THE LISTENING POST

• The Listening Post has what amounts to a phobia about getting into huge crowds. There is nothing I dislike more than getting wedged into a long line of automobiles, and having to inch forward a couple of feet at a time; then having to hunt a parking place and worry about getting in and getting out. Therefore, it can plainly be seen that I did not go to Cairo the other day for the celebration incident to opening the new Ohio River bridge. I knew I did not want to go, and I did not go. After hearing of the crowded conditions there later I was more than glad that I did not attend the celebration.

• Bert Newhouse told me the next day of his experiences. Said that it required an hour for him to get out of a parking place, and another hour to get as far as the bridge approach. When he did reach the bridge approach, a traffic cop told him the bridge was jammed and advised him to drive on across the Missouri bridge, ride around for a while and then come back and try his luck. Bert drove across to Missouri, saw a sign for the ferry that carries cars back to Kentucky from Missouri and at once took the ferry across the Mississippi to Wickliffe and came on home hours ahead of those others who preferred the Ohio River span. If I had been along I would have followed Bert exactly.

• But this does not mean that I did not want to see the bridge, and so yesterday, when the novelty had worn off and when traffic tolls had cut the crowd, I drove over and took a gander at the bridge. I did not cross—merely parked at the Kentucky side and walked almost as far as the toll house, which seems to be almost at the Illinois end of the structure.

• There is something about bridges that fascinates me. There is something of the nature of a miracle in a bridge to my mind. To see one of these curving webs of steel flung across a great river across a great river such as the Ohio, and to know that such work was done by human hands is almost unbelievable. I like the architecture of a bridge. To me a great bridge is as beautiful as a cathedral, and I wonder how human brain could first build this bridge on blueprints, and then other brains and hands could translate the blue prints into a mass of steel and concrete that would span a great river and stand there to defy storm and stress for untold years. It does not seem possible.

• For many years man has sought for these river crossings. For years men have fought to build roads that would lead to a ferry crossing. For years railroads have worked and toiled to keep rail lines laid through that treacherous riverside. And for years men have fumed and sworn as they missed ferry connections and been compelled to wait.

• Out of that, a great dream, has been realized. Today this curving web of steel leaps across the Ohio just above its junction with the Mississippi, and one rolls

F. D. R. Names Alf Landon To Delegation

Republican Leader To Attend Parley In Lima, Peru

Washington. — President Roosevelt has appointed Alf M. Landon, his Republican opponent in the 1936 Presidential race, to the delegation which will represent the United States at the conference of the American republics in Lima, Peru, December 9.

This was disclosed today when the State Department announced the names of the twelve delegates chosen by the President. Secretary Hull headed the list, as chairman, and other members included the Rev. John F. O'Hara, president of Notre Dame University, and Kathryn Lewis, daughter of Labor Leader John L. Lewis.

Lesson to Dictators
Landon's appointment and acceptance were considered by some political students an object lesson to dictator countries, where a two-party system of government and Presidential opposition are unknown or untried.

Although Landon has been an outspoken critic of much of the New Deal, he frequently has met the President in friendly conference. He called at the White House following his defeat by Roosevelt.

Last year, when excitement ran high over the Japanese bombing of the American gunboat Panay he telegraphed the President of his support. He counted himself out of the 1940 Presidential picture December 10 in a statement saying he would not accept the Republican nomination again if it were offered to him.

Negro Tried On Robbery Charge

Cersie Noonan, colored boy of Clinton, Kentucky, was arrested in Fulton Saturday night for fighting with Homer Jennings, aged colored man of near Clinton, and taking Jennings' watch and money from him. The fight occurred in front of the Anderson Hotel in Missionary bottom.

Noonan was arrested by officers after he had made an attempt to escape and was charged with robbery. He was tried this morning in city court before City Judge Lon Adams and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury. His bond was fixed at $300.00.

ROTARY CLUB TO MEET TOMORROW

The Rotary Club will hold its regular meeting tomorrow at the Usona Hotel, despite the fact that a joint meeting is scheduled for Thursday with the Lions Club and the Young Men's Business Club. The club will not meet next week.

Connally Sees No General Tax Bill At Next Session Of Congress

Washington. — Senator Connally (D-Tex.), a member of the Senate finance committee, predicted today that the next Congress would pass no general tax bill.

Improving business conditions should increase federal revenues and make tax revisions unnecessary, Connally said.

He predicted, however, the re-enactment of the so-called "nuisance" taxes, many of which expire next year. These taxes include such levies as that on theater tickets.

The Texas Senator said he believed, too, that in the long run Congress would be forced to increase tax rates on incomes in the middle brackets and to consider lowering exemptions.

"There is no doubt that the gov-

Fire Hazard Survey Here Next Thursday

Sponsored by Lions Club, with the cooperation of the Rotary Club and the Young Business Men's Club, the Kentucky State Fire Prevention Association will make a fire prevention survey of Fulton, Thursday of next week.

