choice, sister."

He hugged the contents of the bull hide, slung it on his back, picked up his rifle, and headed for camp. The girl looked from him to the folded moose cow skin, hesitated, flushed angrily, and followed, empty handed.

While still some distance from the rill, he whiffed a tang of wood smoke. He quickened his step. It gave him a pleasant surprise. After all, the girl seemed to have given in, at least partly. He turned to her with a friendly look. She met it with a scornful smile.

They came to the opening where Garth trimmed a pair of green willow spits, oiled the moosehide, and cut two slices of liver. He put a slice on each spit, and started to broil them over the coals. With a look of disgust, Miss Ramill turned her back and sat down on the rill bank.

Before long the broiling liver began to send out an appetizing odor. The girl's nose went up for an involuntary sniff. Garth met the intent look of her father, and allowed his left eyelid to flutter slightly. Another turn of the spits completed the broiling. He handed one of them to Mr. Ramill.

The millionaire lifted his headnet to take a gingerly nibble at his hot meat. His heavy face brightened with a surprised smile. He snatched his clips and bit off a large mouthful. At the sound, his daughter jerked around. Garth was biting into the other piece of liver.

The girl cried out her indignation: "You greedy pigs! Where's my piece?" Garth pointed to the moosehide. "Help yourself."

He met her furious look with cool indifference, and went on eating. Unable to blast him, she turned to her father.

"I'll take yours, Dad. You've had two bites. It will not take you long to cook another piece. Make it three."

At that, Garth swung around between father and daughter.

"Mr. Ramill, we'll settle this right now. You said you'd leave her to me. I cooked that meat for you. She will cook her own meat, or go without."

The older man sat for several moments considering the matter. He then raised his piece of meat and resumed his meal. Lilith Ramill stared at him, her eyes wide.

"My own father! But wait till Vivian gets back!"

He winced. Garth ignored her.

"Better lie down and rest, sir. You've done enough for a while. I'm going to get you into hard training as soon as possible. But we must not overdo it at the start. Might mean a breakdown."

"I am tired, boy—and hungry as a shark. Could eat all the rest of that liver."

"Not now. You'll rest, do some work, and then get another slice. Call this valley one of those physical culture sanitariums where the tired business man is worked and dieted back into fit condition."

"I have yet to agree to such training, Garth."

"Take your choice. If you refuse, I give you my word you'll never reach the Mackenzie. I might back-pack you in some places; you don't weigh much over two hundred. Happens, though, I'm not a donkey. You'll go on your own feet."

"Very well. Put me on them."

Obedient to directions, the big man stretched out flat upon the sunwarmed rock. Garth turned about to pull the moosehide and what was upon it into the shade of a birch.

Miss Ramill thrust in front of him and seized his knife. She slashed at the liver. The blade was razor-sharp. Her angry stroke not only cut through the liver, it slit the moosehide as well.

Garth said nothing. Enough for him that hunger had humbled the girl's pride. She had learned her first lesson. Long hours had passed since her tinny breakfasting on wine and delicatessen in the cabin of the monoplane, far over on the Mackenzie. She was fairly ravenous.

Her rouged lips twitched with anticipation as she held the spitted slice of liver close upon the coals of the low-burnt fire. Well satisfied, Garth hung the remaining liver, the tongues and mufles under the cache platform. A smudge-fire on the ground below the meat drove off the flies.

Miss Ramill's only thought had been for her food. She did not think to put fresh fuel on the cook-fire. When it died down to embers, she jerked the partly burnt, inwardly rare slice of liver from the charred willow spit. There was now no finicky fastidiousness about her eating. She thrust off her headnet and sank her teeth into the piece of liver with the gusto of a hungry boy. Bite followed bite in rapid succession.

Indians' Ark Legend Is Still Related in Quebec

The remnants of the Indians in the country surrounding Capes Trinity and Eternity, the high points on the Saguenay river, still cling to the ancient belief that the ark, or, as they term it, "the big canoe," rested on the top of Cape Trinity, 2,000 feet above the level of the river which skirts its base, and was placed there by a flood which inundated the rest of the earth, destroying all life thereon, only the families of worthy Indians, as well as pairs of the various animals and birds being preserved by the Great Manitou, whose guiding hand landed "the big canoe" on the last bit of earth left uncovered by water.

