Fulton Bank Opens Christmas Club Fund For People

Offers Opportunity For Weekly Savings To Provide Money Next Christmas For Gifts

For the first time in many years, thrifty and forward-looking people of Fulton and vicinity will have an opportunity to join a Christmas Savings Club in order that they may have a special fund next Christmas with which to purchase gifts, according to an announcement this week by Russell Pitchford of the Fulton Bank.

"What a wonderful feeling to walk up to our bank window and receive a big fat check with which to do your Christmas shopping," Mr. Pitchford states. "We urged that you join our Christmas club membership list now and be assured of an even merrier Christmas next year. We have inaugurated the Christmas Club after many of our patrons and friends have expressed a desire that such a fund be organized. This club is divided into six classes as follows:

"25c Class pays $12.50; 50c Class pays $25.00; $1.00 Class pays $50.00; $2.00 Class pays $100.00; $3.00 Class pays $150.00; $5 Class pays $250.00. The Christmas Club starts Saturday, December 28, 1946, and closes December 6th, 1947, just in time to do your Christmas shopping."

Mrs. William Moore Takes Life With Gun

Father Killed Mother, Then Hanged Self

DRESDEN, Tenn. — Mrs. William Moore of Sharon, whose father killed her mother and later committed suicide in his jail cell this Fall, took her own life with a shotgun Sunday morning, police reported. She was 31.

Police Chief Wright of Sharon said the death would be listed as a suicide.

Mrs. Moore, according to the report, saw her son and husband off to church Sunday morning. She then wrote a note, asking her husband not to let the boy enter the house and find her body, and pinned the note on the front door.

Chief Wright said she fired a 410 shotgun charge into her body and was dead when her husband returned home with their 11-year son, Billy Joe.

Mrs. Moore, the chief said, was manager of the variety store where her father, Cage Vowell, shot and killed her mother. Vowell escaped the scene in an automobile and attempted to kill himself with an overdose of sleeping tablets. Officers, however, found him asleep, revived him and placed him in jail.

On the eve of his scheduled trial, Vowell looped his belt over the ceiling bars of his cell and hanged himself.

The death of her parents, and her own poor health, were given as the probable motive.

Services will be held at the Moore home at 2 Monday with the Rev. S. O. Paynes officiating. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery at Sharon.

In addition to her husband and son, Mrs. Moore leaves a sister, Mrs. Milton Roberts of Sharon.

The Cayce Bees and the Tigers played Fulton's Pups and Bulldogs a doubleheader basketball game here Friday night. Cayce's second team won 23-21 over the Fulton Pups, while the varsity squad from Cayce defeated the Bulldogs 25-20.

The Pups were in the lead through the first three quarters, but the Cayce Bees surged ahead in a last quarter rally to defeat the local second team.

Again a last quarter rally won the game for the Cayce Tigers, as the Bulldogs dropped behind.

If you hate work and admit it, at least you're honest. Of course there are those who like it and they are beyond enlightenment.

State Farm Bureau Convention Jan. 8-19

The largest crowd in history is expected to attend the annual convention of the Kentucky Farm Bureau Federation, which is to be held Jan. 8-19 in the Brown and Seelbach hotels, Louisville, says J. E. Sanford, Louisville, Federation executive secretary. That means there will be more than 2,000 to take in some part of the three day session.

As near as we can tell now there will be upwards of 740 authorized men delegates and 102 women delegates. These are just the voting delegates, and many more than these always attend one or more sessions, Sanford declared.

Delegates and visitors will come from at least 102 counties in the state having Farm Bureaus. Some interested individuals who want a unit in their community may attend from the 18 unorganized counties. All of which are in the eastern mountainous section of the state.

Mr. Stanford warned that any one expecting to attend and remain overnight in Louisville should have definite arrangements made for a place to stay before coming. Hotel accommodations are still crowded, and the executive secretary urged expectant visitors to make reservations as early as possible.

