FULTON LOAN WINS IN COURT APPEAL

A recent decision handed down by the Court of Appeals of Kentucky, favored the Fulton Building & Loan Association in the suit brought by Claude Linton. This decision by the highest court in the state has been looked forward to by citizens of this community, and placed the stamp of approval on all institutions of this kind throughout Kentucky.

In this issue of The News an advertisement setting out the value of building and loan shares and pointing out the security offered in this form of investment. The local association was organized in 1913, and since that time has enjoyed a healthy growth by conservative management. Starting with 27 stockholders, membership has grown to 350 at present, and during the past five years has matured and paid to stockholders $726,600.

"This association is a member of the Federal Home Loan Bank of Cincinnati, which is the same as the Federal Reserve Bank for banks and savings institutions," it is regularly examined by the banking department. Its affairs are in the best possible shape and it is making money. It is economically managed and solicits your patronage. Inquiries are invited and will be given courteous attention by its officers."

T. M. Franklin is president of the association; J. E. Fall, secretary; treasurer: W. C. Reed, assistant secretary. The board of directors is composed of T. M. Franklin, I. H. Reed, Vodie Hardin, E. F. L. Browder, N. G. Cooke, R. H. White, J. D. Davis, W. P. Murrell.

Following adjournment of Circuit Court here Monday afternoon a group of ministers and citizens are reported before Judge L. L. Hindman and District Attorney Martin and asked that immediate action be taken to stop gambling in Fulton, with special reference to slot machines.

CITIZENS ASK COURT TO STOP GAMBLING

A. C. Baldridge said: "If it is lawful to operate these machines I am out of order; if it is unlawful, we ask the court to protect us and to see that these slot machines are taken out and kept out of Fulton. I believe that every right-thinking citizen will agree with me."

Rev. Woodrow Fuller, Rev. W. D. Ryan, Vodie Hardin and George Roberts spoke briefly before Judge Hindman. Commonwealth Attorney Flavis B. Martin stated that it was a violation of the law to operate the machines, and added that it was the duty of any peace officer to take up the machines and arrest the operator whenever and wherever they are seen in operation.

Thirteen indictments are now pending in this term of court against operators of these machines.

NEW PASTOR COMES TO FULTON CHURCH OF CHRIST

REGIONAL TOURNEY IN FULTON MAR. 13-14

Fulton was awarded the Regional basketball tournament, which is to be held at the Fulton High school Gymnasium on Friday and Saturday, March 13-14, with eight outstanding teams from the Purchase District participating. Fifty-five schools, in the Purchase, including those of the Fulton and Hickman Counties, will hold district tournaments on March 6-7 to weed out the best teams and runners-up for the regional meeting here the following week. The outstanding team winning here will go to the state tournament, according to J. O. Lewis, superintendent of Fulton schools and manager of the regional tournament.

Fulton Buildings will play in the District Tournament at Hickman Friday and Saturday, March 6-7. Fulton faces a hard schedule the rest of the season as follows:

MRS. J. W. SCOTT VIC-TIM OF PNEUMONIA

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Traywick Scott, 72, were held at Bolivar, Tenn., Friday afternoon, with interment in the city cemetery.

Mrs. Scott was ill only a few days with pneumonia, her death being quite a shock to her relatives and friends. She was a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian church at Hickory Valley, Tenn., since early childhood, was a true christian character, a wonderful mother and devoted companion. Her departure was doubly sad, as she leaves her heart-broken husband almost on the eve of their 49th wedding anniversary (Monday), to find life's path way alone. The entire community extends tender sympathy to this aged companion and prays God's tenderest blessings abide with him, always.

A devoted daughter, Mrs. G. W. Porter of Bolivar, Tenn., four grandchildren, one great grand child and Mrs. Poyner DeMyer of this city, besides a host of friends mourn her passing.

T. W. OVERHEY

T. W. Overhey, 54, died Monday at 7:00 P.M. at his home on Route 2, Fulton, following a short illness.

Mr. Overhey was the first man to operate a grocery store in the Meadows block here, where he was in business several years. He left Fulton in 1900 and went to Jewell, Tenn., but returned to this community three years ago.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mattie Overhey; six sons, Q. T. G. C. J. H. Coolidge, Gilmer, Charles; five daughters, Mrs. Grenada Fortner, Mrs. Fern Fortner of Fulton; Ella, May and Evangeline who reside at home.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon at Wesley church by Rev. Cayce Pentecost, with interment at the cemetery there in charge of Hornbeak Funeral Home.

