FULTON, KENTUCKY, FRIDAY, JULY 31, 1936.

NUMBER TWENTY-EIGHTY.

BEN HOWARD SHOOTSELF HERE MONDAY

Ben Howard, age 56, killed himself about five minutes before two o'clock Monday afternoon at his home on College Street, Fulton. After returning from town, Mr. Howard parked his car in the driveway. Investigation by officers show that he obtained a pistol from under the seat, walked into the garage, placed himself in a reclining position, and fired the fatal shot. His wife was first to his side, having heard the shot from the house where he was at work in the kitchen. Neighbors rushed in and physicians were summoned. He survived until 6:20 p.m.

Mr. Howard was a restaurant and wholesale candy man in this community and resided here most of his life. He had threatened his life on several occasions previously, due to insanity.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Ethel Howard, one son, Harold, and one daughter, Rachel, all of Fulton. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at two-thirty at the First Baptist Church, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Woodrow Fuller. Interment followed at New Hope cemetery, four miles east of Lexington, in charge of Winstead-Jones Undertaking Company.

GOLF TOURNAMENT HELD HERE SUNDAY

James "Pee Wee" Nanney, Fulton high school athlete who was a star in the lightweight division of the Sun-Democrat Tri-State Amateur Boxing Championships, carried his athletic prowess to the golf links Sunday to pace the Fulton County Club team to a 26 to 14 victory over the Lake View Players at Fulton Sunday.

Nanney shot a sterling 78 to win two points from the ace of the Paducah golfers, Jack House, who had an 80, which was low for the Paducah linksmen. Leslie Weeks, Fulton also had an 80 while Ed Taylor, Paducah, shot 82. R. M. Guthrie and W. C. Ritchey of the Paducah team had 85.

CONNELLY WROTE "GREEN PASTURES" ON OCEAN TRIPS

Most of the plotting and structural work of "The Green Pastures" which ran for five years on the stage and now is coming in film form to the Orpheum Theatre, August 16-17, as Warner Bros. production, was written on the bounding main, it was revealed the other day by Marc Connelly, its author.

"I was a sort of commuter between New York and Louisiana where I went to pick up atmosphere and dialect, while writing the play," Connelly explained, "and I always went to and fro on the liner Dixie. I made four or five round trips, and found it was quiet and peaceful on shipboard and an ideal place to work."

"Not until I had every scene constructed, which took the better part of a year, did I write the final dialogue, and that in New York. There'll be no more voyages on the Dixie. I regret to say she went around and sank last year."

"The Green Pastures" is a stirring picture based on Connelly's fable and play suggested by Roark Bradford's novel. Connelly also directed the screen play in collaboration with Sheridan Gibney. Music is by the Hall Johnson Choir of spiritual singers.

WATER VALLEY FIRM GIVEN COAL CONTRACT

Holden & Craddock, Water Valley, have been awarded contract for supplying coal for Graves county schools during the 1936-37 term. Approximately 20,000 bushels will be hauled to schools in all sections of the county.

One of these days some creditors are going to be much surprised when some debtors pay up their debts.

OUTBREAK OF HOG CHOLERA IN COUNTY

A series of meetings have been held in Fulton county this week by Grady Sellards, swine specialist, following a recent minor outbreak of hog cholera in this county. Meetings were held at Crutcherfield, Fulton, Cayce, Hickman and Madrid. Sellards discussed methods of raising pigs free of worms and economic gains. J. B. Williams, county agent, urged a feeding program that will produce gains at a small cost, due to the present outlook for a shortage in the corn crop.

LAND BANK LOANS INCREASE IN OHIO

Federal land bank loans in Ohio county increased from $1,218,020 in May, 1935, to $1,932,100 at the beginning of 1936, according to Ernest Rice, president of the Federal Land Bank of Louisville. The number of loans having their mortgage loans through the land bank increased from 442 to 529.

This large advance in the amount of loans outstanding has made very little, if any, increase in the total of Ohio county farmers, Rice said. Every 10 dollars loaned to pay already existing debts owed to banks, insurance companies, merchants and other concerns and individuals.

FEDERAL LAND BANK LOANS UP IN FULTON CO.

Figures revealed by Ernest Rice, president of the Federal Land Bank of Louisville, show that Federal land bank loans in Fulton county increased from $224,529 in May, 1935, to $441,800 at the beginning of 1936. The number of farmers having their mortgage loans through the land bank increased from 85 to 119.

This advance in the amount of loans outstanding has made very little increase in the total indebtedness of Fulton county, Mr. Rice points out, since farmers used about 9 out of every ten dollars borrowed to pay ready existing debts owed to banks, insurance companies, merchants, other concerns and individuals.

The co-operative farm loan business is handled locally by two County National Farm Loan Associations, among 124 similar organizations serving farmers of this state. W. S. Atkins is the secretary-treasurer and chief executive officer of both and is located at Fulton.

DRIVERS MUST GET LICENSES BEFORE AUGUST 1

Friday is the deadline date to secure the new driver's licenses and state policemen stationed in Western Kentucky have announced that they will start that day arresting motorists who have not purchased new certificates. The new licenses were received last Saturday by Circuit Court Clerk Justin Attebury at Hickman.

Supplementing the driver's responsibility act now in operation, the new driver's license law, passed by the 1936 General Assembly, will go into effect August 1, giving the state a double-barreled legal weapon against irresponsible and careless drivers using Kentucky's highway and streets.

The responsibility act which went into effect some time ago, probably will be used, according to Cliff Claypool, director of the Division of Motor Transportation, in an effort to curb reckless and irresponsible automobile drivers.

The responsibility act provides that any automobile driver convicted of violation of the motor vehicle laws and unable to satisfy a court judgement, growing out of such violation shall forfeit his driving rights until he has posted bond to cover any future judgement.

Drivers who furnish such bonds and continue their reckless tactics face loss of their driving permits issued under the drivers' license act.

First licenses under the drivers' act must be obtained not later than August 1 of this year. They cost $1.00 each and are for a one-year period. Licenses may not be granted to persons under sixteen years of age. Persons whose licenses have been suspended may not obtain a new license during the period of suspension and those whose permits have been revoked may not be licensed until one year after the date of revocation.

Habitual drunkards and narcotic drug addicts are banned from persons adjudged mentally or physically incapable of driving.

Around four hundred of these licenses were issued Tuesday and Wednesday in Fulton county, and Circuit Clerk Justin Attebury is expecting a big rush the last day, today, as late applicants seek licenses before the deadline, Aug. 1.

They say the American people must be ready to defend their rights.

GET IT DONE, MR. MAYOR
Last week we urged that immediate action be taken to assure the completion of the Third Street extension project. Since then we have heard consideration given to this project, and everything indicates that there is no reason why this project should not be completed. So, in interest of Fulton, Mayor Paul DeMyer must act. The ACTION our honorable mayor takes will decide whether we get the Third-st Extension built.

Already there is a bridge sitting on the old jockey yard awaiting installation across the creek. This bridge was moved there from the lower end of Lake Street when the new span was constructed, when plans were laid for opening of Third Street Extension. Now the time is at hand for action. Delay can cost the city the project, so procrastination is dangerous. Get it done NOW, Mr. Mayor.

Third Street should be opened into Lake Street by all means, and it can be done now more economically and with greater ease. J. R. Gram own property on part of the right-of-way, but this can be obtained under suitable arrangement, which will involve practically the only expense for opening of this new avenue for traffic.

Brook no further delay. But open Third Street Extension, and relieve traffic congestion in the downtown district of Fulton.

VOTING

Voting for public officials is an individual privilege. A man or a woman should be free to exercise that function according to his or her ideas for the good of the country, state or nation, without any undue and unfair pressure otherwise.

A family can be divided upon political races without any necessity for hard and mean feelings among it. A business can have members of the firm and employees who differ upon issues or personalities without any disloyalty to the common enterprise.

Freedom in the exercise of the ballot is extremely desirable. Any effort to intimidate a voter from his or her free expression at the polls is undemocratic and hostile to the spirit of our form of government.

Our advice to our readers is that each vote as he or she pleases.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR RAILROADS

"There will never come a time when railroads and their equipment are not necessary to the commerce of the nation," said Alfred E. Smith recently.

