Delays: Dangerous

"The longer the travel, the safer the travel." This saying seems to be especially true these days. I had been traveling for over two hours now, and I was starting to feel a bit restless. The road was bumpy and uneven, and the coach was摇摇欲坠. I could feel the sweat on my forehead as I tried to stay awake.

All right, I decided, I would just have to stay awake and keep my eyes on the road. I had heard that there were some dangerous parts ahead, and I didn't want to lose control of the coach. The driver, a grizzled old man with a beard, was talking to me.

"Mr. Kennedy, I'm going to need you to stay alert," he said.

I nodded, trying to focus my mind. "I will, sir," I replied.

The road ahead was winding and twisty, and I could see the other coach in the distance, headed in the same direction. We were getting closer and closer, and I could feel the tension building up.

"Be careful," the driver said, "there's a lot of sharp corners ahead.

I took a deep breath and tried to relax my muscles. I knew that I had to keep my wits about me if we were going to make it to the destination.

The coach finally stopped, and I stepped out onto the street. The air was fresh and invigorating, and I could hear the sound of the horses in the background. I smiled to myself as I realized that I had made it.

"Thank you, Mr. Kennedy," the driver said, as I shook his hand. "You did a great job.

I nodded, feeling a sense of accomplishment. "It was nothing," I replied. "Just doing my job.

And with that, I turned to walk down the street, feeling the warmth of the sun on my face. I knew that I had made it, and I was ready to face whatever challenges lay ahead.

CHAPTER 111.

"It is of that daughter that I would speak," I said to the leader of the Avenging Angels.

The young fellow scented pleased at the mention of his daughter.

"And how about father?" he asked.

I hesitated for a moment. "He has a good deal to thank you for," I finally said.

The young fellow's face fell. "He offended the susceptibilities of the mountains and the balsamic odor of the pine trees took the place of nurse and mother to the young girl.

So the bud blossomed into a flower, and the year which saw her hood as could be found, on the whole west. So the bud blossomed into a flower.
