PROMENADE DECK

SYNOPSIS: A luxurious five-month cruise around the world aboard the "Marela" brings together a group of passengers for adventures, romance, and tragedy. Like in "Grand Hotel" these passengers offer a study in human actions and reactions which unconsciously bare their souls. These characters are aboard the ship: Macduff, dour Scotchman, single of middle age; Miss Mudge, school teacher, spending the savings of 20 years; Angela, faithful wife of Lovat, gigolo; Dick Charlton, first officer; Clare, a person of experience; Joan, a dissipated flapper; Jenny, run-away wife and the ship's Captain's mistress. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

NINTH INSTALMENT

"I've been wondering about you this morning, Jenny. I came back to your door last night, but your stateroom was quiet and the lights were on. I thought everything must be all right," said Angela.

"Perhaps it is," said Jenny blankly. "I don't know. Peter's gone."

"Jenny darling, do sit down and drink some tea with me. Have you had your breakfast yet?" Angela rang the bell for her stewardess.

"Breakfast?" repeated Jenny aimlessly.

"Yes, breakfast. You look exhausted. Did you sleep at all?"

"All night, like a log. I think I must have fainted before I found Peter wasn't there. I scarcely remember the night at all. Wouldn't it be funny, Angela, if I never saw him again?"

"Don't talk rot. You're shivering. Throw that dressing-gown over your shoulders."

"Jenny darling," said Angela, plunging swiftly to the point, "I have some bad news for you."

Jenny retracted her head, wary for the coming blow.

"Your husband's left the boat with Mrs. Langford."

"Peter—oh no!" Jenny's voice was a cry of pain. "Angela, there isn't any doubt in your mind."

"Mr. Charlton thinks they caught a boat to Singapore yesterday."

"While we were watching the foolish dancers! But his things—how did he get them off?"

"He came back and packed, and he and Mrs. Langford got a steward to take off their bags."

Jenny was staring at the floor.

"You know I'm not his wife."

Angela accepted her announcement with no change of expression.

"I'm fact, I left my husband and four-months-old baby to run away with Peter."

"Your baby? Oh, Jenny darling!"

Angela's voice halted in mid-stream. So this was the story. She looked pityingly at the girl on the bed. "You must have loved him very much."

"I did. I do. But, you see, one must pay for a thing like that."

"How long have you been with him altogether?"

"About ten weeks. Such a little time. I thought it would last for years. I thought it would last forever. But ten weeks! Funny, isn't it? I'm repeating history. My mother did exactly the same thing when I was a little girl."

"But didn't you feel that anything was wrong, Jenny?"

I saw him go into her stateroom the other day, but I closed my eyes to reality. I couldn't believe it. There was no change in his manner."

She lapsed into silence again. Angela could see her fingers twisting and untwisting and the flow of thoughts over her face.

"Angela, I want to be left to myself," said Jenny, suddenly.

"Of course, my dear child, but I shall come back, and if there is anything I can do—" she bent down and kissed her forehead.

"You're very kind. There's nothing that anyone can do."

Angela went upstairs, to find that the boat was seething with gossip. She decided to go down to Jenny's suite again and see if she were asleep. No, she was lying exactly as she had left her. When the door opened she threw an eager glance toward it, but her face clouded as soon as she saw that it was only Angela.

"Jenny, are you all right?"

"Yes," she spoke in the faded smiling feebly, she shook her voice of the very ill.

head.

"A storm is coming up, a real China Sea storm. I hope you don't get seasick."

"Never."

"It should lull us all to sleep to night."

"Yes?" Jenny's glance was faintly questioning.

"Won't you have some tea with me? Let's have it here. You haven't had lunch."

"If you don't mind, Angela, I want just to be let alone. I'm rather tired. I think I shall sleep."

"You'll send for me if there is anything I can do, won't you?"

"Rather!" She smiled pitifully at Angela—a lost fact, drowning in its own bewilderment.

The last traces of Peter's occupancy—a few odds and ends of paper—had disappeared. A white and blue envelop lay on the table. It was a message from him. The letters danced before her eyes, foolish, jumbled letters, all capitals and punctuation. It had come in dots and dashes direct from her lover on his way to Singapore.