The Indians also have a legend, says a Tadoussac (Quebec) correspondent in the Washington Star, which bears considerable resemblance to the casting of Satan and his rebellious followers out of paradise. According to the Indian tradition, the Great Manitou cast the "fallen angels" over the precipice of Cape Trinity. All met death in the river below with the exception of the leader, who was so strong that the fall of 2,000 feet only crippled him.

As this "angel" gathered strength he became the demon of the river, wrecking canoes, drowning peaceful Indians and wreaking havoc in general. Mayo, the father of the Indian race, decided to seek and vanquish him in a hand-to-hand encounter. The battle between the two was terrific, Mayo swinging the demon around his head and against the rock of Trinity with such force that the three great gashes in the mountain resulted from the contacts, so the tradition continues. Finally Mayo was victorious, crushing out the life of the demon and thus restoring peace and quiet to the beautiful waters of the Saguenay.

Mourning Dove Like Pigeon

The female mourning dove looks very much like a pigeon. Her dress is dull grayish brown or fawn colored, and she lacks the coloring around the neck which distinguishes the male. When in repose the female is a flabby, supine, shiftless-looking creature, but she inspires one of the most famous of all bird love calls. Perhaps the male mourning dove is inspired to his plaintive call in appreciation of the refinement of his mate, for she is among the gentlest of birds.

Fish Hosts to Clams

Clams and mussels begin their lives on the skin, gills, or fins of fish, where they live as parasites for two months. During this time, they develop a foot, and then drop off to begin an independent existence.

Englishman Had 40 Wives; His 79 Children Argue

In the latter half of the Nineteenth century John Dunn, a white Englishman, settled in the Zulu territory of Africa. In the course of his life in Zululand he married 40 native women. Following the Zulu uprising of 1879 he was appointed one of the 13 chiefs controlling the country.

Recently his 79 living children appeared in native court at Cape Town, Africa. They began arguing over the partition of 10,000 acres of land set aside for them by the Union of South Africa parliament. Each descendant of Dunn is to receive 100 acres.

Friendly Folk

Most folk are friendly—even in large cities. Though city life tends to form a sort of veneer of coldness, it takes but a scratch to penetrate the veneer. Underneath one finds pleasant friendliness to a surprising degree.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

That often used title, "poor, little rich girl," can be applied to Brenda Diana Duff Frazier. She's fourteen years old. From trust funds established by her father, Frank Duff Frazier, who died two years ago, and her grandmother, Clara Duff Frazier, she has an income of $107,000 a year. That probably makes her the wealthiest girl of her age in the world. But before she can spend a penny of her income or any of it can be expended in her behalf, there must be court approval of a schedule of allowances. The schedules and the findings are a part of the public records. Thus it is known that Brenda Diana will have $45,750 for her expense for the next 18 months. That means spending at the rate of more than $3 an hour, 24 hours a day. But Brenda Diana's pocket money allowance is only $2 a week.

It interests me to dig into the items of such an accounting. Doing so shows that the child is charged with one-fourth of the upkeep of the home of her mother, who has married again. That takes a total of $16,944.75 which includes $10,500 for food. Brenda Diana's wardrobe is to cost $5,000. For her vacations and traveling expenses there is an item of $5,200 with another of $1,800 for amusements and parties. Books, toys and school supplies are to cost her $800 with a similar expenditure for music lessons. Club dues, with the clubs not listed, have been set at $900. She'll buy $375 worth of Christmas presents and turn a like amount over to charity.

Little rich girls, it seems, must consult doctors and dentists quite frequently since in Brenda Diana's schedule, there is an allowance of $2,000 for dental work and $2,250 for doctors and medical supplies. Dancing and skating lessons are to cost her $150, and there is a $6,750 item for upkeep of automobiles together with insurance and depreciation. This is part of the budget of a wealthy little girl who probably has no idea of what $107,000 a year means.

