NEW WELL AND TAX RATE ARE DISCUSSED

The Fulton city council met in regular monthly session Monday night with mayor and all members present. After routine business had been transacted and bills okayed by lengthy discussion was held by the body on bids received for digging a new well at the water works to replace an old one recently abandoned.

Three bids have been received from Carlos Well Supply Co. and Lane Corp. Co., both of Memphis, and M. C. Morris Pump and Well Supply Co. of Jackson, Tenn. No decision was reached, and action was deferred until further discussion and investigation. It is estimated, however, that a new well will cost approximately $4,000.

People of this community are warned to stop the extended and uncontrolled use of their lawn sprinklers and hose, as there is an ordinance prohibiting the waste of city water by this means. Inasmuch as the water supply is not up to average, and summer increases demand, it is important that water consumers be more saving and less wasteful in the use of city water.

No advance was made in the tax rate for 1936, which will remain at $1.05 per hundred. The council decided to advertise property on which taxes are delinquent after July 10 and property owners are urged to pay their delinquent taxes before additional penalties and extra costs accrue.

"WALK OUT OR BE CARRIED OUT" COMMANDED DEPUTY WALL

Al Ferguson of the Palestine community near Fulton is being held in jail at Hickman in default of two bonds of $1,000 and $500 when he waived examination before Judge Claude L. Walker, and was held over for the action of the September grand jury on charges of "unlawfully and feloniously striking Frank Stroud with a club, a deadly weapon with intent to kill" and with "drawing and flourishing a deadly weapon, a shotgun, on an officer, and threatening to kill him, and resisting arrest."

According to reports from the officers, Ferguson is alleged to have accosted Stroud on the latter's farm north of Fulton, while Stroud was plowing and to have threatened to kill him. He cut a club and told Stroud he intended to kill him for a grudge he held against him resulting from trouble over pasturing livestock, it is alleged. Ferguson is said to have struck Stroud over the head with the club, but before serious injury was done, Stroud grabbed the club and knocked Ferguson unconscious, and then left him on the ground.

Upon arrival of officers at Ferguson's home where the latter had fled, the officers were confronted with a gun in the hands of Ferguson, who told the officers to go on their way. Joe Wall, deputy sheriff, called Ferguson's bluff and told him either to "walk out or be carried out." Ferguson finally yielded and was taken to the county jail at Hickman.

FARMERS IN SECTION CAN NOW GET LOANS

During the depression, many small farm operators have not been able to keep up their farms or to replace their farming equipment and livestock. The Rural Rehabilitation Administration is in a position to extend small loans to such farmers on the basis of farm and home management plans for the following purposes:

1. Purchase of livestock or feed for livestock.
2. Purchase of farming equipment, including building materials, and other operating expenses.
3. Pay for seeds, fertilizers, and other operating expenses.
4. Purchase of materials for soil improvement, such as lime and phosphate.
5. Purchase of home equipment and food or clothing for the family.

Persons eligible for these loans are small farm owners, or the farm owners, sharecroppers, and other farmers who need financial help and cannot obtain reasonable credit elsewhere, provided they have sufficient land on which to make a living and who show integrity, managerial ability, and resourcefulness.

If you are interested in securing this type of loan and services, get in touch with your County Agricultural Agent and he will direct you to Rural Rehabilitation, or come to Stovall Building, Mayfield, Ky., or County Agent's office, Hickman, Ky., every Thursday.

THIS AND THAT

Men are put into responsible positions who don't have the intelligence necessary to make a second rate ribbon clerk, and who receive salaries entirely out of proportion to their earning ability in any line.

I ran across this new simile the other day. It is as easy as it is for a political speaker to get applause from an audience of federal office holders.

I've tried all my life not to worry about my mistakes. I think the worst part of most mistakes is worrying about them. One can do as much worrying about a little mistake as he can about a big one. The best plan is to put our mistakes behind us, resolve not to make the same one again and forget them. That isn't so easy either.

The law presumes a man is innocent until he is proven guilty, but my neighbors and my wife's relations presume I am guilty until I am proven innocent.

Incidentally when it comes to proving anything like that these two groups of people are pretty hard to convince.

One of the rudest shocks I have had in a long time I experienced recently when I went back to my old home town and saw the woman who, as a girl took the prize at the beauty show at the county fair fifty years ago.

I felt when I saw her, and she looked me over, that she was commending herself for the good judgment she had used as a girl.