The growth of other forms of transport has served to emphasize rather than dim the service provided by the railroads. The truck systems perform a valuable service in certain fields, but when it comes to mass hauling, the rails are pre-eminent. Buses likewise are a transportation asset, but the average traveler has a growing appreciation of the speed, comfort and safety of the railroad train. Airplanes have an important place in the transportation scheme—but they certainly do not replace rail service.

It is an interesting fact that we hear less than we did a few years ago to the effect that the railroads are out of date, and are approaching oblivion. The truth is that they were never more essential to the public and they were never more progressive. The improvement that has been made during the last decade in bettering road beds, adding to the comfort of passenger trains, speeding up both freight and passenger schedules, reducing accidents and damage to freight, and so on, is nothing short of revolutionary.

It is reliably forecast that the railroads will be "fairly prosperous" this year, although the average line is still far from earning a reasonable return on its investment. The sooner the rails attain substantial prosperity, the better for all of us.

DOING SOMETHING FOR THE FARMER

During the coming campaign, spokesmen for both the great parties will do a lot of talking about farm relief. Both will claim that their party has found the Royal Road to farm prosperity, and that anyone disagreeing with it is an enemy of the people.

This is to be expected, politics being the kind of game it is. But a great many unprejudiced persons without any partisan axe to grind are coming to the opinion that the best kind of farm relief originates not in Washington but on the farm.

The old maxim that "self help is the best help" may have been obscured by some modern theories, but it hasn't been outlawed yet. It is as sound as it ever was.

The finest example of that old-fashioned "self help" is found in the agricultural co-operatives, which act as the farmer's representative in the process of producing and disposing of his products on the most profitable basis. These co-ops are permanent—they are non-political—they aren't managed by bureaucrats—they aren't trying to advance the fortunes of this party or that one. And they're doing more that is sound in a business way for agriculture than all the "farm relief" bills proposed since the war.

THE WELL DRESSED TOWN

It is generally admitted that a well dressed man is more likely to succeed as a salesman than one who looks ragged and slovenly, but it is not so generally realized that a town has to be well dressed. It is certain standards of neatness and care, if it is to succeed in the competitive race.

What constitutes a well dressed town? Many things, among them neat, well cared for business buildings. Residence streets should be well planted with trees. The sidewalks should be built out of substantial material so far as the town can afford it. There should be park spaces planted with trees. Neat curbstones separating the streets from grass plots and lawns are a wonderful touch of finish. Well kept houses, smooth lawns are essential. Such a well dressed town holds its head up with any city.

LAW ENFORCEMENT SAVES PEOPLE MONEY

There is considerable food for thought to be derived from the revision in the rates for bank robbery insurance recently announced by the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters. The revision brought a reduction of 20 per cent to banks in 35 states. Most of the states not included were those on the eastern seaboard which, thanks to a favorable underwriting record of longer standing, already enjoyed the lowest rates in the country.

A great deal of credit for the rate reduction belongs to the law enforcement officials, particularly those of the Federal Department of Justice. The sensational aspects of the drive of the "G-Men" on the hierarchy of America's public enemies with whom bank robbing was an important line of business, have been vividly dramatized. This insurance announcement is another scene in the drama. Although lacking guile and "badness in red," it is estimated, nearly a quarter-million dollars in insurance premiums annually.

The underwriters cite as another important factor making the reduction possible, the rule promulgated two years ago requiring banks to keep 85 per cent of their insured money under delayed time locks. This move greatly minimized the robber's loot. Add these vigilant measures of the banks themselves to the outstanding accomplishments of the law enforcement authorities and the well conceived underwriting rules of the insurance companies, and you have the formula for lower insurance rates.

In announcing the reduced bank robbery insurance rates, the companies warn banks against relaxing their vigilance, especially since, with the daylight robbers scared off or in jail, there seems to be an increase in night vault burglaries. The smart thing for the banks to do is forestall the night "safe cracker."

HOME TOWN THOUGHTS

An old poet told about "dropping buckets into empty wells." It is about as foolish as looking for business prosperity in a town where people spend their money away from home.

They say that defeatists in politics lose an election before the candidates are nominated. Similarly defeatists in a town, who are always running it down, help defeat the chance that place has for progress.

"Who rads, runs, and puts something in the paper for people to read about his goods, becomes one of the rulers of trade in his neighborhood."

They have a mechanical device now which defeats chickens. The hardheaded men say that they have been defeated without resorting to any such machine.

The boys are told they must become big men. Anyway they are making progress toward this ideal by administering some terrific lickings to the smaller kids.

People are said to get much satisfaction from eating outdoors. The boys say that "When do we eat? is a far more important question than 'Where do we eat?'"

To Democratic Voters OF THE FIRST Congressional District

This is the last issue of this paper you will receive before going to the polls Saturday. Therefore I feel that it would be unethical and unsportsmanlike for me to publish, or have published, any new material in regard to my race, as my opponent would not have a chance to answer me, and you would not have time to check the truthfulness of the statements made. I am sure that my opponent will give me that same consideration.

I want to remind you that Saturday is not only election day, but also registration day. You must register in order to be able to vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt in November. Registration is really a very simple matter. You merely go to your respective voting precinct, as usual, and you will find extra clerks with whom you register before you vote.

The re-election of President Roosevelt is far more important than my race, and I urge you to register Saturday in order to be able to vote for him in November. Saturday, however, I will appreciate your vote and influence.

NOTICE OF REGISTRATION

I wish to again impress upon the people of Fulton County the facts concerning the new State-wide registration law, passed by the recent General Assembly and now effective.

Every voter in Fulton county, no matter what his age, politics or place of residence, must register before he or she can vote.

The registration will be conducted at the twenty-three voting precincts in the county on primary election day, Aug. 1.

If you do not register that day, you cannot vote in the primary.

If you fail both to register and to vote in the primary, you may register at my office between August 15 and October 10—but the registration on August 1 is the last to be conducted at respective polling places.

And finally, you must either register at the polling places on August 1 or at my office between August 15 and October 10, in order to be able to vote in the Presidential election in November.

C. N. HOLLAND
CLERK OF FULTON COUNTY COURT

Why Beckham?
An Answer!

Today we have the pleasure of examining an article signed (a County Democrat) headed (Why, Beckham?). After reading this article, we have no trouble in ascertaining why there appears no name for its author. The article purports to give as reasons why Beckham should be defeated, first, that he has been defeated on several different occasions, second, a clumsy attempt to beguile and stampede the good women of Fulton County into voting for Mr. Logan. We will very shortly and concisely answer all the claims put forth in this circular.

In 1906, Mr. Beckham was defeated before the legislature of Kentucky for the office of United States Senator, by Bradley because four Democrats of the Legislature violated their pledges and voted for his opponent. Beckham was the first United States Senator elected by popular vote, that being in 1914 and ever since that time he has been opposed by powerful, ruthless, corrupt and bi-partisan (composed of so-called Republicans and Democrats) political machine which for reasons best known to themselves, fought him in 1920 and 1927. In 1935 the people of the State of Kentucky unloaded this vivacious gang from their backs and have succeeded once more in placing a decent Government in the State of Kentucky, the system of Primary Nominations.

Logan was elected Attorney General on somebody else's coat-tail. He was elected Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals simply because the law requires that the senior Judge shall be such Chief Justice. He was elected to the United States Senate because he was unopposed and nobody else in particular seemed anxious for the job. His election to the Court of Appeals was from the appellate district in which he lived and not from the State at large.

To the women voters: The right of women to vote was granted to you, not by the act of any person in the Senate of the United States but by a constitutional amendment to the Constitution of the United States, voted upon and ratified by three-fourths of the Legislature of several States. No man in Congress at that time is responsible for either granting or denying you the right to vote.

In this anonymous circular, Mr. Beckham is criticized for taxing cosmetics. The same gang that has fought Mr. Beckham for years, taxed your meat, your bread, your clothes, your farms and all of your necessities of life. Assuming that Mr. Beckham might be responsible in some measure for the tax on cosmetics, which had you rather have, a tax on your clothes and other necessities of life or a tax on cosmetics? Which do you buy the most of and which do you need the most?

