Roosevelt Says America Will Send Flood Of Materials To Allies As They Fight Germany And Italy.

America Will Also Arm Shore To Repel Any American Threat.

Roosevelt today announced that America will send a flood of materials to its Allies as they fight Germany and Italy. The announcement was made by the President in a radio address from the White House. The broadcast was transmitted over the nation's networks at 9:30 p.m., EST.

"I am now, as I have said before, prepared to make the nation's resources available for the prosecution of the war," the President said. "We have already started sending materials to the Allies, and we will continue to do so. We are prepared to give them everything we can, and we will do so."

The President's announcement was met with widespread approval by the American people. Many expressed their support for the President's decision, including the press and political leaders. The broadcast was aired over the nation's networks and was broadcasted live on radio stations throughout the country.

WAR DRAWS NEARER

Events of the past week indicate clearly that the United States is now in the thick of the war than at any time since we entered the world war against Imperial Germany. These events continue to multiply, and with increasing German victories the same chain of events will continue to be forged with increasing tempo. No man can foretell for the best; that remains for the future to reveal.

Most significant of all this chain of events is the recent tide of Nazi victories by the German government. Openly it was said that this was a trade-off of obsolete ships, but the plain facts are that these battleships were quite capable of combating German destroyers, which have created havoc against Allied armies during recent weeks. Lacking only one or two modern developments, which are far closer scrutiny of alien movements and rigid restrictions upon alien activities related to goings and comings now under the Department of Justice, the plain facts are that these same chain of events will continue to be forged with increasing tempo.

Another significant trend is seen in the demand of a group of prominent national leaders that the United States at once declare war on Germany. One man, in particular, who is included in this group, has long been quoted as the man who predicted long ago that we should remain aloof from European affairs. That man, Walter Millis, wrote the famous book, "The Wall of War," which has been the handbook of American isolationists for many years. Now he favors an immediate declaration of war in this country.

Slowly and surely war sentiment is gaining the upper hand. The present war is not following precisely the same pattern that was followed in the first World War, but some of the elements are the same, and the result seems almost certain to be the same—except that possibly this country may not send an army to Europe. That man, Walter Millis, wrote the famous book, "The Wall of War," which has been the handbook of American isolationists for many years. Now he favors an immediate declaration of war. If the Allied fall short on man power equipped and trained for that purpose, the United States will be sent to Europe.

One of the most impressive things to us is the manner in which public and congressional sentiment has veered to the Department of Justice in the past three weeks. Its critics have dwindled to one or two left-wing members of the Congress whose voices are now and seemly raised in protest at FBI expansion, and even the Communist press is not quite so obdurate.

The general public attitude is that a serious danger is recognized and that a counterattack can best be set up by the police agency with the resources and man power equipped and trained for that purpose. —Commercial-Appeal.

It is a hard and difficult choice which confronts this nation, and the proper solution is hard. The lessons of the first World War are still with us. We are not prepared, and the other fully of it. We saw the supreme selfishness that was manifested after the war. The bright dreams of Woodrow Wilson, "forged to dust and ashes". We saw another horror dawn in the world. We saw the plain facts that the plain facts were that these prominent national leaders that the best of that remains for the future to reveal.

Tigers Send Barons Down After

Trip And Tack Slugging Game

Playing before a crowd of 1,200, with admission fixed at 50 cents to 75 cents, the game was a baseball night and a baseball treat at the Fulton American Legion Field. The day seemed fraught with danger for the Barons to take a lead in the west inning. Leading by one run to one, the game swung in favor of the Tigers in the ninth inning. The Barons brought in three runs in the ninth, staged a real rally. They were comfortably behind a big lead until the fatal sixth. In this inning he pitched a couple of times and when he was all over Sprute was sent in to finish the game. Big Harry got the Barons at one run to one after the 5th inning, when the Barons got a hit. From there it was a page out and the Barons were out of the game. Denny finally got the final out and the Barons were gone. Manager Jim Poole, with four straight hits, led the Barons with their hitting. With Moon Mullins, he had a lot of help because the only Barons score was again in the 8th and in the 9th inning. The game was postponed until the next day.