WITH FULTONIANS AT MURRAY STATE COLLEGE

By One of Them

The masked ball given by the Portfolio Art Club, the night of January 18 made history as the most colorful and elaborate social event the college has ever seen. Quite a few Fultoniens were among the 250 persons present. Those from Fulton who were costumed included: Frances Poyner as a Scotch highland lassie, Katherine Bondurant in hoop-skirts, Jan Puckett as a Turkish dancer, Doris Bushart as a daisy girl in yellow organdy, and Frances Cook Walker as a colonial girl.

Murray Collegians are still jubilant over the 31-15 victory over their greatest rivals, the Western Hill-toppers from Bowling Green January 15 on the Murray basketball floor. Murray has another wonder team it seems; at least, sports writers are calling it one of the most polished the college has ever had. At the time of this writing the Breds have not lost a game, having defeated Mississippi college, 41-32, Middle Tennessee, 57-31, Tennessee Polytechnic Institute 50-30, Western 31-15, Maryville, Mo., 45-31, and Union College of Barbourville 48-28. On Tuesday, January 21, they play the powerful Union University cagers, who defeated Ole Miss.

After all the prom queens, beauty queens, cotton queens, poker queens and what not that you have heard of, here's a new one to add to your list. The girls who work in the dormitory kitchens have selected Miss Dutch Tanner, Barlow sophomore, as "Kitchen Queen." Dutch is a room-mate of Mable Williamson, of Fulton.

The Murray Frosh basketball team presented a regular House of David appearance for about a week not long ago. They decided not to shave until they won a game, and as their first game was scheduled quite a bit later than their decision, a small stubble of whiskers accumulated before freshman coach John Miller gave in to the pleas of the girls and ordered the boys to shave.

"MAGNIFICENT OBSESSION" AT STRAND STARTING SUN. "Magnificent Obsession," the outstanding picture of the year, is showing at the Strand Theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, H. H. Russell, manager announces. It is filmed from the phenomenal best-selling novel by Lloyd C. Douglas and is a John M. Stahl production. A continuous show will run from 1:30 to 11 P.M. daily.

Irene Dunn and Robert Taylor head an all-star cast composed of Charles Butterworth, Betty Furness, Henry Armetta, Sara Haden and Ralph Morgan.

1,011 AUTO LICENSES SOLD IN THIS COUNTY

A report from the County Clerk's office today stated that 1,011 passenger car licenses have been sold, compared with 1,757 for last year.

PROMENADE DECK.

by Ishbel Ross

SYNOPSIS: . . . A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Marenia" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romance, and tragedy. Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls. . . . These characters are aboard the ship: Macduff, dour Scotchman, single, of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Lovat, gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife, and Peter, Captain Baring, master of the ship. . . .

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Sixth Instalment
"Well, I'm doing it. I'm painting a little, because I like to pass the time that way."

Macduff was charmed with Angela's way of tossing off her words. Here was a woman who might be worth her salt. She chatted about the Ganges, and gave him a lively picture of her own impressions that morning. Yes, she was an artist. He could tell that from her choice of words.

When Macduff was writing, he bothered little with externals, going in for sombre, philosophical stuff that some people seemed to like. It surprised him to see India through the sapient eyes of an intelligent woman. Soon he was talking himself, and marveling at his own fluency. For half an hour his companion sat back, entranced and amused, while he unburied. She lit a cigarette and watched him from under the brim of her hat. It must be the cocktails. He was off like an orator. There was nothing to do but listen, now that the floodgates were open. But would he ever come to the end of his sililoquy? Was he talking sense or nonsense? Angela realized that the man was simply unused to voicing his thoughts, although verbose, no doubt, on paper. She had heard vaguely of his books, but had never read anything that he had written. After this, she would try to get hold of them and see what they were like.

The other people in the room who knew them were watching their table with surprise.