For the first time in its history, Fulton County is in position to get from the State Administration and is getting from it, things which it has long deserved. Why pass up the chance of getting more of these things now by voting for a man such as Mr. Beckham's two opponents, who cannot possibly do you any good under any circumstances.

A vote for Mr. Beckham means a vote for the people of Fulton County, therefore in the words of this (County Democrat) who does not choose to sign his name, WHY, OH WHY BECKHAM?

CHAIRMAN BECKHAM CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

POLITICAL YELLING

How many political contests have been decided by the vocal power of the contestants? The political yell should be regarded as a real influence in national development. The fathers conceived of popular government as a system under which the wise voters would use their brains and intelligence to decide the issues. Many other factors enter into these decisions, and the shouting voice is one of them.

In the year 1840 they had a campaign in which Harrison and Tyler were elected president and vice-president. The log cabin and hard cider became the emblems of the successful party. The country roared with the yells of party adherents. This shouting and enthusiasm helped to determine the election.

For many years the torchlight procession was a favorite method of swaying elections. The young men were drilled in battalions, they marched over long parade routes, illuminated before every house that was flattered as if the party that did the most yelling carried the election.

That method of campaigning has largely gone by, but the political yellers still have power. They exercise influence at political conventions. A crowd of enthusiastic rooters in the gallery can make some cause seem more popular than it really is, and the contagion of their excitement and enthusiasm has swayed many delegates. A cause seems more hopeful if people are willing to shout for it.

The yelling power of a group of people throws no light on the question whether they can run the government right. But every cause needs enthusiasm. The supporters of good government should not shut up their mouths like clams, and expect to sway the nation.

KEEP RECORDS OF SOIL PRACTICES

Farmers should keep records and preserve evidence of all soil-building practices carried out under the new Agricultural Conservation Program.

It is particularly important that records be kept showing the acreage of any green-manure crops and the date turned under. Also, receipts should be preserved showing the amount of ground limestone or superphosphate purchased and applied.

Before a producer can qualify for payment he will be required to submit proof of the soil-building practices carried out on the farm. Therefore, it is important that the farmers keep all such evidence.

It is further suggested that farmers notify their local committees or the county agent's office when any practices of this kind are carried out in writing, but it is important that the local committeemen be informed of the practices when they are carried out.

SAFETY SLOGANS

Acquire sun tan gradually. Do not drink from streams or wells that are not known to be typhoid free.

Not one railroad passenger was killed in train accidents in 1935. Here is a mark for car drivers to shoot at. No one was killed at a railroad crossing who obeyed the sign, Stop, Look, and Listen.

It is against the law of all states to run away from the scene of an accident.

THOUGHTS FOR SERIOUS MOMENTS

The supreme happiness of life is the conviction of being loved for yourself, or, more correctly, being loved in spite of yourself—Victor Hugo.

It's not doing the thing we like to do, but liking to do the thing we have to do that makes life blessed—Anon.

Friendship is the highest degree of perfection in society—Montaigne.

The world is blessed by men who do things, and not by those who only talk about them—James Oliver.

HOG THIEVES OPERATE IN OBION COUNTY

Hog thieves in Obion county are no longer confining their activities to the cover of darkness. Saturday afternoon thieves went into a field on the H. A. Branford farm south of Union City and took three large hogs, each averaging about 150 pounds. The theft was discovered about four o'clock by R. E. Dotson who operates the farm.

Thieves have been operating in the rural districts of this section for some time, stealing thousands of dollars in hogs, chickens and produce from farmers.

Poultry-Dairying Turkeys Dying Digs Up Gold

Everyone that is growing turkeys for the Thanksgiving and Xmas market should see that they have a nice, clean, cool place to roost. There are several flocks of turkeys near Fulton that are stunted where the ventilation is poor. Turkeys are wild in nature and the less they are housed up in the summer the stronger they will be and the faster they will grow.

If your turkeys are not in a cool clean place where they can get fresh air from all sides, fix an outdoor roost for them at once. Just because you have worked hard and grown your turkeys up to three to six pounds and they are looking good, don't go to sleep and think they will care for themselves.

Watch your turkeys very closely each morning and evening. If they look tired, rough-feathered, and lazy of mornings and seem more full of pep at night, that's a sign something is wrong. Make a check on conditions.

Look for the following:
1. See that poult has the proper roosting conditions.
2. See that they have all the clean fresh, cool water that they will drink by their roost just before dark and at daylight when they get off.

3. Be sure that your turkeys are not lousy.
4. If you have any sick turkeys kill one of them, split its intestines down with a sharp knife and see if there are any worms inside. If you should find any, give a good worm remedy. But, best of all, keep your turkeys on clean ground where there are no worms or black head and you will not be bothered with it.

If you have not already made your outdoor turkey roost use 2x4s for the roost. Lay these so the four inch side will be up. Young turkeys roost close to the roost and this may cause a crooked breast if they use a roost only two inches wide. By putting the 4 inch side of the 2x4 up they will have 4 inches for their breasts to rest on instead of 2. Allow one ten foot 2x4 for each ten poult and place these two feet apart.

Should there be any thing that you do not understand about the conditions of your poult ask someone who is in poultry work to help you. Watch your flock very closely every day.

As the eye of the master fattens his cattle, so does the successful turkey raiser watch his flock.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE WEEKLY BUSINESS SURVEY

Up to this time the extremely hot weather and the drought which have prevailed in many areas of the country have apparently not affected wholesale and retail trade, according to reports to the Department of Commerce. The Minneapolis report stated that notwithstanding the severe drought, business is holding up with surprising activity. Sales of city stores for June were 12% over June of last year. In country stores sale were up 14% while during the first two weeks in July the same ratio was maintained. While the wholesale business was quiet in St. Paul and Minneapolis, all business was holding up well in the drought areas.

Wholesale conditions in St. Louis were reported unchanged, while Kansas City reported gains to 20% in wholesale lines compared with last year. In Kansas City itself the extremely hot weather curtailed business considerably.

Omaha was one of the spots reporting adversely on the effects of the drought on business. The report from that city stated that the hot, dry weather was beginning to affect many lines of business, especially those dependent on rural trade. From Birmingham came the welcome news that the extreme drought and heat conditions in Alabama had been broken by several heavy rains. As a result, crop conditions were reported looking more favorable. Business activity as measured by bank clearings, was up more than 22% above last year.

Atlanta, where business might be expected to be hurt by the drought in the Southeastern section of the country, reported business on the up-grade.

Wholesale dealers said they were enjoying material increases in the sale of agricultural implements over the same period a year ago. The Georgia feed crop was benefited by rains, reducing the estimated $50,000,000 crop damage. Wholesale trade in Charleston was 12% above last year.

A great influx of buyers attended the home furnishings exposition and the national furniture show in Chicago. At the American Furniture Mart there were 1,460 more registrations than for the same season last year. In other wholesale channels, however, trade was reported spotty. Many retailers in the Chicago area were reported studying the effects of the drought before placing definite comments for large orders for Fall deliveries. Cincinnati wholesale druggists' houses found business 40% better than last year, while in Louisville the volume of this time last year although they were slowing down because of the drought. Wholesale activity in Houston showed gains over 1935 averaging around 45%.

Most of the areas reported increased employment due to a combination of sustained industrial activity, heavier building, and sharp seasonal demands for help in rural areas.

From Pittsburgh came the report that the first six months of 1936 broke all records for the like period in the production of plate glass. Portland, Oregon, reported tourist traffic the heaviest in the history of the State, while large crowds were converging on Dallas and Fort Worth, Texas, and Cleveland to attend the expositions in progress in those cities. The sale of oranges for consumption as fresh fruit reached a new all-time record for June, the report from Los Angeles showed.

THIS AND THAT

A new fox trot is entitled "The Wheel of the wagon is broken." If this refers to the gas wagon and the way many people drive it here in Fulton, it won't be long until all four wheels and many other parts of it are also broken.

If the boys had to hunt potato bugs half as long as they spend looking for lost golf balls, they would run away from home and become tramps.