On my way to Singapore.

Writing at once to explain everything and arrange financial matters.

Jenny looked in the flowered bag that had gone with her to the wats of Bangkok. Opening her purse she found that she had five pounds, ten shillings in the world.

Pattering down the adjoining alley, the steward, too old for any duty at sea but that of night watchman, arrived at Jenny's stateroom, which was next to Macduff's. He saw a ribbon of light under her door and assumed that she was still awake. He knocked and a faint voice answered, "Come in."

"Sorry to disturb you, madam. I have orders to close the dealight. Captains orders, madam."

"Leave it as it is now, steward," she said. "I shall ring for you later. My head is splitting and I must have air."

Harry stood at the door, wondering what he should do. "It's captain's orders, madam," he repeated. "It's a bad night and the water will come in."

Jenny's voice was imperative: "Leave it to me. I shall ring in a little while."

The old man went grunting off. He had plenty of others to attend to, and he supposed the lady knew what she was about. Senseless of her, though. He shuffled down the next alley; no doubt she would ring. Soon he had forgotten her existence.

The storm was now at its peak. Jenny could see the green-black mountains racing past with squirming foam-crests. In the eary were thundering cries of anguish—the requiem of the sea. She dashed across the cabin and slapped her hands in aimless frenzy against the panels.

"He couldn't, he couldn't, he couldn't!" she screamed, but her voice was a whisper in the mad crescendo of the gale. She covered her eyes with her arm. She must be going mad. But the water would wash the fever from her brain, would lap her in peace and security.

She reached the porthole, was standing below it. She stretched up her arms and the tips of her fingers touched the rim, finding it cold and wet. Her ears were filled with the roar of the sea. Nothing must stop her now. At last she worked her slender shoulders thru the rim of the porthole. Turning her head, she saw that the deck lights must all be down, for the ship was as dark as a whale. She was working with frenzy now, pushing her slim body farther and farther out. The waves dashed into her face, stinging her to a sharp knowledge that she was close to death, beyond aid and love. Her only fear was that they might push her back. She dreaded the moments of quiet, the lull between the waves when her thoughts washed back to the life she was leaving. One arm reached into the night and the water raced through her fingers. It was black and icy-cold. The water was a void from which one plunged into light. Slowly she wormed her way through the black circle—her breasts, and now her waist. If only her hips would slip through the porthole! Jenny's head swooped down toward the water. A thousand echoes thundered in her ears and her thoughts were splintered to fragments. Her baby would never know her—better that she would die. Peter would never love her—better that she should—

With one last tug she pulled her self clear. There was a tiny splash. A huge wave roared along the side of the ship and, finding an open porthole, rushed in. Two people slipped like boats for a split second and then, as the water eddied with the lurching of the Marela, were stranded limply in a corner. Macduff, restless in the adjoining cabin, heard a metallic click during a moment's lull, the crash of a slipped heel against the partition.

Angela found a letter from Lovat waiting for her at Peking.

My dear Angela (he wrote): Many things have happened since you left, and I'm afraid I'm going to hurt you a great deal with what I have to say. You must have realized for ages that things could not continue the way they have been between us. I had an idea, when you started off on this trip, that the situation might right itself, but I've fallen in love, and not a passing fancy this time.

I shall furnish evidence when you return, if you feel you want to divorce me, Angela, and, of course, I shall make it all as easy as possible. I want you to believe that our love while it lasted, was something separate, part and wonderful; that I have never known a woman I admired as much as you. But I'm afraid I should continue to hurt you and things would only get worse, as you must realize. I could not bear your reproachful eyes at Cairo although you said so little. Wouldn't it be better if we went our separate ways? I have already left your home and am living at my club. Jack is with me, but I shall return him as soon as you get back. Forgive me, Angela, and I hope we shall always be the best of friends. Yours, Lovat.

