THE LISTENING POST

● I had an experience the other day which brought a new inspiration and thrill to my life, and one which I will not soon forget. I always get an inspiration in seeing men and women who are really doing things, who are vitally interested in their work, and whose work is something really worth while.

● I attended a meeting of the Weakley County Teachers' Association, which was held in the court house in Dresden, and attended by more than one hundred of the county's 123 teachers. Mrs. Frances Ford, a lifelong friend of mine, is finishing up her fourth year as county superintendent of Weakley County, and for a time I was in her office as the teachers came in for their monthly pay checks. They were all happy because of the fact that they were receiving an increase from the state, a pay cut made some time ago having been abrogated, and that was enough for a lot of happiness, for most school teachers are not adequately paid, at best.

● I was interested in watching Mrs. Ford as she handed out the checks, and struck by the fact that she seemed to know all of them so intimately. Of course, this is natural, for Mrs. Ford has managed to be elected to this office a couple of times and election to any county office entails this on any candidate. But Mrs. Ford knew them so intimately, and always had a word of a personal nature for all of them. It seemed a pity to me that she was going out of office at the end of this year, but those who run for public office must grow accustomed to defeat. I felt sure that Mrs. Ford had done a good job during her four years in this most important office.

● Later I looked at the teachers as they were all in one group, and I was struck by their keen alert faces. I like to look at the faces of people, and have an idea I know something about them. I think I can detect a weak face and I know I can recognize a strong, resolute face. Above all else, I like to see what I privately call a "balanced" face. By that I mean a face which shows strength, character, humor, tolerance, intelligence and all those things which go to make a well rounded person.

● In that group of more than one hundred persons, few of them known to me, I gazed into those many faces, and knowing that their daily work had so much to do with future lives, I was pleased and thrilled when I failed to find a single face which I would classify as weak. I saw many which I would call balanced—keen, alert, intelligent faces, and I could feel that the children of that section were in good hands, and that good work in developing them was being done.

● I really believe that teachers have an almost sacred task. This job of taking our youngsters as they leave the home, with whatever training we have been able to give them, and then building on that foundation into something sound for the future is a holy task. Of course, there will be many who have little foundation on which to build. There will be some for whom little can be done. But there will be many, a majority, in fact, who will take care of this world of ours after we have gone. How well they do the job depends largely on the work of teachers who take these young lives and mold something fine and worth while out of them.

● Yes, teachers have a grand calling. There can be no doubt of this. I was glad indeed to meet this group of teachers in the Tennessee town and realize how earnestly they do their work. Great dividends in humanity will come from such work in future years.

House Passes "Omnibus" Labor Bill

First Night Sessions Scheduled By Assembly To Prepare For Rush

Frankfort, Ky. — Stripped to a point where Administration Floor Leader E. C. Moore said "the thing left in it is two speeches," the "omnibus" labor bill was passed by the Senate late today, 30 to 6.

Bills to change the election registration and purgation system and to permit larger trucks to be operated were killed by the Senate as the House passed a Senate bill to provide free transportation for private and parochial school pupils and a House bill to create a state dry cleaners board to regulate that industry.

Both Houses scheduled their first night sessions in an effort to make ready for final adjournment Thursday.

Object of controversy between industrial and labor representatives, the "Little Wagner Act" section of the labor bill, which was eliminated before final passage, would have prohibited "unfair labor practices" and guaranteed workers the right to organize, join unions and bargain collectively.

Must Agree On Mediator As made ready for House action, the measure would authorize the state industrial relations commissioner to mediate labor disputes only when both sides accepted and when no federal agency had taken a hand. It also would create a board to establish industrial safety standards and council to regulate apprentices' employment, provide time and a half for those working more than 40 hours in seven consecutive days, and reorganize the industrial relations department.

Estimated Retail Sales Of 40 Billions For 1940 Tops 1939

New York. — Retail sales this year may total around $40,000,000,000, some trade circles predicted today. Such a total was predicted upon "a fair rate of industrial activity and volume of general business" throughout the remainder of 1940.

A $40,000,000,000 retail aggregate would represent a gain of around 5 1/4 per cent over the $38,000,000,000 in 1939, and would be the best since 1929.

The figure would cover all retail lines, from department stores, chain stores, independents and mail order houses to automobile dealers, gasoline stations, restaurants and soda fountains.