JIM WEAVER STANDS OUT

Weaver has been a lot of places since he toddled down the steps of Western Kentucky State Teachers College in 1927 with a degree of architect, but it looks as if 1936 will find him established in a permanent job as Pirate ace.

BASIS OF PROSPERITY

Almost everyone, including the majority of business men in cities, now, recognizes and accepts the fact that agricultural prosperity is the basis of general prosperity and that restoring and maintaining agricultural prosperity is not only a matter of vital concern to farmers, but also to business men generally. Business men have discovered along with the other facts emphasizing the dependence of other industries upon agriculture, that agriculture purchases annually, in normal times, more than six billion dollars worth of goods and services from other industries; also that agriculture supplies the materials upon which depend industries giving employment to nearly half of all the workers in other industries.

Today agriculture of this country may be divided into two major phases: crop production, and livestock production. Each is dependent upon the other, but livestock production, which has been given so little consideration by the public as a whole, demands our first and most serious consideration because of the fact that livestock, more than all other factors combined, determines the total value of all farm crops.

The percentage of the total area devoted to crops that must, in the main, be marketed through livestock, is another phase of the situation that emphasizes what livestock does for us. We find that nine percent of the United States produce fibre crops such as cotton, tobacco and flax; 21 percent of the cultivated area and four percent of the total area produce crops that are utilized for human food; and 70 percent of the cultivated area and 69 percent of the total area produce crops that must be marketed through livestock.

Livestock serves us in another very important manner, the full significance of which is not generally appreciated. Livestock is our most important source of food. The human animal, just as any other animal, must be supplied with protein, fat and energy and livestock furnishes 52 percent of the protein, 80 percent of the fat and 40 percent of the energy we utilize.

The livestock industry is important in another respect. It furnishes the raw material for the largest manufacturing industry in the country—the meat-packing industry. A late report by the U. S. Department of Commerce shows that the products of the packing industry for the past year had a value approximately 60 percent greater than its nearest rival, the motor vehicle industry.

The livestock industry is tremendously important to the general public as well as the livestock producer and it is confronted with many problems that are limiting or may further limit its improvement. These problems can not be solved if the livestock producers generally will unite on a program based upon better methods, better quality, and a square deal for the industry as a whole.

Illusion and wisdom combined are the charm of life and art.—Joseph Joubert.

A friend you have to buy won't be worth what you pay for him no matter what that may be.—George Prentice.

Every man is worth just as much as the things are worth which he busies himself.—Aurelius.

SAFETY SLOGANS

A safe plan is to always expect the unexpected at intersections. Don't pick up an injured person until you know whether or not any bones have been splintered. A splintered bone may cut through the flesh and sever a major artery. Don't jay walk across street intersections. Give the driver a break. "I didn't see the train," is a poor excuse after the accident.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Always polish furniture with the grain. Prunes should be stewed in the water in which they have been soaked.

Don't keep honey in the refrigerator. It keeps better in the cupboard.

Milk which is slightly soured may be made fit for use by stirring in a little soda.

Soap and water in ordinary laundering will remove ink stains from washable fabrics.

The estimate for the winter wheat crop for the United States has been cut 30 million bushels under the estimate of a month ago. May 1 the estimate was 463,708,000 bushels. April 1 the estimate was 493,166,000.

The Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation of Akron, Ohio, plans to build an airship larger than the German Hindenburg.

Tests have shown that an ordinary candle when lighted can be seen for sixteen miles by fliers over the Sahara desert. The airway course across the Sahara is lighted by oil beacons which have sufficient oil to keep them burning for two years without replenishment.

Gasoline taxes were first levied in the United States by Oregon in 1919. By 1929 the tax had spread to every state in the Union.

The National Safety Council reports a decline of 9 percent in automobile accidents the first quarter of 1936.

Dairy farmers cash income for the first three months of 1936 shows an increase of $24,000,000 over the corresponding period a year ago, according to the Milk Industry Foundation. The total for the quarter was $323,000,000 representing the largest source of farm income.

TEXAS CENTENNIAL

This year the big fair is the Texas Centennial at Dallas. Something like $25,000,000 has been spent to provide an exposition which, within its scope, promises to be both educational and entertaining. The show at Dallas will open on June 6. The whole Southwest is enthusiastic about it and the indications are that every road leading to Dallas will be crowded with cars all summer, and the railroads, bus lines and air routes will have all the traffic they can attend to. From the advance announcements that I have seen, I think the Dallas Fair will be worth anybody's time.