The American people are urged to show more horse sense. When you ask them to do things for the public good, they usually show a good deal of mule sense.

The prohibitionists say we are going to have another dry era. At least we can count on many dry speeches during political campaigns. The young folks say they can't live without their girl and boy friends. If someone else invites the mout for ice cream, they seem able to consume it.

The people are urged to go in for coat raising. Somehow when we acquire possession of a coat, somebody always seems to get it.

"Weep no more, fair lady" said the old minstrel song. When our girl friends appear to be weeping, it's more likely they've got cold by sitting out too long in the chilly night.

The young people are referred to as the "lost generation." They seem quite lost when they get out with the car, and are so absorbed in each other that they don't know which road they took.

The girls are said to be as pretty as a picture. If it is meant to compare them with the pictures of modern art, that isn't saying much.

"What do we need for a hiking trip?" some folks ask. Most popular form of equipment on the road in Kentucky appears to be a good strong uplifted thumb.

The "untouchables" aren't all located in China. There are also some around here, who can't be touched when you go around with a subscription paper.

They say we must take better care of our feet. The popular idea of how to care for them is not to do any walking with them.

Principal use for the feet, according to the modern world is to step

SINGING IN THE BATHTUB

MISTER, I know you like to start the day with everything "just right"—including plenty of hot water. In the usual morning hurry you hate to waste time fussing with the old heater to be sure it's working.

Well, Mister, for real hot-water satisfaction twenty-four hours a day, you just hook me to one of the new storage type automatic electric water heaters, flip the switch and forget me. What's more, your Missus will be just as glad as you are to have me doing it.

I promise all the hot water needed for household use at any time—instantly—and no fumes, flame, smell, dirt, ashes or attention. Very economical too.

We sell Hotpoint and Westinghouse heaters. Other good makes sold by local dealers. Prices right. Terms easy.

on the gas, kick footballs, and look handsome when displayed in fancy shoes.

The nice old song said "Rally round the flag." Only kind of rally that seems to please the modern world much, is the one in the stock market.

Another old song told about Gabriel blowing his horn. If people don't pay more attention to it than they do to the whistle at the railroad crossings, they will lie asleep a long time.

"Work for the night is coming" was the good old gospel song, while "Work for the boss is looking" seems to be more the style now.

In some barbarous countries, the natives tattoo the faces of the girls, to show they are old enough to get married. They probably say that is an improvement over the American method, where the warpaint has to be put on daily.

PHILLIPS PREDICTED CONGRESSIONAL WINNER

V. A. "Bill" Phillips of Princeton, now appears from newspaper reports and by testimony of political experts on both sides of the river to be well in the van in the Congressional race in the First District of Kentucky, with the size of his majority the only matter in doubt as the pre-election swiftly passes.

Already well and favorably known in Caldwell, Crittenden, Livingston, Lyon, Trigg and Calloway counties, Phillips has spent most of his time campaigning in Christian, Hickman, Carlisle, Ballard, Fulton, McCracken, Marshall and Graves counties the last two weeks. A sample of the result may be taken from the following editorial comment of Harry Lee Waterfield, editor of the Hickman County Gazette, issue of July 23.

"From reports of various leaders and from newspapers over the First Congressional District, it is held as unquestionable fact that Phillips is running with at least six counties west of the river in his column and as many on the opposite side, with the race developing from a stand-point of 12 counties against one, and with the extra county on the fence."

"Backers of Mr. Phillips point out that the First district comprised of 14 counties, has one with practical all the public office holders, that being Graves, leaving the other 13 counties almost without local representation."

From what we hear, from what we have seen and read, we are led to believe that there is truth in the prediction that the challenger will carry the six counties west of the river, namely, Hickman, Carlisle, Ballard, McCracken, Marshall and Calloway, and will get an even break in Fulton. That being true, and if across the river reports hold water, (and reliable sources say Phillips will carry his counties on the other side of the river), apparently Democrats will have a change in their nominee for Congress for the first time in 10 years."

Apparently, Phillips has continued to gain ground as the campaign has developed. Christian county is definitely claimed for him. Reports have it that Trigg will give Phillips better than an even break. Caldwell is expected to produce the largest majority for its home man giving any candidate in years, while Livingston, Lyon and Crittenden, although small counties, are all safely in the Phillips column, it is believed.

Unless Graves rolls up an unprecedented majority for Mr. Gregory and McCracken does the unexpected and flows over to the Mayfield man, Bill Phillips seems certain to be the Democratic congressional nominee from the First District.

A boxer who dwarfs the Ambling Alp has just come over from Europe. If he proves fond of reclining in the ring, an apt nickname would be Everest.

SERVICE
The idea of "service" is emphasized in many organizations. The people are told they must give real value for everything they sell and for all the pay they get, or the world will have no use for them. The people are tired of bluffs, of those goods that look well but don't wear, and of workers who don't give the full equivalent of their pay.

People used to go into business, and express the hope that they would get "their share" of trade as if a certain share belonged to them by right, whether they rendered good service or not. Now they are told their share is only what they produce for themselves by their faithful work and honest adherence to their promises.

The slow motions of many workers suggest they should be taken to the repair shop and have the carbon cleaned out of their cylinders.

People constantly being arrested for "disturbing the peace" with all the political clamor, reckless automobile drivers, and modern whoopees hadn't realized that there was any peace to be disturbed.

This idea of decorating the roadsides with flowers and shrubbery is fine, only in many places you can't see the roadsides because they are lined with hitchhikers.

If the hitchhikers would lift their feet a little more and their thumbs a little less, they could cover a good deal of the distance over which they now expect to be carried here in Kentucky.

They say that it is very difficult to teach children to tell the truth. They seem perfectly willing to do so when you ask them if they are hungry.

The old minstrel song told about "grasshopper sitting on de railroad track." May be safe to sit there, yet he better not sit in the highway more than a minute at a time unless he wants to become a greasy spot.

The people are said to spend more money beautifying their bodies than in training their souls. They should not become so awful beautiful, though, that nobody is willing to do any work while they are around.

Descend Among Bicycles
Many Strikes and Worries
Two Flags That Clash
Two National Hymns

This column, like others to follow, written in Europe, traveling about by automobile, will represent an effort to see things clearly, and describe them simply, according to the old formula. You descend from the ship at Havre into a world of wheels, bicycle wheels, a change from the world on automobile wheels left on the other side of the Atlantic.

Arthur Brisbane

Here working men and women, thousands of them, ride to and from work, ten to thirty abreast, depending on the width of the street.

They have the right of way, properly, in a democracy. So it used to be in America, when automobiles were new, small boys shouted "Get a horse," and New York state law compelled the automobile driver to stop his car and engine, while a farm wagon passed, if the farmer raised his hand, or even lead the farm team past his machine if the farmer requested it. Here the car stops, while bicycles circulate around it on both sides. Similarly, you stop, later, meeting flocks of sheep, on roads across the salt marshes of the Vendee.

France is a land of bicycles, of many political parties, and, at the moment, a land of strikes. Like all other European countries, it is a land of permanent war scares. America looks upon war as a distant, improbable possibility, and when it comes spends billions on airships that do not fly, ships that never go to sea, and similar evidences of patriotic dollar-a-year efficiency. Europe's nations live in a state of fear, as an American family might live if it knew that, at any moment, well-equipped gangsters from next door might enter the house, and set fire to the house.

American travelers leaving the boat by railroad, descending in Paris at the Saint Lazare station, were surprised to find crowds fighting each other, not waiting for Germany, crowds made up entirely of Frenchmen of different political opinions.

Some wore ribbons with the red, white and blue colors of the French flag; others, more numerous, wore the plain color red. One side sang the "Marseillaise," national hymn of France since the revolution. Others wearing small red flags sang the "Internationale," official song of the Communists the world over, from Moscow to Harlem. Crowds grew bigger, the Frenchmen sang the two hymns at each other, more and more violently, with excellent voices, not one out of tune, all knowing the words of their respective hymns. The "Marseillaise" says, "Let us go, children of the fatherland, the day of glory has arrived"; the other says, "Arise ye prisoners of starvation; arise, ye wretched of the earth."