At that time, members of the State organization will investigate conditions, from a construction, equipment and upkeep standpoint, of the different business houses, workshops and public institutions, with the purpose of discovering any defects or conditions that might cause a fire, if not remedied.

To inspect a building and its contents, the fire preventionists carry on their work in a careful manner, disturbing none of the employees. They note any dangerous accumulation of combustible rubbish on the premises, instances of defective electric wiring, or other conditions conducive to the outbreak of a fire. Following the inspection, the fire preventionists will list the defects they have found, indicating the improvements necessary to eliminate fire hazards.

As has been done in many instances, in Kentucky and other States, inspection of Fulton residences will be accomplished by means of "home inspection" blanks in the hands of the school children. Experience in this respect elsewhere has demonstrated that the children enter into the spirit of the activity, at the same time acquiring a knowledge of what is meant by "fire safety" and "fire prevention" that it is believed will have lasting effects.

A public meeting will be held at a luncheon, sponsored by the Civic Clubs, at which a representative of the Fire Prevention Association will make an interesting and informative address. The meeting will be held Thursday noon at the Rainbow Room.

The activities scheduled for next Thursday in Fulton by the Kentucky State Fire Prevention Association are part of a country-wide plan, sponsored by chambers of commerce, civic and service clubs, business men's associations and other organizations, with the purpose in view of reducing the fire waste of the nation, a very large proportion of which is due to preventable causes, it is held by those who have given the matter serious consideration for many years.

The nation's wealth and resources, to some extent an intangible and abstract reference, is after all a more or less concrete and highly personal matter, as the national wealth is simply the sum total of all individual and community wealth. Hence, the problem of fire prevention resolves itself into a matter of individual responsibility, and to the extent that individuals may have and may assume their responsibility for fire safety to that extent will the problem be solved. With the idea of educating the citizens generally in the matter of fire, members of the Kentucky State Fire Prevention Association will give of their time and their energy in Fulton, Thursday next.

Modern Enoch Arden Returns From "Dead" Finds Wife Rewed

Pittsburgh. — Davis Rowland MacDonald returned today from the "dead" to find his wife had divorced him, remarried, had him declared legally dead and collected three insurance policies on his life.

John F. Sears, agent in charge of the Pittsburgh offices of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, reported the modern Enoch Arden had been arrested "on a local charge" in Pasadena, Calif., and his identity established through fingerprints. Sears, reconstructing the case, related:

MacDonald disappeared in Pittsburgh on February 14, 1924, and police ruled he had committed suicide when they found his hat and coat on the Allegheny River bank. He left a note addressed to his wife, Clara, telling her he had "failed in business and as a man."

On February 20, 1935—after Mrs. MacDonald had divorced her missing husband and married William M. Brown—a Federal jury declared the former World War first lieutenant of aviation legally dead.

Sears said MacDonald was arrested in Pasadena on November 4 while using the name "John Edgar Davis." He said MacDonald admitted his identity.

The F. B. I. Sears said, was holding MacDonald but that no charges had been filed against him.

T. V. A. Test By High Court Set For Today

Washington. — The Supreme Court expects to hear arguments tomorrow on constitutionality of the Government's Tennessee Valley Authority power program.

Six hours of debate are scheduled to begin after the Justices deliver whatever opinions may be ready on litigation testing the authority of the National Labor Relations Board and the right of States to vote on the Child Labor Constitutional Amendment.

A group of private power companies carried the T. V. A. case to the Supreme Court last spring after a three-judge Federal court in Eastern Tennessee held that they "have no immunity from lawful competition even if their business be curtailed or destroyed."

Country-Wide Business Gain Seen By Jones

Houston, Texas. — Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, said today business had started an upward swing.

"Washington is the clearing house of the Nation on business information," he said, "and by statistical report, telegraph and telephone, we are hearing stories from every part of the country that point to a considerable upturn."

Asked specifically about the railroads, he commented their revenues were "picking up some."

Screen Guild Under Attack

Los Angeles. — Charges that the Screen Actors' Guild since May, 1937, has collected from members more than $1,000,000, "most of which has been unlawfully spent save approximately $100,000," were filed with the National Labor Relations Board here by three members.

The petitioners charge the guild has taken in more than 6,500 members in excess of the number needed by the motion picture industry, and that the senior members and producers have entered into a contract which deprives junior members of their lawful rights.

The petition names thirty-four studios, including the major concerns, as well as the Central Casting Corporation, and asks the labor board to cancel the contract and stop the producers and senior members from bargaining.

Mr. Eddie Goostree of Clarksville, Tennessee, who is a scout for the Detroit Tigers National League baseball team, spent yesterday in Fulton and talked with local baseball directors concerning the possibilities of a working agreement with the Tigers this spring. Mr. Goostree made no promises and made no definite statements but said that the matter will be considered more seriously after the National Minor League Association meeting in New Orleans on December 7.

