Firms Delay Needed Construction
Pending Improvement Conditions

New York. - While corporate executives meeting at annual conventions this week are generally free from worries about the necessity of finding funds for new construction plans, their failure to meet in more than one executive plan has resulted in a saving of substantial sums that would have been spent on expansion.

The importance of this, however, in view of the impending additional business, is evident from the fact that these expenditures were estimated to be over $250,000,000.