The day before the convention opens, the Board of Directors of both the Federation and the Farm Bureau Insurance Company will hold sessions. The Resolutions committee will also hold a meeting on this day, Jan. 7.

The general session of the convention will open at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday, Jan. 8, in the Brown Hotel. At noon there will be a luncheon meeting of the officers and delegates of the Associated Women in the main ballroom of the Seelbach hotel, and a luncheon meeting of the Farm Bureau insurance agents in the junior ball room of the Seelbach.

The annual meeting of the Associated Women will be held immediately following the luncheon. The principal speakers will be Mrs. Charles W. Sewell, Chicago, administrative director of the Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau, and Harry W. Schacter, Louisville, president of the Committee for Kentucky.

The same afternoon all the commodity conferences except tobacco will open sessions at 1:30 o'clock. All conferences and meetings will adjourn at 4:30 p. m. to permit delegates to attend the tobacco conference, which is to begin at that time.

Special Christmas Programs Sunday By The Fulton Churches

Good Crowds Turned Out For Holiday Services; Former Fultonians Visited With Friends

The birth of Christ was fittingly observed here last Sunday, when the various churches of Fulton conducted special programs in observance of Christmas. Many out-of-town guests and friends were among the crowds which attended the holiday services.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

Special programs were presented at both the morning and evening services at the First Methodist church last Sunday. The morning services started at 10:50, and Christmas hymns were sung by the congregation, with the choir rendering the anthem, "A Song That Will Forever Ring." The sermon topic was "Did It Happen?"

An anthem, "Fairer Lord Jesus", marked the opening of the evening service. Congregational hymns followed. The sermon topic for the evening was, "Behold the Lamb of God."

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The recording system, with its amplifier, broadcast holiday carols from the tower of the First Baptist church Sunday morning. The amplification system has been improved, and now music and other programs may be heard in the church auditorium and class room. Christmas carols and classical music were played to add a touching appeal to the Christmas program. Rev. Bradley, the pastor, and William Scott, assistant superintendent of Sunday School, extended season's greetings to all departments of the Sunday School.

Special Christmas programs were conducted by each department. Gifts were distributed in the Junior Department. At 11 o'clock a special Christmas message was delivered by the pastor. Vesper services were held at five o'clock, followed by the Baptist Training Union. Afterwards members made a tour of the city singing Christmas carols.

FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Regular services were conducted Sunday morning at 9:45 at the First Christian church, with morning worship at 11 o'clock.

A special program was planned Christmas eve, Tuesday night, at 7:30 o'clock. "The Birth of Christ", a technicolor motion picture, was shown by the Rev. K. A. Oakes, pastor of the Nashville Christian church.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

All services at the Church of the Nazarene last Sunday were conducted around the Christmas theme. Special singing featured the opening of the Sunday school, with Garrett Brundige, superintendent, in charge. "The Prince of Peace," was the subject of the sermon delivered by the pastor at 11 o'clock. "His Name Is Jesus," was the sermon topic at 7:30 p.m.

A special Christmas program was presented Monday at 7:30 p.m., including singing of Christmas carols, special vocal numbers, and a pageant by the young people. The program was closed with the exchange of gifts.

WINTER FLOWERS NEED CARE

The Christmas poinsettia will hold its beauty longer if it is kept where the temperature is about 60 to 65 degrees and where it will get an hour or two of sunshine, says N. R. Elliott, expert in horticulture at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and Home Economics. It should be watered daily. If the flower pot of earth is about two quarts in size, a cup of water will not be too much.

House plants generally need extra care during the months when heating plants are going full tilt, and should be watered a little every day.

WILLIAM M. JOHNSON NOW PARATROOPER IN JAPAN

With the 8th Army in Japan—Pvt. William M. Johnson, qualified as a US Army paratrooper on Nov. 14 after completing five jumps from an airplane while in flight at the 11th Airborne Division Jump School, Sendai, Japan.