Mr. Goostree thought well of Fulton and said that the Fulton directors have installed one of the best lighting systems of any minor league visited by him.

Good Services Continue At C. P. Revival

A packed house heard Evangelist Fults preach at the Cumberland Presbyterian Church last night on "Five things God wants everybody to know." The Evangelist said, "God wants everybody to know: 1. That without Christ you are lost; 2. That no one can save himself by his good works; 3. That Jesus has provided for the salvation of all who will come to him; 4. That Christ will enable all who come to him to live the Christian life; 5. man's part in getting into Christ-repentance and faith.

The message was greatly received by the large audience and many held their hands requesting prayer in their behalf. The other services of the day were well attended and for the day their were eleven professions and consecrations.

Tonight Rev. Fults will speak on "A question no one in Fulton can answer."

Rev. E. R. Ladd, pastor announced tonight will be Lions night. Tuesday Rotary, Wednesday Railroad, Thursday Insurance, Friday Business. These above named will be our special visitors but we request that all the people of Fulton attend each service.

Friday afternoon the Fulton High Bulldogs will go to Martin, Tennessee to play their last football game of the season and at this last game football fans will have their last opportunity of seeing the class Fulton High School band in action on the gridiron.

The local band makes a very striking appearance in their new uniforms of blue and white and will lead a parade with the Martin band before the game begins Friday. During the game and at the half both bands will perform, including stunts and twirl acts.

Boy To Be Tried For Malicious Cutting

Leon Bonds, of east of town, is in the Fulton Hospital, suffering severe cuts as a result of a fight with Parham Owens, Jr., of near Water Valley, in Fulton Saturday night. The fight occurred on Fourth Street Extension and Owens was arrested by night police and charged with malicious cutting with intent to kill.

Owens was brought before the city judge this morning and his trial was set for Thursday morning at ten o'clock. Bonds being unable to attend before that time.

32 French Decrees Issued To Rebuild Weakened Democracy

Paris. — The Daladier government backed by the demand of 7,000,000 World War veterans for a strong government, tonight issued 32 decrees laws to rebuild France within her democratic framework.

Precier Daladier declared they were the strongest measures that could be drawn without violating "traditional" principles of the French government. Some members of the Chamber of Deputies called them the last chance to avert collapse of the democracy.

Among the laws decreed two days before expiration of semi-dictatorial decree powers granted by Parliament was a measure revaluing the gold reserve of the Bank of France at the rate of 170 francs to the pound sterling, or 37.60 to the dollar.

The revaluation gave the government a paper profit of about 22,500,000,000 francs.

Lewis Offers Program For Higher Wages

Taxation Of Speculative Wealth Is Favored By Proposal

Pittsburgh. — John L. Lewis, C. I. O. Chairman, proposed for the first constitutional convention of the Committee for Industrial Organization today a broad program of economic planning by Government, higher wages and taxation of speculative wealth to attain a stable economy.

Along with his proposals, Lewis aimed short brief criticism at the New Deal economic program, saying:

"One of the serious defects of present Administration has been the failure to co-ordinate and plan its economic program over an adequate period.

Labor Unity Discussed
The C. I. O. chieftain's economic program was contained in his report to the convention which opens tomorrow. It covered the organization and development of the C. I. O. since he began the industrial union movement three years ago over the objections of the craft unionists in the American Federation of Labor."

The C. I. O. started building a new labor movement, he said, only after its unions were "driven out" of the A. F. L.

His organization, the C. I. O. leader stated, was ready to explore the possibilities leading to a united labor movement, and added the convention "is likely to prove one of the most effective steps yet taken in the direction of labor unity."

"Once the representatives of the A. F. L. are ready to recognize the facts and deal with the C. I. O. on a basis of equality and justice," he added, "they will find the representatives of the C. I. O. more than receptive to any proposition which will restore unity without impairing the right of the workers which are our first consideration."

Women In Education

Education Week recalls highlights of the beginning of higher education for women in the United States. Not only women who became presidents, but others who did not, played pioneering roles in the new field.

Mary Lyon was Principal of Mt. Holyoke College when it was a seminary, before it was known as a college. Emma Willard's school at Troy, N. Y., was also a seminary. Frances Willard was chosen President of the Evanston College for Ladies in 1871, and her biographer credits her with being the first to bear such a title. Mt. Holyoke was established in 1837. Emma Willard's school antedated it, having been established in 1814, originally at Middlebury, Vt. It was the first institution for the higher education of women.

