IT IS ENDED.

The Supreme Court Trial Came to Its Eventful Close.

The longest drawn-out and contention to the history of this State, the supreme court trial of the case of Philo A. Lamson vs. James A. Lamb, which was decided recently, came to a close with the return of the jury.

The case has been on hand for the past six months, and has been the leading subject of interest to the entire State during that time. The prominence of the parties has been greatly increased by the large sums of money involved in the case, and the public interest has been excited to an unparalleled degree.

The case was tried by the supreme court of the State, and was heard by the justices of the peace of the county. The trial lasted for three months, and was the subject of much attention in the newspapers.

The parties to the action are: P. A. Lamb, plaintiff, and J. A. Lamb, defendant. The plaintiff is a citizen of this State, and the defendant is a citizen of the State of Missouri.

The plaintiff alleges that he was injured in the course of his employment in the employ of the defendant, and that the defendant was liable for the damages sustained.

The defendant denies the allegations of the plaintiff, and contends that the plaintiff was injured in the course of his employment in the employ of another person, and that the defendant was not liable for the damages sustained.

The trial was conducted with great ability and skill by counsel for both parties, and was eagerly watched by the public.

The decision of the court is anticipated with great interest, and will undoubtedly have a great influence on the laws of the State in cases of this kind.

The case is now pending in the supreme court of the United States, and the decision of that court is awaited with great interest.

Have been it use, and last season there were some valuable improvements made on all steel plows by Avery's. A friend of mine was entirelyactory and till continue perhaps for 100 years old plows; which ought to be considered before you buy a plow.