"Ye gods!" said Johnny to Clare. "Watch Macduff talking to Mrs. Wynant."

"It's a miracle. I'd like to know what he's saying. It would be Mrs. Wynant who would get him to talk." "Won't you come with me to the river, Mr. Macduff?" Angela was saying, at the first break in their conversation. "I can't keep away. It's the most animated canvas I've ever seen in my life and I'm rather keen about masses of people."

"That's just where you're different from me," said Macduff, weighing his decision on whether to go with Angela or stay for a liqueur. "No, I won't. There's nothing I dislike so much as human beings, and I find it depressing to look at such thousands mucking about together." They went out to the veranda and he ordered liqueurs. Angela watched him, wondering if perfect frankness were not the cue in handling Macduff. She leaned towards him. "You're rather a myth on the boat," she laughed. "The man who must not be spoken to."

A deep roll of laughter shot surprisingly from his throat. "It's not on the boat alone—it's the way I live. I find that human contact's interfere with no's work and one's life."

"Then I can't understand why you travel around the world on a cruise boat. To escape from people on the Marenia is like trying to dodge bees in a hive."

"I came on a cruising boat because it takes me to out-of-the-way ports I'd never have been able to get to by any other means. Moreover, I've found all the isolation that I would get at home—at the least possible expense," Macduff finished, cannily.

Angela sighed and swung her parasol. "Sometimes I think one would be happier alone, in a world of one's own. The constant give and take of social relations wear one down."

Macduff's face was loosening in amiable lines, and she thought she detected a twinkle through his rimless spectacles. Or was it just the sun on the lens?

"I'm thinking that you're not very happy," he told her, surprisingly.

"Happy enough, Mr. Macduff, but wandering in my thoughts. To tell you the truth, they're in England with my husband and my home."

"Tell me about your home."

"I've never been able to conjure it up for anyone else, although it's so vivid in my own mind. It's a rambling house with gables, frightfully ancient, with bits that have been added on from time to time. The ceilings are low and beamed, and the dormer windows are tucked in odd places under the eaves. It's filled with pictures, ancient and modern, and my dog Jock patters all over it like a presiding Turk."

Angela stopped abruptly, thinking that she had been lacking in tact and reserve.

She had been lacking in tact and reserve. Angela stopped abruptly, thinking that she had been lacking in tact and reserve.

should admire them very much and fall in love with any number of them. They're intelligent, too. But I see it's a hopeless argument."

Macduff had lost the thread of the conversation, and seemed to be stumbling towards an important conclusion of his own. He was standing, looking down at her with an air of gloom. Angela gazed at him softly and he shifted his weight.

The sun was in his eyes, the garden was fragrant with blooms, the Union Jacks were still pleasantly warm in his stomach. He rubbed the back of his head meditatively and couldn't imagine why his feet were moving towards the river. What was the sense of going to the Ganges with a chance travelling acquaintance?

"How delightful of you to come with me to the river, Mr. Macduff," Angela's voice was gay with pleasure as she saw him falling into step. Her companion grunted and pulled on his pipe.

"We'll ride to Tiger Hill together to see the dawn over Mount Everest when we reach Darjeeling," he announced, amazed at his own desire to establish a deeper contact with the woman at his side.

"That will be splendid," she told him.

The afternoon sun fell in slanting rays over the Indian Ocean, shedding a flutter of gold on water that heaved in a darkening swell. The aquatic sports were about to begin in the swimming pool. Patty, brimming with energy, was diving repeatedly from the highest springboard.

"She was born to live in a swimming-suit," Jenny said, admiringly. "A genuine water-nymph!" Peter emarked, always appreciative of the manifestations of physical perfection.

Jenny saw that Clare and Patty were both in the race. It would be interesting to watch the two of them together, for they were evenly matched, in spite of the difference in their ages.

Clare was a gifted swimmer, and her speed and form were equal to the best that girls half her age could do. No woman on the boat could compete with her except Patty. Joan Foster was good, but she slept all day and took most of her swims late at night.

Clare was in tangerine, a brilliant flash in the clear water of the tank. It suited her dusky skin. Patty was in a striking green suit.

