The delegation of Fulton-town, North and Robertson counties, which had been working for the new line for the past year, is here to see the first train come in over the eastern extension of the Great Western Central System from West Paducah. This week, the delegation was told that a new era of progress had started in the county. The train was the first of the new lines to be constructed, and it had been built at a cost of $12,000,000. The reduced grade of the new line is approximately 27 miles long, and it has a capacity of 1,250,000 yards of earth. The line will run from West Paducah to New York City, and it will be completed in two years.