It was a scene never to be described, now that Dooley is dead, and Artemus Ward is dead, and the descending foreigners from across the water. A few Frenchmen hit other Frenchmen, not hard, then agents of the Surete, whom we should call policemen, gradually dispersed the crowds, that met and sang at each other again the next day. They live in the suburbs and work in Paris, or vice versa, and, meeting in the railroad station, it enrages them to encounter those that sing the wrong hymn and wear the wrong colors.

Those singers have chests like drums, complexions that reveal countless billions of red corpuscles and voices that could be heard, almost, from Los Angeles to Santa Monica.

One of them broke off at the sad word "starvation" and said to your narrator, who had politely congratulated him on his vigor: "Tenez, tenez mon bras, et j'ai soixante sept ans"—meaning, "Here, feel my muscle, and I am sixty-seven years old."

The muscle rose in a biceps like a small mekon.

The duty of a visiting foreigner is to observe, describe and not comment; but this writer, had he accepted the invitation to speak at the American club in Paris recently, would have suggested that the French, whose only earthly possession is France, should be careful not to tear that property apart, especially with Germany ready to gather up the pieces.

This crosses the water by mail, is not new, and not news, when you see it. Only heaven knows what might happen in a week.

Farmer Thomas gave a new hand a plateful of mushrooms for his supper.
"Isn't anyone else having mushrooms for supper?" asked the hand, noticing that he was the only one eating them.
"We like them for breakfast best," said the farmer.
Next morning Thomas went to his new hand's room and asked him how he felt.
"Fine," said the hand.
Returning to the kitchen, and putting his head round the door, he shouted to his wife: "It's all right, Jane, they're not toadstools!"

Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
 By WILLIAM BRUCKART
 NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—One of the pieces of legislation enacted by the late seventy-fourth congress was the ship subsidy bill. It is a bill of farming communities and smaller cities and towns in the interior probably paid no attention to it whatsoever. Nor was there any outstanding reason apparent why they should give thought to a rather complex and yet far-reaching piece of legislation. But it is important even though the circumstances under which it will be effective may not so appear to the agricultural sections of the country. The new law provides an undisguised subsidy as the basis of encouragement for development of a new American merchant marine. It is the first time that such a policy has been carried out by the American nation and it is, therefore, yet a matter to be tried out before anyone can say definitely that the results will be satisfactory. Those who sponsored the legislation have long contended it was both sound and sensible and their argument prevailed in congress.

Advocates of the measure say that it will provide at least a start for the construction of new and faster and more efficient American owned ships. They contend further that the policy upon which the nation has now embarked as regards shipping will cost less in the end than other disguised and concealed subsidies that have been employed.

It may be necessary to recall that the United States long has paid what amounts to a subsidy to ocean going ships in the form of excessive rates for the transportation of ocean mail. There are 43 such mail routes and the ships operating on these routes, consequently, benefited to the extent of the number of pounds of mail they carried because the payments they received were on a pound basis. This contribution from the federal government enabled many of those shipping companies to survive.

With these conditions, among many others, it becomes easily understandable what difficulties confront American flag ships in competition with world shipping.

Above and beyond the factors just mentioned, it is a matter of record as well that ship construction in the United States costs more perhaps than any place else in the world. Here again American standards are influential. They bring about higher wages and shorter hours for American labor in American shipyards. Thus, a new ship starting out begins its service with a handicap of greater cost upon which a return must be had if those who invest their money in ships are to receive a profit thereon.

Then, there is a further distinct and important reason. I refer to national defense. It has long been the conviction of military and naval men that American freight and passenger ships should be so designed, developed and constructed, that they might be converted to satisfactory use as auxiliary craft in time of war. In this connection it will be recalled that tremendous sums were expended by our government in building ships for use in the World war. There was such vast waste of money at that time that it seems incredible anyone should ever make the same mistake again. But to avoid that mistake advance preparations are necessary and that is a point strongly stressed by those who favored the ship subsidy legislation.

Now to link the importance of the ship subsidy bill with agriculture: American products must have access to foreign markets and this access must be under fair and reasonable competitive conditions. Such reasonable and fair competitive conditions cannot obtain if American built ships, constructed at greater costs because of the higher standards of wages and living of American labor, and operated on a basis of greater cost for the same reasons do not have some protection from the government whose flag they fly. They cannot, for example, meet the freight rates offered by the Japanese whose labor basis is distressing and whose general construction costs are amazingly low. Nor can they compete with ships constructed with government money and subsidized by special privileges accorded by their governments.

So, it is made to appear, at least from this line of reasoning, that American firms are left to the mercies of foreign shipping companies in their efforts to expand our export trade—that is, they are left to these mercies unless this government takes a definite stand by which American flag ships are accorded some advantages.

I suspect there are many features of the ship subsidy bill which was fathered by Senator Copeland, New York Democrat, that will prove unsatisfactory. Indeed, I am sure some of them will be found to be wholly unworkable. But the point is, after all, that a start has been made toward honesty of policy in dealing with merchant marine problems. I think no one can refute the statement that as between concealed or disguised subsidies and forthright payments that are known as subsidies, the forthright and honest method is decidedly better.

Since the United States normally produces a surplus of agricultural products, it becomes highly important to agriculture that the foreign markets are accessible and that the costs of transportation do not entirely eat up the value of the commodity exported unless the wheat from the plains states and the cotton from the South and the corn from the Mississippi valley can be moved at reasonable cost. It can be moved at reasonable cost only if American shipping is protected. That is not alone my opinion. It is the opinion of many experts in the field.

One might properly inquire why the foreign boats should not be used to handle American commodities if the freight rate is lower. There are two very valid reasons why this should not obtain. One is that constant rate reduction by foreign shipping companies would sooner or later, probably sooner, destroy the American merchant marine. With this end achieved, the foreign shipping companies would do as they have attempted to do on a number of occasions—jack up the rates to suit themselves.

It seems, therefore, that while this legislation probably is far from perfection, probably has entirely too much governmental finger in the shipping pie, it presents a start that eventually will be helpful. I have heard no answer to this statement. It is going to cost about so much for transportation on the ocean and if we can maintain an American industry upon that cost plus the aid of a subsidy of the type now initiated, we have laid out a sound unit in our national commercial structure. It goes without saying, therefore, that if it is helpful to one part of the country it is going to be helpful to all others because we are so interrelated.

Political students have been engaged lately in stirring arguments over what possibly may be a new influence in the campaigns of 1936. I refer to the disastrous conditions in some of the plains of the Middle West resulting from lack of rain. I refer, also, to the presence of pests in sections of the plains states. It has been interesting, not to say humorous, to listen to the arguments being advanced, arguments based purely on political phases that may or may not result from those conditions. There is no agreement among the Democrats and no agreement among the Republicans as to the effect of the natural circumstances developing in the middle west. Some Democrats contend the drought will react to President Roosevelt's advantage. Some Republicans fear that the Democratic contention is true. Some Democrats are afraid that the loss of crops and the generally bad condition in which this leaves thousands of farmers will place them in a state of mind where they will be determined to vote against somebody and of course the only person against whom they can vote is Mr. Roosevelt inasmuch as he happens to be the man in power at the moment.

Fishing in the Sahara Once Sport

Fishing in the Sahara was once a favorite pastime of man. This discovery was made by Henri Lohot, a Frenchman, who unearthed the first skeletons of Neolithic man found in Africa. These men lived 10,000 years ago, he said, when swift streams, now dried up, once ran through a fertile Sahara plain. The young explorer, who passed two years digging in prehistoric duneheaps in the southeastern part of the desert, analyzed the bone structure of the old-time fisher, who belonged to the negro race. Vertebrae of fresh water fish as well as bone harpoon heads were found.

Bryn turned. "How much, Tubby?"
"Bryn, if you aren't the damndest fool!"
"How much?" Bryn said inexorably. Tubby's dimple wavered in and out wildly. "I said I thought she was a darn nice girl," he muttered. "You crazy idiot."

"Madeline, he says he thinks you are a darn nice girl."
"Well," Madeline said with a bounce of the springs, "that isn't anything to get up and get dressed over. G'night."