The whistle blew and the contestants were off, with orange and green in the lead. Clare tore through the water like a goldfish, using the long Australian crawl. Patty made better time with the American crawl.

Johnny was perched in a corner close to Angela. His face was set in anxious frowns, for he felt that he had something to do with him. Patty won the first heat. Clare the second; they seemed to be marvellously paired. Angela sat silent, thinking of Johnny and wondering whom he wanted to win.

Clare was leading now, but Patty was creeping up. Every stroke brought her nearer to the fleet orange figure. Patty was breathing easily and turning in the water with each long stroke.

Johnny's heart was pounding. Clare was losing. Did he want her to lose? He did not know. Patty was magnificent. He liked the clean sweep of her stroke. He remembered his college days, and his heart went out to Patty. He knew that she would root for him, but Clare he watched him.

But this was Patty's race. She must win! Johnny's throat was seamy, as it used to be when he tackled football.

Patty won, and, as she touched the end of the swimming pool, he hit his lips on a shout of jubilation. Angela felt his suppressed excitement and was suddenly sure of something that had puzzled her for weeks.

But it was Clare he went over to speak to. Clare he helped out of the water. "Good stuff, Patty!" whispered Johnny as she passed him on her way to the dressing-room. "You and I have a race pretty soon."

Patty laughed in her throat, tossed her cap and strode on. She felt robust and happy, as if a dark shadow that had been creeping up on her for weeks had taken to its heels.

Clare was also in gay spirits, a step from Peter's side. She had not cared whether she won or lost; stress did nothing but give one crow's feet.

"Well, that's over," she said. "Patty's like the water. I admire her form in the water."

"You were quite worth watching, too," Peter's voice was warm, and his glance passed over her like a searching flame.

"Why didn't you compete, Mrs. Rutherford?"

"Oh, I'm a drone," laughed Jenny. "She's a forelei who looks for to sit on in the sun while she combs her hair," said Peter.

Was Jenny dreaming, or did she catch a look of understanding, the sudden raising of a curtain, between these two? Her heart missed a beat. No, that was absurd. Day-dreams! Clare and Peter had scarcely spoken to each other since they'd come on the boat, except for their chat in the lounge at Bombay. They all moved out to the deck to dry themselves.

"Isn't the sea strange today?" Jenny murmured, after a long silence. "This is the first time since we left the Mediterranean that I've seen the water crumpling, or foam breaking on the waves."

No one was paying any attention to what she said.

"There is no place to dry," said Clare, shivering with cold. "It's too late. The sun's gone down."

Jenny was lost in her thoughts, watching the dying sun in a semitrance. She would not go below while the sunset lasted. The others had already gone; she had not noticed them leaving her.

She went down to B deck and along the corridor. Her glance swept by chance towards an alleyway, and her hand went up to her mouth to stop the exclamation that sprang to her lips.

Courteous and Careful Service

V. A. RICHARDSON W. W. JONES

Mrs. V. A. Richardson
Lady Assistant

When sober, his Irish brogue and Irish wit attracted crowds on the down-town streets, and when mounted on a goods box he furnished free entertainment for the town's loafers.

It was generally understood that Old Tom belonged to a respectable family of St. Louis, Mo., and had been educated for a Catholic priest, but instead of being a blessing to humanity, he became a vagabond and professional beggar. Little was known of his early opportunities, but everyone knew he had Bible quotations, quotations from Shakespeare and other poets at his tongue's end, and it was told around town that Old Tom had forgotten more Latin than the majority of the citizens had ever known.

His frequent application for a dime, the price of a drink, taxed the patience of his friends, but many of them found it difficult to turn a deaf ear to his pleadings. Often, when one responded to "Mister, gimme a dime," he received a temperance lecture gratis. While the lecture was being delivered, Old Tom stood with bowed head, humble as a dog, but as soon as he landed the dime, regardless of his promise to buy food, he struck a bee-line for the nearest saloon.

He was a clever beggar and was seldom without funds. If Old Tom could induce a laugh, he scored victory. One afternoon a prominent family was enjoying a porch party when he came shambling across the lawn. Standing first on one foot and then the other, he said, "Betcha can't guess what I've got in me pocket." As no one responded, he drew out a large sweet potato and held it up for inspection. A voluntary laugh won the day for Tom, and he left with the potato and his proverbial dime.

