IRA ARP

INVENTOR, ARTIST.

MARRIED AND T RUMPETIST.

IRA ARP was not a trumpeter by trade. He was a handsome cornetist, but his real profession, though not a common one, was that of an inventor. Newspapers have often referred to him as "the cornetist who writes", and the name has stuck to him. It was not until he was well into his thirties that he found his real niche in life. Then, he took up art, and his early career was spent in the world of invention. He was a man of many talents, and his work was highly regarded. He was one of the first inventors to realize the potential of the phonograph, and he was a pioneer in the field of sound recording. His inventions included a number of practical applications, such as the ARP piano, which was one of the earliest examples of a mechanical piano, and the ARP violin, which was a type of bowed string instrument. His work was highly respected, and he was a respected member of the musical community. He was a man of great talent, and his legacy lives on through his work and his contributions to the world of music.