During the first week the student follows a schedule made up of calisthenics, tumbling, mock door (training within an airplane fuselage teaching the men proper procedure relevant to standing in the door, and the correct body position in leaving the plane) mock tower (which simulates the opening shock of a parachute), and the suspended harness which shows the new recruit means of controlling the chute while in the air.

The second week of jump school consists of five day-time jumps at an altitude of 1200 feet.

Johnson after completing his rigorous training is now entitled to sport the "boots and wings" of the Parachute Infantry and is entitled to $50 additional pay a month.

ANOTHER CIO PIPE DREAM

As wages have gone up during the year 1946 many prosperous industrial concerns have ceased to operate full time because they could not show a profit. Other industries have kept out of the red through tax credits. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States reports huge losses in the automobile industry which it says was the result of production far below expectations due to strikes, material shortage and reconversion delays.

The Chamber of Commerce described as a "mirage" CIO claims that wages can be increased—maybe as much as 25 per cent—without offsetting price boosts. On the contrary, the additional wage increases may force both labor and goods out of the market, is the Chamber's warning to the Nation.

IT WAS three nights before Christmas and Margaret was packing to go home. Contrary to traditional sentiment, she was not happy about it, for she had planned to stay in New York with Ralph. With considerable forethought she had even planned the day; church in the morning, Christmas dinner with Amy and Bill, a walk down Fifth avenue at twilight, a snack of supper, and the theater.

But Ralph had been invited to a "swell" house party in Philadelphia. Margaret slammed down the top of her suitcase. She could have borne up under a Christmas with a lonely mother, or a widowed sister. "What about me?" she had longed to cry out, but she had, instead, smiled and said that it was just too marvelous, wondering meanwhile if Mr. Johnson would let her have an extra day off. Ralph had only to go to Philadelphia, two hours away, while she had no one within 500 miles!

Several hours later she stood on the porch of a white frame house.

Now she was ready, bag in hand, for the midnight train. As she waited for the taxicab, she smoothed her black tailored woolen frock over her slim hips. If New York hadn't been particularly kind to her, it had at least taught her how to dress!

She couldn't sleep on the train. Closing her eyes, she saw the cluttered desk which she had left at Roswell's Advertising agency, and Mr. Johnson's kindly face when he had told her to go home for Christmas. She saw Ralph's desk in the manager's office, Ralph dancing in Philadelphia, Ralph opening Christmas gifts—and just Ralph, with whom she would never again share good times.

There was a three-hour wait for the local train at Pittsburgh, but Margaret was too tired and depressed to leave the station. After buying a magazine featuring an article on men, and an astrological delineation of her birthsign, she settled herself into the practical task of trying to determine her future in this most unpredictable world. Several hours later, not much wiser but much more weary, she stood on the porch of a white frame house.

The door opened and Margaret blinked.

"I win!" shouted Ralph triumphantly. "She came on the midnight train!"

Mrs. Brown rushed out to the hallway and enfolded her daughter in an ample, motherly embrace. "Margaret! Why child, you're a sight! Your face is as black as coal."

Margaret withdrew herself from her mother's arms and looked at the two of them coolly. "Well, if it isn't asking too much, just what is this? Not a weekend in Philadelphia, I believe!"

Ralph took her bag and magazine and helped her out of her coat. "Don't be like that, Margaret! I bet your mother a box of candy against a mince pie that you'd come down on the midnight train."

"And what, exactly, are you doing here?"

"Margaret!" chided her mother.

"I invited myself. A surprise for you, and then I wanted to talk to your Dad about something."

Ralph was awkwardly turning the magazine in his hands. "Jumping fishes!" he exclaimed. "Look at the little red book!" He opened it to a center page, and read: "The natives of this sign are more than likely to have short tempers."

"Give it to me!"

Ralph held it tantalizingly out of reach and Margaret stamped her foot. "Ralph Wells," she said, "I come home for a rest and the first thing you do is make fun of me. If I have a complete breakdown it's your fault. Give me that book!"