It was thought by many that Tom had a mania for witnessing big fires, as it was noticeable that he was often the first man to arrive after the alarm was given. If partly intoxicated, he rubbed his hands in glee and, with a diabolical grin on his face, seemed to thoroughly enjoy the situation. It was never satisfactorily proved that Old Tom struck the match which started the blaze, but it was generally believed that he was not entirely ignorant of its origin. Once, while a large building was burning, he was heard to remark, "I've got a big one this time." It may have been a hallucination with the old man, as he was given to "seeing things," but the insurance company probably could have worked up a good case out of it.

Being aware of Tom's love of excitement, a physician's family became alarmed one afternoon when, perched on their lawn fence, he postulated wildly toward the house. An officer whom they called discovered he was saying, "The old doctor used to live on that hill, and he sure was me friend. Every time he saw me he said, 'Here's a dime, Tom—go get you a drink.' They were positive, so far as the advice to secure a drink was concerned, that it existed only in Tom's imagination, as the doctor to whom he referred was a radical prohibitionist, but they were relieved to know that he felt kindly toward them and was not considering making a bonfire of their home."

Back in those days fires were fought by amateur fire companies, and the water was obtained from public wells which usually went dry during the hottest part of the conflagration. When the alarm was sounded—which meant ringing bells, blowing whistles, shooting pistols, and the entire neighborhood screaming "fire"—an aged colored man, with his old blind horse hitched to the only horse cart the town possessed, would finally arrive. The cart was kept in a shed on Main street and, as the horse was used for other purposes by the city, he would have to be unhitched from a wagon or plow, urged across town to be attached to the horse cart and then persuaded, if possible, to visit the scene where bedlam reigned supreme.

A ludicrous incident occurred when a deep snow covered the ground. The fire alarm was given from one of the elegant homes in the town, and the old blind horse was hitched to the cart ready for service when he balked, and no amount of persuasion could induce him to budge. A crowd of boys in the neighborhood, who were interested spectators and were enjoying the fun, decided to pet the animal with snowballs until he was willing to pull. The balls flew fast and furious for a while, and when the old horse was good and ready he trotted leisurely toward the cause of the confusion; but when he arrived, the blaze had already been extinguished by a bucket brigade, and the service of the ancient fire company was no longer needed.

As Old Tom was accustomed to shuffle down the middle of the street when engaged in his favorite pastime, going to fires, it was a good thing that he, the old negro and his old blind horse had passed into history before the huge fire trucks, with their well trained fire boys, came thundering down the streets. All three might have succumbed in the maelstrom, and perhaps no one in this hectic age would have stopped long enough to view the remains or pick up the pieces.

One bitter, cold night when Old Tom went to secure a night's lodging in the engine room of a foundry where, at times, the company had allowed him the privilege of sleeping, he found the doors locked and the employees gone. Always resourceful, he sat down on the pavement, and, leaning against the wall, decided to spend the night there.

Next morning, when the foreman arrived, he was horrified to find that hair and clothes of the old man were frozen to the wall, and, to avoid doing him bodily injury, it was necessary to use an ax to extricate him from his perilous position. The report spread over town like wild fire that Tom Loftus was found frozen to death at Webb's foundry. Several hours after he had been thawed out in the engine room, people were amazed to see him come sauntering down the street, bearing only a few scars, reminders of a harrowing experience of a night spent in an outdoor refrigerator.

Everyone agreed that at times Old Tom was a public nuisance, but everyone knew he had a tender spot in his heart and possessed some good qualities.

He would divide his last penny and share his bed with a comrade in need—and although most of the time his sleeping apartment was in a wood shed or hay loft, to a person unaccustomed to secure a night's lodging free, Tom's hotel accommodations were thankfully received. When the weather was pleasant all was well, but when the thermometer was playing around zero the old fellow would yell lustily until someone in the neighborhood went to his relief and parked him where he was in no danger of freezing. It was annoying to the relief committee to be called about two o'clock in the morning when he began to sober up, but sympathy for Old Tom is part of the town's history.