The historic event which the Texas Centennial commemorates has always seemed to me one of the most stirring episodes in our national history. I am glad to learn that one of the important buildings at Dallas Fair will be the hall of Heroes. It seems to me that the times call for recognition of the fact that America was founded and developed by men who were not afraid to fight.

Two-thirds of the people who attend fairs or expositions go to have a good time. They would not go at all if shows and entertainments were not provided for them. The pill of learning always has to be sugar-coated. But even those who go to such events in the spirit of frolic are bound to get something of solid value out of them.

HOROSCOPE

JUNE 1-2 You are proud and ambitious, and your literary ability is above the average. Your disappointments are keen, and at all times you are very independent, fond of home and family, to which no sacrifice is too great. Generally cheerful and loving, but at times your anger can be bitter and cruel. You possess the happy faculty of being satisfied under all conditions.

JUNE 3-4-5 Though generally careful and cautious, at times you are venturesome to the verge of recklessness, but are always able to keep out of compromising situations. You possess much business ability, have literary talent, and though not fond of criticism, yourself, you are often found criticizing others.

June 6-7 You are quiet, forceful, a somewhat profound thinker, with a keen sense of justice. You are pure and clean in thought and purpose, and can be a powerful comforter to one in trouble.

According to J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, crime costs the United States each year five times as much as is spent for education. Mr. Hoover's figures are crime $15,000,000,000; education, $3,000,000,000. In the opinion of Mr. Hoover the political-gangster misalliance is the principal support of crime.

Japan recently arranged for the largest military budget in her history. $669,000,000 was voted for this purpose.

POTPOURRI

One of the disappointing, discouraging things about humanity is the ease with which your good friend can be turned against you.

Never ask a girl of sixteen what she is laughing about, for she doesn't know. But I know—it's because she is a sixteen-year-old girl, and she has a right to laugh.

You have two eyes and one tongue. Therefore you should see twice as much as you tell.

Also it sometimes turns out that a select party is very poorly selected.

When it begins to sprinkle, it is usually too late to begin to save up for a rainy day.

A woman who will tell her honest age will tell anything.

TWO MINUTE SERMON

CAN WE FIND SUCH A ONE AS THIS: When Joseph stood before King Pharaoh and interpreted his memorable dream after all the other seers had failed, and outlined the program that should be followed to save Egypt from famine, the king realizing that this would require a man of unusual ability and of unquestioned honesty and integrity, turned to those about him and said: "Can we find such a one as this, a man in whom the spirit of God is?" This is the question that has been asked countless times since, as great tasks calling for a high degree of honesty and integrity have faced the people. The quality of simple, common honesty, how much it means in the administration of our affairs today? How many times have we seen men called to positions of trust and given great opportunities, only to see them fail utterly and break down under the strain of temptation, and prove false to their trusts? More than ever before in the history of mankind does Pharaoh's cry go up for men of integrity for men of high principle, for men who cannot be bought and who cannot be sold, for men of courage who in the face of big affairs do not lose their sense of values, for men to whom honesty is ever a virtue and a practice. These men are the men in whom the Spirit of God is.

WHAT WE THINK

In a city of 63,734 near where I live the tax assessor took $4,242 tax statements. Tax could be collected on but 17,494 of these. 33,826 persons signed affidavits stating they owned no property at all and 13,923 had statements on which the constitutional exemption of $200 allowed in my state wiped out all taxable value. 6,000 of the 17,494 taxable statements became delinquent and it cost $25,000 to collect them. In the absence of any other form of taxation 17,494 paid the chair cost of government for the city. It so happens that this city has a large percentage of wage earners, and an unusually large number being employed at fair salaries even through the depression time.

I do not doubt but that this condition can be duplicated in a thousand cities in this country.

If you want to know why our government is so inefficient and wasteful just look around and note some of the appointments that are made.

THIS AND THAT

In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths. —Proverbs 4:6.

In a recent address before the convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Department of Justice said: "Crime costs this nation annually $15,000,000,000. Another startling statement made by Mr. Hoover was that there are 150,000 convicts in the United States and 1,500,000 serious crimes committed each year. Coming from a man who has demonstrated, as Mr. Hoover has, that he knows what he is talking about, the statement furnishes some real food for thought."