The forecasters figure the national income this year may be in the vicinity of $72,000,000,000, contrasted with around $68,500,000,000 in 1939. They assume also that there will be no letdown in such income payments not included in the national income figure as direct relief and old-age benefit payments, and other disbursements for which

Pastor At Mt. Zion Critically Injured Sunday

Rev. C. C. Clements, a student at Bethel College at McKenzie and pastor at Mt. Zion Church near Fulton, is in Noble Memorial Hospital at Paris, Tenn., suffering critical injuries sustained Sunday night when he was knocked in the head with a hatchet by a Mr. Drew from Murray, Ky., resulting from an automobile collision.

According to Rev. E. R. Ladd, who was called to the bedside of the two men yesterday, Rev. Clements and Rev. H. W. Covington, also a student at McKenzie, were driving near Puryear, Tenn., when their car was sideswiped by one driven by Mr. Drew, accompanied by a Mr. Evans, also of Murray. Rev. Clements and Rev. Covington got out of their wrecked car to see if the occupants of the other car were injured but upon approaching the car, Rev. Clements was struck down with a hatchet and hit several times after falling by Mr. Drew. Rev. Clements was rushed to the hospital where physicians say that it will be 72 hours before the extent of his injuries will be determined.

Both Drew and Evans were arrested and carried to the Paris jail. Drew has been released on bond.

Strickland Gillilan, Noted Poet And Lecturer, In Fulton Today

(By MARTHA MOORE)

Fulton had a noted visitor in town this morning—Strickland Gillilan, international lecturer and well known poet and humorist, was here today between trains, enroute to Memphis, where he will address the Goodwyn Institute Entertainment tonight.

When the Leader reporter found him this morning, he was sitting at a writing desk in the Usona hotel busily writing on the portable typewriter which he evidently carried with him at all times. When asked for an interview the noted lecturer grinned and said, "First I'd better warn you that I'm not in the least bit modest and that I've also been a newspaper reporter, so you've got a hard job on your hands."

His humor was proved by the wire which he sent to the man in charge of his lecture tonight in Memphis—it read as follows: "Confucius say: 'He who worry may expect wind-bag on 5:20 train.'" He vowed that this was the only Confucius saying of which he was guilty.

The author of "Including Finnigan," which includes the famous line, "Off again, On again, Gone again, Finnigan," makes his home at the Shoreham hotel in Washington, D. C., where he is a member of the White House correspondents association and the National Press Club, and when he is not on duty as a lecturer he spends his time writing about the political situation. He "made no bones" in voicing his views on the political situation and the various "big time" leaders in the Nation's capital. He admits he is a republican, even in Kentucky, although he says he isn't partisan as to the coming presidential election—he doesn't care who wins as long as the New Deal is defeated. He's proud of being a member of the GOP and said (although it was almost in a whisper), "I campaigned for Herbert Hoover in 1932."

Gillilan has been a lecturer for the past 40 years, having gotten his start with a Chautauqua. From appearances his lectures must take him all over the country. Yesterday at noon he spoke at Toledo, Ohio.

Fine Program Presented At Rotary Club

Arch Huddleston, through the cooperation of Paul Meeks and Misses Fay Tolley, Jo Slover, and Evelyn Kirk of Martin Junior college, presented a fine program to the Rotary club at the regular luncheon meeting today at Lowe's Cafe.

Before introducing the young ladies, President Meeks discussed the Junior College movement, which has just completed its 20th year. He told in detail of the meeting of the National Association of Junior colleges which he recently attended. There are more than 47,000 students in attendance in junior colleges and 575 colleges. The Martin Junior college is the only Public College in the State of Tenn. One interesting observation was to the effect that the Leonard Koos, the leader in the Junior college movement, predicted that the institution would soon terminate into a four-year institution, composed of the last two years of high school and the first two years of the recognized college course.

He then introduced Miss Tolley, who rendered several piano selections, followed by Miss Glover, who as an ingenue, read several humorous selections for the club. The program ended with a discussion of "The Third Term," based on President Roosevelt's indecision by Miss Kirk. She developed the idea that the President is favorable to the third term and that public opinion would deter whether he would do so.

In addition to this fine program, Don Hawkins had Strickland W. Gillilan, an internationally known humorist, who made a brief talk.

His subjects for speeches are varied and some of them are as follows: "North of the Ears", a study of the unnecessary of human stupidity, with copious and hilarious instances of refusal to use our piteous brains; "Sucker, Why Don't You Try?", a screamingly funny exhortation to us to try doing our best for a little while, just to see how it improves things; "A Confidential Confab", in this Strickland takes you on his knees and reasons with you like a Dutch uncle; "The Lowdown on Washington Highups", in this he gets you told about the people you read about but do not meet as often and as familiarly as the speaker does.