During the last years of old Tom's life, he was at home from Paducah on the Ohio, to Hickman on the banks of the Mississippi. No one ever refused him food, and no one disturbed his sleep on the park benches unless he had imbibed too freely of some kind of an intoxicant and was making night hideous with his unearthly yells. It will never be known if old Tom lighted the torches for the many fires he so joyfully attended, and it is granted that he was a mere to-do well; but one misses even the vagabonds who have had a place in the town's history, when "finis" is written after their names.

New Telephone System At Your Service

NOW that the new telephone system is in service, its success depends, in a large measure, upon its proper use.

The telephone directory should always be consulted before making a call. Calling from memory is likely to result in getting the wrong number.

It is no longer necessary to ring in order to signal the operator. When the receiver is removed from the hook, a light appears in front of the operator, which is her signal that you wish to give an order.

Making a telephone call is a simple thing if done right. Much is involved which the subscriber never sees, and it is important to follow these little suggestions when using the new system.

To make a call, remove the receiver from the hook and, when the operator answers, give her the number of the telephone desired.

To make a second call move the receiver up and down slowly two or three times until the operator answers. Do not jiggle the hook rapidly.

The splendid new plant enables us to meet every reasonable demand for service in Fulton. We are anxious to give you the kind of service you want, and your co-operation in using the telephone properly will be appreciated.

Public Co-Operation

In time of stress citizens of a community are called upon to co-operate with the municipality in order to obtain desired results. There has been the case in recent weeks due to temporary trouble at the water works.

Consumers of water in Fulton have been urged to economize in the use of city water, and not leave their hydrants running. This request is a bit unusual, but when a strainer in one of the wells supplying the city goes bad, and no water can be pumped from that well, it is time to seriously take steps to save our city water. It is a case of emergency, and every citizen should do his part in holding down the demand for city water.

Competent men have been employed to pull the old strainer, and install a new one, but it takes time to do this. In the meantime every one can help preserve the safety and welfare of our community by adopting a rigid rule of economy in the use of city water.

HATTIE LOU STUBBLEFIELD

South Fulton High School will send two representatives to contests to be held at Union University Feb. 13. Katie Margaret Allen, winner of numerous medals in school contests in Reading, as well as the Oblion County contest sponsored by the American Legion, will represent the school with "China Blue Eyes" as her reading. In declaration the school will be represented by Robert Lee McKinney. He will deliver a speech on The Constitution.

FROM FRANCE

James Donald Hall and Henry Lee Allen have received letters from students in the schools of France. Other members of the French class are writing to students in France and expect replies to letters within a short time.

SOPHOMORES

The Sophomore class has been meeting in the office for the past few days, as the sponsor room is too cold.

Bonnie Jenkins visited school Monday.

Howard Webb has returned to school after a few days illness. Ellen Alexander has a new and better smile lately, who is the new friend.

The Home Economics girls have been discussing their boy friends, several suggestions were made. Some insisted on going with the boy only if you intended to marry him.

Helen Jones made the remark that since Friday night she hadn't been able to eat but three meals and that she really wasn't hungry.

When she was asked if she could sleep, she said, "Well, I haven't had time." Something or some one seems to be on her mind.

James Hall and Henry Lee Allen have been very busy translating their letters from French students. James D. posted his on the bulletin board so everyone could enjoy the news.

Stanley Mills seems to be making a study of birds from the recent report. His latest study was on the ship-poor-will, the night bird.

Margaret Maynard recently spoke of a new delicious soup, apple soup! In the French IV class, Dorothy Legg worried over the death of the heroine. When the story read, "She took off her hat an avalanche of hair fell upon her shoulders." Dorothy asked, "Was she killed or just hurt when that avalanche fell on her?"

Rosa Mae Bell needs spectacles as she can't seem to read the largest of letters written on the blackboard. It takes Mr. Matthews to show them to her.

All the permanent the Tator family has been discussing are still raging.

The Hi-Y boys entertained Thursday morning with a short play. When black the boys are really hard to recognize.

Thomas Miller, from Lodgeton, entered school Monday. Thomas is in Junior high school.

JUNIORS

The Juniors make short dashes to their sponsor room long enough to hear the roll call and spelling, then rush back to warmer region. The Junior girls who cook, lock the cooking room door so that they can play their trades unmolested.