It was amusing to those spectators who gathered on Fifth avenue. But to the magnificent lady in the limousine it was stark tragedy. Bouncing about as if the seat were hot, with horror on her patrician face and her mouth open though no sounds came from it, she was a picture of terror. Finally the chauffeur, sensing something wrong, looked back leaped down—and killed the cause of all the trouble. It was a wasp. "Home, Jones," said the lady in a tremulous voice, and the limousine sped away.

Times Square has its first sidewalk cafe. It's right at Forty-second street and Broadway, the so-called "Crossroads of the world." Enclosed in a box hedge and gay with colored awnings, it extends 80 feet along the front of the building that occupies the site of Constable's Metropole bar, famous in the early part of the century. Sidewalk cafes are now so numerous that it seems a large majority of the population of New York enjoys dining in the open.

Day after day, a gray-haired, well-dressed man sits on a bench on Riverside drive. To those who occupy the seat with him, he tells about the virtues of peanuts, holding that as they contain all the elements necessary for sustaining life, he lives on no other diet. Observers say he comes out to Riverside park early in the morning and sits on the bench until long after midnight. Then he goes down into the park and disappears. Yet his clothing is always neatly pressed and his linen clean. Just one of the minor mysteries of the great city.

Jail Father for Hiring

Thugs to Beat Children

Bay Shore, N. Y.—Frank E. White, fifty-three, Brooklyn undertaker, was jailed under a 30-day sentence imposed on his wife's charge that he hired the seven thugs to beat up their son and daughter recently. He also was fined $50. Three of the thugs were captured after John White, twenty-one, and his sister, Margaret, nineteen, were beaten in their home here.

Find Amphitheater of Ancient Roman Times

Budapest.—Parts of the palace of the first kings of Hungary were discovered at Esztergom and the spades of workmen later struck on the remains of an amphitheater in Aquinacum, the old Roman city that occupied the shore side of Budapest. The amphitheater covers a large area and its extension views with that of the amphitheaters of Verona and Arles.

WHITE CHIEF RULES INDIANS IN TEXAS

Prosperity Due to Forceful Leader, Tribe Claims.

Livingston, Texas.—The only Indian tribe in Texas, the peaceful Alabamas, has a white chief.

Nekko Sl, or Little Chief, known to his business associates here as Clem Fain, Jr., became director of the tribe at Indian Village following the death of Big Chief Sun-Kee, seventy-five.

Fain has been a friend and adviser of the Alabamas for many years, and was so loved that he was given the title of Nekko Sl.

Affairs of the tribe, which had drifted from the land east of the Mississippi a century ago, greatly interested Fain.

Advised Old Chief.

Sun-Kee became chief of the tribe 25 years ago upon the death of his predecessor, Chief John Scott. Fain became his friend and advised the chief.

When adversity struck at the foundation of the band of 250 Indians in 1928, Fain advised Chief Sun-Kee, then sixty-seven, to organize the tribe formally and present a plea to the government for aid.

The tribal braves, numbering 49, formally elected Sun-Kee, then called Charley Thompson, as chief.

Immediately Chief Sun-Kee left for Washington, where he was granted an audience with Calvin Coolidge, then President. The chief asked for aid and obtained it.

Before the trip to Washington Chief Sun-Kee was gripped deeply over the poverty-stricken condition of the tribe. His hand found it difficult to eke a bare living from the sandy loam near Indian village.

Have New Outlook.

The Indians were backward and had no funds to buy modern farming equipment, but now, thanks to the courage of Chief Sun-Kee and the advice of Nekko Sl, they have a new outlook on life.

Farms yield good crops from sandy soil, and Indian Village has new homes, a hospital and new church and school buildings.

The Alabamas no longer have to move to more fertile lands, as did their forefathers. When the original band moved into Texas it settled near Peach Tree village in Tyler county. The Texas war for independence forced them to move, but they were friendly to Gen. Sam Houston and were rewarded in 1854 by the land grant upon which they now live.

Fain, the Alabamas' Little Chief, will rule until next January, when the tribe will elect one of its own blood to carry on the work of Sun-Kee, beloved chief.

Tuners Are Needed in Jews' Harp Manufacture

London.—There is a serious shortage of skilled tongue setters for Jews' harps in Britain.