Some idea of how big a job it is for a president to please 120 million people may be gained when it is remembered that few people can please all the people in their village and in many instances the members of their own family, very much of the time.

As we set it, one of the greatest aids that Italy had in the subject of Ethiopia was the fact that so many of the Ethiopians deserted their own cause and went over to the Italians. Even the strongest governments are not able to fight such a foe.

Every town under the actual city size has a problem with the fire fans. Fire fans are those who run to every fire and block the streets with their cars.

Reciprocal trade pacts are being entered into with the various countries. The purpose is to stimulate business in both countries. Unless such an outlet can be established for our industrial and foreign products, production is going to have to be curtailed, since in many lines it has greatly out-grown local consumption. The experiment of reciprocal trade agreements will be interesting in that it will help to discover which plan is best. At present opinion is divided among four groups. One group believes that while we should sell to other nations extensively we should buy nothing from them and that all foreign products should be shut out either by law or an insurmountable tariff wall. The second group believes that trade should be free with a tariff for revenue only. The third group believes that there should be a tariff high enough to permit local industry to sell at a long profit but not high enough to exclude all foreign products. The fourth group believes that the best results are to be obtained by reciprocal trade agreements by the terms of which we trade with other nations and they with us on a semi-restricted basis. This is the plan that is now being tried.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau, has proven his theory that the way to catch a criminal is to employ men smarter than the criminals. If the Department of Justice continues on the job and goes down the line after the real public enemies, the racketeers, it will earn and receive the gratitude of American business.

We note where the Kansas and Missouri bankers in a recent meeting resolved against the government's entering business and asked that as rapidly as possible that it withdraw. Only a few short months or years ago the banks of these states were on their knees, to the government to step in and save them by loaning them money on frozen assets. Here was a chance for the private banking industry to show its independence and come to the support of its weaker brothers with liberal loans at low rates of interest. None of us like to see government in business except when the same government is pulling us out of the hole.

We note in an exchange an item of a Bible that has been in use in one family for six generations. It is remarkable how these old books wear out in the same time a dozen copies of Lena Rivers.

A plant to produce fuel alcohol to blend with gasoline has been assembled at Atchison, Kansas. The alcohol will be produced from agricultural products. The plant which is an experiment in this field and has an initial capacity of 10,000 gallons a day. The experiment is being watched with considerable interest. If an economical fuel can be produced from agricultural products it will open up a vast domestic market for farm products.

The Soviet government, which started out as the greatest experiment in communism, is gradually working back to the capitalistic idea. One by one the radical ideas are being abandoned as it is proven they are not the best practice. Individuals are being gradually permitted to own property. It has been found that by this plan a greater stability and contentment is built up. This thing is noticeable in Russia, when a plan is tried and found not to work it is soon abandoned and something else is tried. With such a policy there is little doubt that the best government she has ever known.

A reader of this paper has it figured it out that the federal housing program would have gone over better if it had provided automobiles instead of new homes. People don't want new homes. They want new cars.

Though Samuel Insull, with his pyramided holding companies, lost more money for people than any other one man, if he should start up again tomorrow, he would not want for subscribers. There is one born every minute and they seem to live forever.

It is strange how the people who always seem to know how everything should be done seldom accept the responsibility for doing anything in the community.

It begins to look as though the League of Nations was going to have to call in Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis if they are ever going to get any place. The Judge has a fair record of success with his league.

Whether the best interests of humanity and civilization have been served in the League's allowing matters in Germany and England to proceed without interference can only be determined in the light of subsequent history. Avoiding war may be the best thing to do or it may mean merely putting off the evil day.

An effort was made recently to reduce the appropriation for the Department of Justice which is in charge of J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the G-Men. Opposition stopped abruptly when Mr. Hoover announced that any weakening of this law enforcement agency might result in a wave of kidnapping in this country. Curtailment of the fine efforts of the department would be indefensible economy. The high degree of efficiency has very noticeably cut down major crime in this country. And crime is the most costly thing with which we have to contend.

It is severe jolts to the idealist who likes to think that the world is getting better to witness the pillage and theft of Ethiopia. Here is a nation that tended strictly to its own affairs. It was content to live in a part of the world that would not support any other race of people. When attacked by Italy it was wholly unprepared to fight, being a non-militaristic nation. The frantic and tragic appeals of its ruler, Haile Selassie, fell upon deaf ears. The whole world turned its back and let the invader rob and despoil a brother Christian nation.