BASKETBALL

A large crowd is expected at the South Fulton gym Friday night when the teams meet the Greenfield team. The Greenfield boys and South Fulton girls have been seeded in the county and district tournaments and two lively contests are in store for net fans.

THE TATOR FAMILY

"Well, I knew examinations were gonna make it pretty hard on us, but I never believed I'd have to combine four grades for eighty per cent," said little Iml this week.

"By observation it seems that the Freshmen and eighth graders are the worst offenders about placing reference books in the wrong place. One of them wanted to put volume eleven between four and five and argued that he thought it belonged there," said Spec Tator Monday.

ADD PLANNING TO WORK TO IMPROVE FARM CONDITIONS

During the suspension of the national agricultural adjustment program, and until such time as a new program may be inaugurated, the College to Agriculture of the University of Kentucky, through its extension division, is emphasizing an important series of projects in behalf of improved conditions on the farm and in the home.

Included in these projects is county planning, an important addition to the state program which has for its object the balancing of farm production with market requirements, conservation of the soil and a sound land-use policy.

Planning conferences are being held over the state, where local men and women join with state and national forces to study the local farm situation. It is anticipated that such conferences eventually will be held in every county, and it is hoped, through them, to lay the foundation for the development of a long-time sound agricultural policy.

Other activities of the college's division include soil improvement, the production of better adapted crops, livestock improvement, marketing, farm and home management, control of insects and disease and 4-H club work.

More attention than ever before is being given to 4-H club activities including Utopia clubs, which are organizations of older farm boys and girls. These clubs, which now exist in practically every county in the state, serve to interest young people in definite programs for agricultural improvement.

SOW GRASS WITH ALL LESPEDEZA

During the past week, S. C. Jones, Field Agent in Field Crops, from the Experiment Station at Lexington was in the county for four meetings with the County Agent. These meetings were for the purpose of encouraging farmers to sow mixtures of grass and legumes in order that they might get more pasture from a given acreage per year and at the same time be able to have a large amount of pasture all through the year.

Mr. Jones pointed out a pasture program that would supply grazing almost the entire year. When Red top and orchard grass are sown early in February or the preceding fall and lespedeza in the last part of March, one can have pasture from early spring until freezing weather begins in late fall. To supplement this if corn is cut and shocked and this land sowed to wheat, rye or barley in early October some pasture will be available in the winter and early spring before grass is big enough to pasture. This makes a minimum amount of land to be cultivated and leaves no land uncovered during the winter if soy bean and cotton lands are seeded to a cover crop. Practically no nitrogen will be lost during the winter by leaching when small grains are sowed on all cultivated lands and grass is growing with lespedeza.

LODGETON HOMEMAKERS CLUB HOLD MEETING

Mrs. J. B. Inman entertained the Lodgeton Homemakers club, Friday afternoon, January 24. Mrs. H. P. Roberts chairman presided at the business meeting, after which nine members answered the question "In What Old German Customs Were You Most Interested?"

Mrs. Clemens Lawson, food leader conducted a review of lessons studied for the past three months, and other routine business was transacted.

Miss Catherine Culton home demonstration agent talked on "Industries in Kentucky."

A very interesting social program of "The Country Women of Poland" was given by Mrs. Cecil Burnett. The following members were present: Mrs. H. P. Roberts, Mrs. R. F. Crawford, Mrs. Clemens Lawson, Mrs. Cecil Burnett, Mrs. H. W. Howell, Miss Catherine Culton, home agent, Mrs. S. E. Bondurant, Miss Sadie Jackson and Mrs. J. B. Inman.

The next meeting will be held in the home of Mrs. Clemens Lawson February 28th.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Wade spent Friday with Mrs. Naomi Vick.

THURSDAY NIGHT CLUB

Mrs. Vernon Owen entertained her bridge club Thursday night at her home on Second street.

Two tables of players were present which included club members and three visitors, Mesdames Bob Vinford, Harry Bushart and Horton Baird.

After several games of progressive contract high score was held by Mrs. Livingston Read who was presented a lovely prize.

The hostess served a delicious salad course.