P. S.—Would you please get me a very fine jade bracelet in China? The Kitten wants one.

The letter dropped from Angela's hand and she stared after it as it fell. She had feared it all along. Of course, she would let him have his divorce, although it would be beastly—all of it! The tears went sliding down Angela's cheeks. She had not thought that he would ship completely out of her life as soon as she turned her back. There would be no use opposing him now, and why try to hold him when he had already passed from her life?

She took out her writing things and sat down to reply to his letter. Darling Lovat:

I waited and waited for a letter, and then when I got to Peking I learned that there wasn't anything more to look forward to. Of course you shall have your divorce. I shouldn't dream of standing in your way. Make any arrangements you like and as soon as I get back I shall talk things over with you. I hope you're sure you love the girl Lovat. I'm going out to look for the bracelet tonight. It will be my wedding gift to your new bride, and I hope you will both be happy. I blame myself for marrying you, ever; but I love you still, and always shall. I'm afraid.

Angela.

Macduff might go with her on her quest. He would have no idea that she was buying a gift for her successor, and he was certainly obliged enough not to know that she was hurt. Angela changed into her gayest gown, like Jenny with her flowered frock at Bangkok. At last she went down to the lounge and found Macduff with a whisky before him.

"I've been commissioned to buy a jade bracelet," she explained lightly. "I want to find the loveliest one in China. We'll scour the city until we get it."

"It sounds like a foolish idea to me, but I shall come."

"Good! I can always depend on you."

No Compromise

Housewives who appreciate exceptionally fine products never seem to "compromise" with their grocer by accepting substitutes that are "just as good."

It is to this sense of appreciation that we owe a great deal of our progress. Year in and year out housewives never fail to recognize exceptionally quality in our Flour. Therefore, they accept no substitutes, but instead, they always specify:

'NEWS' Advertising Pays Because of Greater Coverage, City and Rural Homes

Letter from Stephenson's Grocery testifies to results of properly arranged advertising going direct to homes in the Fulton trade territory.

STEPHENSON GROCERY

COMMERCIAL AVENUE
FULTON, KENTUCKY

Editor
Fulton County News,
Fulton, Kentucky.
DEAR SIR:

From time to time I have been using advertising space in THE NEWS, and have always been a firm believer in newspaper advertising.

But last week I was more firmly convinced than ever that advertising in your paper gets greater results. The new subscribers you are adding to your list are very beneficial, for when my advertisement reaches several hundred more readers, our grocery values are brought to their attention. Our advertisement last week brought greater returns than we have ever had before through any method of advertising. Customers flocked to our store all day, and we attribute our success to right merchandising and right advertising.

Your able assistance in preparation of copy and providing suitable illustrations are invaluable in obtaining results. The manner in which you display advertisements, and the coverage of THE NEWS are valuable in securing maximum results. We have checked your list of subscribers and find it most satisfactory for our use.

Beware The Cough That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchitis, if you can get relief now with Creomulsion, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascarilla for its mild laxative effect and most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Doctors also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, combined so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

"Results have demonstrated to us that the newspaper is by far the most effective medium for the promotion of our retail sales," says the president of a well known mail order concern, which will spend $9,500,000 for newspaper advertising this year.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

WEEKLY BUSINESS SURVEY

Retail trade continued to be affected by a continuance of severe weather in most parts of the country, but the level of volume was in the main ahead of last year. There was considerable broadening of industrial activity largely as a result of steel buying, according to reports from the Department of Commerce from leading cities.

Department store sales in New York were well advanced over last year, but in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Atlanta, Birmingham and Kansas City, there was some recession over last week. Substantial gains were reported by Philadelphia, Seattle, Houston, Wilmington, Charleston and New Orleans. In virtually all cases, business for the full month of January was well ahead of the 1935 month.

Wholesale lines were not feeling the surge of Spring business, but buying picked up in most wholesale centers, and the fact resulting in the cotton markets from the AAA decision was clearing. The sale of cotton fabrics on a par with production, while wool business continued its phenomenal rise. Trade shows attracted large buying delegations to Chicago, Los Angeles and Minneapolis with optimism prevailing under the influence of low retail inventories.

The retarding influence of the weather was partly counteracted by the heavy fuel business, and construction continued to maintain a wide margin of volume over last year in residential, commercial and industrial building.