Feeling better, Bryn pulled Tubby's door shut with a last pleasant smile, and snatched down the hall.

"Deborah," he said softly, without knocking.
She was awake. Her voice came low and clear, on the instant. "Yes? Has anything . . . happened?"
"Nothing. I just wanted to say . . . pleasant dreams . . . and good-night."

For an instant she did not answer. Then, "Good-night, Bryn."

"Good-night, darling," he replied, and went quickly across the room to his own door.

CHAPTER IX

The breakfast table was spread on the small terrace at the side of the house, where Bryn and Deborah had eaten their first breakfast together.

There were six places laid, but Sally was still upstairs, sleeping, as Simon explained, like a dormouse; and Bryn had not yet returned from his early errand to the farm down the road.

Deborah, in freshly starched blue ging-ham, sat erect on her chair behind the silver coffee pot, and poured out a third cup for Tubby. Beside her, Madeline sat quiet, gazing dreamily out through the trunks of the tall pines, and tossing, from time to time, small crumbs of toast to a greedy chipmunk who sat up and begged for them with bright expectant eyes.

"Well," Simon sighed, "I wonder if today will be the big day."

"Oh, probably not," Tubby said comfortably. "I give him until about Thursday noon."

"It doesn't make any difference when he comes, does it?" Madeline inquired. "The sooner he comes, the sooner it will be settled. I wish he'd come now and get it over with."

As she spoke, Bryn pushed open the dining room door and came out to the terrace. He put a hand on Simon's shoulder, tweaked Tubby's hair, let his eyes rest on Deborah's lowered eyelashes, and spoke to Madeline. "Who, me?"

"No, Graham."

"He'll come," Bryn said cheerfully, and pulled up his chair. "And there's one sure thing, he won't get past Joe. I left Joe on a box high up on the seat of a wagon box, where he can see the road coming up the mountain for about two miles. He's got the wagon pulled under a shady tree, and he's got an old pair of spy-glasses, and the horn."

When I left I heard him making arrangements with his mother to bring out his meals. I'd like to see as much as a caterpillar get past him. And, I've locked the gates, so we're all set."

Deborah handed him his cup, and as she did so, she lifted her eyes and met his upon hers. She felt herself flushing, and the cup trembled in her hand so that some of the coffee spilled over. But Bryn did not seem to mind. He took it and put it down, and his eyes were still upon hers. Deborah turned resolutely away.

Bryn finished his breakfast, and he and Tubby and Simon left the table. They were going, Tubby informed the two girls, to inspect the dungeons and see that the chains were in good order.

When they were gone, Madeline put out her hand and patted Deborah's lightly. "Deborah," she said after a moment, "would you do something for me?"

"Of course."

"It's about Tubby. I don't know what to think." She looked up. "With any other man in the world, I'd just exercise my feminine charm and . . . wait. But that isn't safe with Tubby. Tubby isn't exactly shy, but he doesn't have any idea that he's so attractive that anybody might want to marry him. It's one thing I like about him, his absolute lack of conceit."

Deborah considered. "Tubby wouldn't marry just anybody," she said comfortingly.

"I don't mean just anybody. But I can think of half a dozen girls in our own crowd who could make quite a dent in him. Deborah, if they set about doing it. And, of course, there's one in particular."

"Pilar?"

"What's she like?" Deborah asked curiously. "I never knew any girl but you and Sally, and I understand you two pretty well. Isn't she like us, this Pilar?"

"Not in a hundred years, innocence. Not in a thousand years. She's one of these hot-headed stamping beauties. If you know what I mean. Pilar isn't much more Spanish than I am, although she has a Spanish name and a Spanish look, which she takes very good care to intensify. Pilar has huge flashing black eyes, and smooth black hair . . . she sticks it back and pins a red rose in it, you know . . . and she makes her mouth very red and doesn't use rouge on her cheeks. And she's tall and graceful and buys wonderful clothes, the kind other people can't get by with."

"Is she very beautiful, Madeline?"
"Very. Almost as beautiful as you, honey, only quite, quite different."

"Have she and Tubby known each other long?"
"Years and years."

"Then . . . surely you needn't worry, Madeline. He would have married her long ago if he'd been going to, wouldn't he?"

Madeline hesitated. "No," she said finally. "Something new has just occurred in Pilar's life. She wouldn't have married him until now."

A cold finger touched Deborah's heart; but the touch was so light that it was gone in an instant, and she had forgotten it.

"What can I do, Madeline?"
Madeline brought her gaze back from the distant eastern horizon. "Tubby likes me," she said. "I know he likes me. We get along beautifully together. If I were sure he didn't love Pilar I'd just simply set about making him love me."

"But could I find out about Pilar? Is that what you want me to do?"
"I thought you might ask Bryn. Bryn knows. Bryn knows everything about Tubby, just as Tubby knows everything about Bryn. And then you could tell me."

Deborah was silent, her eyes on the cloth. Madeline was supposing that she and Bryn had long hours together, long hours alone, as Simon and Sally did, hours when nobody else heard what they said to each other. . . .

She looked up. "Do you really love him, Madeline?" she asked softly.

Madeline smiled, a slow smile. Her eyes were tender. "Yes, honey. Really."

"Well, then," Deborah said with a sigh, "I'll see what I can do, Madeline."

It was only an hour or two later when she saw her chance. Tubby was sitting alone on a stump down by the brook, whittling industriously at a willow stick, trying to make himself a whistle. Deborah went down the path and perched herself on a mossy log in front of him.

"Do you like it up here, Tubby?"
"I think it's great. I'm crazy about it."

"Don't you miss all the excitement in the city, and all the rest of your friends?"

"Not a twinge of missing do I get."

"All the things you do sound very exciting. I mean, all of you, of course. Madeline and Sally have been telling me a little about places, and people. Yesterday they told me about Pilar. I think she sounds fascinating."

Tubby looked up. "Pilar?" he said incredulously.

"She sounds marvelous. So tall and beautiful. Even her name is lovely, isn't it? Pilar?"

"Do you mean to say those women told you about Pilar?"

"Yes. Why not? I was awfully interested."

"Well," he said with a heavy sigh, "women are the funniest things in captivity. I should think that would have been the last name they would have mentioned. And, if somehow you have heard about Pilar, I should've thought she'd be the last person you'd be happy about. I never would have dared open my mouth about her, but then, who am I? Just a mere man."

"I don't see why you feel that way," Deborah said, but her smile began now to feel a little stiff and queer. "There isn't any reason why I shouldn't want to hear about Pilar, is there, or wouldn't like her?"

Tubby was silent for a moment. "I suppose not," he said slowly. "Not under the circumstances. After all, everything went spang right by the board for you, didn't it? And you know it. So why should you worry about Pilar or anybody else?"

Deborah tore a little piece of green velvet moss off the log, and spread it on the back of her hand. So Tubby didn't know, either. Tubby thought that Bryn had fallen in love with her in Mr. Holworthy's office. Tubby didn't know everything about Bryn, after all. Suddenly Deborah thought she understood why Bryn had told all these people the same story, the story about falling in love with her. It was to save his own self-respect. He didn't want any of them to know that he had just found a new and interesting way to earn money. Oh, that wasn't fair. That wasn't like Bryn. And, last night . . .

"From the sound of Pilar," she said at last, "I couldn't blame anybody for thinking she was wonderful."

"I suppose she does sound all right," Tubby said dubiously. "But she's no good, Deborah. I'm warning you. In case she ever comes near you. But what's been handed to her is hard to take, and it isn't agreeing with her very well."

"Did you hear somebody calling?" Deborah said suddenly. "It sounded like Grandmother. Excuse me, Tubby," and she got up and ran swiftly up the path to the house. Grandmother was not calling. But Deborah knew she couldn't beat to stay with Tubby another second. Her heart felt as if it was breaking. She went up the stairs to her own room, and shut the door behind her.

The girl he loved . . . she would be Pilar. Beautiful Pilar, with her black eyes and her black hair and her red mouth. They all thought Bryn had given her up, forgotten her, for Deborah. That was what they had to think. They couldn't possibly understand, when they didn't know the truth; when they didn't know why Bryn had married.