The 71-year-old humorist is the author of "Danny and Fanny", "Laugh It Off", "Sunshine and Awkwardness" and "Including You and Me" and others. He has been a free lance writer since 1906 and has served in various capacities on numerous newspapers in this country and is one of the best known after dinner speakers.

Library Bill Is Introduced

A bill recently introduced in the General Assembly to authorize an appropriation of $100,000 a year will enable the State Library Extension Division to aid in establishing library service in communities of Kentucky without such service. This service will affect over two-thirds of the people of the state.

Sixty-one counties of the state have no local public libraries within their borders. By checking the income and expenditures of the 120 counties of Kentucky it is evident that adequate library service cannot be maintained without some source of revenue. Federal aid alone cannot cover this need.

One and one-half million or 83 per cent of the rural people of Kentucky are the most impoverished by inadequate library services. It lies within the power and the duty of the state to equalize these services between rural and urban people.

State support of schools is not questioned. In a democracy the education of citizens and future citizens should not cease at the close of school attendance. The demands of modern life require people to read for information and enlightenment. This form of self education is the life-long right of every person. Public libraries offer this means of continuing education. Support of libraries is as logical and vital as that of schools. State funds thus invested help to produce more able and intelligent citizens.

State aid to school and public libraries is no longer an experiment. It has been tried with success in many states. It has been found to be a fair and equitable means of providing library services which is recognized in so many states as an integral part of a system of state provision for public education.

Senate Refuses To Stop Action On Hatch Bill

Filibuster Charged As Body Declines To Consider Farm Lands

Washington. — With advocates of the Hatch "anti-politics" bill in clear command, the Senate refused today to shunt that measure aside—even for the everpopular purpose of voting farm appropriations.

Its action left the bill, forbidding political activity to a large group of state employees, the pending business of the Senate, but also left it facing what was openly denounced in the chamber as a filibuster.

Farm Bill Delayed The Senate's decision came on a motion by Senator Russell (D-Ga.), to take up the $923,000,000 agricultural appropriation bill, containing some $300,000,000 more than the figure approved by the House, and involving a spectacular contest over governmental economy.

Voting down the Russell motion 47 to 36, the Hatch bill proponents lost a few of those who have supported them on previous ballots but who, on this particular test, were more interested in the farm bill. However, the Republican membership struck with them to a man, and from an early point in the roll call the outcome was never in doubt. Both Kentucky Senators, Barkley and Chandler, voted against the measure.

Debate Grows Warm The Senate's day was otherwise filled with spirited oratory and frankly worded exchanges between the friends and foes of the measure.

Women Democrats Give Idea Of Platform Planks They Want

Washington. — Now that women are within nailing distance of the Democratic platform, what kind of platform will they try to get in?

Answers to this question were given today by three outstanding women — Mary R. Beard, of New Milford, Conn., historian; Representative Caroline O'Day (D, N. Y.), and Constance Rourke, of Grand Rapids, Mich., biographer — in the Democratic Digest, official publication of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee.

Party Wants Feminine Views Expressions from them were asked because of Democratic National Committee has recommended that women be named to the platform committee in equal number with men. Mrs. Beard who collaborated with her husband, Charles A. Beard, in writing "The Rise of American Civilization" and "America in Mid-Passage," held that the major platform goal should be full employment. She wrote:

"Upon the successful grappling with this issue nearly everything else will turn, especially reduction in relief expenditures and increase in tax revenues."

As a practical step toward solving the unemployment problem, she gave the figures as eight to ten million men and women—Mrs. Beard suggested a plank calling for a conference of representatives of government, agriculture, industry, labor and consumers.

FINISHING IN HIGH GEAR

The current edition of the Kentucky State Legislature is now in high gear, and will operate at top speed for the remainder of the session, which is scheduled to end Thursday. If the usual pattern is followed, the clock will be stopped on the last day, in order that lawmakers may put in a full night and thus pass all necessary legislation. Committee rooms will be crowded with hard working legislators, the entire Capitol will be filled with tobacco smoke, there will be lots of hurrying and scurrying, bonuses will be passed for the Capitol hired hands, and on a note of humming industry the legislature will come to an end.

If one had no memory of what has gone before it might be presumed from this high gear ending that the legislature has really worked extremely hard. But when it is remembered that the average week's session ended on Thursdays or Fridays, with all possible holidays thrown in for good measure, it causes an observer to wonder just why all this rush is necessary at the last moment. There has been plenty of time since the first of January to do all this work in an orderly manner, but the fact remains that last Saturday was the first Saturday session held during the present session. There is simply something about a state legislature which seems to make it necessary to wait until the closing days and then whoop things through in a final all night session.