Another colorful chapter centers around Countess Benigna, a sixteen-year-old girl from Saxony, who did not become a college president, but who did found the first Protestant school for girls in the United States. Countess Benigna was the daughter of Count Zinzendorf, patron of the Moravian Church, which was a leader in educational movements (for men) in the Old World. Count Zinzendorf led members of the Unitas Fratrum, or United Brethren, from Moravia and Bohemia in search of religious freedom in the New World. The refugees celebrated Christmas soon after their arrival in Colonial America and in commemoration named their settlement "Bethlehem." On May 4, 1742—thirty-four years before the Declaration of Independence was signed—Countess Benigna founded the Seminary for Young Ladies in Germantown, Pa., later to be permanently located in Bethlehem, where it evolved into the Moravian Seminary and College for Women, which four years hence will celebrate its two hundredth anniversary.

To the new Seminary Thomas Jefferson sent his great-niece, Margaret Gwatkin Peyton, in 1806.

Even earlier, in 1796, Eleanor Lee, grand-niece of George Washington, was a student, and in 1788, Martha Washington Greene and Cornelia Lott Greene, daughters of General Nathaniel Greene, Revolutionary commander. Other students included Maria and Anne Jay, daughters of John Jay, first Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, and Harriet Livingston, who was engaged during her student days to Robert Fulton, whom she married and accompanied on the first trip of his steamboat.

But the story of pioneering ventures in education for women a century or more ago is a long one. Beginnings of most enterprises are interesting, often significant. Perhaps more significant, however, than who was the first woman's college president, or just what year which college began in, is the fact that the impulse of education for women was acted upon so early in the United States and bore such notable fruits.—Christian Science Monitor.

Listening Post

across far above the blue waters. The great towering structure simply ignores the railroad tracks and passes far above them. One looks down on the swamp land, with the tops of tall trees far below. While the Kentucky approach is far from perfect it is so much better than it has ever been before that one marvels. Much work will have to be done before that approach will be a good road, but this work will be done, and within two or three years a mighty traffic will be rolling through there without a thought for the hard days of yesteryear.

Some great dreams have been dreamed regarding Cairo. It took heroism to build that town and to maintain it. It took vision to ever build a railroad bridge there. It took vision to erect the Missouri bridge and it required even more to build the Kentucky bridge. But Cairo must have something on the ball, for all these things have been done, and today Cairo sits at the junction of her two great rivers with bridges connecting her to her sister communities. Truly a great dream has come to pass.

Discount Plan For Big Users Of Coal Asked

Washington.—The Bituminous Coal Commission today considered a proposal to permit discounts on coal sold directly by producers to large consumers.

This plan was offered at a hearing by Charles O'Neil, New York, chairman of the Producer's Board for District 1, which embraces Central Pennsylvania.

O'Neil, one of the country's largest coal operators, proposed this discount system only for his own district, but Commission officials said if granted it would apply to the entire country.

The New Yorker asked that for consumers buying 50,000 to 100,000 tons a year, the producer discount be 5 cents a ton or half the maximum discount allowed distributors.

On 100,000 to 200,000 tons a year, the discount would be 7.1-2 cents a ton or not less than three-fourths of the maximum discount allowed to distributors.

For 200,000 tons or more, the discount would be 10 cents a ton or a rate equal to that allowed to distributors. The Commission has not yet decided what discounts will be allowed distributors.

The discount would not be permitted unless the consumer purchased at least 90 per cent of the amount covered by his contract or order.

Two Army Men Die In Crash

Washington.—The death of another senior Air Corps officer in a flaming crash in a Washington residential street today gave fresh emphasis to an Army proposal to limit flying to younger pilots.

Lieut. Col. Leslie MacDill, 48, and Private Joseph G. Gloxner were killed only two months after Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, Air Corps Chief, died in a landing accident at Burbank, Calif. Westover was 53.

MacDill, piloting a combat plane on a routine flight, was believed to have turned back toward Bolling Field, Army air base here, when motor trouble developed. Witnesses saw his low flying plane skim a rooftop and fall into 13th St., a stone's throw from the field.

Flames enveloped the plane which lit atop a parked automobile, and spread to four other cars.

An Army board now was studying records of Air Corps posts to determine to what extent age is a factor in flying tragedies. One proposal advanced is arbitrarily to ban piloting beyond 45.

State Wage Law Officials Pledge Their Cooperation

Washington.—State minimum-wage law administrators, attending the eighth minimum wage conference here today, pledged their full co-operation to the Federal agency in enforcing the recently enacted Fair Labor Standards Act.

Acting Secretary of Labor Charles V. McLaughlin told the conference one of the outstanding gains of the year in minimum wage legislation was the fact that the Federal Act "clearly recognizes" the experience of minimum wage States in their administrative procedures, fact findings and the use of industry boards and hearings.

The conference was called by the Women's Bureau of the Labor Department, which serves as the clearing house for information on State minimum-wage activities.

The Industrial Relations Commissioner of Kentucky, William C. Burrow, is attending the conference.