By VIRGINIA VALE

IF YOU'RE interested in watching a career grow, keep your eye on young Larry Blake, who has been giving character interpretations of Charles Laughton, John Barrymore, Edward Robinson and Clark Gable at the Rainbow Room of Rockefeller Center. First thing you know he'll be on the air and in the movies; though he is in his early twenties now, he has made a good start.

He went to Brooklyn college, and has appeared in vaudeville and at smart hotels and night clubs here and there about the country; the Congress and the Stevens hotels in Chicago featured him not long ago. Landing in the Rainbow Room crowns him with success; talent scouts make it one of their first stops in New York, and no visitor wants to leave town till he's been there.

Four members of the Abbey Players of Dublin, one of the most famous theatrical organizations in the world, arrived in the United States recently to appear in RKO's screen version of "The Plough and the Stars," which they've often performed on the stage. One of them, Barry Fitzgerald, was so thrilled to death—because he'd met James Cagney.

Barbara Stanwyck will be starred in this Irish picture, which is being made because all of us liked "The Informer" so well. And it will be made by the producers, director and scenarist who were responsible for "The Informer," so it's going to be good.

Seems there's a rumor around that Major Bowes isn't so popular as he once was; people have heard that performers on his programs don't get paid much, but that he gets plenty. And some of the people who go to the broadcasts feel that he isn't dignified enough.

All that may or may not be true—but a high-powered publicity organization has been engaged to change public opinion regarding the genial Major; his new sponsors feel that the public must go on liking him, or else!

Want to know the low-down on how to play bad man on the screen? Noah Beery, brother of Wallace, can give it to you. He's now playing a hired killer in "Strangers on a Honeymoon," at the Gaumont British studios, along with Constance Cummings and Hugh Sinclair—he's been appearing as various kinds of murderers for years and years.

He says that, if a criminal is to seem to be a real man, he must show a streak of human kindness—"A screen killer can mow a guy down with a shot-gun, but he's got to stoop and put a kid on the head on the way out"—otherwise he's a madman, not a human being.

Columbia Broadcasting System is going to give a lot of young men a chance this summer. With regular announcers going on vacations, others who have been auditioned in the past and are working here and there on the network will be brought in and given a chance to show what they can do in more important spots on the air.

The most important arm in the movies at present is Margaret Sullivan's. She broke it a while ago, you'll recall. It wasn't healing properly, so she hied her to New York for special treatments. Now she's back again in Hollywood and hopes to go to work soon. But friends have cautioned her to be careful of that arm. Only the other day she was reported as whizzing to the west side tennis matches on a motorcycle with Willie Wyler.

ODDS AND ENDS . . . Key Francis played the role of a famous nurse in her Florence Nightingale picture, and now she needs one; has two inspected wisdom teeth . . . Seems that that story about Clark Gable's knocking out his sparring partner was just a jaded-up publicity yarn . . . Joan Blondell and Dick Powell seem to be getting all set for that long-heralded wedding. Have you joined one of the flourishing Lenny Rains clubs? . . . Shirley Temple is cuter than ever in "Poor Little Rich Girl" . . . You'll want to see "San Francisco" because of the earthquake scenes if for no other reason . . . Though Jeanette MacDonald's singing should be reason enough . . . Carole Lombard's illness is holding up "Spoken of the North" indefinitely.

Pressure Cooking Method of Home Canning Is Meeting With Favor

High Heat Insures Easier Destruction of Harmful Bacteria.

The pressure cooker method of home canning has become a universal favorite with thousands of homemakers. It is recommended by the United States government as well as prominent authorities in home-canning, for the canning of non-acid foods, because of the higher degree of heat obtainable with a pressure cooker, which insures easier destruction of harmful bacteria.

Let us consider the important steps in canning by this method: The careful homemaker lines up all of her equipment first. Jars are carefully inspected to see that there are no nicks, cracks or sharp edges, then thoroughly cleansed in hot water.

Select fresh, firm (not over-ripe) products. Grade according to size and ripeness.

Prepare according to recipe. Pack product into clean jars to not more than one-half inch from top.

Add liquid:

(a) Fruits: Hot water to within 1-2 inch of top of jar, or syrup to within 1-2 inches of top of jar. (Syrup expands during processing.)

(b) Vegetables: Hot water to within 1-2 inch of top of jar (salt or other seasoning may be added).

(c) Other products: Follow instructions given in recipe.

Wipe top of jar free from all seeds, pulp, grease, etc., with a clean damp cloth. Also wipe threads and neck of jar clean so as to prevent sticky screw bands which are hard to remove.

If using the "self-sealing" type of jar, place sterilized lid on jar with sealing composition next to glass and screw band firmly tight, or as tight as you can screw the band without using undue exertion or wrenches.

If using rubber ring jars, adjust rubber ring, screw cap down tight, and reverse one-fourth turn, or if using glass top jars, place the upper bail in position across the lid and leave lower bail up.

Place the rack on the bottom of the cooker and add enough hot water to bring it up to the level of the rack (about 2 cups).

Place the filled jars in the cooker. Prepare only enough jars at one time to fill your cooker. Do not allow jars to touch.

Place the cover in position and tighten according to instructions received with your cooker.

Place cooker on stove and leave the petcock open until a jet of steam has been spouting from the petcock for 7 to 10 minutes (according to size of cooker). Then close the petcock and watch pressure gauge.

Start counting processing time from the minute the required pounds of pressure are indicated on the gauge. Keep the pressure uniform throughout the processing period. Do not allow the pressure to fluctuate as pressure changes will draw liquid out of the jars and prevent accurate computation of processing time.

Process for required length of time according to pressure cooking timetable. When processed for the required length of time remove cooker from fire. Do not open petcock or attempt to remove cover until indicator on steam pressure gauge returns to zero.

Remove jars from cooker and set on several thicknesses of cloth to cool.

Do not tighten screw bands on the "self-sealing" type, but set right side up to cool. If using rubber ring jars, screw cap down.

The Right Spirit

A man of right spirit is not a man of marrow and private views, but is greatly interested and concerned for the good of the community to which he belongs, and particularly of the city or village in which he resides, and for the true welfare of the society of which he is a member.—Jonathan Edwards.

Crop Damage From Drouth Mounts—Assassin Tries to Kill Edward VIII—Townsend and Coughlin Form Alliance.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© Western Newspaper Union.

THE nation's drouth worries continued unabated after scattered showers in widely separated areas of the Midwest and the Northwest failed to eliminate the heat. Regions bordering the Great Lakes enjoyed cool breezes brought by a high pressure area from Hudson Bay.

But the meager rainfall in the drouth-stricken belt did little toward bringing relief and crop deterioration continued on a vast scale throughout the parched states.

Loss of life throughout the United States from the unprecedented heat wave exceeded 3,850, an all-time high.

Agronomists in Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois and Ohio expressed apprehension over the outlook for the corn crop unless general rains should develop rapidly.

In principal cities the price of milk was advanced one cent a quart as the result of drouth conditions. Prices of meat, however, dropped with the influx to market of drouth cattle. The possibility of an upward trend later on was seen, however.

Completing a tour of the drouth areas, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declared the nation need have no fears of a food shortage, and assailed those "who have tried for their own purposes to scare the consumers about food scarcity." He added: "There is no excuse for substantial increases in food prices now."

Arriving at Bismarck, North Dakota, to help co-ordinate drouth relief enterprises, Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, was informed that approximately 60,000 farm families in the state were among the needy. A conference of state and federal officials in Bismarck developed a three-fold plan for the relief of dwellers in the desolated areas of the Dakotas, western Minnesota, eastern Montana and Wyoming. These included:

Immediate advancement of money to needy families, repayable out of WPA earnings; granting of funds to farmers desiring to keep small livestock herds; or the purchase of feed and subsistence to be repaid by work on WPA projects; loans and grants to owners of large scale cattle enterprises to cover the cost of shipping animals to other states for feeding.

THE attempted assassination of King Edward VIII of England in London brought great alarm to the English speaking world. The attempt was made near Hyde Park and the monarch's life was saved by a woman bystander who grappled with the would-be assassin and wrested a pistol from him.