"There, there," comforted her mother. "You go upstairs and get washed. You'll feel better."

Margaret started up the stairs, then turned in sudden remembrance. "Are you staying over Christmas?" she asked Ralph.

"I had expected to."

"You might as well. There's a dance Christmas Eve."

At the top of the steps she turned again. "And don't forget, half of that pie is mine. After all, I did the coming home!"

"Okay."

"She's tickled to death to see you," whispered Mother Brown cautiously. She patted his arm, and Ralph understood.

FARM LAND PRICES POSE NEW PROBLEM IN 1947 PLANNING

Know Risks Of Burdensome Debts, Economist Says.

The fact that farm real estate prices in Tennessee are now about two and one-fourth what they were in 1939 should serve as a warning to prospective land buyers, says

E. P. Callahan, Extension economist with the U-T College of Agriculture.

Farm land prices in Tennessee are almost 10 percent above the peak reached in the World War I period, Callahan points out. Since prices of farm land in the past have generally followed trends of farm product prices and farm income, the same pattern may be expected in the not too distant future, following World War II.

If prices of farm products and farm income should rise higher, farm real estate prices will follow reaching even higher levels than at present, economists say. However, if there is a break in farm commodity prices and farm income as may be expected at any time, land prices will decline soon thereafter. The drop in land prices and commodity prices will not come about the same time. Possibly land prices will not go down as much as commodity prices, but the trend will be toward the level of farm product prices.

The rate of trading in farm real estate in Tennessee is still high, many of the sales being for cash. However, on the average, about 50 farm per county were mortgaged during the past year for more than they were worth in 1940. These mortgages are likely to become burdensome when prices of farm products fall, economists say.

A woman of 42 is not old—bless my soul! I'll leave it to any woman of that age.

Silo Simpkins Says

Good pasture is a health resort for pigs.

Green pastures mean fewer greenbacks spent for protein supplements.

Lack of planning is one mistake which scarcely any farm is big enough to cover up.

Cattle grubs not only cause holes in hides; they open the way to losses in livestock profits.

Yousters are warned that firecrackers can be an expensive means of getting a finger removed.

It is difficult for a dairyman to alibi for not supplying his cows with plenty of fresh water.

The holiday season is a good time to "take care of" old hens which haven't been "laying for you."

The man who says he is going to raise his home meat supply—and does it—does not have to eat his words.

Purchase of high priced farm land should be made with the realization that debts thus incurred may have to be paid, with income from bad as well as good years, economists say.

BONDURANTS OBSERVED 50TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Bondurant of Hickman recently enjoyed their 50th wedding anniversary. The happy couple are 74 and 71 respectively, and both are in good health considering their advanced years.

Union City, Dec. 20, 1896. To this union six children were born as follows: Two sons, Milton of Hickman and Raymond of Martin; four daughters, Mrs. Mina Ferguson of Fulton, Mrs. Ruby Williams and Mrs. Violet Williams of Hickman, and Mrs. Monta Peoples of Fulton.

The Veterans who are in office all over the country are about to enter a political war that will leave scars also.

Be just and fear not; let all the ends thou aimest at, be thy country's, thy God's and truth's.—

JESUS, THE PERFECT MAN

(Written by C. P. J. Money for The Commercial Appeal of Dec. 22, 1912)

There is no other character in history like that of Jesus.

As a preacher, as a doer of things, as a philosopher, no man ever had the sweep and vision of Jesus.

A human analysis of the human actions of Jesus brings to view a rule of life that is amazing in its perfect detail.

The system of ethics Jesus taught during His earthly sojourn 2000 years ago was true then, has been true in every century since and will be true forever.

Photo was a great thinker and learned in his age, but his teachings did not stand the test of time. In big things and in little things time and human experience have shown that he erred.

Marcus Aurelius touched the reflective mind of the world, but he was as cold and austere as brown marble.

The doctrine of Confucius gave a great nation moral and mental dry rot.