Mrs. Livingston Read will entertain the club at its next meeting.

BILLY WILSON HONORED ON FIFTH BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Homer Wilson was hostess to a delightfully planned party Saturday afternoon at her home on Green street, complimenting her son, Billy, on his fifth birthday.

Twenty-six friends of the honoree arrived at 3:30 o'clock and spent the afternoon playing games and participating in clever contests. In the contests Jerry Lowe and Don Crawford of Dresden were winners and was presented attractive prizes. Late in the afternoon a beautiful birthday cake was placed on the table on which five tiny candles flickered cheerfully. Delicious cake and ice cream were served by the hostess.

Each guest was presented a balloon and a dainty novelty favor. The little honoree received many beautiful gifts.

SHOWER FOR MRS. JOHNSON

Misses Sarah Agnes Williams and Katie Margaret Allen were joint hostesses to a miscellaneous shower Friday afternoon in the Home Economics department of South Fulton High School honoring Mrs. Malcolm Clyde Johnson, formerly Mary Jolley, a popular member of this high school and recently married.

The decoration for the occasion was of pot plants. First a contest was enjoyed by the guests who consisted of the ladies of the high school faculty, the second year home economics class and several of the honoree's friends. This contest was won by Mrs. H. J. Priestly and Ellen Alexander. Later the bride traced a string tangled about the room which led to all of the hidden gifts. She received many lovely and useful gifts.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses assisted by Blanche Cook, after which the guests expressed to the bride, whose home is now in Mayfield, Ky., their wishes for her future happiness.

PARTY FRIDAY NIGHT

Bruce Barton Says,

Dancing Alarms Russia

A new danger is threatening the noble Russian experiment. Insidious enemies are seeking to undermine Communism by encouraging the young people to go in for the tango, the hula, and the fox-trot. "Not only our youth, but our workers are being corrupted by these dancing teachers," says a Communist writer in Moscow. "It is impossible to fox-trot and be a good Communist. We cannot believe that all this is of spontaneous origin. Back of it there must be an organized movement which is intended to bring a glorious chapter of history to a disgraceful close."

The fears of this Communist writer are well founded. Dancing leads to laughter, and laughter in the world is a politician who does not tremble when he hears a hearty laugh. Can you possibly imagine a drearier lot of human beings than the solemn faced leaders of the Soviet? Is it conceivable that Hitler ever sees a joke? Or that the august front of Mussolini could be made to quiver in the throes of a belly laugh?

Also, young people at a dance are acutely conscious of the unequal distribution of sex appeal. Look in on any dancing party and you discover something which must be very disturbing to the Soviet mind—a few girls with a dozen young men around them, and dozens of girls with none.

The Soviet has sought to level down sex appeal by putting the women in ugly costumes and making them as homely as possible. But once a let the pretty girls make themselves up fancy, and right away the competitive spirit breaks out like manes all over the boys. The number one immediately want to make some money in order to outdo their rivals. Indeed, the principal aim of capitalism is the desire of a man to make more money so that he may get the girl he wants and give her more after he gets her.

By all means let Stalin stop this madness of dancing and laughter. And dancing presently will suggest to the minds of youth that the Five Year Plan is not nearly so important as the Plan for Tonight.

An unknown, slender young fellow set an airplane down at the flying field near Paris, and said: "I am Charles Lindbergh." Calvin Coolidge was in the White House. New highs were being recorded daily in the stock market. Model T Fords out-numbered other cars on the road. People were flocking to Florida to make fortunes.

Stream-lined and air-conditioned trains were unknown, and some of the smartest motion picture men were sure that the "talkies" never would amount to anything. Hardly any one heard of Rex Tugwell or General Hugh Johnson or Huey Long or Father Coughlin.

If at this period you had predicted the imminence of the nation's worst period of depression, the collapse of thousands of banks, the abandonment of the gold standard or the appearance in Washington of J. P. Morgan with a circus midget on his lap, you would have been regarded as a fit subject for pathological observation.

From all the above you may suspect that the writer has been fiddling around with a newspaper nearly ten years old, and you are correct. It is an interesting experience once in a while, but as a daily habit it would be depressing. One is reminded too vividly of the rapid flight of time.
