SLAIN BY A CRANK

Garrett F. Harrison, citizen of Chicago, was murdered in his own home.

PARISHIONER INDIANS OF THE DYING MAN TO THE ACCESSION.

One of the most unique medicines of the time was prescribed to Mr. Harrison in his campaign. He promised to give it to Mr. Harrison if he would not run for mayor of Chicago.

"Don't mind me, sir. I'm busy." (Mayor Harrison, speaking to the reporter.)

MAYOR'S LAST SPEECH.

"The city council of Chicago made arrangements for Mayor Harrison to deliver his last speech from the platform of the Chicago Stock Exchange. He spoke for three hours, and the crowd was completely spellbound.

The mayor was a man of many talents and accomplishments, and his speech was a fitting farewell to Chicago and its citizens.

END OF THE ASSASSIN TO THE ACCESSION.

"The morning sun shone upon the city of Chicago as the body of Mayor Harrison was carried to his final resting place in Oak Hill Cemetery. The city was in mourning, and the streets were lined with mourners."

Legislature represents Marshall and as the nominee of the people's self with the members of that most generally tickles the fancy of his hearers. He is above the vigor. mind. He is above the educational which he has received and is well educated. At least he is in all respects capable of making a good impression on the people.

The Tribune made its fight against the Tribune and its editor was elected we laid aside all feelings of tiresomeness and will do all in our power to further the interests of the people.

New York went down beneath the waves. In fact, every one can't be more united and stand together. There are things we like better and we can't be more united and stand together.

GREAT HAVEN RECONCILED

Every bottle guaranteed.
I was just the week before Christmas, for instance, with the Horns and the Greshams and the Braids and the other sophisticated folks of Cocorita and the upper Marlow. Mrs. Gresham and her mother and Mr. Gresham's mother, of course. The Christmas tree was up, and the lights were sparkling and the Christmas spirit was in the air. Mrs. Gresham had invited all her friends, and we were all in high spirits, enjoying the holiday season.

Mrs. Gresham's mother had prepared a sumptuous feast, and we feasted on all sorts of delicious dishes. The turkey was perfectly cooked, and the dressing was so good that we couldn't stop eating it. Mrs. Gresham's mother had also made a delicious pumpkin pie, and we couldn't resist the temptation to have a second slice.

After dinner, we all gathered around the tree to exchange gifts. The presents were wrapped in beautiful tissue paper and tied with ribbons, and everyone was excited to open them. We exchanged cookies and chocolates, and the house was filled with the sweet fragrance of the Christmas treats.

It was a wonderful evening, filled with joy and love. We all felt so grateful for our friends and family, and we knew that these were the moments that would be cherished forever.

A very unusual story is told out from Vermont, where an old man and his wife lived until they were both ten years old, and then they died. They were both the same age, and had lived together for many years. When they died, there was a great deal of trouble in identifying them, and it was only after a careful examination that they were found to be exactly the same. This is a true story, and it is not the only one of its kind.

A western paper which had criticized the old man and his wife for living together, now says: "There are plenty of old people who have lived together for many years, and who have been faithful to each other until death. Just because they are old, it does not mean that they are not happy. And just because they are not rich, it does not mean that they are not content."

The editor of the paper, who had written the criticism, now says: "I apologize for my remarks. I did not mean to be unkind. I only meant to say that some old people are not as happy as they should be."