The teachings of Buddha resulted in mental and moral chaos that makes India derelict.

MOHAMMED offered a system of ethics which was adopted by millions of people. Now their children live in deserts where once there were cities, along dry rivers where once there was moisture, and in the shadows of gray, barren hills where once there was greenness.

Thomas Aquinas was a profound philosopher, but parts of his system have been abandoned.

Francis of Assisi was Christlike in his saintliness, but in some things he was childish.

Thomas A. Kempis' Imitation of Christ is a thing of rare beauty and sympathy, but it is, as its name indicates, only an imitation.

Sir Thomas More's Utopia is yet a dream that cannot be realized.

Lord Bacon writing on chemistry and medicine under the glasses of the man working in a 20th century laboratory is puerile.

The world's most learned doctors until 150 years ago gave dragon's blood and the ground dried tails of lizards and shells of eggs for certain ailments. The great surgeons a hundred years ago bled a man if he were wounded.

Napoleon had the world at his feet for four years, and when he died the world was going on its way as if he had never lived.

Jesus taught little as to property because He knew there were things of more importance than property. He measured property and life, the body and soul, at their exact relative value. He taught much as to character, because character is of more importance than dollars.

Other men taught us to develop systems of government. Jesus taught us as to perfect the minds of men. Jesus looked to the soul, while other men dwelled on material things.

After the experience of 2000 years no man can find a flaw in the governmental system as outlined by Jesus.

Czar and Kaiser, President and Socialist, give to its complete merit their admiration.

No man today, no matter whether he follows the doctrine of Mills, Marx or George as to property, find a false principle in Jesus' theory of property.

In the duty of a man to his fellows, no socialist has ever approximated the perfection of the doctrine laid down by Jesus in His Sermon on the Mount.

Not all the investigations of chemists, not all the discoveries of explorers, not all the experiences of rulers, not all the historical facts that go to make up the sum of human knowledge on this day in 1912 are in contradiction to one word uttered or one principle laid down by Jesus.

The human experiences of 2000 years show that Jesus never made a mistake. Jesus never uttered a doctrine that was true at that time and then became obsolete.

Jesus spoke the truth; He lived the truth; and truth is eternal.

History has no record of any other man leading a perfect life or doing everything in logical order. Jesus is the only person whose every action and whose every utterance strike a true note in the heart and mind of every man born of woman. He never said a foolish thing, never did a foolish act, and never dissembled.

No poet, no dreamer, no philosopher loved humanity with the love that Jesus bore toward all men.

THE SETH THOMAS CLOCK

The little essay is in honor of the Seth Thomas clock that ticked away the minutes in my childhood. It happens to be the only antique that I own, a constant reminder of a long time ago. It is quite fitting that I should write about it here, for this is its one-hundredth birthday, as it was bought in 1846, two years before mother was born. In 1871, when she and father were married, the clock, already regarded as old, was purchased from its original owners. Wherever they moved from then on the old clock was always a part of the cargo. Two or three places at Providence (not the town in Webster county but one in Calloway county), two place in Fidelity, and finally in the house in the woods between Fidelity and Sulphur Springs the old clock lived its life, if that is the correct way to describe an object that seems almost human.

All my childhood it sat on the mantel in our living room, ticking rather rheumatically. Long before I left home, it had become so worn internally that it had to be propped up on one side to make its old wheels catch. Many a person who was not accustomed to its idiosyncrasies noticed its leaning like the Tower of Pisa and told us, as if we did not already know the clock and its oddities. Because of this one-sided position, I suppose, the tick and the tock were somewhat foreshortened, so that it was more like tick-tock, with the accent on the second syllable.

The original heavy weights are still in the old clock, even though they have not been in use for thirty years or so. The dial still has the place where the enamel is peeled off, where Father, in trying to warm the old wheels by holding a firebrand near the face, unintentionally melted off the paint or enamel. The original diamond-shaped designing of the glass of the door is just as I remember it in our home near Fidelity. I used to try to attach some meaning to this design, but I have forgotten what it was.

