TIDES OF WAR ROLL ON

Today the proud city of Paris, which for seventy years has not felt a conqueror's feet, is under the heel of the German forces. Not since 1792, when German legions took the French capital after a long siege, has the French nation felt such a crushing blow. Today the position of the法国叶子 at the end of the line, no end is seen of the engulfing tide. The only hope, and it is a small one, is that the French will stand their arrest and withstood French resistance with the intention of completely destroying French power.

Loss of the French capital, considered as merely a phase of the campaign, might not mean much. It is a terrific blow at French morale and will have its effect on French pride, and will have its effect on French industrial life. Many industrial plants are located in the Paris area, and a great deal of German industry is based on this area. The view, widely held in this country, that France a few days ago launched a terrific blow at French morale and with a view to see how swiftly we arm and prepare it will not be too soon.

Looking at Latin America

The time with the United States and Latin American countries is the time to work together against Europe. Not much of this truth is being understood. The belief that Latin America is closer to the Old World than to the United States. Export trade, moreover, represents an important phase of Latin American life and most of this trade has been with Europe. Not much of this trade has been shifted residually to the United States for the reason that Latin American exporters consider one of the very commodities of which this country has a surplus. The more advanced South American countries would be glad to oblige more of their industrial products, but they cannot be forced unless they can sell and obtain the necessary foreign exchange.

For these reasons, many informed persons are of the opinion that if the United States is to make a military campaign to get what they want in certain South American countries, they will simply hold out the lure of the European market to countries with friendly governments, and depend on pressure from the inside to do the rest. —Sun-Dem.

CATTLE MAKE MONEY FOR FARMER

How Howard Russell in Adair county, Kentucky, has successfully raised calves for many years, is shown by County Agent R. B. Rankin. "He keeps enough beef-type cows to provide from 11 to 12 calves a year," said Mr. Rankin. "Farrowed bulls are used, and they are given rations keeping them fat. We also feed the calves, and then sell them. We have been very successful in making money on these calves." Russell said he has sold his calves at about $50 each, and he expects to do better this year.

The calves are sold at a very young age, and the buyers are usually farmers who want young stock to start their herds.

The calves are a good source of income for the farmer, and Russell said he has never had a loss in raising them.