The king was returning to Buckingham palace from Hyde Park, where on horseback he had presented new colors to six battalions of the Grenadier, Coldstream and Scots guards.

There was unrest in other European capitals. In Madrid, Jose Calvo Sotillo, one of Spain's most powerful monarchist leaders, was kidnapped and murdered. Precautions were taken to guard other political figures, lest the assassination open a new period of disorder between the leftists and rightists. The crisis was heightened by the threat of the Socialists to establish a dictatorship.

In Paris, the celebration of France's national holiday, Bastille day, saw the Champs Elysees a scene of rioting with rightists and leftists in combat with each other and the police. The disorders began when leftists were returning from their own parade in the eastern section of the city. Seeing red flags borne in the procession, the rightists greeted their opponents with cries of "Soviets everywhere."

Hopeful signs for European peace were seen in the withdrawal by Italy from Libya of the first units of 40,000 troops from the Egyptian frontier. The withdrawal of the troops from the North African colony was Italy's answer to Britain's action in recalling its home fleet from the Mediterranean.

IMMEDIATE splitting of the American Federation of Labor into two rival groups was averted by the action of the Federation's executive council in voting to bring to trial on August 3 the union leaders led by John L. Lewis on charges of "dual unionism." It had been reported earlier that the council had voted to suspend the 12 unions grouped as the Committee for Industrial Unionization. The council's action was looked upon as a peace move in the crisis that threatens open warfare in the labor movement. It was precipitated by the drive to organize 500,000 workers in the steel industry into one big industrial union by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers and his followers.

The charges against the Lewis group include "competition as a rival organization with the A. F. of L.," fomenting an insurrection within the Federation; violation of contracts they have entered into with the Federation when granted their charters.

AN ALLIANCE between Dr. Francis E. Townsend, Father Charles E. Coughlin and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith in the interests of a third party was announced at the Townsendite convention in Cleveland, attended by 12,000 followers of the California doctor who advocates pensions of $200 per month for every person over sixty.

In an address before the convention, Father Coughlin bitterly denounced the present administration and President Roosevelt, and called upon the delegates to follow Dr. Townsend in endorsing the candidacy of William Lemke for the presidency on the Union ticket.

Earlier the New Deal had been the target of both Dr. Townsend and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, now leader of the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth movement. Townsendite candidates who must run on the Democratic ticket planned a pro-Roosevelt demonstration. Pro-Roosevelt delegations representing 11 states signed a resolution urging that no "merger or fusion" with a third party be made. A tactical victory was won by the New Deal forces in the election of Willis Mahoney, Townsendite-Democratic candidate for senator from Oregon, as chairman of the resolutions committee.

THE arrest of former Lieut. Commander John S. Farnsworth of the United States navy on a charge that he had sold confidential naval data to a Japanese officer marked what observers believed was the beginning of a roundup of persons suspected of supplying navy secrets to foreign powers.

Declaring that he had obtained nothing of importance from the navy and gave nothing to the Japanese that "could not have been obtained in the public library in Washington," Farnsworth at first pleaded not guilty to the charges. Farnsworth is charged with taking from the Navy department and later selling it to the Japanese government, a book entitled "The Service of Information and General Security." The book is on naval tactics and according to officials, is rated as "confidential."

PREDICTING 1936 will be the best business year since 1930 and "possibly since 1929," Colonel Leonard P. Ayers, economist of Cleveland, declared that statistics on all important business had "shown substantial" and "healthy increases" since the first of this year. Strikes, drouth and other difficulties have not affected increases in employment, markets and security, exchanges, the economist said.

"More steel has been produced in the first half of 1936 than in all 1932," he pointed out. "A major factor in the increased steadiness of business has been well sustained employment among the factory workers making durable goods. Workers in the durable goods factories suffer most from lay-offs and shut-downs, but such has not been the case in the first half of this year and of last year."

HENRY FORD, approaching his seventy-third birthday, envisioned the eventual decline of farm animals as a source of the world's food, and predicted that grains and other crops will largely be substituted for them.

"We can, I believe, get a more plentiful supply of food cheaper and better," he said, "by processing the products of the soil instead of asking cows and chickens to do it for us. In the future farm animals of all kinds will decline in numbers. We won't need them. The farm animal will go, but the farm will become larger."

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

FRANK HAGEN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

DRAFTED

FROM time to time there has been talk of "drafting" some candidate. However, there have been only two instances in our political history when a man was given the nomination against his will and in both cases the drafted candidate was defeated in the election.

In 1868 one of the issues raised by the Democrats was a demand for the payment of the war debt in paper money issued for this purpose. Its chief advocate was George H. Pendleton of Cincinnati and the appeal of the "Ohio Idea" was so great that he was the logical candidate for the nomination.

But Horatio Seymour, the Civil war governor of New York, was opposed to both the "Ohio Idea" and the candidacy of its chief supporter. As chairman of the convention he was able to prevent Pendleton's nomination but he could not keep the inflation plank out of the platform.

After many ballots and some confusion it turned to Seymour and, although he shouted from the platform "Your candidate I can not be!" the delegates went right ahead and nominated him.

Although Seymour polled 2,709,213 popular votes to 3,015,071 for Gen. U. S. Grant, the Republican nominee, and carried eight states, the electoral vote stood 214 for Grant and 80 for Seymour. This defeat ended his political career for he considered his acceptance of an unwanted nomination as the greatest mistake of his life and would never again consider running for any office.

Four years later a peculiar political situation resulted in another case of "drafting." A faction of the Republican party, dissatisfied with the Grant administration and his renomination, held another convention in Cincinnati and chose Morace Greeley for President and B. Gratz Brown of Missouri for vice-president. When the Democrats met in Baltimore they decided that a fusion ticket might defeat Grant so they also nominated Greeley and Brown.

But this action offended the "old line" Democrats so they held a convention in Louisville, Ky. For President they selected Charles O'Connor, a distinguished New York lawyer who had won the deep affection of the South by his efforts to secure the release of Jefferson Davis from prison at Fortress Monroe and to defend him against the charge of treason. O'Connor was nominated on the first ballot by a vote of 600 to four and for their vice-president they named John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts.

Immediately after the balloting O'Connor was notified by telegraph of his nomination and at once declared to accept it. The convention was thrown into disorder and an attempt was made to give the honor to the permanent chairman, James Lyons of Virginia, but he refused. So the convention adopted a resolution reiterating the selection of O'Connor and Adams and immediately adjourned. In the election which followed O'Connor and Adams received 29,489 votes scattered through 23 states. This was not an impressive showing but the " Greeleyites" did little better and the 29,000 had the satisfaction of knowing that they had been true to a plank in their platform which read, "We welcome an eternal minority under the banner inscribed with our principles rather than an almighty and overbearing majority purchased by their abandonment."

MORE THAN A WHISPER

RARE indeed is the Presidential contest which does not bring out a "whispering campaign"—that attempt to discredit a candidate by circulating slanderous stories reflecting upon his morals or motives. So it is refreshing to learn that occasionally political partisans dare to speak out boldly against an opponent instead of working against him secretly and in the dark—to shout rather than to whisper.

One of the earliest examples of this kind of campaigning took place during the Adams-Jackson contest in 1828. It was a printed placard which read:

IMMORALITY
"Fellow citizens, can we vote for the man who openly sets the laws of his great Jehovah at defiance, thereby showing a bad example to our children? Some few Sundays ago Mr. Adams passed through Providence galloping and running his horse, and at every tavern stopping to receive the salutes or buzzards of the Federal Party. I have always been an Adams' man until he violated and trampled on the laws of God; now my conscience forbids my supporting him. I therefore shall choose Andrew Jackson, one who keeps holy the Sabbath Day."

Grease the measuring cup before measuring sirup or molasses and the ingredients will not stick to the sides of the cup and there will be no waste.

Always sweep rugs and carpets the way of the grain. Brushing against the grain roughens the surface and it tends to brush the dust in instead of out.

Partly cook cereal in a double boiler the night before using and leave it on the back of the stove, being sure to cover well with water. It will be well cooked in the morning.

Wash lettuce and place in refrigerator to get very cold before using in making salads. Crisp lettuce makes the best salad.
