Louisville, Ky., Mar. 31.—Last this afternoon the coal miners and operators of Kentucky reached an agreement based on the $2.90 scale and $150 weekly wage. The coal operators and miners of Western Kentucky met in joint session at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the council chamber at the city hall for the purpose of conferring upon a wage scale, the present agreement as to wages expiring tomorrow.

Agreement Seems Certain.

While the credentials committee was in session the report spread about the room that an agreement was certain, and when several operatives were being questioned the room was quiet. It was said:
"We think it will be all right." The basis of agreement is the Kentucky scale and the report of the situation on the basis of the agreement. That this compromise will be reached is now predicted by both sides.

The report also showed that two coal operators were holding back on both sides. The report of the committee was adopted.

Adjourned at O'Clock.

On motion the convention was adjourned until 3 o'clock this afternoon. It was decided to meet at 3 o'clock to decide whether or not to continue the convention.

Charming Recital.

A charming recital was given on the organ by Miss Ada B. Smith Thursday afternoon at Temple Israel. The recital consisted of a variety of music, including compositions by composers such as Bach, Handel, and Mendelssohn. Miss Smith is a talented organist, and her performance was well received by the audience.

Opening quotations were given by Miss Alva Pine, president of the Temple Israel women's auxiliary. Miss Pine's speech was followed by a performance of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by Mr. George Mather, who sang with great emotion and patriotism.

The recital was followed by a reception in the auditorium, where refreshments were served. The event was sponsored by the Temple Israel Women's Auxiliary and was well attended.

Overall, it was a wonderful evening of music and community, and the audience left feeling inspired and entertained.

A Crisis in Her Life

A crisis of her health might be a worse thing than a broken heart. It was a sentimentalist's sentiment, and one that few of us have actually had to face. But it is true. A crisis of health is a serious thing. It can mean the difference between life and death. And it can be the end of a happy marriage. A crisis in her life was her husband's death. It was her husband's death that set her on a path of self-destruction. She began to drink and to smoke and to lose all interest in life. She was a woman of many talents, but none of them could save her from the despair she felt.

The newspaper article that appeared in the local paper was written by a journalist who had spent most of her life working in the city. She was a good reporter, and her articles were always well-researched and well-written. But this one was different. It was a personal account of her own experience with a crisis of health. She had been a sufferer of rheumatism for many years, and she knew how painful it was. She had written about it before, but never in such detail. This time, she decided to tell the story of her own illness and its aftermath.

She had been a model patient. She had followed every doctor's order, and she had taken every medication prescribed. But nothing seemed to help. Her pain was constant, and she was unable to work. She was forced to quit her job, and she was left with no way to support herself. She began to drink, and then to smoke. She became a recluse, and she stopped seeing her friends. She was a changed woman.

But then, something happened. She met a man who changed her life. He was a doctor, and he was able to help her. He prescribed new medication, and he taught her how to manage her pain. She was able to return to work, and she was able to start living a normal life again. She was grateful to her doctor, and she was grateful to her friends. She was a new woman.

So, what can we learn from this story? We can learn that a crisis of health can be a very serious thing. We can learn that it can be the end of a happy marriage. And we can learn that it can be a turning point in a person's life. If you are facing a crisis of health, know that there is hope. Seek help, and you will find it. If you are facing a crisis in your life, know that there is hope. Seek help, and you will find it.