There are no drugs in the clock now, as it sits on a bookcase in our living room, but the custom of keeping scraps of left-over drugs in clocks probably gave me some of the queer feelings I have about Seth Thomas clocks wherever I see them. It was a forbidden object for children to touch or handle partly because of the value of the clock as a mechanism and partly because of the danger from the drugs. All the wild tales of suicides who resorted to the miniature drugstore that I would have hardly touched the clock on a bet.

Winding the clock always interested me as a child. I had usually gone to rest on my trundle bed when father wound the clock as his nightly duty. That was left to him, even though he might be away on a far-away call. There was a feeling of sadness when mother or one of the older children had to wind the clock, for it meant that father might not get home that night or not at all until after we had all gone to sleep. I felt uncommonly big when I was allowed to stand up in a chair before the hot fire and wind the weights up. The heat of the fire and the fear of the drugs, I suppose, made me turn the crank fast. No amount of poetizing can make you feel, I know, the poetic thrill that I knew when father wound the clock.

The striking device is still as musical as ever. How lonely I used to feel when I heard the clock strike when everybody else but me was sound asleep! The wood of the clock, always covered up by innumerable layers of paint and varnish, has been restored to its original walnut and mahogany colors and is really beautiful. All the years that the clock was wrapped up in its coats of paint and varnish have sat well on the old object, for it has thus been protected from wear. In a way I am seeing it as nobody has seen it since the 1940's, when the natural color of the wood was felt to be sufficiently beautiful without a daub of paint. Thus times and styles change and change back again.

Humanity is a duty made known and enjoined by revelation, and ever keeping pace with the progress of Christianity. — Sydney Smith.

It will never do to be behind the times in things most essential, which proceed from the standard of right that regulates human destiny. — Mary Baker Eddy.

If you like cold weather, Fall is the most optimistic season. But if you dislike school it's a mighty pessimistic season.

GOD IGNORED

It is worthy of serious reflection that the "United Nations" began their meetings in New York without benefit of prayer. In fact, the name of God was mentioned by only one speaker. President Truman concluded his address with the expressed hope that Almighty God would bless the efforts of the delegates.

The excuse was made that UN members hold so many divergent religious ideas that it is impossible to settle on a satisfactory form of prayer. If these astute diplomats cannot get together on a simple form of prayer, one wonders how they can work out a satisfactory peace formula. It is assumed that these men qualify as experts in adjusting divergent viewpoints.

Otherwise, they would scarcely be competent to undertake their delicate tasks of diplomacy.

So, in the supreme crises of mankind, apparently we must expect only human wisdom to be applied by the representatives of 51 nations. The only way we can compensate for this public ignoring of God, this cold-shouldering of spiritual values, is for us to make up the deficiency by redoubling our own individual prayers.

In these circumstances one thinks of Benjamin Franklin, one of the wisest men in American history. While not a particularly pious man in the usual sense of an orthodox churchgoer, he was deeply concerned about the new nation that was being formed. At the Constitutional Convention in a solemn speech he said: "God governs in the affairs of men. And if a sparrow can not fall to the ground without His notice, is it probable an empire can raise without His aid?"

He concluded that address by making the following motion: "I therefore beg leave to move that henceforth prayers, imploring the assistance of Heaven and its blessings on our deliberations, be held in this assembly every morning before we proceed to business; and that one or more of the clergy of this city be requested to officiate in that service."

If prayer was important in the birth of one nation (especially considering what that nation became) it would seem that prayer would also help to create One World.

Despite our many faults we Americans have always held to faith in God as the directing force of our country. We believe that God has a powerful place in the affairs of men. The tradition of our Forefathers who founded this nation on a religious basis, is still treasured by modern Americans.

Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, the chaplain of the U. S. Senate, every day at noon opens the Senate session with prayer. He accompanies the Vice-President (or, as it now is, the President pro tempore) to the Senate Chamber. The chaplain mounts to dais, while the presiding officer stands with bowed head, one step lower than the chaplain. After the prayer the chaplain comes down and the presiding officer steps up to the dais. The symbolism is significant. The representative of God takes the highest place, while the representative of the people stands humbly below awaiting God's judgment and guidance.

Perhaps it is for this reason despite all our fumbling and our wrongdoing, God still blesses us with manifold and great mercies.

We Americans have pledged ourselves to world cooperation. We should resolutely uphold our convictions by acknowledging God as THE guiding power in world affairs. Let us remember always, as the Bible declares, that "the people that do know their God shall be strong and do exploits." (Daniel 11:32)

THE AMERICAN WAY

A NEW WORLD

Faith in God built America. That fact is something that always should be remembered. It is especially significant at this time when men are gathered in America from the four corners of the earth, in earnest endeavor to build a new world. The same God who helped the Founding Fathers set up what has become the world's greatest nation, most certainly should be called upon to guide the UN delegates in their deliberations.

It might surprise many of the UN delegates to learn that "The American Way" is nothing more nor less than a political, social and economic application of the teachings of the Bible. The printing of the Bible in the 15th Century heralded the beginning of the end of autocratic government. Men learned from the Good Book that man is created "in the image of God," and reasoned that having this spiritual heritage, they were meant to be free.

Thus fortified, a number of these freedom seeking men set out in little ships to cross a vast sea, to establish their own commonwealth in a new land. They were not rich men. They had little of this world's goods but they had faith in God, and so had faith in themselves.

They went to work. By industry, intelligence and character they began to get ahead. They made money, and being temperate and clean living men, they did not dissipate their substance in profligacy and wasteful habits. They were pious and frugal; they put their savings back into business, where it further increased, thus producing further capital. This capital, in turn, provided ever increasing employment. As working men saved, they too, went into business for themselves and hired others who looked forward to the time when they or their sons would also own their own businesses. (To want to own one's own business is a deepdyed American trait, and a good one.)

Successive generations of Americans climbed the ladder of success. No place or position in America was denied any American boy who, armed with a strong faith in God's help and confidence in his own abilities, went out to "make his fortune" as the old Horatio Alger books used to say. In America it was proved it is only a step from overalls to tuxedo, and that in his country one garb is as good as the other.

Thus, America developed through religious faith—a religious faith which teaches that the human soul is supreme, even immortal—a religious faith that leads to the conviction that every individual has unlimited possibilities. As long as we cling to that faith, his nation will continue its forward progress will go on to better and better things for all the American people.

Yes, the delegates to the United Nations can learn much from the origin and history of the United States—much that could help them in formulating a pattern for an orderly world society, with good things for all the people of the earth, and permanent universal peace. What God did for America. He is willing and able to do for all the nations of the world—with His aid and guidance we can have that NEW WORLD that every decent human being desires.

Here we are again with the sun about to rise upon a brand-new year.
May 1947 be filled with many happy days for you and your loved ones.

TOOTH DENTIST

Some years ago one of my graduate students found the double negative the most common error among his rural high school students. That is to be expected, for his rural county retains many of the older idioms of the language.

The double negative has, like lots of things now out of style, excellent ancestry. It was present in the oldest form of the language, it was used extensively in Middle English, and it was by no means to be laughed at until recent generations. In another way I might say that the double negative has existed ages longer than the single negative, though style decrees now that one is enough. What would you do for flavor if an unwashed, barefooted youngster, riding a mule barebacked, should say on being asked what he had been doing: "Not much of anything"? Or what would you think if the same boy declared that he did not have any money for the picnic?

One of my best friends is a dentist, a "tooth dentist", if you please. I would like to know the workings of the mind of one of his patients when he asked the dentist where he might find a good "eye dentist." Maybe "dentist" means to the unthinking a sort of specialist. Thus there might be a "throat" dentist, an "eye" dentist, an "ear" dentist. If "Pharaoh," the name of a man, becomes the name of a ruler—and "Caesar" had that same history—why not "dentist" for special doctor, who treats not all of you but certain specified parts?