What changes time brings, it seems only yesterday that the current theme of agricultural meetings was the quest for a way to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before.

Italy could not pay her war debt to this nation, yet she was able to dig up several hundred million dollars to wage an indefensible war against Ethiopia. It is things like this that cause the average man to doubt the wisdom of the war debt settlement.

The success of the G-Men under J. Edgar Hoover in bringing in the major criminals of the country is going to result in a lesser number of minor criminals and thugs. The petty criminals are made bolder when gangsters are permitted to operate and successfully evade the law.

If the big offenders are caught the lesser offenders will have more fear of the law. The Department of Justice under J. Edgar Hoover may become the nations greatest crime deterrent. Another equally great step in crime prevention will be made when offenders and law violators come to feel that punishment will invariably follow apprehension. Surety of punishment is a greater crime deterrent than severity of punishment.

A reader of this paper tells us that quintuplets were born at his house yesterday. The blessed event took place in the wood shed and their mother is a Maltese.

The cost of getting the bonus checks to the veterans, preparing bonds and records, and mailing and checking applications, is estimated at twelve million dollars.

This constitutes the best argument I have seen for a sales tax.

There may be some faults with a sales tax but I don't imagine there nearly as many as the above instance shows regarding the present method of raising money by taxing property.

Spurn Modern Tactics

THE first week in May is the signal for two widely different methods of honoring the salmon—King Chinook—along the Columbia River.

At Celilo Falls, Oregon, the Indians observe their annual ceremonial salmon feast and Thanks giving, one of the oldest traditions in the religion of the American Indian.

Borne on a platter of cedar bark, sprinkled with the down of a young eagle, the first great Chinook of the run caught as throughout generations with ancient spears, is carried to the Celilo Indian long house. Prayers of Thanksgiving to the Great Father for bringing the salmon back, the spring feast, and the salmon dance, from which the white man has always been excluded, are a part of the celebration which follows.

The Indians fish for salmon on the rocks ceded to them generations ago, fishing rights to various rocks being handed down from father to son. It is considered a disgrace for the fishermen perched above the treacherous rapids to secure themselves with ropes or other support and each year the river takes some toll, an Indian giving his life rather than lose his battle with the giant fish.

On this same day, further along the river, the modern antithesis of this scene is enacted. More than 2000 fishermen, in boats equipped with the most modern of gear set forth at noon to begin the season which supplies raw material for the canned salmon industry. The average catch of these commercial fishermen each season is from five to 12 tons, which, canned, is sold to all parts of the world.

among the club members was held by Mrs. Ardella Sams. Miss V. Yarber held low score and Miss Martha Moore held guest high score. Each was presented a lovely prize.

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—The Department of Agriculture and its stepchild, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, have launched the initial phase of the new soil conservation program. This, it will be remembered, is the agricultural benefit policy worked out to supersede the unconstitutional AAA, and the speed with which the department has developed the early phases of its new program is noteworthy. It has not wasted any time, nor could it waste time, in order to make the new program effective in this crop year.

While the work of policy making has gone on at an unusual speed for governmental procedure, I am afraid it cannot be said that the soundness of its program can be commended in the same manner.

Some of the soil building practices proposed under the new scheme of aid to the farmer undoubtedly will work out but there are others about which there is much doubt. Indeed, already it has been pointed out that certain of the practices proposed are vulnerable and are likely to lead to serious trouble both for agriculture and for the government.

More than a score of the states were included in the first set of rules and regulations governing soil building practices and rates of payment. The others are nearing completion and will be promulgated at an early date. But the first block of rules and regulations and rates of payment establish the general outline of the department's ideas and it can be said, I think, that in these rules and regulations (the government must lay down general provisions) lies the trouble. They are replete with that which we usually describe as red tape and red tape never has failed to cause trouble.

Practices for which farmers may receive payments vary from state to state. They include the new seedling of legumes and grasses, the plowing under of green manure crops, the planting of forest trees, the eradication of perennial noxious weeds and, in certain areas, a variety of special soil handling methods such as listing, strip cropping and fallowing, terracing or approved summer fallow. In addition, farmers in certain dry land areas have the option of substituting some of the practices for acreage of soil conserving crops.