Could an observer be pardoned for looking on such things with a cynical eye? A great deal of legislation has been help up for this final period in order that it might be rushed through before any organized opposition could be developed. Several bills have been conspicuously absent in recent weeks which all of us know are due to be passed. These will be thrown into the mill at the latest possible moment and swept through in record time. Presumably this is what is happening to the so called "Little Wagner Labor Act."

It will be remembered that open hearings were had on this bill some time ago, and a great deal of opposition developed. Much bitter opposition was seen at the open hearings, and at once the bill was taken to its committee, and the word went out that it would be softened considerably and brought out for passage. Last reports stated that it would be included in an omnibus bill, and would be radically changed before being brought out. Well, this is the it will be no man can say. The writer has little hope for it being made much softer—but this time, when brought out, it will be passed. When introduced it will be accompanied by shouts of "is it a good bill?" "Yes," will be the roaring answer, and then a chorus of "let's pass it," will be heard, and for better or for worse, it will be passed.

In fact, practically all the controversial legislation will be thrown into the hopper during the closing days and if it is administration legislation it will be passed and the legislature will be completed before any organized opposition can make itself felt. For that is the way such things are done in these days in Frankfort and in practically all state capitals.

MY LITTLE GIRL

Today, my daughter, who is seven years old, started to school as usual. She wore a dark blue dress with a white collar. She had on black shoes and wore black gloves. Her cocker spaniel, whose name is Coot, sat on the front porch and whined his canine belief in the folly of education as she waved good-bye and started off to the hall of learning.

Tonight we talked about the school. She told me about the girl who sits in front of her, the girl with the yellow curls, and the boy across the aisle who make funny faces. She told me about her teacher, who has eyes in the back of her head, and about the trees in the school-yard, and about the big girl who doesn't believe in Santa Claus. We talked about a lot of things—tremendously vital, unimportant things; and then we studied spelling, reading, arithmetic—and then to bed.

She's back there now—back in the nursery sound asleep, with 'Princess Elizabeth' (that's a doll) cuddled in her right arm.

You guys wouldn't hurt her, would you? You see, I'm her daddy. When her doll is broken or her finger is cut or her head gets bumped, I can fix it—but when she starts to school, when she walks across the street, then she's in your hands.

She's a nice kid. She can run like a deer and darts about like a chipmunk. She likes to ride horses and swim and hike with me on Sunday afternoon. But I can't be with her all the time; I have to work to pay for her clothes and her education. So please help me look out for her. Please drive slowly past the schools and intersections—and please remember that children run from behind parked cars.

Please don't run over my little girl.

NEGROES RELY ON OLD CURES FOR MISERY

Memphis, Tenn. —Deep South farm Negroes, afflicted with a "misery," like their medicine on the unique side.

Here are some of their "home remedies":

A ball of camphor gum tied about the neck and resting on the chest will cure neuralgia.

To ease a sick headache, drink a cup of catnip tea. And to check nausea or constant vomiting, crush peach tree leaves, cover them with water and drink the concoction slowly.

There's nothing like a piece of well-chewed horse-radish for hoarseness, and a small bag of tea placed on the eye will rout a cold.

To stop the flow of blood, saturate the wound with turpentine and castor oil. When cows "come fresh" on grass in May, their butter is good for chapped hands.

Although there is not yet a sure-fire cure for rheumatism—which includes virtually every ailment from a crick in the neck to a strained knee—the Negroes have found a "preventive." Just carry an Irish potato in your pocket or a buckeye in the vicinity of your chest any you'll never be bothered.

IN MEMORY OF

Another saint of God has been called Home, and this time the call has come to one of God's humble, but nevertheless outstanding, warriors of the cross.

Leon Dell Craig was born on February 24, 1900, at Fulton, Ky., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Craig. His father was called from this life in 1925, but his beloved mother, now 76 years of age, is still living at Fulton. She loves the Lord and long before Brother Craig's conversion she prayed for his salvation.

On Sept. 6, 1923 Brother Craig was united in marriage to Pauline Lautenbach at Green River, Wyo. Of said union one son, Leon Dell, Jr., was born. At the age of eight years, this precious child was taken by the Great Shepherd to his eternal rest on Nov. 10, 1933.

