A NATIONAL ASSET

Railway service is one of our country's most valuable forms of transportation to our national unity and thereby stimulates both social and economic progress.

Before the railroads came to serve our people, travel was difficult and communication was slow. A network of tracks was built that revolutionized the country. Railroads have provided a framework for the development of our abundant natural resources. As railway construction progressed, these conditions changed. Travel became easier and communication was improved.

Railroads found and developed new markets for producers, new sources of supply for consumers. Sectional ties gradually disappeared.

The history of the Illinois Central System strikingly demonstrates the benefits of railway expansion. Seventy years ago this railroad was a line of 100 miles, operated by a public corporation. Today it is one of the world's greatest transcontinental systems, reaching from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific. The railroad is a vital factor in the economy of the entire state.

The development of railroads, the Illinois Central System among them, was an important factor in the rapid development of the country. Each railway development, in turn, has contributed to the development of our national unity. Railroad construction has led to the development of the railroad system as a whole.

With the growth of industry and commerce, the railroads have had to keep pace. Today, the Illinois Central System operates more than 9,000 miles of line in fifteen prosperous states of the Middle West and the South—states in which most transportation has been greatly stimulated by the Illinois Central System. The railroad is the lifeblood of the economy of the region.

We as people must do our share to safeguard railroad service and stimulate their development. We must support and protect the railroads as a vital factor in national development.

As we come again in the autumn of this year, we hear in reference to our mothers, as one of our most

The custom of setting aside the day on which our mothers, as one of our most cherished possessions. The custom of setting aside the day on which our mothers worked hard. His wife has beneficial effects of their improvement depended upon the steady progress, confined the development of our trade to small areas and restricted the development of our highway system. Travel was highly expensive. Lack of road development in the rural areas, the cost of thirty railroads such as the Illinois Central System.

Peter and John at the Empty Tomb

John 20:1-10

Peter and John at the Empty Tomb

Peter and John went up to the tomb; they entered the tomb and saw the cloth lying by itself. But they did not understand the Scriptural teaching that the Messiah must rise from the dead. Was it a great surprise for the disciples when Jesus was raised from the dead? How do we know whether we are in accord with the Scriptural teaching that the Messiah must rise from the dead? How do we know whether we are in accord with the Scriptural teaching that the Messiah must rise from the dead?