In announcing the new practices and rates of payment, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration declared that the policies follow in general the recommendations made to the Adjustment Administration by the several state committees. It was declared that the sentiment throughout has been "to adapt the general plan to the specific needs of the states in conformity with the approved methods which have been tested by the land grant colleges, the experiment stations and soil conservation service." The Adjustment Administration considered that these three agencies furnished the best basis, or the best foundation, for the construction of the generally new program. It follows, therefore, that a considerable part of the new setup comes by way of expansion of the old soil conservation service which has had much experience in that work. It cannot be said, however, that the new phases have been tested nor is it more than conjecture how the farmers themselves will take to the plans now offered.

Just as the soil conserving practices vary, so do the rates of payment as between the several states. It is the claim of the Adjustment Administration that variation in rates "is due largely to variations in the cost of seed, in rates of seedling or to differences in the requirements with respect to soil building practices." Rates of payment for soil conservation on irrigated land are higher than for those on dry land and likewise long standing agricultural practices have been taken into account in calculating the rates to be paid in various sections to offset the greater or less expense to which farmers normally are put in producing their crops.

Generally in the dry land states, the seedling and growing of perennial legumes, such as alfalfa, will net the farmer about $2.00 per acre but in irrigated districts the rate of payment varies from $3.00 to $4.00 per acre.

For most states, the rate for biennial legumes is $1.50 on non-irrigated land and from $2.50 to $3.00 an acre on irrigated land. Rates of payment for growing sweet clover are somewhat less as are the rates of payment for growing annual legumes.

The rates for plowing under green manure crops are from $1.00 to $2.50 an acre, depending upon the amount of growth which is turned under. For planting forest trees on crop land, farmers are scheduled to be paid $5.00 an acre.

For weed eradication the program proposes to pay $5.00 an acre where only periodical cultivation is required but it will reward the farmer for taking out weeds by chemical treatment in addition to periodical cultivation by paying him $10.00 an acre. In addition to these methods of soil conservation, strip cropping and fallowing command about $1.00 an acre of benefit to the farmer while terracing will be paid for around the basis of $2.00 or $3.00 an acre.

Other states, as they are brought under the soil conservation program, may expect rates similar to these for the first half of the country.

From this program, two sets of conclusions have been drawn. One school of thought maintains that the regulations are simple and easy of enforcement; the other group argues that it is utterly impossible to apply rules and regulations, administered from a central bureau in Washington, to the whole country and yet enable flexibility of management sufficient to meet the countless problems that will arise.

One conclusion is that by administration of the rules and regulations through state and county organizations and with the aid of state experiment stations, individual farmers can be advised and can work out their individual problems with ease. The other school of thought contends that this very fact means a perfect maze of different applications of the rules and regulations both as to language and intent; this group likewise maintains that favoritism will permeate the whole structure and that there will be injustice, ill will and politics in the way the local organizations deal with the farmers.

While the policy makers in the marble palace known as the Department of Agriculture contend that the soil conservation program will spell the end of surpluses and will accomplish better prices for what the farmers produce, another argument stresses the claim that the new program means dislocation of agricultural output and the market to which that output normally goes.

To go back a year or more, it can be recalled how the original AAA upset the apple cart for one after another of the farm crops. When land was withdrawn from cotton, it went to tobacco production and there was too much tobacco. There had to be tobacco control. When land was withdrawn from tobacco production, it went to peanuts and there had to be peanut control. And so it was with various other crops until there was a perfect network of crop control each, basically, working at something like a cross purpose with other things.

As the new soil conservation plans unfold, those who doubt their efficacy point to numerous new dislocations that are comparable to those of the old AAA which I have just enumerated. For example, it is claimed, and there seems to be justice in the claim, the placing of a premium on growth of hay crops such as alfalfa, clover and vetch, can mean only an overabundance of those crops. I do not say that it is certain to occur but if conditions repeat themselves, the prices for hay crops in the market are due to fall. The law of supply and demand still governs regardless of theory and regardless of the attempts of bureaucrats to plan which the farmer shall or shall not grow. If world consumption falls low, crops of hay will be valuable. The chances, however, seem to be wholly in the other direction.

Time alone can tell how this thing will work out but I cannot believe any sound thinking person or any person who analyzes the program through to its ultimate end can say that it is free from weaknesses. The tragedy of the thing is that government is experimenting on the farmers. With that I am not in accord and never can be. Further, while I dislike to disparage honest efforts, I am afraid the new soil conservation program embodies some politics as well as efforts to help agriculture.