Brother Craig has had a career composed of valleys and mountain tops, darkness and sunshine. Early in life he left home to shift for himself. When only 17 years in the year of 1917, he enlisted in the U. S. Army and served overseas in the A. E. F. during the last world war, being there across the water for a period of about 23 months.

It was in the fall of 1937 that God, in His infinite mercy, mightily drew our departed brother unto Himself. He had tasted of the world's pleasure and allurements, but in them found no abiding satisfaction. It was in Oct. 1937, as he stood shaving during the noon hour, the radio turned on, the meeting of the Christian Business Men's Committee came on the air. As he listened he heard Brother J. Harold Smith of Greenville, S. C. bringing the message from Romans 6:23 "For the wages of sin is death," etc. He saw himself, his sin, his need. Greatly convicted, he dried his face, ran out the house, boarded a street car and rode directly over to the Grand Opera House where the meeting in question had been held. He then lived only a short distance from the loop so it was only a matter of some few minutes to reach the meeting place. When he arrived there, the meeting was just closing. He made his way forward and told the preacher:

"What you have been preaching is just what I need." After a brief conversation he fell to his knees and gave himself up to the Lord Jesus Christ. He became a new creature in Christ Jesus. He had a great delight from the very moment of his salvation to speak words of praise and thanksgiving for his Lord and Saviour. He knew what it was to pass from death unto life and coveted for others the same experience and joy.

Immediately he sought to win souls for Christ. His first convert was Ray McCarthy whom he met on a W. P. A. job. He showed him the way of Salvation and he, too, accepted the salvation of the Lord. It was not long before in his burning zeal for souls, he felt call of God to give up secular work and in faith launched out to tell the story of Jesus and His love. He became especially interested in going to remote parts of the country where the people were poor, where on the street corners in missions, schools, homes and churches or any place where he could invite men and women to Christ.

Although not trained in any theological school, he was gifted with fluency of speech, a warm heart and zeal for souls, he had no difficulty in telling forth the blessed gospel story. During the short time of his active service for Christ, he preached the gospel in Ill., Wis., Mich., Ind., Ohio, Ky., Ga., N. C., S. C., and Fla.

The last series of services he conducted in the early part of this year at Fulton, Ky. This is the city of his birth, where the memories of boyhood days came forth. Here members of his beloved family reside; here friends from his boyhood days live. Here he preached for about 10 days traveling every day a distance of 50 miles to Paducah, to broadcast over station W. P. A. D. This was done with considerable effort, for his health at that time was broken. But just as far as his strength held out, he continued to tell forth the story of Christ's love and we are told that when he came to his last meeting

Women Students Are Urged To Seek Specialized Fields

Lexington, Ky. — "Choose a specialized phase of work and pursue that specialty, training yourself as thoroughly as possible to fit into the world you have chosen to enter."

Miss Hilda Threlkeld, dean of women at the University of Louisville, thus admonished the Transylvania College women students and guests assembled today for the opening lecture of a two-day career conference. The conference is sponsored by Delta Delta Delta, national sorority.

Miss Threlkeld outlined the advance of women in various fields of industry and reviewed the progress made by pioneers of a century ago. She suggested fields other than the traditional teaching and nursing professions in which young women today may find unusual opportunities.

Those she noted were "social work, specialized phases of beauty culture, advanced secretarial fields, dental hygiene, salesmanship and others."

"Much stress is being rightly placed upon personality with all its implications," she said, "and entrance of women into working fields has not decreased their womanly charm."

This afternoon Miss Elizabeth Lam, dean of women at Centre College, was to discuss "Lessons in Living" and Mrs. Mary Drummey of Lexington was to address the girls on "Foot Hooks for Pay," or the possibilities for women in secretarial work.

GIRL SCOUT MEETING

Troop No. 1 of the Girl Scouts met Monday afternoon, March 11, in the High School Building. The meeting was opened by saying "The Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag". The decorations for the Silver Tea will be made by the Girl Scouts Tuesday afternoon at Mrs. Bard's home.

After the patrol meetings some of the patrols played basketball and each patrol is going to have a team. Some of the girls who had not received their tenderfoot pins at the last investiture service were Betty Jean Joyner, Jean Rhodes and Frances Allen who were presented with them at this meeting. All the Scouts stood in the shape of a horseshoe while the pins were being awarded.

The following girls were eligible for the second class badges: Marjorie Puckett, Martha Roberts, Alice Stevenson, Nell Luten Bard, Carolyn Duley. The meeting was closed with "Taps" and afterward the Court of Honor met.

CAROLYN DULEY, Scribe.