The tendency to use doubles is by no means dead. The teachers may rage against the double negative, but certain expressions have become highly literary, though they are in every way closely related to the crude doubles that suggest to many people the folk.

From the earliest days of the English language there has been a tendency to say things in double fashion, "time and tide," for example. Some scholars have said that our use of two words for one was greatly influenced by our borrowing so many words from French and other languages and using our native or simple word along with a more learned one. However, this double usage was present long before French influenced our language much. Our language feeling seems to demand an extra word, as if to make things more plain or more dignified. Certainly a desire to intensify a word is old, as witness our double comparatives and superlatives. Even Shakespeare and many another writer has used such expressions as "most unkindest" or "more recent." It is small wonder, then, that the folks use such expressions.

The language of remote areas and some not so remote are still full of doubles. People use a "chopping ax" and shoot with a "shooting gun." A woman who has lost her husband is, almost everywhere, including the Bible (I Kings 17:9), called a "widow woman." So common is this expression that it probably causes no notice when the passage about Elijah is read in church. Some of our neighbors used to call a widow a "widow man," certainly a god match for "widow woman." "Good providers," as they used to be called, saw to it that their families had plenty of "ham meat." I hope that they are still doing just that, though I fear that meat of any sort is a bit scarce or dear. So many people, with or without education, say "off of," "inside of," and "outside of," that a case might be made out for these words. In some areas only women milk the "cow brutes," for such a task is regarded as sissy for he-men. Everybody knows "hound dog," and there is some excuse for the double word when you consider how many kinds of dogs there are besides hounds. "As hungry as a hound" sounds down right literary; "as hungry as a hound dog" sounds really hungry, or, better still, "hungry."

WEEK'S BEST RECIPE:

Vegetable Potpourri: 4 medium onions, 3 T margarine, 3 small tomatoes, 1 lb. green string beans, 1 c celery, 1 T salt, 1 can corn, 2 tomatoes sectioned, 1 chicken bouillon cube, 1-4 c boiling water. Slice onions in 1-4-in. slices. Saute in margarine until soft. Peel tomatoes, cut in pieces, add to onions. Add string beans cut in 2-in. pieces and cook together for 15 minutes. Cut celery, add with corn and salt to cooked vegetables. Cover and cook about 20 min. until all is tender. Place 2 tomatoes cut in sections on top, add soup cube dissolved in hot water. Cover and cook 4-5 min. Serve hot. Yield: 6 servings.

Why is it that tomorrow is so full of good working hours?

Why is it that some people know the best way to do everything?

Why do many of these pretty young things marry men with so much money?

The best way to keep from being tired all the time is to get your rest at the right time.

The team that doesn't play to win but plays the game on principles, usually loses.

The companies that sell cough drops should pay good football teams a subsidy.

The way some of these co-eds look at football games, it's a wonder anyone knows the score.

The best way to get good meat at a reasonable price is to buy a hog or a steer and a sharp axe.

We sometimes wonder why everybody takes great delight in chasing fire engines but it is fun.

Some people have gorgeous clothes and others say they have none. Or are they the same people?

We sometimes wonder why the home team plays so much better and still manages to lose the game.

It might be that the pendulum between labor and management has reached the top of its swing for labor.

A farm and home equipment show again will be a feature. Included will be many labor-saving devices and equipment for both the farm and the home. A fashion show will be included in the program for women.

Prominent among speakers will be Harry W. Schacter of Louisville chairman of the Committee for Kentucky; C. W. Holiday rides with the Illinois Central trains. Announcement was recent made by A. C. Lounge and parlor cars of the Creole, Night Diamond, Louisiana and Land of Corn were similarly decorated.

Christmas wreaths and other festive trimmings were used in decorating dining-cars.
