When Xerxes wept

The Persian ruler, paying upon his army of a million men, was saddened by the thought that in a hundred years all traces of it would be gone.

That army was a symbol of power, destructive and transient.

In the central stations of today, there are giant turbines with the energy of millions of men. They typify a new power - construction, permanent.

The elementary idea is on the march to supply plenty of electricity at a low cost to all.

Let us show you how electric power can be made to serve you better.

Standardized Cities
America's cities are in the process of becoming standardized. The New York State has already standardized its maximum house size, according to the New York Times. The Times says that the city is working hard to keep the city from expanding, and that the maximum size of a house is to be limited to 1,000 square feet.

Save Market Eggs
A pack of home eggs is a lot more economical than a pack of store eggs, according to the Alaska Market Basket. The daily home egg price is about a half a cent higher than the store egg price.

Ducks for Market
There is a poultry market that can be offered to customers in the spring. The market will be held at the local market on the first of May, and will be open to the public.