This distressing fact is disclosed by the current number of Industrial Britain, a Journal printed in English, French and German by the Travel and Industrial Development Association of Great Britain, largely for guidance of overseas buyers.

Birmingham, which is the only city in the world where Jews' harps are made, has been enjoying a "boom" in the demand for this basic product.

But prospective players all over the world who have been taken with the urgent desire to manipulate this instrument are being kept waiting owing to the way in which the lack of tongue setters is holding up production.

These men, who are responsible for the adjustment of the metal strip which vibrates to produce the sound, have to be trained for several years. If the strip is the merest fraction of an inch out of adjustment the tone is ruined.

The demand is coming principally from the United States, where Jews' harp bands are becoming increasingly popular. One Birmingham firm is producing 100,000 harps a week, and the head of the firm recently has returned from America with an order for 100,000.

Super Clock Will Vary Only Fraction of Second

London.—A clock that will not lose or gain more than a fraction of a second in a year is to be installed at the Royal Observatory. It will be recognized as the world's super time-piece.

Controlled by electricity, its pendulum will swing in a partial vacuum at a constant temperature, and a series of electric impulses will be given out each time the pendulum swings. The electric impulses will control the dials and mechanism.

IMPATIENTLY Louise shoved the steaming pans and kettles into the warming oven. Looking down the driveway as she had done for almost two hours, she exclaimed:

"Of course Horton called that he might be late. But what is keeping sister and Hal, and Aunt Jen, Uncle Jim, Betty and Clyde? Six people invited to a Christmas dinner and all of them late! Accident? Surely not all of them in a heap along the roadside unless each bumped into the other hurrying because they are late to our dinner!" Louise was smiling even before a knock sent her outside.

"Horton, please drive me to Lorton crossroads. Maybe we'll meet sister and Hal. Maybe they will know why the others are delayed. Sort of a news center at the crossroads, anyway."

"Pshaw! Don't worry. They probably think you will not have dinner promptly at 1 o'clock."

"But I told each one that we would have dinner promptly because I thought you boys might wish to hear the program at Baxter. Do you suppose they have all gone to the festival before coming here?"

"That's it, exactly! Let's go, too! Then we can all come home together to a grand Christmas reunion dinner," Horton interrupted.

"Come home to cold turkey, dressing, and potatoes reunion dinner, you mean," Louise snapped.

Hurrying home and eating lunch, Horton, with Louise a bit reluctant, started for Baxter, where a special festival of Christmas music and drama, an annual community affair, for many years, be-

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

WHOOPIING-COUGH PERTUSSUS

Bad company for the youngsters—and not by any means good for the grown-ups. As old as the hills, its cause is still an undiscovered element, perhaps it has not been considered a serious menace to the life of the child. I have known many families in the earlier day that paid little attention to the disease among the little ones, so they just "whooped it out" until recovery came—somehow.

Whooping-cough is contagious. I would feel better if it were quarantined, in the hope of blotting it out. It may indeed produce derangement of the air passages in the lungs, dilate them and leave the lung abnormal until the effects are outgrown. Very few remedies, outside of nursing, do any good. A little of some sedative cough-syrup should be administered to quiet, if possible, the paroxysms and lessen their force.

Feed the child good, easily-digested, nourishing food. You cannot "break up" whooping-cough. The best you can do is to let it run its course. Once over with it, the patient is considered immune from further attack.

An old remedy that has not yet been disproven is quinine. A good quinine ointment, ten grains to the ounce of benzoinated lard, and spread on a cloth as a plaster, may be laid or worn on the child's chest.

'THE CALLING OF DAN MATHEWS'

A picture to be judged by you personally, as all have read the story.

Change it every two days. It has been proven, I think, that it tends to prevent dilatation of the air-passages and, consequently weakening of the structures composing the breathing apparatus.

Sedative cough syrups may contain bromide, or tincture of red onion, or of humulus, (hops) or very minute doses of ipecac. But not enough to nauseate.

Keep the little one in out of bad weather or night air. Violent exercise will aggravate the paroxysms. Forbid it. Keep the little sufferer quiet. See your family doctor often—and do the best you can.
